Legionnaires Guests Of Palace Monday Night

The local post of the American Legion and all ex-service men have been given a special invitation to meet at guests of the Palace Theatre next Monday evening for the showing of Joe E. Brown in "Sons O' Guns". All ex-service men are asked to meet at the Legion hall and go in a body to the theatre.

Besides the mirth stirring antics of the wide mouthed comedian, the picture is spiced with the famous martial airs of the original stage play, with tuneful new songs by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, sung by Joe E., Joan Blondell, Winifred Shaw and the Chambers Male Chorus, and riotous dance numbers, all staged by the famous musical comedy producer, Bobby Connolly.

The story is a rollicking comedy romance dealing with the humorous side of doughboy life in France during the World War. The picture is said to be the most colorful and picturesque, and lavish in production values, staged with more elaborateness than any previous Joe E. Brown comedy.

Cotton Price Adjustment Checks Received

One hundred and fifty five Cotton Price Adjustment Checks, aggregating $8465.86 have been received at the office of the County Agent.

Notices have been mailed to producers receiving checks. This shipment of checks represents payments to Group No. 1 where no division is to be made, that is, between landlord and tenant. However, not all coming under this classification have been paid.

Information has been received in regard to pooled tags. Approximately 18 to 20 per cent of the total pooled have been sold at 4c per pound. Distribution of this money is being withheld pending settlement of the case of Thompson et al vs. Deal et al brought in the Supreme Court in the District of Columbia in January by four cotton producers of Alabama and Mississippi, three of whom had purchased certificates from the 1935 National Pool, and the fourth from the Special Pool.

The complications in this case make it uncertain when the National Pool payments to producers will be paid, but as rapid progress as is possible under the circumstances is being made. The above information was furnished by C. A. Cobb, Director, Division of Cotton.

Over 5,000 Reported At Kent Centennial

A crowd estimated at 5,000 people crowded the city of Jayton last Friday for Kent County's Centennial celebration. A large part of the crowd was dressed in costumes worn 25, 50 and 100 years ago.

The day opened with a parade of wagons, buggies, ladies riding saddles, and horse back riders. At noon a free basket lunch was served and from all reports there was plenty to eat for everyone, resembling the days when there used to be lots of picnics and gatherings of neighbors for miles around and dinner was served picnic style.

After noon county and district candidates spoke in behalf of their candidacies. A ball game, old fiddlers contest, and free dance followed.

The person present having lived in the county longest was Tom Bonds, having been in the county over 55 years. The couple having been married the longest was Mr. and Mrs. Barbee, they having been married over 59 years.

The celebration was sponsored by the club ladies and business men of Jayton.

New Ruling On 21 Year Old Voters

A few days ago the Attorney General's Department of the State of Texas changed its opinion with reference to the new law requiring young men and young women becoming 21 years of age before the primary elections in any year to secure an exemption certificate before they would be allowed to vote. The Attorney General had formerly ruled that it would be absolutely necessary for young people to have an exemption certificate before they could lawfully vote. Upon more mature consideration and after a conference between the Attorney General and all members of his department this ruling was changed, and it is now the opinion of the Attorney General and his department that any person becoming 21 years of age after January 1, 1935 and before January 31, 1936, must have secured an exemption certificate before he or she is entitled to vote in the coming primaries. It is further held in the opinion that any person becoming 21 years of age after January 31st, 1936 and before the dates of the coming primary elections may vote in such elections regardless of whether or not they have taken the trouble to secure an exemption certificate. Such last mentioned young people may have secured an exemption certificate by applying for same prior to January 31, 1936, but if they failed to do so, according to the opinion, they may still vote. For illustration: A boy becomes 21 years of age on January 2, 1935. He must have secured an exemption certificate prior to January 31, 1936 before he can vote in the primary elections in 1936. To illustrate the other situation: A boy becomes 21 years of age in April 1936. He could have, if so minded, obtained an exemption certificate prior to January 31, 1936, thereby entitling him to a vote. If he failed to do so, he can vote anyway and regardless of whether or not he has obtained an exemption certificate.

Attorney General Addresses Over 2,000 At Stadium

Attorney General William McCraw delivered a masterful address Sunday evening at the Charles A. Jones Memorial Stadium to an estimated crowd of 2,000 people. W. D. Starcher, county chairman of the religious centennial celebration in the county, presided and introduced those on the program.

