WISD Advisory Committee reviews recommendations

Play ball...

Little League practice is underway just before the start of the Little League baseball season in Winters. Team rosters and schedules are expected to be announced next week by Little League officials.

City to streamline landfill operation

City administrator Glenn Brown said that the city of Winters is undertaking a program to streamline the city landfill operation and make it more efficient. In the past few years the city had been attempting to separate refuse taken to the landfill into three categories; household refuse, metal, and wood. Brown said that this was time consuming and was causing a slow down in the overall operation of the landfill.

Under the new program the pits will be filled with refuse and covered over and compacted on a daily basis rather than when a pit gets filled to its capacity. Still in the planning stage is a method of routing residents who carry refuse to the landfill to the fill pit being used rather than just dumping in the first available location. Brown said that some form of fencing may be used or signs directing persons to the proper area.

The city administrator said that officials of the state Health Department were in Winters last week to meet April 21

The Winters PTO will have their monthly meeting on April 21, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be held in the high school auditorium.

Mrs. Helen Grantham will supply information on different types of playground information and all its benefits.

make come recommendations and to offer suggestions to improve the operation of the city land fill. One of those suggestions was to fill one pit at a time, cover it over and compact the fill before starting on another pit.

Generally speaking, Brown said the landfill was in good condition but that there were areas that did need to be streamlined.

Ladies Golf Association to hold bake sale

The Ladies Golf Association will be holding a bake sale, Saturday, April 18, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

The sale will be held in front of Heidenheimer's Department Store, with proceeds going into a carpet fund for the Country Club.

SS Rep visits to be reduced

Because of a recent order to cut back on official travel, the Social Security representative will be visiting Winters only once a month. This was announced recently by Franklin H. Upp, district manager of the San Angelo Social Security office.

The representative will be at the Housing Project office on April 13, May 18, and June 22, from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

The Citizens Advisory Committee of Winters Independent School District will meet Thursday, April 23, at 7:30 p. m. to review suggested recommendations from three subcommittees regarding facilities, financial structure, and curriculum of the Winters Public Schools.

The meeting will be in the school cafeteria.

The three subcommittees have been making studies of their areas of assignment, and have prepared, or are preparing, final reports and recommendations to be presented to the public and eventually to the school board as guides in future action.

The financial subcommittee has prepared a surface report of the financial structure of the school district, vis a vis tax information and number of children enrolled each year during the past several years. Comparisons are made with other school districts in this area. The committee has made no recommendations, but probably will do so at the April 23 meeting.

No report or copy of recommendations from the facilities committee is available.

The curriculum committee has made an extensive study of the school system, and will report to the whole committee their findings, and recommendations.

A summary report of priorities, as seen by the curriculum committee, includes many areas, from teacher/student relationships to courses recommended.

In a preliminary report, the curriculum committee says "As a goal, (the committee) for Grades K-5 would like to see the elementary students exposed to as many learning stimuli as possible in a pleasant and favorable facility." The committee is recommending that "students participate in a well integrated program for the mental, physical and esthetic development of the total child."

In the area of physical education, the committee has reported that "teachers in elementary school feel that they are inadequately trained to teach physical education in Grades K-5." The committee recommends "that a class period be set aside for physical training . . . and the hiring of a physical education specialist for the elementary grades and (provision for) necessary facilities."

The committee also will recommend a lowering of the teacher/student ratio in Grades K-2. They also would have a music education teacher in Grades K-3.

Classroom supplies and teaching equipment for Grades K-3 are insufficiently provided, the committee said, and suggested that "a small budget increase by the school could correct this situation."

The curriculum committee also found that "Communication between teachers and administration should be improved." And, "teacher/parent meetings should be encouraged."

Special education is drawing attention on the part of the curriculum committee. The committee notes that special education classrooms are not crowded, and sufficient aides and material are available. However, the committee said, "the special education teachers request and we recommend that they be included in the music and physical education programs of Grades K-5."

JUNIOR HIGH

The Junior High subcommittee to the curriculum committee has

JIM F. WILLIAMS

Jim Williams retires from Exxon Co.

James F. Williams, Jr. of Winters, is retiring from Exxon Company, U.S.A., with 34 years of service. He has been assigned as field superintendent in the Midcontinent Production Division, Midland District, and located in the Winters area.

