about dimmitt and castro county

Don't sell your cotton seed. Do a little investigating, it may not be too late to plant cotton. It has been reported that many of the farmers of this area are afraid it is too late to plant cotton, they just might be wrong. Your columnist is an authority on cotton culture in Bell county, but our experience in this area has been extensively limited, in fact I think I mentioned in this space once before that cotton caused us to turn to printing as a method of rendering a service to our fellowman. I do have a little observation to make however, in regard to the planting of cotton, for the benefit of farmers of limited experience. You plant the stuff in rows, far enough apart so that a mule can walk between them, and it should be thick enough to shade out the weeds so that you won't have to do much hoeing. About the lateness of planting we don't have a precedent to go by in this particular locality but I remember back in 1941 and 1942, when it rained so much in the spring, farmers in Lamb county finished planting their cotton on June 20 and made a good crop. That could have been an exception however, it should be safe to plant cotton during the first week in June. For further information and verification consult another expert on cotton.

Cotton comes up quicker and grows of faster if it is planted after the soil has warmed up to a certain temperature. County Agent McLeroy might tell you just what the soil temperature should be. There is still plenty of time to make a bumper cotton crop. Two weeks ago you were notified through this column that there would be sufficient moisture in plenty of time. Our predictions are right so much of the time that it gets to be monotonous.

Since the rains there has been a complete change in the facial expressions of business men and farmers. They look confident. They know that moisture in this country means high yields and substantial income. All types of cash crops will be planted with a reasonable assurance of satisfactory production. It will be a good year for the farmers, for business and for development of our county.

Castro County was well represented at the National Wheat Harvest Festival at Wichita Falls by Miss Wanda Gollehor. Miss Gollehor, a beautiful and talented young lady, was sponsored by the Castro County Chamber of Commerce in the National Wheat Harvest Festival queen contest. She was accompanied to Wichita Falls by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gollehor. At least the folks at Wichita Falls, and their visitors, had a chance to see that even if we didn't raise a wheat crop, we were still in the business of raising beautiful girls. A young lady from Nocona won the coveted honors.

This is important. Could be the most important item ever to appear in this column. We might find out something valuable, read on. County Agent McLeroy was in our office today and thinks that maybe there is a survey that could be conducted that would turn up some valuable information. It's about the wheat crop this year. He doesn't know what happened to the wheat to cut the yield down so low, nor has anyone else thoroughly determined the exact cause of the short crop. Probably several contributing factors involved, including not enough moisture, green bugs, other insects and maybe a root disease, are responsible for the short crop. But in looking around over the county, and other sections of the Panhandle, where he has worked, McLeroy has discovered that one variety of wheat has withstood the rigors of this very bad crop year better than other varieties. According to his findings all of the better fields of wheat are of the Wichita variety. What County Agent McLeroy wants to know is if you are going to make a medium crop, a fair crop, or a good crop of wheat, what variety of seed did you plant. If you have some wheat that will produce and some that died without a struggle he wants to know what kind of seed you planted in each case. The point is that there may be an opportunity to prove what variety of wheat will best stand the adverse (Continued On Back Page)

A part of the community is practically marooned with lakes and washed out roads. Those in the community, during really rainy weather, have to go south to the farm road by the Carl Frye place and east to the Dimmitt highway. There are so many lakes and the roads are in such bad condition that the situation is getting past something for jokes. The bus hasn't run except Monday afternoon since the big rains started last week, and parents have to make long drives to get their children to school.

YOUR NEIGHBOR COULD BE A CROOK

Suppose someone came up to you and whispered that in your ear. Maybe you had thought your neighbor an honest, respectable fellow who paid his bills and minded his own business.

But a statement like that would start you wondering. If you heard it over and over, you would start wondering more and more.

Stop and think about it. The gossip didn't say your neighbor is a crook . . . and didn't give you facts to back it up. He didn't really say anything. Your minister could be a crook, but he isn't.

