The final scheduled event for the Winters Centennial Celebration was the burial of a time capsule on the grounds of the Z. I. Hale Museum. Randall Conner, General Chairman of the Centennial Celebration, opened the ceremonies with a review of all the activities of the past six months and recognition of those who worked voluntarily on the projects.

Sandy Griffin, Special Days Chairman, presented Centennial baby Cody Mitchell Pruser and his parents Howard and Jacalyn Pruser with several gifts for being named Centennial Baby. A savings bond, hand made quilt and a free portrait were given and Cody was named a trustee for the opening of the capsule in the year 2040.

City Council hears waste disposal presentation

At the regular meeting of the Mayor and City Council held Monday, July 2, Lynn Lyons, representing Browning-Ferris Industries, made a presentation on BFI's waste pickup service for municipalities such as Winters. Lyons gave examples of cities about the size of Winters and ranges of costs for different types of garbage pickup service. The Mayor and Council were looking at ways for the city to continue with garbage pickup and disposal in view of the stringent EPA regulations concerning landfills. If the city decides to contract with a firm such as BFI, the contractor would have a disposal site and be responsible for complying with all EPA regulations. Following the preliminary report by Mr. Lyons, several Council members questioned him concerning contracts, rate increases and city responsibilities as far as billing for the service. No decision was made and a request for a firm proposal may come at a later date.

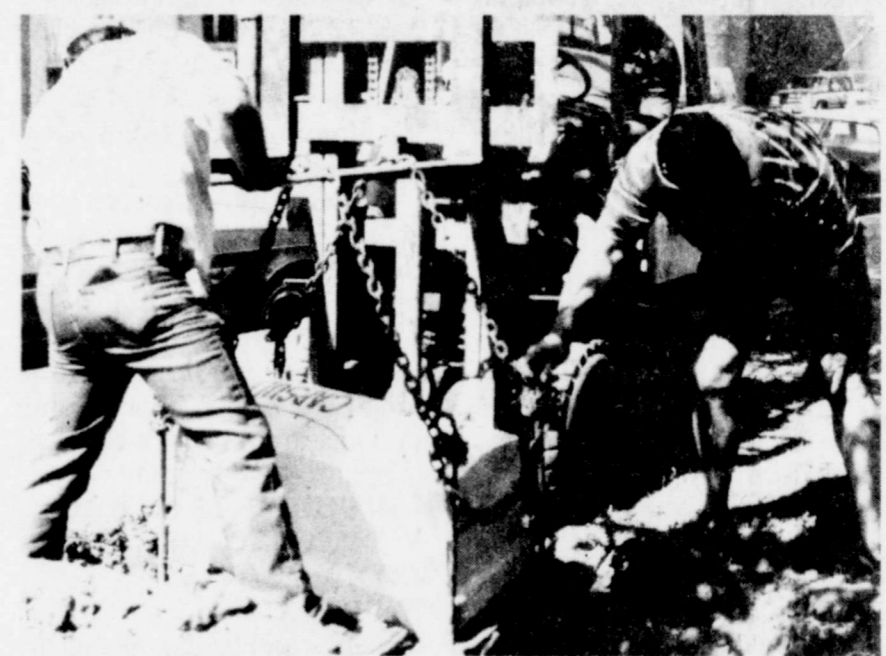

The Council then discussed an increase in the City's share of the retirement program for employees. Presently, employees pay 5% into the annuity program and the City matches each employee's contribution. City Administrator Charles Ludwick reported that most cities are paying 1 1/2 times employee contributions. The total cost to the City would amount to approximately $3700 per year and would not go into effect until next fiscal year.

After some discussion, Council members voted to increase the City's contribution to 1 1/2 times the employee contribution effective next fiscal year.

Mayor Randy Springer reported that some more repairs had been recommended on the north water tower standpipe. The repairs which have already been done were contracted at $21,400 and the City had budgeted $45,000 for repairs on the water tower. A preliminary estimate of $7800 to $10,000 for replacement of the old standpipe has been received, but no actual engineering study had been done. Council voted to okay an engineering study and recommendation by an engineer.

Following an executive session, the Council then voted to pay routine bills and adjourned.

OIL BUSINESS

By Reg Boles

Like everyone else, you probably think that anyone who is associated with oil and gas is probably anti-environmentalist. Let me assure you that that is not entirely true, although I would agree that not many oil people are all that excited about the extreme policies championed by most ecology groups. There is, in fact, a little bit of the environmentalist in all of us—even oil folks.