The first number on the program was a song by the congregation led by M. D. Ilvey. Rev. J. Melvin Jones pronounced the invocation. A quartet of young ladies, Misses Ora Pearl Johnston, Julia Jo Reed, Nedra Hogan, Miriam Reed, sang one number. The congregation joined in singing an old time hymn after which Mrs. G. B. Wadzeck and Alvis Yeats sang a duet. Dr. M. F. Ewton introduced the speaker of the evening, Attorney General McCraw.

Giving a short history of Texas under six flags the Attorney General paid tribute to those pioneers who settled Texas, the laymen and the ministry. Special tribute was paid by the speaker to Baylor University, Southwestern University at Georgetown, Southern Methodist University, Texas Christian University and the other church schools of the state who have taken such an active part in developing leaders in Texas and the United States.

Mr. McCraw paid homage to pioneer Texans who developed the State and to those who are living today carrying on the vast work of working the State's raw materials in whatever section they live. The speaker went on to state that the State is built on the characters of men, what they have in their hearts and not the material resources. Too, that every man, whether by adoption or nativity, feels that great pulsating sensation that makes Texans Texans in this, Texas Centennial year.

Star of "David Copperfield" Stars In New Picture

Freddie Bartholomew, probably the most publicized child in the movies, excepting Shirley Temple, will come to the screen of the Palace Theatre Sunday and Monday July 4th and 5th in his greatest role. The center of a family controversy that made the front pages of the newspapers for months, Freddie is one of the best child actors ever developed in the movies.

The young actor, who was born in England, was brought to the United States to play in the screen version of "David Copperfield." He was a hit with the American public, and since has been given starring roles.

His part in "Little Lord Fauntleroy", the new picture coming to the Palace is outstanding and the picture receives the personal endorsement of the management which is a guarantee that the picture is exceptional.

TO THE VOTERS AND PEOPLE OF PRECINCT ONE

Some time ago I had my announcement made as candidate for public weigher in Precinct 1. Up to date I have not had the privilege of meeting with but a few of my many friends and voters of my precinct, and now it is very necessary from a financial standpoint that I make the wheat harvest for some thirty days and it will be impossible for me to canvass my precinct for some time.

But my friends please keep in mind that I am still in the race for public weigher. You will agree that first a man's duty is to try and support his family, which I am the head of one. It is my intentions to meet and talk with each and every one of you folks whether a voter or not and solicit your vote and influence. If I should miss any of you people please do not get offended for your vote and influence will be highly appreciated.

Respectfully yours,
Virgil N. Morrison.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—The Duke, a pleasant, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a terrific rain storm. He makes himself at home. Six years ago his father had died in China, leaving the lad, Barry Gilbert, to fight his way back to the States. He did not recollect ever having had a mother. Dozing at the bedside, he is startled by the arrival of a butler, Willetts, a chauffeur, Evans, a cook and a maid. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out and leave at the first opportunity. His supposed parents have left for Germany. Next morning he is given a letter for his "mother." He opens it and finds a message from the real Jack, saying he could not come, and returning a hundred-dollar bill. The boy's father had pensioned him into obscurity. He pockets the money, intending to return it later. He orders Evans to take him to Monday, intending to disappear there. On the way he meets Judge Hambridge and his daughter, Patricia, whose car had broken down. Believing he is Jack Ridder, she invites him to dinner the following Thursday.

CHAPTER II.—Barry returns to Southampton, deciding to stay a bit longer. Mr. Ridder, Sr., through his newspaper, the Globe, accuses Judge Hambridge of taking orders from Tammany Hall in a condemnation proceeding. Barry meets Peter Winslow, prominent attorney. Winslow tells Barry that Judge Hambridge had witnessed an accident in which a woman was killed by a taxicab. Arriving home late, Barry finds the wife of the real Jack Ridder awaiting him. Her husband is in jail in New York, charged with the murder of Mike Kelly, Tammany boss.

CHAPTER III.—The girl, Peggy, tells Barry of how she had met Jack in Florida and married him, as Jay Rogers. They now have a child. Jack lost his job, and they went to New York, where she got work as a show girl at the Coconut Bar. There she was accused of trying to pick the pocket of Mike Kelly, and was arrested. Her husband went to Kelly's home to induce Kelly to drop the charge. They quarreled, and later Kelly was found dead, his skull crushed by a decanter. Barry suggests he can help as Jack Ridder, and Mrs. Rogers agrees. Judge Hambridge delivers a decision in the condemnation suit in which Kelly had been interested.