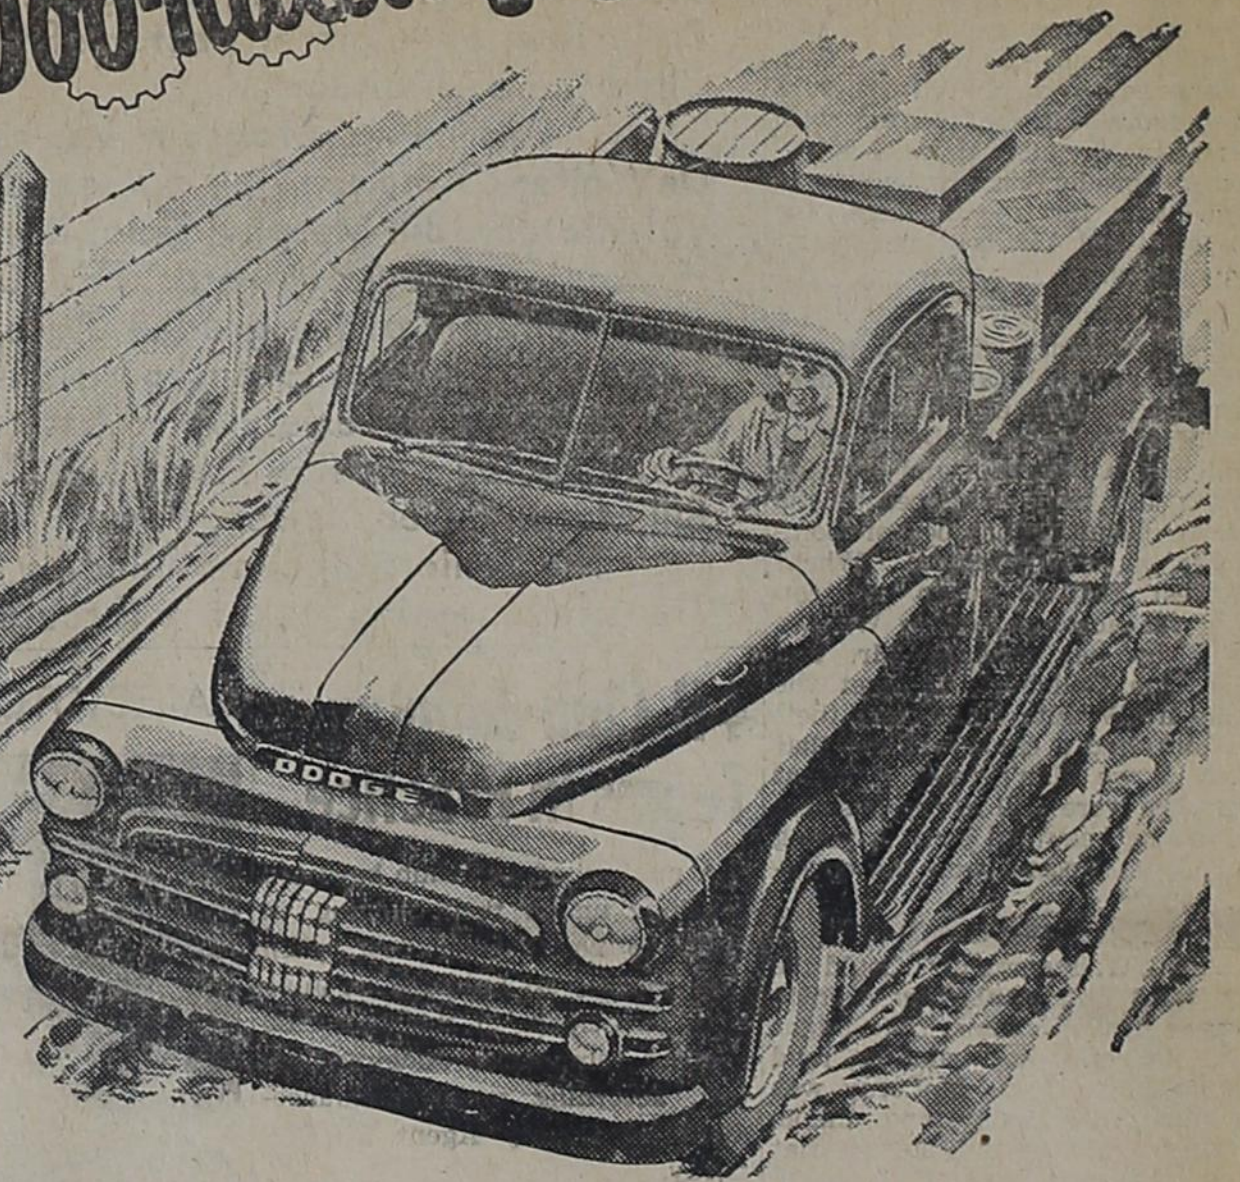

That's the way it is with a lot of the propagand against rural electric systems. It doesn't come right out and say there is something wrong with our business. It just hints that there is. Maybe you hear these hints in some radio commercials or read them in magazine advertisements. Maybe eventually you begin wondering about us.