Williams joined the company as a roustabout in Freer. Subsequent production field assignments took him to the King Ranch area; Bronte in 1950; and in 1955, he was assigned to the Winters area. In 1972, he was promoted from maintenance foreman to field superintendent.

He is a native of Grosvenor. A dinner is planned in his honor Thursday, April 16. At that time he will be presented retirement awards by District Operations Superintendent O. D. Copeland, Jr., of Midland.

New sewer line segment underway

Construction on a new segment of the city sewer lines got underway this week with work on the line to run parallel to state highway 53 from Main street west to the site of the new Pool Company building.

The construction will cost $35,468 and will involve the laying of 5,305 feet of poly-vinyl-chloride or PVC line along the north side of the highway. Contractor for the project is Guion Corporation of Brownwood.

The new Pool Company building construction also started this week. Forms for the cement foundation were laid for the pouring of cement this week. Early next week the actual construction of the building is expected to begin.

made basic recommendations regarding: hiring of specific physical education teachers and "inauguration of a structured physical education program." The subcommittee also would like more opportunities for educational electives; hiring of a junior high school principal; curriculum coordination for grades kindergarten through 12; a dependable and fair method of allocating funds for each department; and further examination into the combination of junior and senior high schools.

General recommendations by the subcommittee include "further consideration given to the practice of 'social promotions'; six-period days; re-evaluation of all aspects of the grading system; closed campus and on-campus snack bar; more discretion for teachers in the area of homework; encouragement of formation of activity clubs, etc.; conference meetings between principal and faculty, and departments, with regards to special education; develop and outline a consistent code of discipline; stimulation of parent-teacher relationships.

HIGH SCHOOL

In the high school area, the subcommittee made extensive studies of the present curriculum offerings, and will present extended recommendations for about every department in the school.

In the language arts area, the subcommittee recommends the school board and administration evaluate the feasibility of using competency tests as a basis for promotion, and that the use of social promotions be limited; more classroom exposure hours; added courses such as journalism, foreign languages.

In the mathematics department, the subcommittee recommends that special effort should be made for each math course to relate to practical life-related problems. "A computer science or programming course could be added to stimulate interest in this important field."

Commissioners table voting booths again

The Runnels County commissioners court Tuesday again tabled any action on the purchase of voting booths for use in county elections. The voting booths would give voters a small area of privacy in which to mark their ballots. County Judge Bill Stultz told the commissioners that he wanted the booths selected and purchased by November.

Commissioner David Carroll told the court that the Winters School District used voting booths in their election earlier this month. The booths had been constructed by one of the vocational classes at Winters High School. The booths constructed by the school worked apparently satisfactorily, but two possible problems might arise if the county tried to construct the same kind of booths; one, the cost could exceed that of metal folding booths; two, the problem of storing the booths when not in use. Also since the school district already had its own voting booths there would be no need for the school district to participate in the purchase of the booths for the county. The county judge told the court that at least one kind of voting booth offered for sale folded and came with a storage container. The commissioners court agreed that the county would need about 50 of the voting booths. Following the discussion the motion was passed that the item be tabled to give the county more time to look into the prices and availability of the voting booths.

In other business the commissioners gave the nod of approval to the appointment of John Hancock of Winters to the Historical Commission. The commissioners discussed at length the pending construction of a Runnels County Courthouse annex to house the county Tax Office. The proposed new building would be constructed just south of the courthouse. The commissioners will meet later this week with a consulting architect concerning the building, but the commissioners indicated that the cost of hiring an architect would make using local contractors and plans more desirable.

Runnels County Sheriff Hershel Hall told the commissioners that one of his department's patrol cars, a 1979 Pontiac with a factory installed Buick engine, had blown the engine and a replacement was needed, the commissioners to table the item in order to look at repair prices and the possibility of trading the car for a vehicle of the same make and model or a new vehicle.

Routine items of business then rounded out the meeting of the Runnels County Commissioners Court.

City receives $4,866 in sales tax rebates

The City of Winters has received $4,866.07 from the State Comptroller as the city's share of the one percent sales tax for the latest period.

This brings to $34,086.31 the total received by the city for 1981, an increase over the $23,788.97 received for the same period in 1980.

According to the office of the State Comptroller of Public Accounts, total rebates this calendar year to Texas cities reached $180.8 million, about 14 percent more than cities took in during the first four months last year. Receipts by comparable towns in the area for the period were: more than cities took in during the first four months last year.

