MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

I'm so glad the Lord made woman,
I don't know what man would do,
If he did not have the dear sweet woman,
To keep his house, cook and sew.

Woman, woman, how we praise her,
By her side in public strut,
But at home we almost craze her,
And she calls us silly mutt.

I'm so glad I learned to trust one—just one.
It wont do to trust no more,
If you just try to have some fun,
O my land, it makes her sore.

Woman, woman, we salute her,
How we have proved her o'er and o'er.
Then do things that just don't suit her,
Then obey, she'll raise a roar.

When Jehovah looked on Adam,
Said it's not good to be alone,
I can't think nor can I fathom,
The wrong he had done to atone.

This old thought that man can't please one,
Is just a great big crazy nut.
Do what she says, give her the mon,
And keep your bloomin' mouth tight shut.

—Farmer Doolittle.

VOTE FOR THE MOFFETT AMENDMENT

President Van Zandt Jarvis of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has sent out a letter discussing the Moffett Amendment to the Constitution of Texas which will be voted on in November. The Amendment was endorsed at the Amarillo convention of the West Texas Chamber. Every citizen of West Texas should vote for this amendment which will limit the number of representatives from the big cities to seven thereby equalizing the control of the Legislature between town and country. The letter is as follows:

Stamford, Texas, August 23, 1956

To:

West Texas Chamber of Commerce Directors,
Local Chamber of Commerce Secretaries,
West Texas Newspaper Editors,
West Texas County Judges,
West Texas Mayors.

Gentlemen:

In accordance with resolution passed at our Amarillo convention we are calling upon the people of West Texas to support and vote for the Moffett amendment at the November general election. This amendment limits the number of representatives in the Legislature from any one county to seven, and we beg you to consider the importance of this amendment to West Texas.

Representation in the Legislature now is based upon dividing the total population of the state by 150 (the number of representatives) and allotting representatives to each county or counties in accordance to the resulting population quotient. In the above way the 1921 redistricting act gave Harris county 5 representatives and Dallas county 6 representatives. If the state were redistricted in accordance with the 1930 census Harris county would have 9 representatives and Dallas county 8. In fact, Harris county on basis of its present estimated population is claiming and working for 14 representatives out of the 150 prescribed by the constitution.

We submit that the above method of districting will eventually give a few big cities control of the Legislature and that the Moffett amendment will fairly and democratically prohibit this centralization of power.

In the first place geography and economic groups should have representation as well as population. Harris county having 1654 square miles and having more or less common economic problems now has 5 representatives and will get many more if the present method is followed. On the other hand, Gaines, Dawson, Yoakum, Terry, Lynn, Cochran, Hockley, Lubbock and Crosby counties having 8530 square miles and quite a diversity in economic problems now have only one representative. The people of Harris county not only have the opportunity of voting for 5 different representatives but also have 5 votes in the Legislature, while the people in the South Plains counties can vote for only one representative and have only one vote in the Legislature. When redistricting comes surely the South Plains counties should get the increase rather than Harris county. The Moffett amendment will enable our West Texas counties to get more representation.

In the second place it is sound Democracy to limit the concentration of power and diffuse representation to the rural districts. Over 30 of our States have already done this, and have provided in their constitutions for a limitation of representation in the rural districts. The Federal constitution likewise, is framed so as to curtail concentration of power in population centers. The President and Vice-President cannot come from the same State. All states have two senators regardless of population and some states now have more Congressmen than their population quotients. The Moffett Amendment will likewise make our Constitution up to date in this respect and will prevent the undue concentration of power in the big cities.

In the third place West Texas and other rural districts need more representatives at Austin. Our West Texas territory has 65% of the State's total territory and pays better than 45% of all the money going into the state treasury. You will see that our representation, both appointive and elective, is nowhere near in proportion to our economic importance. We have only 35% of the representatives in the Legislature and only 27% of the states elective and appointive officials. We secure but 29% of the states available school fund, 25 per cent of the elementary budget and around 30% of the appropriation for higher education. The Moffett amendment limiting concentration of power and giving us more representation will enable us to overcome these discriminations.