As a locally-owned, locally-controlled business, we want everyone in this community to know us . . . understand what we do and how we do it, what we believe in and how we operate.

The Home Makers club met Wednesday in the home of Mrs. Henry Andrews. During roll call, Mrs. Frank Robbins told the story from the Bible of Saul and the Witch as a part of her chosen subject for the year on "Interesting Bible Characters". Mrs. Joe Davenport gave a demonstration on covering a belt buckle as her sewing contribution. The other members contributed bits of in-

The program was on Sheets, Blankets and Blanket Protectors with Mrs. Henry Dobbs giving the part on sheets, Mrs. Spicer Gripp talking on Blankets and Mrs. McClure giving the discussion on Blanket Protectors. Mrs. Dobbs said that it is wise to buy the best sheets you can afford, the 140 thread count being the best muslin ones and 200 thread count best in the percale. She stated that according to her information, six sheets per bed are considered adequate, with 3 pillow slips per pillow. Mrs. Gripp gave tips on identifying better blankets and said that it is considered better to wash them for thorough cleaning. She told something of how to select, care for and clean them. conditions that have been prevalent this year. This information, turned in to Mr. McLeroy could be of great value if by comparison future crop failures can be averted or partially averted. There are a number of fields of wheat scattered over the county that will make a fairly high yield, if it is found that a majority of these fields are of the same variety of wheat and that other varieties failed to produce at all the comparison at least would be interesting. Please give your county agent this information.

The column was strictly agriculture this week. Started off with cotton and ended up with wheat, with a good looking girl in between. Had you ever stopped to think about Castro County being in between the cotton and wheat countries with either crop producing abundantly here—ordinarily. It is a wonderful county and I hope that the farmers take my advice and raise a big crop. It is much easier to publish a good newspaper during a good crop year—there is so much more to write about, and too, people feel more like reading.

A couple of months ago Lt. Col. Jim Crossman, arms and ammunition expert, decided to have a look at the laws affecting hunting in the various states. So he wrote for copies of the latest game laws and has since been spending many a dull evening wading through them.

His findings aren't complete, but they make interesting reading. One of the first things to be learned is that ever though you have never had and never expect to have a brush with the game warden, it still might be a good idea to read over your laws pretty carefully. You may be surprised at how many things you are doing that are "agin the law."

Here are some odds and ends that I've culled from Jim's report: Shooting from an automobile is almost 100 per cent unpopular and most of the laws contain provisions against shooting from a moving car. Many prohibit carrying a loaded gun in a car, particularly during the hunting season.

The Migratory Bird Treaty acts prohibit the use of a shotgun with more than a three-shot capacity. This three-shot capacity includes shells in both magazine and chamber. A considerable number of states have fallen in line with this rule and have outlawed shotguns holding more than three shots for upland game, and in some cases for all hunting within their borders.

The one big subject on which there are major differences of opinion is shotguns for big game. No matter what gun you have been using in your state, you will find it's illegal in some other state. California and Arizona are among the states which prohibit the use of shotgun on deer. Massachusetts and New Jersey go to the other extreme and specify that only shotguns shall be used on big game. New York, Minnesota, Michigan and other states split the difference and permit rifle or shotgun in some areas and require the shotgun only in certain other areas. Washington permits the shotgun on deer but forbids it on elk.

It's bad enough that there is this disagreement on the matter of rifle versus the shotgun, but even in those places which permit the use of the shotgun on big game there is no agreement on the matter of load you can use. And you can expect there will be more and more states setting up certain ballistic standards for rifles used on big game. Incidentally, a large number of states prohibit the use of rifle or pistol for taking upland game birds. Adding this all up, it looks like you'd better look at your local game laws before you rush down and buy a gun. You might get caught with one that is now, or soon will be outlawed.

Most people today are doing all right as far as income goes. The big trouble is that it goes.

THE LAW AND YOU

by Rob't. (Bob) Kirk

DO YOU KNOW whether or not a person has to have a license to sell insurance?

To sell insurance in Texas, a person must have a license from the Board of Insurance Commissioners. Any person soliciting insurance in this state, who is not duly authorized to do so may be punished by a fine and may have his license revoked. Any person who is approached by an insur-ce salesman has the right to demand of the salesman that he present his credentials.

Any insurance agent who makes fraudulent representations or misleading statements to secure the payment of premiums of insurance is subject to a fine and revocation of his license.