SAN JACINTO DAY, APRIL 21
 (Information taken from 'Pennybacker's Texas History' — 1895 and 'Texas Reader', The Naylor Co., 1947.)

While April days are here and Texas is splendid with redbud blooms and carpet of bluebonnets, we should recall that it was on an april day now 145 years ago that we won our independence at San Jacinto (April 21, 1836).

Texas had declared its independence on March 2. The Alamo had fallen on March 6. Fannin's men had been captured and were massacred at Goliad on March 27. There was only one force left in Texas to resist the onward sweep of a victorious invading army, led by the dashing Santa Anna who marched out of Bexar with banners flying to complete the conquest which he had so well begun.

April the 21st dawned a cloudless day, and as the hours went by, the stillness was broken by the fire of the artillery which boomed now and then. At 10 o'clock General Cos joined Santa Anna with five hundred men. The Mexicans threw up a breastwork five feet high of pack-saddles and baggage sacks. A defense of brushwood was also placed in the front and on the right. At 4 p.m. the dictator lay down in the shade of a grove of mighty oaks to take a nap, feeling as secure as if in his palace at Mexico. He had no fear of General Houston's little army camped three-fourths of a mile distant with which they had skirmished the day before.

At 3 p.m. General Houston ordered the Texas army to form a battle line, a single line of 800 men a thousand yards long, and move out across the open space. There were no sentinels posted to protect the Mexican camp. Across the mile the young Texans trotted down the slope and up to the wooded hill, dragging their two little cannons. They were on the very hill crest before their approach was discovered.

As the men saw before them the butchers of their friends and loved ones, a fierce cry burst from every heart, "Remember the Alamo! Remember Goliad!" Not an instant did Houston's men pause. They fought with savage fury and in eighteen minutes the battle was won, and the Texan forces were in full possession of Santa Anna's camp.

Castrillon, who had led the assault at the Alamo, was slain. Almonte and 500 were captured, hundreds were slain and when the sun went down, Texas was free.

On a fast horse, Santa Anna led his fifty mounted men in a wild flight but was so pressed that he left his horse and took refuge in the deep woods. The next day he was a prisoner and was writing a dispatch to Filisola, his second in command, telling him to take the army, which was then camped on the Brazos, back to Bexar. When he had finished writing and was about to affix the date and the name of the place, which would precede his official signature, he turned to Sam Houston, who was lying wounded near by and asked, "What place is this?"

General Houston answered, "Lynchburg."
 Colonel John A. Wharton, who was standing by, said, "No, San Jacinto."

Boy Scouts attended Spring Camporee

Winters Boy Scouts Troop 249 attended the Chisholm Trail Council Spring Camporee at Lake Sweetwater April 10-12. The scouts took part in events such as fire building, first aid, compass reading, knot tying, message sending and receiving by semaphore flags. The troop received third places in all the competitions.

Webelos present were Chris Rives, James Carrillo, Stephen Patterson, and Paul Bishop.

Adults and leaders attending were George Torres, Joe Young, Eddie Childress, Tommy Garway, Scott Pinkerton, Scott Shifflett, Tony Sanchez, Gerald Ancelet, Allen Windham, Marty Windham, George Torres, George Lozano, C. J. Young, Robert Vera, Steven Spills, and Michael Ysa.

And the Mexican president wrote, "San Jacinto, April 22, 1836," and signed his name. The battle was named and will bear this revered name to the end of time.

The wound that General Houston received during the battle proved to be of such a serious nature that he was forced to give up all active military duties and go to New Orleans for medical attention. Several of the ankle bones were shattered, and so acute was his suffering that the doctors feared lockjaw might result. General Rusk succeeded him as Commander-in-Chief.

The Battle of Waterloo is called the 15th decisive battle of the world, and San Jacinto, fought 21 years later, is the 16th. It decided the fate of a million square miles of terrain.

The Texans not only were victors in the battle but they also settled the question of separation from Mexico and their ability to maintain independence.

Students of Texas history, viewing the heroic action of that small army of Texans, should feel a patriotic thrill comparable to the one Sam Houston must have felt when he wrote:

"It will be honor enough to say I was a soldier at San Jacinto."

The San Jacinto Monument and Museum, at San Jacinto Battleground, 23 miles east of Houston, where Texas' independence from Mexico was won, is the tallest stone monument in the world. It is 570 feet 4 inches tall, grade to top. The estimated cost was $2,000,000.