To give you an example, a story making the rounds these days concerns a group called AHEAD (Access To Hydrocarbon Energy for African Development), headed by a petroleum engineer. The group's aim is to provide energy to impoverished Africans for heating, cooking, and basic subsistence. In their view, hydrocarbons (specifically natural gas) are the best fuels to provide the energy for living and even economic development to the nation. I know what you are thinking...those sneaky little capitalists are trying to get those African tribesmen hooked on hydrocarbons like the rest of the world. You are assuming that the AHEAD group is just trying to find another market for oil & gas production.

I'm sure that making a profit on this deal crossed the minds of the members of the AHEAD organization (being darn good capitalists), but there is one minor detail I haven't mentioned. The members of AHEAD are volunteers and seek no profit from their endeavors or any industry that might spring up from their efforts. According to spokesmen for the group, they have two goals: (1) Promote development in the African Continent where constraint in economic growth is often the result of lack of an energy source, and (2) stop and eliminate deforestation of the African Continent.

Wait just a second. What the heck does deforestation have to do with oil and gas as an energy source and why does anyone care?

Let's back up a little and we'll find out. It seems that native Africans must gather wood for building fires that provide for cooking, heating, and light. This wood was mainly driftwood that scattered the plains of Africa in the early part of the century, but as the population grew, more wood was needed. The only place to get it was by cutting down trees. Now, cutting down two or three trees per day to provide for a family is commonplace. With about half a billion people in Africa, you can see how deforestation is beginning to be an issue.

The side effects of deforestation are really ugly and far-reaching. Erosion worsens, deserts grow, wildlife dwindles without adequate cover, and, yes, carbon dioxide concentration increases (because less trees are available to consume it and turn it into oxygen) resulting in ozone depletion. There-- I said it. Every environmentalist's dream: an oil person repeating the environmentalist's rallying cry (or is that a whine?).

So you see, if an alternate fuel source can be found, then deforestation can be lessened or even eliminated. It turns out that natural gas is a very good solution to the alternate fuel question. It is available at relatively shallow depths all over the African Continent, and it is cleaner and much more efficient than wood. A relatively low volume (by commercial standards) gas well (100 MCFPD) can provide more heat energy than 100 TONS of firewood DAILY. That translates into 8,000 acres of forest land yearly. That is a lot of trees. Plus, since family members will no longer have to spend two-thirds of their waking hours searching for wood, they can turn to more worthwhile pursuits like farming and raising cattle and even selling some of their product. With this new efficiency and productivity comes economic growth and a higher standard of living.

Sounds like something everyone would want to get behind, right? Not so fast. Just as getting food to starving people in Ethiopia can be hampered or even derailed by stupidity in the African countries' governments, so can a project like this. Basic distrust of the U.S. and its stingy capitalists (partially fed by U.S. environmentalists who also think U.S. oil men and women have no regard for the environment and the people who live in it) is a prime reason that this project is stalled, but it is also the desire of small African countries' leaders for guns and tanks that prevents money from being spent on this type of project. But, the AHEAD group has not given up (a quality developed by a good capitalist), and they have formed a non-profit organization to raise funds to drill several shallow gas wells near populated areas in sub-Saharan Africa. Such gas wells are very cost effective and can be paid out in a short time through the savings in reforestation and the long term benefits of allowing more energy to fuel a growing economy.

So, next time someone says people in the oil industry don't care about the environment, remember the story just recounted. I dare say that more oil patch people care about the environment and the people residing in it than some zealot environmentalists care to admit.

Wiser Oil First Gas Gatherer in New Field

Wiser Oil Company, of Sistersville, W. Virginia and Midland, Texas, has begun gathering gas in the new King Sand fields west and southwest of Eden, Texas in Concho County.

The newly installed plant, operated by Wiser, began accepting gas in mid-June. Most of the gas comes from the Wiser operated wells in the Agarita Field producing from the King Sand at approximately 2000 ft. Wiser is also buying gas from other operators in the area that produced King Sand intervals in the Lonesome Dove II Field, Speck Field, and Agarita Field. According to local operators, no purchaser of gas was available for produced gas in the area prior to Wiser's plant being installed.

Wiser derives some profit from stripping liquids from the produced gas, but it also hopes to improve oil recovery in its own wells by injecting the dry gas. The injected gas should help support the reservoir pressure and extend the life of the oil field.