Practically all insurance policies have a clause stating that representation of their agent form no part of the contract; that the company will be bound only by the written policy of insurance. You should read the policy carefully as soon as you receive it, or if possible, secure a copy and read it before you pay for your insurance, and if in doubt as to the meaning of any part of it, you should consult your local attorney, and have him advise you as to the meaning and effect of the policy.

R. E. A. Advisor Plans Adequate Wiring For Homes

A. T. Ford, Electrification Advisor for the Deaf Smith County Electric Cooperative, Inc., attended a three day adequate wiring Conference in Austin, Texas, during the past week.

The first day of the Conference was devoted to electrical wiring terms, wiring methods and safety practices.

Mr. V. E. Moore, Electrification Advisor for the Karnes Electric Cooperative gave a demonstration on over load conditions by using a panel board designed to demonstrate exactly what happens when a wire is overloaded and not fused properly.

Mr. Moore pointed out that the fuse size should never be larger than the ampere rating of the circuit or appliance it is desired to protect. By actually overloading a circuit, composed of 100 feet of No. 18 drop cord, which was not protected by the proper size fuse, Mr. Moore allowed the drop cord to become so hot that the insulation burst into flames. Moore further pointed out that the wiring in many homes and buildings was adequate 10 years ago but has out grown its usefulness now, since many more uses for electricity have become common on the farm. He showed a typical wiring layout designed ten years previous, on which, Moore said, a user was complaining because his bill for electricity was higher; yet his lights were poorer and his motors did not run as good. By placing an electric motor per three or four outlets, Moore showed that although a lot larger amount of electricity passed through the first meter, the system was so overloaded that the second meter only registered about three-fourths as much as the first representing a one-quarter loss through poor wiring.

W. W. Mills of A. & M. College gave a talk on safety practices and followed his talk with a movie which brought out the hazards of defective cords, ungrounded metal parts of appliances and careless handling of electric tools and devices. Mr. Mills said that three out of every four fatalities from electric shock are caused by using faulty devices. He further pointed out that, contrary to popular belief, twice as many people are killed each year by voltages ranging from 100 to 200 volts than are killed by the higher voltages.

The second day of the meeting devoted to planning of wiring jobs. Mr. Lewis Walker of San Marcos outlined the problems and uses of electricity which the group were to discuss and pointed out that the farm use of electricity was growing so rapidly that a central source with branch feeders capable of carrying large on each end of this layout, Moore now necessary in any planned wiring layout. "This," said Mr. Walker, "is accomplished by placing a meter pole near the center of the farmstead buildings and running large feeders to each building."

Mr. Carrol Land, manager of the Concho Valley Electric Cooperative, Inc., at San Angelo, followed Mr. Walker on the program and by using floor plans, led the group in planning a wiring system. Mr. Land stressed the location and number of convenient outlets and switches in a wiring layout.

Mr. Walker returned to the program to discuss sizes of service wire and the number of circuits required to adequately serve the requirements, which Mr. Land outlined, and stressed the point that the main consideration in any wiring was the personal element. "A wiring job is never adequate unless it meets the needs of the people using it", Mr. Walker said.

James Eiland, electrification advisor for the Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., at Starton, Texas, gave a talk on farmstead and building wiring, showing that each building should have separate fuse protection. "Including a good, separate ground for each building not only gives protection from lightning and eliminates dangers from electric shock", Mr. Eiland said. "But it also enables the wiring system to function properly". Mr. Eiland brought out the need, as a fire protection, for a separate service from the meter pole to the pump house or water source. Mr. Eiland cited a case in the Cap Rock area where the power to operate a water pump was cut off by a fire in the building, through which the wiring to the pump was run.

The day's session was summed up by Mr. B. W. Chesser, Washington representative of REA. Mr. Chesser brought out that "It is of the utmost importance that we use the information gained at this conference for the benefit of our Co-op members".

Following the theme of Mr. Chesser's closing remarks of the previous day, the last day was devoted to study of methods best suited to bring the information to the members.

The group was assisted in this study by Mr. Dave Shanks, Farm News Editor of the Austin American-Statesman and Mr. Norris

Davis, professor of journalism at the University of Texas. Mr. Shanks said that he was very pleased to see the efforts being made by the REA Cooperatives in Texas to render this service to their members through their news letters, their local newspaper and their own state paper, "The Texas Co-op Power".

The session closed Thursday afternoon with electric current were tried their hand at writing a news story under the supervision of Mr. Davis. Mr. Davis evidenced a deal of surprise at some of the uses now made of electricity on the farm. The group was amused when he asked, "Now what in the world is an electric chicken de-beaker?" Mr. Davis said that although he was raised on a farm near Bartlett, Texas, and had heard of de-horning cows, he did not know they now de-beak chickens.