On the ground floor is a museum with documents, articles and books of historic interest. An elevator is operated to the top of the monument for observation purposes.

The Congressional Budget Game

Newspapers and airwaves these days are filled with item upon item about reducing the growth of federal spending. For good reason. The toughest battle in Congress this session will be over budget reductions.

President Reagan asked Congress to curb the growth in federal spending by $6.4 billion in fiscal year 1981 and by $48.6 billion in fiscal year 1982. This year will be the 12th year in a row and the 20th of the past 21 years in which the government has operated in the "red." Obviously, this must change.

The budget process involves all areas of the federal government and requires ultimately — and usually after intense debate — full agreement between the House of Representatives and the Senate on what the final document will be.

Budget requests are made by agency or department, program and function and are contained in a single document which the President submits to Congress. Congress, however, deals with the budget in different ways. The Administration requests are divided among various congressional committees which decide how much spending they expect to approve for the next year.

After assessing the political climate and short-term changes in economic conditions, the Budget Committees — by April 15 — report a "first concurrent budget resolution" to the floor of each house. This resolution sets the appropriate level of federal spending in such categories as national defense, domestic spending, taxes, and a resulting budget deficit or surplus. The first resolution should receive floor action by May 15.

The first budget resolution does not spell out how the money should be spent specifically. That chore is left to the authorizing and appropriation committees of the Congress. The resolution does not go to the President for his signature, but it carries the "force of law" internally in the Congress.

Until the first budget resolution is adopted, no spending or tax legislation can be considered by the House or Senate.

By September 15, Congress must adopt its second concurrent budget resolution which reaffirms or revises levels of spending based on changed economic conditions or national priorities. This resolution represents a firm ceiling beyond which spending cannot go.

One of the final considerations left to Congress is its ability to enact a "reconciliation" bill. This amends existing law to bring either spending or taxes — or both — into line with the amounts established in the budget resolution. The reconciliation bill is supposed to be enacted into law by September 25 to allow a grace period before the October 1 beginning of the new fiscal year. It must have the President's signature.

As you can see, federal spending is not confined in one simple bill setting a total figure. It is hammered out in an intricate, often emotionally-charged process. The budget process this year will be no less complicated.

Now, I have thrown a lot of terms at you in this message. Budget jargon is something we all had to learn to deal with. To help you understand better some of the language of budget legislation here are a few definitions:

Concurrent Resolution — A resolution passed by both houses of Congress but not requiring the President's signature.

Authorization — A law defining the overall purpose and maximum size of an agency or program.

Appropriation — A law telling a government agency how much money it can spend and for what purpose. It is also called a budget authority.

Continuing Appropriation — A law allowing an agency to spend at a specified rate until a certain date, or until a specific appropriations bill for that agency becomes law.

Outlay — What is actually spent by an agency.

Reconciliation — A law revising previously enacted spending or tax laws.

Landlubber writer has rough sailing

(Editor's Note: Robert Moore, 30, author of the following article printed in The Shreveport (La.) Times is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Zane Moore of Winters. A 1969 graduate of Winters High School, he has a bachelor's degree in sociology from Texas Tech, 1973, and a master's degree in mass communications from Tech, 1976. Formerly with The Irving Times, he now is City Hall reporter for The Times. This article is one of several he wrote describing an assignment aboard the USS Kitty Hawk carrier recently.

So, in spite of my having boned up a bit on naval history and jargon, I was hardly prepared for what awaited when I edged up to the U.S.S. Kitty Hawk aircraft carrier docked in San Diego harbor two weeks ago.

I tout myself as a writer, but when I landed the assignment of spending three days on the ship captained by Bossier City's Foster S. "Tooter" Teague, I also volunteered to take some pictures.

I should have realized I was in for a few days of rough sailing by my initial setback as a photographer.

By ROBERT MOORE
Of The Times Staff
(Used by permission)

I've never been in the military.

And the closest I ever got to the Navy was my boyhood admiration of Uncle Billy George's tattoos — a leggy lady on one arm and a coal-black panther on the other, mementos of his stint as a sailor.

The last time I was on a boat was when my wife and I paid a buck and a half to paddle around East Texas' Lake o' the Pines one day last summer.

Two cameras hanging around my neck, I had envisioned taking some shots of the 80,000-ton ship before it pushed off for sea. The only problem was that the darn boat — measuring more than 1,050 feet from front to back (bow to stern?) — simply would not fit in my viewfinder.