"Get Jamison Winslow," he instructed the operator.
In a few minutes the phone rang.
"That you, Jimmy?" Peter said into it.
"You've heard of John Clarke Ridder, haven't you? Well, his son's in here, and wants work. How about it? Got anything over there?"

The instrument made raucous noises.
"All right," Peter continued, at last. "I'll send him around, and you talk to him."
"Chrysler building," he informed Barry, "and he's waiting for you."
"I don't know how to thank you."
"What for?"
"Mainly for helping two people in a lot of trouble."

Peter smiled once more.
"That inside-job theory sticks to my mind," Barry remarked. "Is there a Mrs. Mike Kelly?"
Peter laughed outright.
"You're determined to be Sherlock Holmes, aren't you?" he asked. "All right. There is a Mrs. Mike Kelly. I'd just finished reading about her. She sued for divorce recently and withdrew the case. Do you think that might indicate that she killed her husband?"
"Cherchez la femme, you know."

Peter laughed again.
"Search for the woman," he translated. "But, then, there appear to have been a good many women in Kelly's life. We mustn't jump at conclusions."
"No," Barry admitted. "No, I suppose not."

"All the same," he thought, the other side of the door, "it's pretty evident that a woman who sues for divorce is a little bit anxious to get rid of her husband."

But there was nothing doing at Jamison Winslow's.
"I'm sorry," he said, "but we're laying off men every day now. Why aren't you on your father's newspaper?"
"My father and I haven't been very friendly."

"So I've heard. But I've got an idea. That's what I wanted to talk to you about."
It was quite a simple idea.
"We place thousands of dollars worth of advertising with The Globe. And I know the city editor pretty well. His name's Harwood. If I gave you a letter to Ernie, and he gave you a job, and you made good while the boss is in Europe, wouldn't that square things when he got back?"

Barry grinned.
"It might," he said, "and then again it might not."
"What I heard," Jamison Winslow went on, "was that your father wanted you in his business. If that's true, he'd certainly be pleased at your going in."

"I'd like to succeed on my own."
"Well, why not? We don't have to tell Harwood who you are. Not in the beginning, anyway."
"That is an idea," Barry agreed. "Since the row, I've been calling myself Barry Gilbert."

"Not a bad pen name," Jamison Winslow declared. "All right; we'll stick to it. I've a hunch that you'd make a good newspaper man."
"That's what your brother said."
Ten minutes later, Barry Gilbert—himself again, so to speak—was on his way to The Globe.

The Globe occupied a new and imposing building in Thirty-ninth street. Asking for Mr. Harwood, Barry found himself in the city room. Men in their shirt sleeves sat at desks, smoking and pounding on typewriters, and most of the people who had rushed in and out of the elevators rushed in and out of the double doors. Harwood's office proved to be a small and comparatively quiet cubby-hole just off the concourse.

He had always been a newspaper man. Square cut, not very tall, but with big hands and broad shoulders, his hair was as red as Barry's. He had been John Clarke Ridder's city editor when John Clarke was a cub reporter, and he remained John Clarke's city editor still. John Clarke's friend, too, with more real power, and ability, than any other man on The Globe.

Now he glanced at the Winslow letter, and grunted.

"Think you can write, I suppose?"
"Pretty sure I can't."
"Then what're you gonna do on a newspaper?"

"Get news."
Ernie Harwood looked him over.
"How?"

"Well, just now, it happens that I'm a friend of Jay Rogers."

"The fellow that killed Mike Kelly?"

"The fellow they say killed him."

"Yeah?"

Ernie squinted into the bowl of his pipe.

"How long have you known Jimmy Winslow?" he inquired.

"About half an hour. His brother asked him to get me a job."

"Peter Winslow?"

"Yes."

"Peter Winslow going to defend Rogers?" he snapped.

"Yes."

Ernie reached for a telephone.

"Peter Winslow's defending the Rogers boy," he barked into the instrument. "If it's straight, play it up in the next edition."

To Barry he said, "How did you get Winslow to take the case?"

For the second time, Barry related his story of meeting the Rogers in Florida. From there, he jumped to the visit of Mrs. Rogers, repeating what she had told him, and dilating upon their interview with the boy in the Tombs.

"What did he say?" Harwood asked.