Nazareth Junior 4-H Club Has Meeting

The Nazareth Junior 4-H Club held the monthly meeting on May 16. The president, Richard Hoelting, and secretary, Jack Acker, presided at the meeting. Mr. McLeroy discussed many things with the group for the summer. A cotton contest was discussed on who could raise the best cotton and most per 5 acres. We also discussed the trips and play days this summer.

The local P-T-A held the last meeting of the current year on May 11. The meeting opened with Arnold Brockman, president, presiding. He was assisted by Andy Schumacker and Leonard Conrad. The first business of the president was the installation of new officers. These were Andy Schumacker, president, and Mrs. Carl Burt, secretary. Leonard Conrad retained his office of treasurer. Because of threatening weather, the new vice president, Vincent Pohlmeier, was not present.

Announcement was made that the seventh and eighth grades had won the five dollar award given by the club in the membership drive. Miss Bonita Kern read a paper prepared by Mrs. Orville Kay Smith, District President. The meeting closed with the serving of refreshments by Mrs. Joe Warren.

Mothers Honored by Sodalists

During the afternoon of Mother's Day, the Sodalists honored their mothers with an entertaining program. Those appearing on the program were Miss Clemie Aichlmayr, prefect, with a welcoming address; Miss May Acker read "Mother Watch"; Mrs. Ed Brockman read "My Daughter's Toys"; the high school glee club sang three songs; and Vincent Raemakers and Bert Wilhelm conducted a lively "Truth or Consequence". The winners in the last number were Catherine Backus and Gene Kern. The club members also gave awards to the youngest mother, Mrs. Jerome Brockman; to the most recent mother, again it was given to Mrs. Brockman; to the oldest mother present, Mrs. Kern who is 86; and to the mother present having the largest family, Mrs. Andrew Acker. The program closed with serving of cake, ice cream, and punch by the entertainment committee to all present.

Both of the Girls' 4-H Clubs met with Miss Robin Vann on May 16. In the junior club Betty Mae Leinen presided and in the senior division Clemie Aichlmayr presided. In both meetings discussion was held on the Annual Dress Review held in Dimmitt on May 19. The girls also discussed the possibility of holding meetings

These classes will be held from 9 to 12 in the morning and from 1 to 4 in the afternoon. They will be held five days a week.

The Nazareth baseball team of the Irrigation Belt League won another game on May 13. The team beat Umbarger with a score of 36 to 6. Losing pitcher was Gene Grabber. Winning pitcher was Luke Acker.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kleman of Tucumcari, N. Mex., are staying in Nazareth for a few days until clearing weather permits farm work at Tucumcari.

Lawrence and Henry Birkenfeld of New Mexico have been visiting relatives in Nazareth. Baccalaureate Services Held

Baccalaureate services were held in Holy Family church for the 1951 senior class May 20. The seniors and the eighth grade graduates entered church for Mass and Communion to a Processional played by Mrs. Leonard Conrad. The sermon for the occasion was preached by the pastor, Rev. Peter Morsch. Mr. and Mrs. George Schacher honored the senior class with a 'senior supper' May 17. Their daughter, Marian, is a member of the class. Another supper will be held in their honor by Misses Emely Ann Pohlmeier and Jane Albracht in the Alfred Pohlmeier home during the evening of May 20.

Environmental Sanitation Necessary For Good Health

AUSTIN, TEXAS — "Environmental sanitation is the public health term for clean, safe house-keeping whether it applies to a private home and its surroundings or to towns and cities. Among other things, it insures safe drinking water, proper garbage and sewage disposal, the safe service of wholesome food including milk, rat and insect control, and general cleanliness of the premises. However, for environmental sanitation to be effective, it is essential that not only public health officials but the citizens living in their respective homes or operating establishments serving the public cooperate wholeheartedly, declared Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"Consider, for example, the seasonal housefly hazard. It has been determined that 120 eggs are laid by a single female at one time and that a generation is produced every ten days at summer temperature. Thus, the possibility of reproduction during the warm months of a single fly runs into the millions. While the housefly does not bite, it is dangerous because it breeds and feeds upon both filth and food.

"Again rats are the source of several diseases of man including plague, typhus fever, infectious jaundice, and trichinosis, to mention some of the more important ones. Homes can be made comparatively ratproof by removing rubbish and garbage accumulations, and by closing avenues of access. Approved poisons and traps should be employed when a real problem presents itself.