Oh well, what the heck! I said, walking on board sans pictures. Any flattop worth its salt will have some panoramic shots of the operation filed away somewhere.

I spent the next five minutes (or was it an hour?) fighting with my luggage, trying to get it and myself up to my room on the seventh level of the carrier's island, the superstructure on the right (er, starboard) side of the ship toward the rear that houses the communications and radar tower, the bridge and executive quarters.

warning by some stranger I met — "Hey, buddy, you'd better not let your boss see you with your hair like that!" — I never frequented the barbershop.

After a couple of brief forays into the depths of the ship in the company of veteran crew members, I declined any additional offers for escorts through the maze of corridors, rooms and levels that honeycomb the ship's in-

My only defense is there were very few aircraft carriers on the "high plains" campus of Texas Tech University where I took my one-hour U. S. Army Reserve Officer Training Corps course back in 1969.

Undaunted, I donned my cameras again and fearlessly headed out to the flight deck, determined to snatch one or two Pulitzer Prize-winning shots of the drama of launch-and-recovery operations of the aircraft carrier of today's Navy. (For the uninitiated, we veterans refer to the landings as "cat-traps" — that is, CATapult launches and recovery TRAPS effected by hooks protruding from the bellies of the jets reaching down to snatch hydraulically powered braking cables stretched across the deck. The missions the pilots embark on once or twice daily are lightly referred to as "hops.")

Wisely, Teague had placed me in the care of a couple of veteran pilots. They probably saved my life more than once. Flanked by my ever-watchful companions, this photojournalist displayed more than a little derring-do in catching on film up close the force of the awesome steam-powered catapult shots launching the aircraft the precision of the aviators' pinpoint landings.

Despite having to leap several times to avoid getting bowled over by a plane maneuvering for a launch and being buffeted by hot gale-force winds spit out of the rear of the jet engines, I survived two rounds of launches and recoveries.

The highlight of the trip (besides, of course, eating some of the best

Aircraft carrier U.S.S. Kitty Hawk

Mexican food I've ever tasted whipped up by Teague's Filipino chef) was my own sudden departure from the ship.

Packed like a sardine with about eight other people into a COD (carrier on-deck delivery) prop plane, I took my first cat shot. Airborne before I knew it, we took about a 20-minute hop to the mainland.

Safe in the bosom of Northwest Louisiana's piney woods a day later, I reflected on my trip with mixed feelings — while I withstood the ordeal with my supply of Dramamine intact, I came home without a single tattoo.

Oh, well, there's always the fair. And it doesn't rock.

Quickly I found out that the steps connecting the levels are not steps at all. Rather, they're ladders fixed at a sharp angle of about 70 degrees to conserve space. While others negotiated the ladders on a run, I was never able to make it past the crawling stage.

Having guided the ship out of the harbor, a beaming Teague, who had once skippered a Navy oiler half the size of the Kitty Hawk, wished me a comfortable trip, remarking that the rocking of the huge ship would hardly be noticeable.

Checking the whereabouts of the Dramamine I had picked up back on solid ground in anticipation of a bout with motion sickness, I offered a note of agreement that belied the lightheaded feeling sweeping over this landlubber.

The nonexistent swaying also tossed me into more than a few door facings as, periodically, when I stepped, the floor just wasn't where it was supposed to be.

Several hours in the coming days were spent exploring (and stumbling through) the myriad paths connecting all the operations needed to sustain 5,000 men.

The motion sickness never hit, so I had no use for the pharmacy, sick bay of the hospital equipped with operating room. My teeth stayed in fairly good condition, so a visit to the dentist was not required. I packed many more clothes than needed, so I did not get to grace the laundry with my presence.

"THE KIDS ARE COMING!"

If you're a grandparent, more than likely you love those words. That's perfectly natural. And it's also perfectly natural to wonder how you'll keep them busy. From past experience, you know that once they're tired of the toys they've brought along, it's YOUR job to entertain them. The best advice: PLAN AHEAD. (That advice goes for parents and aunts and uncles, too.)

Think about places to take them—zoos, special shows or exhibits for children, museums. Do a little research in your local newspaper. And always call ahead for program schedules, age suitability and driving directions.