Volumes in the plant are expected to exceed 1.2 MMCFPD, and Wiser expects to remove 7500 gallons per day of marketable natural gas liquids from the produced gas. Total oil production from the field is just under 1000 BOPD.

Horsebreeder thinks small and smaller

OVALO-In the 40 or so years that C.W. Allmand has raised horses, his herd has grown smaller and smaller. That doesn't mean fewer horses, just smaller ones. Allmand, the 89-year-old proprietor of Allmand's Pony Farm, started out raising Shetland ponies, but now he specializes in miniature horses. He was among the first to raise miniature horses in these parts, he says.

His horses are from 27 to 34 inches tall. Any smaller than that and you lose too many colts at birth because they're so fragile, he says. Allmand says he started raising ponies to give youngsters in the southern Taylor County community something to do. "At that time, school was out and the children didn't have anything to do. We thought we'd get them interested in ponies and showing them and that would keep them out of devilment," Allmand says.

The plan worked and many kids became involved in showing horses, he says. "Kids are like mule colts - they're going to do something bad if they haven't got something good to do."

Nowadays, Allmand and his wife, Margie, handle most of the caring for the 60-head herd. They also raise Mediterranean donkeys and pigmy goats, both of which are miniature breeds. "The horses are pretty easy to handle and I've been fortunate I'm still going pretty good," he says.

"My ponies are everywhere from coast to coast," he says. Some of the men who have them are topping shows with them. Allmand, himself, has more than 200 trophies from his days of showing Shetland ponies and miniature horses. The horses also are a favorite in parades. When miniature reindeer weren't available, Santa has called on Allmand and his horses to take him to parades and department stores in Winters and Abilene.

Allmand was reared in the Hye community, near the stomping grounds of Lyndon Johnson. Johnson, who was eight years younger than Allmand, was "just another boy," Allmand says. Allmand's father brought part of the family to Abilene in 1924 via covered wagon, he says. He was married in 1927 and in 1931 started in the grocery business in the southern part of the county.

"The town was called Grassbur because they played ball there at the time and someone slid into home and said, 'Dadgum, there ain't nothing but grass burrs here,'" Allmand says. When U.S. Highway 277 was built to the west of Grassbur, Allmand opened a cafe and store by the highway. A nearby cotton gin was a busy place and as a result, "the store was open night and day in the fall," Allmand recalls.

Allmand also operated stores at Bradshaw and Buffalo Gap, but is perhaps best known for operating the general store at Ovalo for many years. The Allmands have lived here since the late-1940s.

His pony farm, located just off the Highway 83, draws a lot of attention - especially on Saturdays and Sundays when many people stop to look at his horses, he says.

Children really like the little horses, he says, but a surprising number of adults buy them for themselves. "They make real lovely pets," he says. "People can keep them in their backyard or anywhere."

Letter to the Editor

To the citizens of Winters, Wingate and area:

I would like to take this time to thank everyone involved in the Centennial Celebration. I would like to thank also anybody who attended any of the many functions. For myself getting to work with people like Randall, Edna, Joyce, Sandy, Lee, Charlsie and so many more was an honor.

When we started this project there were lots of negative feelings from some, but I think after everything is said and done it was a great success. As I was watching the crowd at the end of Saturday's performance of the pageant I couldn't help but get emotional. To see what a group effort could present was overwhelming. There was a lot of hard work put into this celebration. There were a lot of old friendships renewed and a lot of new friendships formed. I think sometimes we take for granted what small towns like Winters are capable of doing.

I'm proud to have been a part of it all and proud to call Winters home.

Thanks again,
Julie Springer
Secretary, Winters Centennial Celebration, Inc.

P.S. Randy, Chadd, Staci and Lindsay thank you for all your patience and help through all of this.

Letter to the Editor

My wife, daughter, and I had the pleasure of being in your community last Friday and Saturday. We were there at the invitation of your Centennial Committee so that our daughter, Danielle, the South Plains Maid of Cotton, could participate in different events that were scheduled during the celebration.

Well, folks, we had a terrific time. We enjoyed walking the town and viewing the different shops and exhibits. It was very evident that the people of Winters have a great deal of pride for their town and its heritage. We met so many warm and friendly people...from the Centennial Store to the Hospitality Room...to those around us at the pageant...to the handsome young man dressed in costume and yelling "EXTRA, EXTRA, READ ALL ABOUT IT!" Everyone was cordial.