"Removal of containers of stagnant water such as tin cans and barrels will do much to eliminate the mosquito for householders. The householder needs to devote more seasonal attention to mosquito eradication than he is today if this is to be properly controlled.

"In general, good and thorough housekeeping, inside and out, is the personal and civic duty of every home dweller. It not only adds to the pleasure of living and removes disease hazards, but increases the appearance of one's surroundings."

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Harrison and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Harrison went to Abilene this week to attend graduation exercises at McMurry College. Joe Harrison is a member of the graduating class.

Did you ever see a little girl who didn't want to look pretty? We haven't! Girls are style conscious at a very early age.

To satisfy this desire for fashion with no sacrifice to comfort, Katherine Potter who directs the beauty and grooming department for Procter and Gamble, has designed some vacation hairdos for the sub-deb set. All are designed for coolness. All use rubber bands to hold them in place, and flowers and ribbons add the pretty touch.

Cool and saucy is the pony-do. Brush the back hair to the crown, then the front hair. Brush and brush until all hair is smooth, then bind it with a rubber band. This style will stay neat all day through vigorous play.

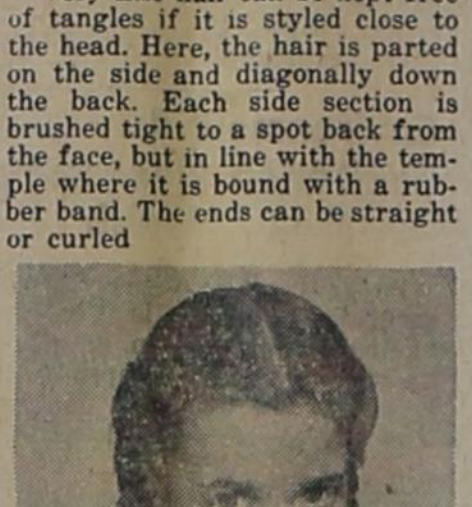

Very fine hair can be kept free of tangles if it is styled close to the head. Here, the hair is parted on the side and diagonally down the back. Each side section is brushed tight to a spot back from the face, but in line with the temple where it is bound with a rubber band. The ends can be straight or curled.

Part heavy hair from crown to nape. Gather each side section of hair to spot just above ear and fasten with a rubber band, then cover band with flowers or ribbons. Notice how the bangs are cut back beyond the hairline. This gives more width to forehead, more depth to eyes.

Mothers should remember too that clean hair is cool hair. Frequent shampooing is necessary during the vacation months when outdoor play allows extra dust and perspiration to collect on the scalp and hair. A new type of detergent shampoo called Shasta is especially good for children because it is a cream and will not run when applied to the hair. Also it lathers well in all kinds of water.