"I don't feel at liberty to repeat that until I've spoken to Peter Winslow," Barry answered, "but it's given me two clues that I'd like to follow up."

"All right," Ernie said. "Follow 'em. Your salary's fifty dollars a week. Report straight to me."

"Yes, sir."

"Wait a minute. I'll put you next to somebody who'll introduce you at police headquarters. We've got that angle covered, of course, but you'd better be in touch there. What I want you to do is to follow your own leads. Bring in something."

"Roth, come here!" he called. "I want you to take Mr. Gilbert down to the homicide bureau."

Nothing seemed entirely impossible that bright mid-May morning, as Barry swung into Broadway.

Up to now, he owed everything to his imposture—that first stake, the clothes he wore, Peter Winslow's favor, and all that had followed. They constituted an amazingly fortuitous chain of circumstances. But the chain had lifted him to solid ground. "It's up to me now," Barry said, feeling square with himself, and the world, and strangely gay and self-confident.

"I'm going to start right," he said, "by paying those bills, and giving Peggy the rest of that two hundred. I'm going to figure up my board and room at Southampton, and give her that, too. A fellow like me can't afford to be crooked."

He had turned into a cheap restaurant, near The Globe, where the slim young man had promised to meet him. Lurching, he mapped out his immediate future. Work-days, Barry Gilbert would live in the little rooms he'd taken Saturday. Week-ends, of course, he'd have to spend at Southampton, as John Clarke Ridder, Jr. That was essential to his contact with Bad Nauhaim. And to another, even more essential contact. He was to dine at the Hambridges again next Friday, he recalled—with the lady from Boston to whom Pat must have written flattering things about him. A grand girl, Pat, and suddenly, as we have seen, not altogether unattainable. "If I make good," Barry thought, "I can tell her the truth about myself, and ask her to marry me. Why not? All this John Clarke Ridder, Jr., business'll just seem funny then."

The slim young man arrived in due time, and duly presented his charge at the homicide bureau. First, there was Tim Laugherty, as Irish as Barry, and with almost as ready a grin. They took to each other immediately.

"Barry Gilbert," Tim repeated. "Well, the name's all right, anyway."

Tim regarded the Kelly murder as a closed case. So did MacDevitt, and everyone else Barry met at headquarters. "The Rogers kid done it, that's sure," Tim declared. "This Filipino says he didn't let nobody else in that night."

"Maybe somebody else let himself in."

Tim smiled scornfully.

"How?" There was a new lock on that door. Show him the keys, Mac.

Mac obliged.

"Here you are," he said. "It was chained to Kelly's pants button."

"Show him the decanter. Maybe he can get something out of that."

"Why not?" Mac laughed. "There's about half a pint in it."

It was a gruesome exhibit—that bottle which had killed a man. Real cut glass, and nearly a quarter full of reddish liquor. "Wonder why that didn't spill out," Barry ventured.

"Maybe the cork stopped it," Tim replied.

"They didn't find any finger prints?"

"No. The guy must have worn gloves."

"Listen," Barry ventured again.

"Why weren't the Filipino's finger prints on the bottle—if he served it?"

"Guess he wore gloves, too. My butler always does."

"Well, if he wore 'em—"

"I get you," Tim interrupted. "If the guy that done this wore gloves, and the Filipino wore gloves, why then maybe the Filipino's the guy that done this."

"Exactly."

"Say, you got a bean on you," the detective conceded, almost admiringly. "Of course, I still think we got the right party, but he's a cagey guy, that Oriental, and he didn't say nothing about gloves to me. Why don't we go round and see if he wears 'em?"

He didn't.

At least, not when he opened the front door.

"Say, Charlie," Tim began; "let us in. We want to ask you sumpin'. Do you wear gloves when you're serving stuff?"

"Sometimes."

"Did you wear 'em that night?"

"Maybe. I don't remember."

He was a thin, sallow youth, with the usual glossy black hair brushed back from his forehead. Nothing remarkable about him—not even his shiftiness. The three men stood in the broad hall of the Kelly house, and Charlie repeated the tale of admitting Rogers, and hearing a quarrel, and returning to his room until the visitor left.

"You were in your room when the row started, then?" Barry asked.

"Yes, sir."

"And you could hear the voices pretty plainly?"

"Yes, sir."

"You came upstairs, and then went back to your room, and stayed there until just as Rogers was leaving?"

"Yes, sir."

"Kelly must have been dead then, if Rogers killed him?"

