Bobcats Play Championship Game With Hereford Team Here Friday

When the Bobcats meet the Hereford Whitefaces on the local gridiron Friday afternoon at three o'clock, it will decide the district title if the Bobcats should win. If the Whitefaces are victorious the Tulia Hornets still remain in their path.

Coach Blaine has been leading his charges through strenuous workouts this week for this all important game. Although Stewart and Ashcraft are still nursing injuries suffered in the bruising Tulia encounter, the Cats are expected to be in good shape for the Friday afternoon battle.

Co-captain Birdwell has spent much time this week tossing the pigskin into the eager hands of Jackson, Stewart, and Mobley. Curtis has looked good on his line smashes. The entire line has been working very hard getting ready to stop the powerful running attack of the Hereford lads.

In the Tulia game the cats looked better than any time this season in subduing a very stubborn Hornet eleven 19-0. Jackson brought his scoring for the season to 32 points which tops all individual scores in district 1A. Mobley in-Increased his to 26 points for second place in district scoring. Aldridge Bagwell and Curtis showed up well in defence for the cats. Carlyle, Jennings, and Owens played nice games for Tulia.

According to information from the Castro County War Price and Rationing Board registration for Book IV will be held all day Thursday, October 21, at the Grade School building in Dimmitt and Friday morning at the Dimmitt High School.

Other places of registration will probably be held at Nazareth, Hart, Summerfield and possibly Flagg. There has been no definite date announced as to which days these communities will register.

The consumer must present his Book III for every member of the family in order to receive Book IV.

According to a statement from the District office in case of failure to register during this period of registration the consumer would have to wait from 15 to 30 days before they could register for Book IV at the local rationing office, therefore, in order to prevent delay in getting Book IV every one is urged to register during this registration.

Gardners Cautioned to Save Vegetables Now

Now is the time we should be thinking of storing vegetables and fruits from fall gardens, says Miss Lelia Petty, County Home Demonstration Agent. Most homes in this county have basements, which in addition to the heating system in the house, contain the storage space for canned fruits and vegetables. Unless the basements are well ventilated the heating unit may cause the temperature to be too high for proper keeping. A space walled off from the furnace solves the problem, while shelves in the furnace room are suitable for squashes, pumpkins, and sweet potatoes, which must have dry air and temperatures from 60 to 55 degrees F.

But another word about sweet potatoes, which are notorious for not keeping well in West Texas: they should be well matured before digging, they should be handled carefully to prevent bruising or breaking the skins, and they should be well cured in an even temperature of about 80 degrees F. before storing. The potatoes may be stored in earthen pits or banks or hills, but a well-ventilated and dry cellar is the best storage space of all, because it keeps an even, cool temperature.

We have been well blessed with a bumper crop of Irish potatoes this year but keeping them is another matter. After digging, Irish potatoes should dry a day or two in the shade. Those that are stored should be sound and mature and free from bruises and blemishes. After drying they should be graded and placed carefully in crates of one bushel capacity. The crates should be raised from the floor two to four inches, so there will be circulation of air under and around the potatoes, then store in a dark room or cover with burlap. On the whole, cellars provide a good storage place for Irish potatoes.

Onions are raised in large quantities in this part of Texas, but too often before winter is hardly begun the supply on the farm has been exhausted, due to improper storage. Onions should not be gathered until the tops have ripened or shriveled. The onions with the tops clipped to about one inch in length, may be placed in crates or open mesh sacks in a shade until they have dried. Storage may be done on a small scale by swinging the crates down from the roof. The essential points for the successful storage of onions are: having all matured onions, dried until they rattle when handled; storing in open crates of not over one bushel capacity; having plenty of ventilation, comparatively low temperature, dryness; and insuring safety from actual freezing.

With proper forthright it is possible to have tomatoes from one's own garden for Christmas. Tomatoes may be kept in either of two ways: Large, mature, green tomatoes may be gathered just before frost, wrapped separately in paper, and put on the cellar shelves, or, the whole vine may be pulled up and hung in a cool cellar until the tomatoes ripen.

It is not necessary that one have elaborate structures for storing vegetables. Mrs. Charles Heck of Nazareth, in spite of having an enormous basement with plenty of shelves, uses various methods of storing vegetables in her garden. For mature cabbage she puts a layer of straw about a foot deep on the ground, places the cabbage on the straw with the root end up, covers the cabbage with another layer of straw about a foot deep, then covers the whole mound with dirt. Mrs. Heck stores turnips in the same way but says that both turnips and carrots keep just as well in the garden where they grow, if they are hilled up with straw and dirt. She has successfully kept both through the winter by doing this. For rainy days when it is impossible to get into the garden, she stores carrots in damp sand in crocks or kegs in the basement. Mrs. George Abbott of the Sunnyside community has an easy way of keeping her carrots during the winter: She just lays bundles of feed along the row on top of the carrots, and these serve as an insulation against the cold.

Small mounds are especially important in that enough vegetables for a week may be placed in them, thus eliminating the danger of loss from operating a large bank. A barrel buried in the back yard can provide safe winter storage for vegetables. Plans for such methods of storage can be secured from your Home Demonstration Agent.

Storage for apples is similar to Irish potatoes. Well matured, late variety of apples with good flavor but not too ripe should be selected. Apples keep best in baskets or boxes, but pears are better if wrapped in paper and stored in shelves in cool dark places to finish ripening, either for canning or eating fresh.

It is hoped that not so much as a carrot goes to waste, but if we are to have a "buried treasure" we will have to store it properly, and each of us should remember that "A" quality becomes "C" quality if it is not stored right.

TEXAS A. & M. COLLEGE EXTENSION SERVICE

There are still glass jars at the back of the court house for anyone wanting them. These are free and were given to the county by the War Prison Camp at Hereford.

Noel Gollehon purchased, a few weeks ago, 6 head of registered Jerseys from S. W. Lilley. Noel has just completed installing a milking machine and plans to milk twenty cows this winter. We are mighty glad to see Noel get these cattle and know that he will make a good breeder of better Jerseys for Castro County.

Morgan Dennis is entering two of his cows in the Texas Milking Shorthorn Breeders sale at Ft. Worth to be held soon. Morgan exhibited both of these animals at the Castro County Fair. These animals were selected for the sale by a breeders committee and had to be good before they would accept them to go in this state wide sale.

There are still many questions concerning requirements to get new pickups and trucks. You first must locate a new pickup or truck and get the dealer to complete a form he has, and also give you a letter stating he will deliver it to you if you get a purchase order. If you have an old pick-up you must have it appraised by a repairman stating what it needs to be put into first class condition and his opinion of the vehicle. After you have gotten this bring them to our office where we will complete the forms and send them to College Station and from there to Amarillo and Washington. If it approved by all three of these places your purchase certificate will be sent out of Washington.