You treated our daughter as a princess and gave her some memories that will last a lifetime. We thank you for the experience that can only enhance her walk in life.

We will close by saying a special thank you to Dennis and Rhuenell Poe. They were our hosts for the two days and made us feel like family. What else could three strangers from Lubbock ask for.

Sincerely,

Dear Editor:

My dad passed away in the early part of June, and we had the funeral service on Saturday, June 9. As the funeral procession was going out north of Winters to the Lakeview Cemetery, a blue station wagon passed the entire funeral procession on the righthand shoulder of the road. Winters Police Officer David Wheeler was escorting the procession. He stopped the man driving the station wagon; and, as I understand it, Officer Wheeler did file on the man for violating the law.

As well as being against the law, it was extremely inconsiderate and discourteous of the man to do what he did in passing the procession. From experience as an officer, I know that being a police officer is, most of the time, a thankless job, but a very important job. I want to publicly thank Officer Wheeler for taking action in this situation. Everyone in the funeral procession that I heard say anything was very appreciative of Officer Wheeler.

Thank you Officer Wheeler for not allowing that man to get by with showing such gross disrespect to Daddy and everyone in the funeral procession.

Sincerely,
Gary R. Hill

Words cannot adequately express my emotions regarding the Centennial Celebration and reunion festivities just attended in Winters. I was overwhelmed by the magnitude of the activities and the attendance. It was just wonderful to again visit the home town and to renew acquaintance with so many old friends. Thank-you to all involved in planning and putting on this event.

FROM A GOLDFISH BOWL

BY PASTOR STEVE BYRNE

The other evening I took the boys and a friend of one of them to play tennis at the local courts. I was going to do the fatherly thing and show them how to play the game, explain the rules. Maybe even give them a few pointers in tennis etiquette, which teaching seems to have become obsolete as of late.

Since there were four of us, it was natural to do some play/learning in doubles. Which we did.

We double-faulted, hit the ball into the parking lot several times, and to the man, were getting bored.

Then a couple more of their friends arrived. Racquets in hand. It was the perfect opportunity for the "old man" to bow out and sit down. Which I did.

And I watched as they promptly laid aside the rules and began to hit the ball back and forth across the net. I started to say something - just about the time I noticed that they seemed to be having "fun" since I had bowed out and let them have their own game. What's more, they were even getting to the point that they were making shots they hadn't made before, and fewer and fewer balls were going into the parking lot.

The object of tennis IS fun. Not rules. Rules were just made up to make something fun into competition for those of us who don't think we can have fun without competing.

Who cares how many times a ball hits on your side before you get to it? What is so sacred about serving from deuce court to deuce court? If it gets across the net in one or two bounces and the other guy hits it back eventually, who's to say that can't be fun?

It still drives me crazy just thinking about it. But that is the "old man's" problem.

It would be all right if the problem were just tennis. When did I get so legalistic? Not just about tennis, but about most things. When did the rules get to be more important than participating and enjoying?

I think that was Jesus' problem. He never outgrew that childish tendency simply to enjoy whatever he was doing at the time. Which raised hackles on the backs of all the grown-ups (pharisees) who kept reminding him that he wasn't supposed to be having fun because he wasn't following the rules.

Maybe another way of saying, "Unless you become a little child..." is to say, "Unless you become more like Jesus..." Reckon?

Some of us have a long way to go. Guess we better get started.

Boy! Is it Hot!!! This recent shot of Peoples National Bank sign confirms the warm temperatures we've all been feeling.

Temperance Parade-85th anniversary

Afterglow

With the success of Winters Centennial Celebration fresh on our minds it is well to recall some of the milestones along the way that have led us to this first century climax.

First, I would like to express my appreciation to all those in town and from other sources who supported me in the First Lady Contest. It is with gratitude that I accept this honor and will always represent my home town to the best of my ability.

The town of Winters was 75 years of age before a birthday party was held in her honor. The three day celebration was called the Diamond Jubilee with the slogan, "A town born in the Gay Nineties and growing in the Rocket Sixties."

Paul Harvey, nationally known radio commentator and news analyst, was the featured speaker at the main event held Saturday night in the Blizzard football field.

An old fashioned barbecue at the City Park and a concert by the Air Force Band preceded the main event. A giant fireworks display followed Paul Harvey's address.