"Yes, sir."

"But you didn't hear the sound of a blow in your room, nor the thud of a body falling?"

No answer.

"If you could hear voices downstairs, don't you think you'd've heard that, if it had happened?"

The Filipino looked down from one inquisitor to the other.

"Maybe I didn't stay in my room," he said at last, very slowly. "I don't remember."

Tim was about to press the point when there was the rasp of a latch-key being thrust into the lock of the front door.

Then the knob turned, and Mrs. Kelly entered.

She stopped short at sight of the intruders.

The door remained opened.

"Well, Mr. Laugherty!" she exclaimed. "So you've come back again? With a friend, too! Why don't you step in the parlor?"

Tim thanked her, and presented Barry.

"Glad to meet you," Mrs. Kelly declared. "Run along, you"—to the Filipino. "Come on in, boys!"

"You're forgetting your key," Barry said.

He took it out of the lock.

"It's a brand new key, isn't it?" he asked, casually.

"Sure," Mrs. Kelly answered. "It's a new lock. Mike had it put on only a few days ago."

"How many keys were there?"

"Two. That one, and Mike's."

The Globe. I'm on my own, and getting ahead. I'll be a credit to you yet, darling."

From that, he went into some detail as to his interest in the friend "locked up for murder he didn't commit," and the need of funds for his defense.

Even to Jack Ridder, it was obvious that the letter had to be sent, so sent it was—in Jack Ridder's hand-writing—from the railway station post box at Southampton the following Friday. Barry arrived on an early afternoon train.

He had wired Evans to meet him, and found Willetts waiting in the front hall. There was no doubt now that the butler suspected something, and Barry, sure of what he suspected, faced him with a broad grin. "What's the matter with you, Willetts?"

"Matter, sir?"

"You've been acting queer ever since the night Mrs. Rogers spent here. I don't know what you heard that night?"

"Do you mean eavesdropping, sir?"

There was a pained surprise in the man's voice.

"Not me, sir. I've got my position to remember. I've been a butler with some of the best families."

Personally Guaranteed!

Quite often we show an exceptionally good picture which for some reason you think you would not care to see, and then after it is shown, you hear what an excellent picture it was, you say, "Why didn't you tell me it was such a good picture, I would liked to have seen it."

And now we have another just such a picture. . . one that we want everyone to see, because we know you will enjoy it more than any picture you have seen for many a day.

Maybe, because of the title, or the star, or for some reason, you will not select it as a picture you want to see—but, we're telling you—you must see it. It's great—it's entertainment for the whole family—for the kids—for the young folks—for the grown ups.

The name—"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY"—and it stars Freddie Bartholomew, the child wonder actor, and has a cast with such stars as Dolores Costello Barrymore, C. Aubrey Smith, Guy Kibbee, Mickey Rooney and Jackie Searl.

It's not very often that I go into a 'rave' about a picture, but here is a picture that is truly great entertainment, one that you will enjoy from the first flash to the final fade out.

So anxious am I that you see it, that I give you my personal guarantee that you will like it—not only my personal guarantee, but I will go even further than that—I will give you a 'money back' guarantee. If, after you see "Little Lord Fauntleroy", you don't enjoy it, I will not only give you your money back—but I will give you a free ticket to any other show during July you might select.

You must see "LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY".

W. A. Craddock For One House Legislature

W. A. Craddock is for unicameral or one house legislature.

Yes, of course, I have been for 35 years, but did not know the abolish the Senate and add its 31 members to the House membership, change could be so simple. Just making a total of 181 members; redistrict the state into 181 legislative districts, electing them and paying them as now.

They would finish the business in 60 days. There is safety in a large number; the members are closer and better known to the people—and more easily held accountable for their acts. It is hard for the Lobbyist to influence 91 (a majority); would be much harder to influence than a majority of 22 as others propose.

It is my belief that should the people turn their legislative affairs over to 42 members (just 11 more than the present Senate) they would be selling their Liberty birthrights for a very thin mess of pottage. If such a calamity should ever happen Liberty loving citizens can say as Sam Houston said when the State seceded, "Margaret, Texas is lost."

RULING ON EXEMPTIONS

On the front page of this issue The Texas Spur gives a new ruling regarding exemptions of voters. The ruling was issued after County Attorney L. D. Ratliff had prepared a brief quoting the constitution and statutory law to the Attorney General's department of the State. The county attorney asked for a ruling early in the year on whether a young man or woman would be eligible to vote if they became 21 years old after January 31, the last day to secure exemptions. The department ruled at that time that a young person so classified could not vote.