History shows that the bulk of population increase goes to big cities. With farm machinery supplanting farm hands this process will continue. At present, West Texas, even though having a large rural increase in population cannot afford to redistrict because the bulk of the population increase is concentrated in cities. Let's fix our constitution now so that rural districts will receive better representation and so that big cities cannot combine and rule. We believe the Moffett amendment will do this.

STAGGERING STATISTICS STUD "MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION," STUDIO RECORDS SHOW

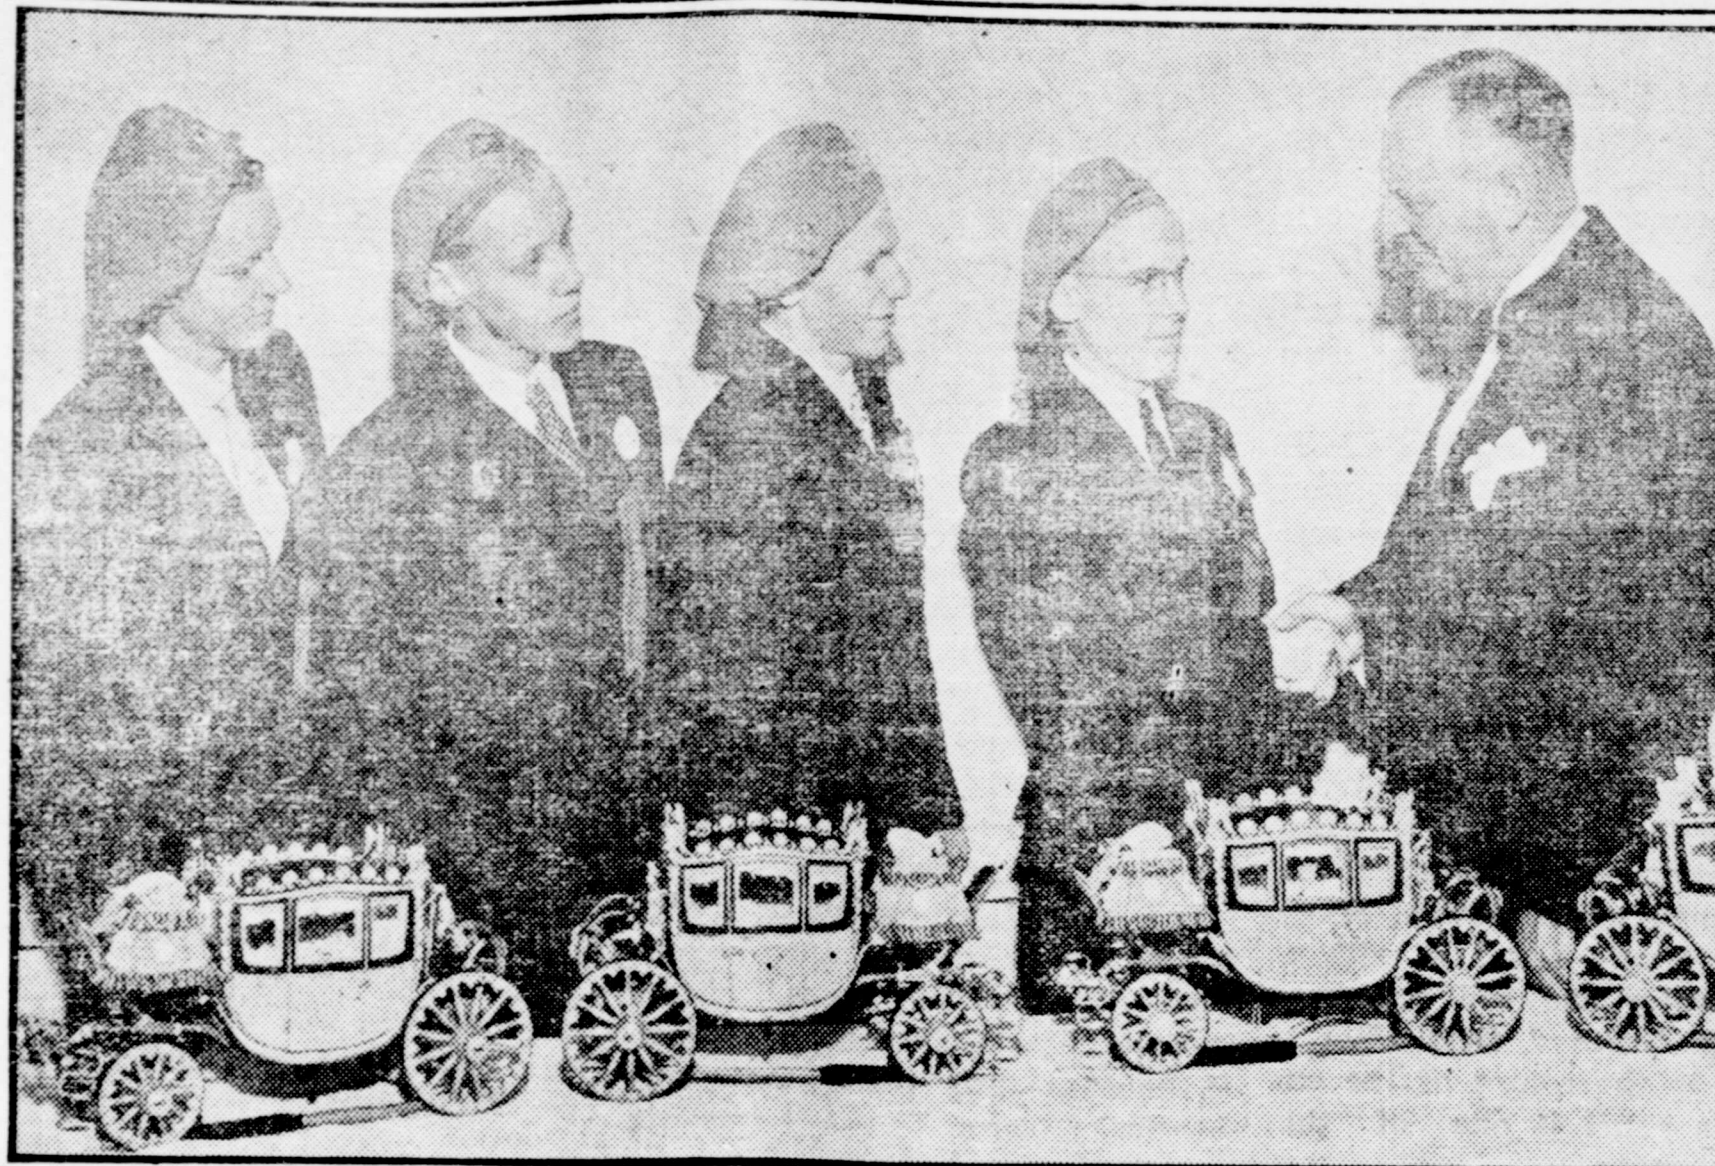

One hundred and seventy-seven miles of motion picture film, enough to reach from New York to Saratoga—that is "Magnificent Obsession." Or rather it was until Director John M. Stahl began to cut it down to the 8500 feet which will appear on the screen at the Palace Theatre Prevue Saturday night, Sunday and Monday.

Meticulously working out every scene, taking and retaking until he felt that he had the dramatic values wanted, Stahl ran up 467,000 feet of negative at the end. The sound track film, made separately and joined to the pictorial scenes on the positive, required a similar length of celloid. The total, almost a million feet, was a staggering length for John Stahl to edit. Most of the scenes were shot 15 times and many reached 25 takes. Camera work and editing required 26 weeks.

For those with a penchant for figures, these facts will be significant. "Magnificent Obsession" has a cast of 70 headed by Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor. Sixty experts of all sorts were employed during the production of the picture. Eleven different types of movie cameras were used by John Mescall and his six assistants.