Other attractions announced by Homer Hodge, steering committee chairman, included an exhibition by a group of skydivers who did several jumps and free-falls in full view of the picnic crowds. Another attraction was a trained horse act presented by Levi Garrett of Sterling City on Friday and Saturday night, sponsored by the Lions Club.

J. N. Winters, for whom the town was named, was represented by a son and daughter; Miss Jet Winters, retired professor of Texas University, apologized for not having a large sum of money to present the town but her father was proud of his namesake and said it would always be a good town.

The three day celebration got underway Thursday with the antique show, the art show, the industrial display at the Winters State Bank, and the showing of old movies, "Flicker Flashbacks," at the State Theatre.

Miss Kathy Shaw, Diamond Jubilee Queen, reigned near the city's anniversary activities, and led the big parade on Saturday. John W. Norman was Grand Marshal and George Beard used a public address system to give descriptions of units in the parade, consisting of antique cars, riding clubs, Air Force Band, commercial and organization floats. The Winters High School Band led the parade.

Notice

Chamber of Commerce Directors will not meet in July. Next scheduled meeting is August 14.

Ninety-five years of growth and progress was spent in a celebration of our heritage, preparing for the following year when we would salute 150 years of Texas Greatness.

Winters was sanctioned as a Sesquicentennial City and entered whole heartedly into the year of celebration in 1986. Rather than one big event, Winters observed some phase of Texas and community life each month of the year.

The Steering Committee sponsored an observance of Texas Independence Day on March 2—every household was asked to fly a Texas Flag—and every citizen to ring a bell or blow a whistle at 12 o'clock noon. San Jancinto Day was observed with the Winters High School Band Concert in the City Park honoring the Winters Community Band.

Highlight of the celebration was a dedication of a historical marker to the Winters FFA Chapter, first chartered FFA Chapter in the State of Texas, April 10, 1930.

With the Centennial triumph fresh on our minds let us not forget, but use our glorious experience to go onward.

Other special events included a Fiddler's Contest, a Beard-Growing Contest, costume judging, and a dance held by the Winters Beaus and Belles Square Dance Club on Friday. Mrs. J. M. Mapes, 101 year old mother of Melvin Mapes, held honor of oldest woman.

The 85th birthday jamboree of the city was a three day celebration, June 19-21, with a "Temperance Parade" beginning the festivities. The festival ended with a barbecue on Saturday night.

Winters became a Bi-Centennial City in 1976 and joined the nation in celebrating 200 years of freedom. This was the year the quilt show was begun at the museum, and continues today.

In 1980, Winters celebrated 90 years of "Pride and Progress" in May with a Mayfest type of celebration which is carried on today. Activities began on Friday night with Pete Stack, country western comic, furnishing the entertainment.

Saturday was a fun day of tournaments, exhibits and booths interspersed with music, as different groups and individuals entertained in the Community Center from early afternoon until 12 o'clock, closing with band music sponsored by the Young Farmers.

The Winters Centennial Birthday Party is over and it could not have been more perfect. There have been so many compliments of the Pageant Spectacular, the school reunions, each day's special events, the people of Winters working together for one common cause, and that was to let everyone know that Winters is a very special place. However the party is not over for many workers, there are bills to pay, clothes, books and other items to be returned to the Rogers Company, the closing of the Hospitality Center and the General Store.

What we have now is lots of beautiful memories, even though there was much work and time spent each, one is glad to have a part of the production. Now that we look back, what did we hope to accomplish from the beginning? There were five benefits of having a Centennial Celebration in Winters and we accomplished those goals. To review the goals they were:

1. Create new civic awareness among all citizens-a civic celebration is "fun."

Project. Through its various activities we make new friends. In talking about our community, we become more interested in its affairs.

2. Uncover new civic leaders-All citizens, sharing committee responsibilities, develop leadership in our community.

3. Stimulate local economy-Through carefully planned publicity campaigns, we tell our neighboring areas we are an aggressive community. By drawing crowds to our celebration we create a new prosperity.

4. Honor our heritage-Through the use of a spectacular theatrical production, we will salute our heritage and mark our present. "If we have no regard for our past we will have little future worth remembering."

5. Focus attention on tomorrow-As we salute our heritage, we look to the needs of tomorrow, we lay a plan for future growth in industry, commerce and culture.