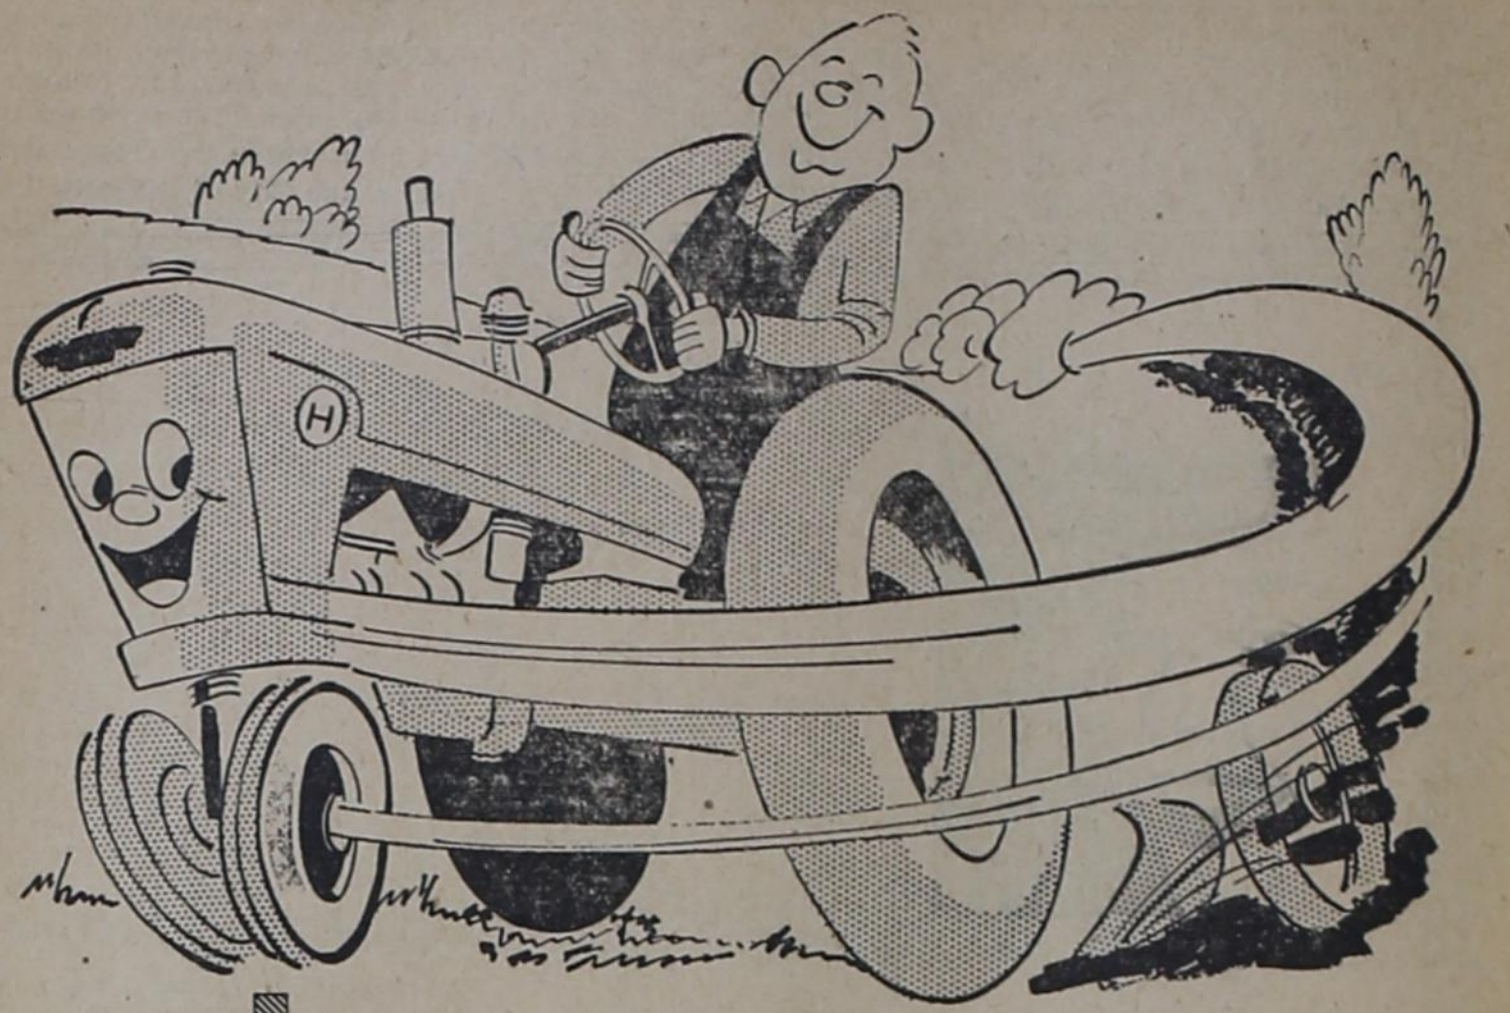

Braids are glamorous, particularly when they are tied with fresh stiff ribbons, and when the hair ends are curled. Be sure to keep parts straight. Redo them every day.

CALFIDE 104

"NATURE'S OWN SOIL CONDITIONER"

DIRECT FROM THE HEART OF THE ROCKIES TO THE FARMERS OF THE NATION

STATEMENT OF COLONEL F. CARL HARVEY

Calfide 104 first took my interest in June of 1950. It has been my pleasure to witness outstanding results through the use of this product. I have seen it used in greenhouses, on farms, on grass lands for pasturage, as well as for simple gardening and yard use.

On farms I have seen it used on such crops as alfalfa where our normal production in this region is one and one half tons per acre per crop year. Our crop year allows three cuttings with alfalfa. This last year a field treated with Calfide 104 produced one and one half tons per cutting per acre, and permitted due to faster plant growth, a fourth cutting.

In greenhouses such as KERL BROTHERS, FERRIS BROTHERS, and others located in and around the vicinity of Denver, Colorado, where this product has already been utilized, I have seen Calfide 104 increase floral production by no less than 100%. These plants were stronger and more healthy than any other plants produced by these florists regardless of soil conditioner, fertilizers, chemical or otherwise used by these growers.