A hospital and a church were made from blocks of wood which were charred and chipped to resemble old stone. A section of Montmartre was constructed, with shops, sidewalk cafes, public parks, cobble streets and dwellings. A giant section of the Normandie, accurately rendered from blue prints, was one of the 41 sets which went to make "Magnificent Obsession," a convincingly mounted production done on a grand scale.

TEXAS CENTENNIAL

By CLARA PRATT
County Home Demonstration Agent
The three days that I recently spent at the Frontier and Central expositions of the Texas Centennial were both interesting and disappointing. It was well worth our time though.

As one enters the grounds of the Frontier Centennial at Fort Worth one enters a pioneer village, Sunset Trail. On Main Street are the blacksmith shop, the barber shop, pool hall, Judge Bean's land office, the general merchandise store, with a variety of wares hanging on the porch, the millinery, the church with its cemetery, and other frontier village buildings. In the general merchandise store are open barrels of crackers, thick sides of bacon with the lean part cut out and the fat left on the rind, the dripping syrup barrel in one corner.

The store keepers and various shop keepers are men with beards and the appearance of pioneers. The Ladies Aid was in session at the church.

The buildings are old. If you did not know they had been erected this spring you would declare they had stood there for a hundred years. In the living quarters back of the general store is a trundle bed that excites much interest. The hostesses here are dressed in flowered, colonial dresses.

After leaving the Sunset Trail one enters the Midway which has nothing unusual about it.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce exhibit is good. It is an educational exhibit worthy of the section from which it came. Each town affiliated with the West Texas organization has a panel portraying in brief the advantages of the town and surrounding country. These panels are then arranged in exhibits grouped together according to some phase of agriculture or industry, for example, small grain, cotton, sheep and goats. Spur's panel is with a group on water and soil conservation with a terraced field after a heavy rain in the center of the exhibit. Spur's panel is one of the best in the group.

The Will Rogers exhibit is in this building also. The exhibit is a replica of the living room in the Rogers ranch home in California. In the exhibit are letters and telegrams and saddles of Will Rogers.

There are three major shows in the Frontier Centennial, Jumbo, the Last Frontier, and Casa Manana. Each show gives two performances each night so one can attend two of the three. We chose Jumbo and Casa Manana. Jumbo is the largest stage circus in the world. The costumes are so expensive and impressive that it is a glittering sight and the program is enjoyed by young and old alike.

Casa Manana is an open-air night club with an enormous revolving stage that is a wonder of the exposition. The program is composed of music, singing, dancing, and one or two comedy numbers. The costumes here are beautiful and different. The whole program is beautiful with a most impressive lighting effect. Even Sally Rand's bubble dance is beautiful.

The central exposition at Dallas was disappointing to me because there was so little Texas history depicted. The Calvacade, a historical pageant, was really the only historical feature. To see it is worth the trip however. The scenery for the big out-door stage is so well painted that one can't tell where the painting ends and the sky begins. The screen is a spray of water with lights at each end making a rainbow for a screen.

The Dallas exposition is very much like the Century of Progress at Chicago; in some respects better and in some not so good. The buildings are beautiful though not so colorful and spectacular as at Chicago. The most of them are permanent. When the lights are turned on at night they are beautiful.

Those who like machinery could spend days in the Ford, General Motors and Transportation buildings. Others will enjoy more the varied Industries, Food, and Federal buildings, and the Hall of Religion. In the Federal building are housed branches of the various departments of government and if studied is equal to a course in civics. In the agricultural building are feed and seed exhibits and a 4-H pantry for an average family of five members.

Most of the buildings are air conditioned and may have lounges for visiting and resting. The Midway offers the usual unusual attractions. The Globe Theatre, an exact reproduction of the old Globe Theatre in London, and given to the City of Dallas, has a troupe of twenty-two players who give four of Shakespeare's plays twice daily. The plays are cut so they can be given in forty-five to fifty minutes each.

If possible, I think every Texan should attend our own Centennial. We shall probably never have an opportunity to attend a World's Fair so near us again.