We did have a celebration, and we hope there was fun and benefits for everyone. One young man that grew up in Winters said to me, "When I finished high school and college I thought I had to go to the big city to be successful, but now that I have come back home for my home town's Centennial Celebration, I realize I have missed the finer things in life, that is to put down roots and be a part of a small community."

Everyone was so busy with celebrating the Centennial that some did not have time to prepare anything for the Time Capsule. Many letters have been turned in that were too late for the Time Capsule burial on Wednesday, July 4, 1990, so the Time Capsule Committee has extended the time letters or items can be turned in to August 1, 1990. Leave those items at the Chamber of Commerce Office, or with Sandy Griffin, or Edna England.

LUTHERANS PAINT CHURCH IN MEXICO

Seven members of St. John's Lutheran Church recently spent a week in the Rio Grande Valley on a work mission trip project sponsored by Big Country Lutherans, Inc. Local youth J'Dan Miller, Susan Minzenmayer, Tammy Dry, Mindy Andrae, and J. J. Michaelis worked along side local sponsors, Tammy Dry and Pastor Steve Byrne in the painting of a Lutheran mission church in Rio Bravo, Mexico.

Twenty-two youth and adults enjoyed the hospitality of San Pablo Lutheran Church in Weslaco, where they worked, ate, and slept while on the work mission. Participants were members of Lutheran churches in Abilene, Avoca, Wichita Falls, Vernon, and Winters. A grant from Aid Association for Lutherans, a Fraternal Benevolent Society, enabled the purchasing of materials which were used to paint the one-room church building. After completing the project, Big Country Lutherans had enough building materials for members of Cristo Rey Lutheran Mission to build a one-room addition, which will be used for children's Christian education and to teach neighborhood women to sew.

The group also enjoyed a day at South Padre Island and shopping in Reynoso, Mexico. One afternoon was spent visiting an Elca mission in Las Milpas, just outside Pharr, which distributes food to some 1050 people per month.

Twain Talk

by Twyla Twain

Do you ever get sleepy while driving? That has got to be one of the most miserable feelings in the world. You drive along, becoming more and more mesmerized by the tiny white stripes zipping by and suddenly realize you've gone three miles without any awareness of your surroundings. Or worse, you've driven completely through a town without remembering one bit of it. You feel like your eyelids weigh ten pounds each and you've lost all ability to hold them open. So you begin the game of "Things to Keep Me Awake."

First, you shift around in the car seat. You can try one of many positions - lean extremely forward and put your chin on the steering wheel. Or sit as tall as possible - like the top of your head is trying to touch the roof of the car. Or slump way down in the seat to the point where you have to look through the steering wheel to see the road. Now no matter how tempted you might be, I strongly advise against laying the seat completely back, even for just a second. Highway patrolmen tend to frown on this when you zoom past them. And it makes it a bit more difficult to believe the "I was driving so fast because I'm transporting a human heart and the doctors are waiting for me as we speak" story if you're lying down in the seat. So try something else.

One of the most popular things to try is turning the air conditioner way up, pointing the vents toward your face and opening your eyes as wide as possible, allowing all that air to blow directly onto your eyeballs. Of course your eyes look like a horned toad's and they get all dried out and painful but at least you're still awake. Now if you don't have a good air conditioner or it's the dead of winter, you might want to roll down the window and hang your head out. This is fun until the hair in your nose freezes. Or your lips freeze stuck above your gums making your face look like a pit bull. (Never mind all the bugs in your teeth).

So the next plan of action is to turn up the radio and sing at the top of your lungs like Ethel Murman. This usually works great until a Barry Manilow song comes on and once again you're drifting off. You keep trying to sing but now you can't remember any words and even start to drool a bit because you can't hold your lips together any more - even after you've slapped yourself silly a couple of times.

So in an effort to get some action into the scene, you start munching on tons of stuff you'd never ordinarily allow in your mouth. Things like a hundred sunflower seeds, all at once. And it never fails when you're driving in the dark and eating sunflower seeds that you get a strange "thing" among them. You know it's not a regular seed but can't quite identify it while it's rolling around in your mouth. And you sure as heck don't want to think about all the possibilities it could be. But look on the bright side - those horrid thoughts are good for keeping you awake for a least ten more minutes.

Maybe somebody needs to devise a gizmo similar to jumper cables - something that we sleepyheads could use to "jolt" us awake - at least long enough to drive to the next store for more sunflower seeds.