The county attorney disagreed with this ruling and filed the brief and asked for a new ruling. Attorney General McCraw held a conference of his staff and ruled that a man or woman becoming 21 after January 31 could vote either with or without an exemption, which was the contention of Mr. Ratliff.

Credit for clarifying this question for the whole state should be given County Attorney Ratliff, who out of nearly 400 county and district attorneys in the state was the only one to disagree with the first opinion and file his opinion with the Attorney General and give reasons for his opinion.

A copy of the ruling addresser to the county attorney of Dickens County was sent to all other county attorneys in the state.

HALF-TRUTHS WON'T WIN IN TEXAS

It is unlikely that Texas would have been faced with a campaign in the Governor's race this year except for the so-called issue of Old Age Pensions. But this tempting apple was too much for the politically ambitious. Ostensibly it offered everything in the way of appeal that the astute politician could pray for—provided, of course—that he could fool the unwary and befuddle the wise.

The oil man from East Texas is attempting to force or beguile Texans to believe that the Constitutional Amendment voted last Summer makes it mandatory for a pension to be paid everyone over the age of 65. He stops far short of the whole truth.

The Amendment is permissive only. The Legislature is given the AUTHORITY to set up such restrictions and requirements as it may deem expedient and necessary. The Amendment, by no stretch of the imagination, contemplated this broadcast payment which would cost around sixty millions of dollars each year. If it had made such provisions Texas could have kissed Federal funds goodbye. The Social Security Board, in no uncertain terms, has told Texas and every other State that no Federal money would be forthcoming on such a basis. Is it not better to provide an average of $20 per month for the needy than $15 a month for everybody and let Texas pay the whole cost?

This sort of campaigning may catch a few gullible, but thinking people will question the good-faith of him who seeks honor by such methods.

Another candidate—also a big oil man—favors "payment of the old age pensions without discrimination to all who are not barred by Constitutional restrictions or precluded by the Federal Social Security Act." That is exactly what we have now. Texas has the most liberal old-age pension act in the union.

Texas has a middle-of-the road Governor who isn't excited by the hue and cry of a deluded minority. The job is being done in a way which will not require that it be done over again. Oklahoma has had its old age assistance act thrown in the ash can because of haste. Texas is one of the few states that has not had to amend its act in order to comply with the requirements of the Social Security Board.

We cannot believe that Texas people have reached the point where they will fall for half-truths and misleading statements of fact. Texas' best assurance of future performance in this and any other connection is past accomplishments. The Governor of Texas has shown during his first term in office that he may be depended upon. His achievements are much more substantial than idle promises.

Jim Allred for a second term is the best insurance the old people can have for action in the matter of their pensions.—Editorial from The Gainesville Daily Register, June 9, 1936.

STRONG FOR MAHON

In feeling out the sentiment of the voters in the territory we find 99 per cent of the folks are strong for the re-election of Hon. George Mahon to Congress. Most every one knows he has made us a first class representative while in Washington and at all times has stood and worked for the best interests of the people whom he was chosen to serve. That he has a Townsendite opponent seems to cut very little ice with the people as most of them understand the Townsend Tax Plan and $200 per month pension to those over 60 is just

CENTENNIAL FARM STORY

"We have a small farm of twenty acres of rich land with a four room frame house. We have electric lights, refrigerator, stove and radio. We have running water in the house furnished by the windmill," says Mrs. Floyd Barnett, Dickens County's only contestant in the Centennial Farm and Ranch Demonstration Contest sponsored by the Dallas News in cooperation with the Texas Extension Service.

"We have made considerable changes in the yard and fences since we have been here the past year. The first thing we enlarged the yard, making it look like a farm home. The yard was too small for the space surrounding it. We removed a fence between house and barns and between house and service building. We save much time every day by not having to open those two unnecessary gates. We like it so much better to have the yard and garden all under one fence. It is an incentive to keep the garden looking as nice as the yard. Under favorable conditions the garden produces enough vegetables to can and to use fresh for the family.