Stay-at-home activities, like cooking, can be fun, too. Preparing simple recipes can be a creative (and calming) outlet for both you and the kids. Try this one. It is made with Low Sugar Spreads from Smucker's, which have all the real fruit of regular preserves and jellies but only half the sugar and no artificial sweeteners. (At any age, reduced sugar intake is a pretty good idea.)

You won't need much in the way of equipment—you probably already have most of these things.

FROZEN BANANA POPS

Equipment:
Plastic wrap
Aluminum foil
(Hint: Have a damp wash cloth handy for sticky hands.)

Ingredients:
1 banana, peeled
Smucker's Low Sugar Apricot, Grape, or Orange Marmalade Spread
Wheat germ
Shredded coconut
Crushed cereal flakes

Place Low Sugar Spread on one piece of plastic wrap; wheat germ, coconut, or cereal on another. Roll banana first in Low Sugar Spread until well-coated on all sides. Then roll banana in wheat germ, coconut, or cereal. Wrap banana loosely in aluminum foil and freeze several hours or overnight. Thaw slightly before eating, about 5 minutes. Makes 1 serving.

Note: Kids can do this recipe assembly-line style with one peeling bananas, one rolling in spread, and one rolling in wheat germ, coconut or cereal.

The subject of Brucellosis was discussed at length during the 104th annual convention of Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers here. And the reports indicate progress has been made.

The brucellosis eradication program, with new standards, new classifications of states, and a new, reduced-vaccine dose, is back on the track and results are beginning to demonstrate the new impetus.

Although ranking fourth in the country in infected herd rate, Texas far outdistances all the other states in number of infected herds, with more than 1,800. Total calfhood vaccinations for calendar year 1979 was 552,930 head and for 1980 the number was 778,069.

TSCRA first vice president Frates Seeligson moderated a panel on the brucellosis program. On the panel were: Dub Waldrip, Jimmy Owenen, Dr. Gary Adams, Dr. Frank Mann and Dr. John Holcombe.

"Our goal is to vaccinate 70 percent of the available heifers (1,734,600) based on available information from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service," said Seeligson. "The reduced dose of Strain 19 vaccine, approved in October, 1980, has resulted in a sharply increased number of vaccination of heifers."

Packers have greatly increased their participation. A further relaxing of restrictions on movement of negative official vaccinates is providing additional incentive for vaccination.

Herd plans adapted to individual ranchmen's normal work schedules have produced much improvement in attitudes and cooperation. There were 459 herd plans developed during the first quarter of Federal FY 1981.

Also on the plus side: research is moving ahead from laboratories. Research is providing new information as well. Texas A&M has expanded its research activities from $20,000 in 1975 to over $450,000 in 1981. As a result of this research, a new test to improve accuracy in detecting field strain infected animals (called ELISA) is being incorporated into the Texas Animal Health Commission laboratory in Austin on a trial basis.

Surveillance testing now involves more than 90 percent of the state's markets voluntarily participating in first-point testing. This has resulted in a predicted sharp increase in the number of affected herds statewide (1,722 on June 30, 1980 to 2,350 on March 1, 1981.) This has also happened in most other states.

It was anticipated as a result of a moratorium of new regulations agreed to by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the National Academy of Science two-year study period.

Credibility of Texas Spokesmen has been greatly enhanced by affirmative support by the Texas legislature and the Governor. Commissioners of the Texas Animal Health Commission have succeeded in getting what they asked for because they had the backing of our state; we have also insisted that our proposals be affordable to cowmen and acceptable to the scientific experts.

According to cowmen, a major objective is to improve the accuracy of the market testing and traceback procedure and to avoid abuse to the producer, as much as possible, in requiring him to gather his cattle and test them, only to find no infection. Texas reactor rate is moving downward more rapidly than the national reactor rate.

A cutback of federal funds in Fiscal Year 1980 and possibly in 1981 has been reported by Dr. Paul Becton, director of the National Brucellosis Program. He said these congressional cutbacks will reduce or completely eliminate funds for fee basis vaccination by private veterinarians, funds for depopulation and funds for first point testing. This is a major concern to the Texas Animal Health Commission.

There are proposals before the legislature based on a study by USDA to permit a state to be divided in "A", "B", and "C", and it was said here this proposal would be beneficial to Texas cattlemen.

Class A status provides free movement without testing to any destination in the country. Class B status will be granted to states with less than 1 percent herd prevalence, no county exceeding 2 percent annual herd prevalence, and an animal prevalence rate not to exceed 5 reactors per thousand.