Sales Tax Increased July 1

Sales tax rates in Winters increased effective July 1 to 8.25% as mandated by state lawmakers in their recent special session and signed into law by Governor Bill Clements. "The change means we'll all be paying a little bit more to help fund education and human services in Texas," said State Comptroller Bob Bullock. Bullock estimates that a family of four making $35,000 a year will pay an additional $24.65 a year in state sales tax.

The comptroller's office has sent almost half a million postcards notifying sales tax permit holders across Texas of the change. Bullock said new 8.25 percent rates cards are available in 33 comptroller offices in Texas. "We've sent out 55,000 of the new rate cards, but there are plenty more free of charge for anyone who asks," Bullock said.

Anyone with questions about the sales tax or with a request for a copy of the revised sales tax rates may call the comptroller's field office in their area. Nearest field office to Winters is located in Abilene at 1290 S. Willis, phone 695-4323.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Gerhardt

Brumfield-Gerhardt wedding vows exchanged May 26

Linda Kathryn Brumfield and Paul Carl Gerhardt, Jr. were united in marriage at eleven o'clock in the morning on Saturday, May 26, at Edgewood in Brookhaven, Mississippi, with the Rev. Dr. Phil Walker of Madison, Mississippi officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Hugh Brumfield of McComb, Mississippi, and the late Dr. Robert Hugh Brumfield. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carl Gerhardt, Sr. of Winters.

Vows were said in the parlor of the home in front of the mirrored mantle where a centerpiece of peonies, lilies, gladioli and tulips in shades of peach was flanked by Meissen candelabra holding peach candles, simalax fine and magnolia blossoms. The bride party descended the white twin staircases where at the first landing were banked by magnolia leaves centered by the Winged Victory statue.

The aisle from the stairway was lined with white ribbon, Queen Anne's lace and English ivy. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Robert H. Brumfield, Jr., of La Canada, California.

Miss Kimberly A. Este' of Dixie Springs, Mississippi, served as maid of honor. Serving as bridesmaids were Miss Mary K. Bain of San Francisco, California, and Mrs. Jane B. Montero, niece of the bride, of Ranch Palos Verdes, California.

Bolden of Odessa, brother of the groom; William L. Rimes, McComb, uncle of the bride; Robert W. Brumfield, McComb, brother of the bride; and Robert H. Brumfield, III, Bakersfield, California, nephew of the bride.

The bride wore a designer gown of white imported French Alencon lace fashioned with a Sabrina neckline and deep scalloped V back. The elbow length puffed sleeves of Point DeEsprit were highlighted with tiny silk bows. An Alencon lace bodice dropped into a basque point waist above a softly gathered skirt of silk shantung. Seed pearls traced the hemline and accented the cathedral length train. Her up-swept hair was held by a cascade of matching silk clusters over fingertip bridal illusion.

The bride carried a classic teardrop bouquet backed with antique lace. Casablanca lilies were used as the focal point, combined with white roses, stephanotis, baby's breath, mink fern and streamers of antique lace. She threw her bouquet from the balcony overlooking the front veranda of Edgewood.

The bridesmaids wore tea length gowns of polished cotton pastel and floral prints. Short sleeves adorned the elongated bodice with a slightly gathered effect on the hips. The back of the dresses were in a deep V to complement the bridal gown. They carried mixed nosegays of summer flowers backed by antique lace.

Miss Lindsay N. Klein, cousin of the bride, of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, served as flower girl. Her gown was as the bridesmaids with dropped waist and a Victorian lace collar.

Miss E. Suzanne White of McComb sang "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte and was accompanied by Mrs. Patsy B. Simpson of Jackson, Mississippi.

Miss Sheila B. Cowart of Jackson, Mississippi, served as wedding director.

As guests entered the lawn at Edgewood they were greeted at the veranda by the mother of the bride who was wearing a two piece light aqua linen dress with embroidered stitchery at the sleeves, skirt and bodice edgings. Receiving with her were the bride's brothers.

The groom's mother chose a French rose dropped waist dress in crepe.

Water lily pads and blossoms floated the pool and fountain at the entrance to the home. A pair of birds of paradise accented the decor at the entrance to Edgewood. A silver bud vase with a single Sonia rose centered the registry table, which was presided over by Miss D. Elizabeth Brumfield of Austin, Texas, niece of the bride.