In cases of newly planted grasses the crop starts its growth in from five to seven days after planting. Applied to grass already planted a sizeable increase in growth is indicated within two weeks. Soil chemistry induced by the application of Calfide 104 indicates a highly increased food potential in both the soil and the vegetation growth thereon.

In the case of vegetables the size, the quantity and the quality was increased. This included such vegetables as lettuce, carrots, beets, and potatoes. In the case of lettuce the head was larger, whiter and more firm. Beet tonnage was increased by three tons to the acre. They were larger and longer and the sugar content was increased. Potatoes had no scab. They were larger, smoother and more uniform. With carrots wilt was delayed. That is to say that the carrot was more crisp than the average and this crisp quality remained longer after harvest than is normal. The carrots were longer and even in tight soil only one end or tip was formed by each carrot.

Without reservation or exception I can state that there has been no indication of aphids following the use of Calfide 104. The study of soil and plant chemistry has long been a major interest in my life and having experimented with Soil Conditioners and Fertilizers for many years gives me cause to feel justified in the statement that there is no Soil Conditioner or Fertilizer on the market today capable of the aforementioned results of the Soil Conditioner, Calfide 104. This is my unbiased opinion.

Health Talks . . .

The coccus germs cause a wide variety of diseases, some of which are distinguished by intestinal eruptions and some by skin eruptions. One kind of food poisoning is called staphylococcus germs and sometimes by streptococcus germs; and another skin disorder known as erysipelas is caused by "strep" germs.

The "staph" germs that create the terrific sickness at the stomach known as food poisoning are usually brewed up in such foods as cream puffs, eclairs, salad dressing, gravy, cold meat or dairy products that have been too long away from refrigeration. They hit suddenly about three hours after eating, usually with a strange feeling of excessive watering of the mouth, then the vomiting and diarrhea following closely and persist along with stomach cramps for the next 24 hours.

Staph food poisoning strikes the quickest, lays you out the fastest, and lets go of you the soonest of any of the brands of food poisoning. A very similar type, called salmonella food poisoning, is actually an irritation of the digestive tract caused by germ growth in the food. Spoiled meat is the most common food to cause salmonella food poisoning.

Salmonella takes longer than staph to get started and nearly always creates a fever which is not present with staph poisoning. It takes from 12 to 24 hours for salmonella food poisoning to make you wretched; it usually starts up with a cold chill, followed by a bad headache, and then the vomiting and diarrhea.

Botulism, the other kind of food poisoning, is the very dangerous type that originates usually with improperly canned food. Staph and salmonella food poisoning rarely ever cause death, though the person suffering from them is usually sure he is going to die. Botulism is frequently fatal; it takes longer to start working and may just be a collapsing-kind of sickness without the upset stomach. Both staph and salmonella food poisoning may be mistaken for appendicitis because of the cramps that accompany the diseases. If it were food poisoning instead of appendicitis, though, usually someone else is suffering, too, from the food, so a check with others who ate the same food is sometimes the quickest way of eliminating the possibility of appendicitis.

The best treatment for sudden, acute attacks of food poisoning is staying in bed as much as the symptoms allow and waiting for the sickness to go away. You usually have no appetite, anyway, and unless the vomiting and diarrhea are so excessive as to create a serious loss of body fluids, you're best off just sticking it out. If the symptoms persist beyond the first 24 hours, you require further medical attention. You'll be rather weak for a couple of days after an attack of food poisoning.

Erysipelas is the kind of disease that usually starts up when you're already weak, probably from some chronic illness. This balloon-like red blistering, which usually breaks out on the feet, most often attacks older people. An itching eruption accompanied by high fever, it may be a serious disorder, aside from the discomfort and temporary disfiguring. The antibiotics have proved very effective in the treatment of erysipelas.

At the other end of the age scale, impetigo is the coccus-caused disease that seems more prevalent among youngsters. In infants and children weakened by other diseases, impetigo may assume serious proportions but in normal children the most serious aspect is the marring of a little face with the ugly sores. It may occur on other parts of the body besides the face.

Impetigo starts up as blisters which open and form dark scabs while other blisters pop out nearby the sore. It is highly contagious and a child with impetigo should not only be kept away from other children but his wash-rag, towel, comb and brush should be put away where others aren't likely to come in contact with them.

Ammoniated mercury is the medication which in the past has had the most use in the treatment of impetigo, though it adds nothing to the appearance of the child under treatment. Antibiotics have, in some cases, cleared the eruption very quickly.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Jowell returned home from Arizona Friday where they had been on a business trip.