All other states which are making progress in reducing prevalence rates will be classified as Class C.

A major point for consideration in the Texas program is the fact that there are 98 out of 100 herds that are free from brucellosis in the state. The expanded program efforts are to protect this large majority.

To me, the voluntary educational update of 748 accredited veterinarians in the state is most important. This was accomplished through brucellosis certification seminars conducted in seven cities.

Lightning: nature's springtime terror

Every spring, nature has a convincing way of demonstrating its awesome power. Tornadoes, hurricanes, thunderstorms and lightning interrupt the peace and calm of a lazy springtime world.

While killer tornadoes fill us with fear, few realize that lightning kills more people yearly than either tornadoes or floods. About 150 die across the U. S. along with about 250 reported injuries. And annual property loss is placed at more than $100 million.

Lightning comes in several different forms. Streak lightning, the most common, is a single bolt from a cloud to the ground. Sheet lightning, on the other hand, is a shapeless flash most often from one cloud to another. On a hot Texas day, heat lightning is not an uncommon sight and is thought to be a reflection of lightning occurring over the horizon. Other forms are ribbon lightning, several flashes of streak lightning whose strokes look parallel to one another, and bead lightning, which appears as an interrupted stroke. Ball lightning, a rare form about which little is known, reportedly appears as a globe or ball whizzing from a cloud to the earth. Some have even reported seeing this form rolling over structures or suspended in the air.

The destructive power of lightning lies in both its tremendous heat and electrical force. A single bolt can pack as much as 100 million volts of electricity. Such a bolt can literally explode wood or brick on impact.

When lightning threatens, following these rules can help keep you safe:

1. Seek shelter indoors immediately. While indoors, stay away from open doors, windows, metal pipes, electrical wiring and appliances. In fact, don't use any electrical appliances during a storm - not even the telephone.
2. If caught outdoors away from shelter, avoid hill tops, wide open spaces, wire fences, metal clothes lines, exposed sheds, power lines, pipelines, trees, poles, and any tall objects that might conduct electricity. Find protection in a ditch or canyon. In a forest, look for a clearing or area with head-high clumps of trees.

3. If working on a tractor, stop immediately. Tractors and farm implements in contact with the ground are struck frequently.

4. Get out of the water and off of small boats.

5. Stay in your car if you're traveling. In fact, cars offer excellent protection.

6. Stop using metal objects like fishing rods, metal baseball bats or golf clubs immediately. Golfers should take extreme care since their steel cleated shoes make them like human "lightning rods".

7. Don't handle any flammable liquids in open containers.

8. Drop to the ground immediately if you feel your hair standing on end or your skin tingling from an electrical charge. This is a sign that lightning may be about to strike you.

Lightning victims can often be revived by cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) even though they might appear dead. Such persons carry no electrical charge and can be handled safely. If a group of people is struck, begin CPR immediately on those who appear dead. Those who show signs of life will probably recover on their own while CPR is in process on the others. While serious burns and other injuries can result from lightning, recovery is usually complete except for possible loss of sight or hearing.

Aggie muster next Thursday

Former students of Texas A&M University will gather at the Winters Country Club April 23 at 7:30 p. m. for the annual Aggie Muster, according to Woodrow Hoffman, muster chairman.

Hoffman said the muster is open to all former students, their families, parents of students and friends of Texas A&M.

Texas A&M is in its "Second Century of Greatness," Hoffman said. It has grown, during the last 100 years, from a small land grant college to one of the leading research and educational institutions in the nation.

The Aggie Muster dates back to the mid-1880s, and has been held annually since. Hoffman said more than 550 Musters will be held around the world this year, "wherever Texas A&M former students live or work, and each muster ceremony is the same.

Wars do not stop Aggies from mustering, Hoffman said. They have mustered in foxholes, on battlefields, on warships, airplanes and field hospitals, he continued. During World War II a muster was held on Corregedor shortly before the Japanese captured it.

Texas Aggies pay their respects to all those Aggies who are absent, because of death since the last muster, Hoffman said. When the names of the honored dead are called from the muster roll, an Aggie friend answers "Here" for the deceased, Hoffman concluded.

Former area resident records in Nashville

It's a long way from the old barn near Wingate to Music City U.S.A., but Katie Ryder has made the trip. The former Kathlene Cotten, daughter of Short and Docia Cotton of Wingate has just released a record album entitled "I'll Sing You a Rainbow".