"There is still more work to be done in the yard for to me that is one of the most important factors of any home. We filled in and leveled our yard after removing all the dead trees. The next thing was to tie the house to the ground with foundation shrubs and to screen the garage. Both native and nursery shrubs were used. Wild plum, currant, yucca, and sage were the native shrubs used and the nursery shrubs were crepe myrtle, lantana, weigelia, lilacs, brides' wreath, Arizona Cypress and Pfitzer juniper. We have shrubs that will bloom early in the spring, others throughout the summer and the evergreens will add color the year around. We used plants that thrive in West Texas. We have 50 Chinese elms growing for shade and screens.

"We set our front lawn last year and laid two flagstone walks. This year we are putting grass in the a pipe dream that tickles ones imagination and leads the unthoughted off on a long wild goose chase after a pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow. Mahon has made good and deserves to be returned to Washington, and will be returned by an overwhelming vote of the people.—The Jayton Chronicle.

The above editorial clipped from The Jayton Chronicle could be readily applied to Dickens County. Without being asked people in all parts of Dickens County have stated that George Mahon is practically without opposition for re-election and further qualified the statement that they were well pleased and their neighbors were well pleased with the work that Mr. Mahon has done the past year and a half in Washington.

back and side yard and will soon have a well set lawn. We have enjoyed sitting on it in the evenings. In the side and back yard I have space for annuals and roses.

"The land is almost level in the field. We do not have a wash but the land drains well. We have about three acres in alfalfa for summer pasturing and three acres we plant to wheat for winter pasture. The wheat land will be planted to row crops now. The cotton land has been planted to feed and the feed land to cotton in order to keep the land in better condition. We use available manure on gardens and field. We grow enough feed to run the farm and raise enough cotton for cash needs supplemented by the sale of stock, poultry, and garden products.

"We can cure enough meat and vegetables for our family of three and buy enough fruit with proceeds from our over-production to supply our needs. We are starting a home orchard. We have chickens all the year and a beef to can for the summer use. I filled my food budget last year and have thoroughly enjoyed it. I have a budget made for this year and feel sure that it will be filled before the year is out. I do not have a cellar and so have to keep so much of our canned food at my mothers until we can have a cellar. We do keep a week or two's supply here.

"We enjoy farm life and want our home to be as comfortable and attractive and livable as we can make it. We shall continue to make improvements as we can."

WORTHWHILE PROGRAM AT STAMFORD REUNION

Stamford, June 23.—Although there will be many worthwhile attractions on the program of the Seventh Annual Texas Cowboy Reunion to be held in Stamford July 2, 3, and 4, the chief entertainment feature of the Reunion will be the rodeo, featuring the cowhands from the ranches.

Word has been received from numerous contestants and visitors of former years that they will be on hand this year when the gates swing open on July 2nd. In addition many Centennial visitors to Texas are expected to visit Stamford during the Reunion to witness a rodeo that has been classified as "an authentic survival of a typically Western institution." Former years have seen 50,000 and 55,000 visitors here during the three days. This year conservative estimates place the attendance at an even greater figure.

Seven rodeo events are on the card for this year's show. Three rodeo performances will be held each day during the Reunion—morning, afternoon and night. Cash prizes in the rodeo events total $1600. Prize saddles, boots, spurs, hats and other premiums will swell the total prize list to approximately $2500.

Cash prizes will be given in bronco-busting, calf-roping, steer riding and wild cow milking each day. A special junior steer riding contest will be staged at night performances on July 3 and 4, and the winners will receive cash prizes. Cowboys over 55 years of age will compete for honors on July 2 and 3 in a special calf roping contest, the winner to receive a hand made saddle.

In addition to these attractions a cutting horse contest will be held on the morning of July 3. This contest has always been popular with the spectators, because more depends upon the skill of the horse than the ability of the rider. It is particularly popular with the cowboys who like to boast of the skill and intelligence of their horses. Each contestant must cut five head of cattle, designated by colored ribbons, out

Says Dangerous Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced At Home

Push Gently Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way. If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, the best advice for home treatment that anyone in this world can give, is to get a prescription known as Moore's Emerald Oil.

Simply ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer troublesome. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic sores and ulcers are often entirely healed.

of a herd. The horse and rider doing the job with the greatest skill and ease wins the contest prize, a fine hand stamped saddle.

A change has been made in the rules of the cutting horse contest in that there will be no elimination contest as in former years. The entire contest will be held on the morning of July 3, the horses being given their final rating by the judges at that time. Certain changes will be made in the manner of conducting the contest, in order to give the rider a better chance to show his horse.