The Katie Ryder of today maintains a very simplistic philosophy about her lifestyle and recent success in the music industry. "God has to have top billing."

The 57 year old singer and songwriter has seen many changes in her life since learning to play a guitar in the barn on her parents farm at Wingate. The reason for the barn in learning to play the guitar, Katie said, was because her parents would not even let her touch the instrument, but while the parents would be out in the field she would take the guitar, slip out to the barn and play by memory from watching her father play.

The songs and the music, Katie Ryder says, helped her out of the depressed life she led after the death of her husband, Richard, who was killed in an industrial accident in Texas in 1977, and the same songs and music have led her from Shady Cove, Oregon to the home of country music, Nashville, Tennessee. Katie says the music grew from many experiences. The melody for one song came to her as she stomped her feet to keep warm while she directed traffic for her son's logging operation during a snow storm in Oregon. The main source for her music was the faith and hope she found as she overcame the depression from her husband's death.

Katie Ryder (second from right) along with members of the Jordanaires, former back up singers for Elvis Presley, and members of the Nashville Sounds after a recent recording session. Both singing groups along with musicians from the top country and western bands in the nation joined Katie for the recording of her recently released album.

Katie Ryder's album "I'll Sing You a Rainbow" was produced by a former Texan Biff Collie, a disc jockey turned arranger and producer in Nashville. Background voices on the recordings were the Jordanaires, the former back up singers for Elvis Presley, and by the Nashville Sounds. The musicians came from the bands of a number of well known recording stars including Slim Whitman. Also country stars such as Tammy Wynette, The Statler Brothers, and Slim Whitman are reviewing some of Katie's songs for possible recording.

The first rubber balloons were made by Prof. Michael Faraday in 1824 for his experiments with hydrogen. Toy balloons were introduced the following year.

After returning to Shady Cove, Oregon, Katie is moving to Nashville to continue to write, sing, and to work for her producer Biff Collie. Katie stopped off in Winters to visit with family and friends and to drop off some copies of her record last week as she headed toward Oregon and then Music City U.S.A.

The Texas Chapter of the U.S. Submarine Veterans of World War II is trying to locate all submarine veterans who served on U.S. submarines or in submarine relief crews during World War II between December 7, 1941 and December 31, 1946.

This year their convention will be held in Galveston May 1-3. All submarine veterans and their families are invited. Anyone knowing the whereabouts of submarine veterans are requested to notify them of this reunion of shipmates.

The following week, May 8-10 will host a regional convention in Checotah, Okla. Then in September, the National Convention will be in Sacramento, Ca. For full information, contact J. A. "Jim" Woodall, Texas State Secretary, P.O. Box 1368, Galveston, Tx. 77553.

U.S. Submarines operated under a news "black out" during World War II and became known as "The Silent Service." Comprising less than 1% of the military forces, our submarines accounted for 60% of all the Japanese ships sunk by all forces combined. While doing so, we suffered the highest casualty rate of any U.S. force in action in the Pacific theatre of operations. Losses totaled 52 U.S. submarines from all causes and the loss of 3505 officers and men for a 30% casualty rate.

City police crackdown on alcohol

Winters police are continuing their crack-down on alcohol related offenses. Spokesmen for the Winters police department said that five arrests were made over the weekend.

Two persons were taken into custody on preliminary charges of public intoxication, one for making alcoholic beverage available to a minor, one minor in possession of alcoholic beverage, and one driving while intoxicated.

Officers said that only routine calls kept the department busy over the weekend. No accidents or burglaries were reported.

The rickshaw was invented by an American Baptist minister in 1869 to transport his invalid wife around the streets of Yokohama.

SAFETY SENSE

Play It Safe
Using a walk-behind power mower saves time and assures you a neat and trim lawn... if you follow these safety tips, provided by the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute:
1. Read the owner's manual and follow the safety practices it suggests.
2. Inspect work area before mowing. Remove objects that may be thrown, and keep children and pets out of the area.
3. Avoid contact with moving parts. Shut motor off before attempting any maintenance. Don't remove the grass-catcher bag until the mower has stopped completely.
4. Take care on slopes—cut grass across the face of the slope, never up and down.
5. Handle gasoline carefully. Always refuel outdoors, and only when the motor's stopped. Never smoke around gasoline.