Immediately following the ceremony a brunch reception was held in the dining and reception rooms of the home. Guests were seated on the veranda and lawn at white cloth covered tables decorated with English ivy wreaths and peach gladioli.

Appreciation of Rural Life

Runnels County is many things to many people. But to all of us, it is home.

by Don Haley

I fear the big city. Like some giant, calculating beast, it seems to sense that I don't belong there. Recognizing my weakness, the big city quickly pounces on me, intimidating and terrorizing me for venturing into its territorial jungles of twisted and tangled mix-masters, by-ways in the sky, and endless roads to nowhere.

Approaching the big city, waves of fleeing automobiles jet away as if they have escaped the grip of the monster. Separated from the escape path by a wall of concrete and steel, I am helplessly drawn deeper and deeper into the beast until it holds me captive, surrounding me totally and completely by walls of brick and glass that reach to the heavens, blocking out the sun, the moon, and the stars.

Anytime I go there, the big city instills in me an overwhelming appreciation of all that I have to home go home to. This morning at daybreak, I had time and opportunity to witness the amber and pink new dawn that burned on the horizon to the east and will no doubt stand in awe this coming dusk, when the wheat fields to the west are bathed in fire orange and crimson-red.

For the past several weeks, I have awakened to the calling of a pair of bob-white quail that are rearing a brood in the west wind-break. Tonight, when chores are done, sleep will come to the gentle sound of soundlessness on soft southern breezes through an open window. I cannot help but feel sorry for those in the big city, who have no feel for fertile fields layed and sown, for the cattle that graze on good grasses or for the hope that comes with a gentle summer rain. For in the big city, there is no sense of satisfaction gained when the wheat heads and turns golden, when the cotton is in bloom, or from the creak and smell of saddle leather from the back of a good horse. The big city carries with it a sense of urgency and rush, where life is ruled by the regimented and segmented ticks of a clock rather than by the rays of the sun or the changing of the seasons.

What is life as we know it here in Runnels County really worth? Can a price be put on it or is it priceless? Whether you view this place we call home from behind a desk, atop an oil rig, from the seat of a tractor or anywhere in between, there is a magic in the rich earth that binds us together as an agricultural community, turns houses into homes, gives us family and friends, warmth and joys.

They say there is no place like home. As the big city lost its grip and asphalt and steel slowly gave way to familiar grasses and trees, I realized more than ever before, the greenness, the strength, the peace, and the beauty that lies all around us. Whoever said it said it right, there is no place like home.

Thank You

As properties committee chairman of the Winters Centennial Pageant, I want to thank the people and businesses who made my job easy and made the pageant a success. Beth Bradley, props committee member, made Indian poles and was the official script reader each night to make sure actors and props were in place at the proper time. Mary Ellen Moore, props committee member, made all Indian props except the poles and worked many hours to make sure everything was as it should be. Cheryl Bryan, props committee member, helped make Indian poles and was in the cast. Susie Leady, props committee member, worked many hours labeling slides. Bobby Hanson, props committee member, moved heavy props on and off stage each night, brought ice water for the cast and crew and managed horses while they were off stage. Linda Hanson, props committee member, helped make Indian poles then helped back stage each night by moving props, handling horses, and poop scooping. Gwen Andrae, props committee member, moved props each night brought "pies," scooped poop, and helped make Indian poles. James Andrae, prop committee member, moved props and anything that needed to be done. Kay Guy, props committee member, helped make Indian poles, and was in the cast. Theresa Patterson, props committee member, helped make the Indian poles, moved props, made "pies" and anything else that needed to be done. Brenda Clough, props committee member, made Indian poles and worked behind the set each night doing whatever needed doing. Ouida Nichols, props committee member, researched books and magazines to make the current affairs slides and she was a cast member. Larry Collom, props committee member, moved heavy props and handled horses. David Wheeler, props committee member moved heavy props and handled horses. Jason Dry, props committee member, labeled slides and maintained my home while I did all the things that a chairman has to do. Cheri Dry, props committee member, handled horses, moved props, and maintained my home while I did pageant related work. Genevieve Spill was a substitute script reader on the evening Beth Bradley watched the pageant. Each of these committee members devoted many hours of their time. Their talent and devotion made my job easy.

I also want to thank my "living props". Rhonda Williams was the Grim Reaper. Sara Jackson and Beatrice Cisneros were the mounted Indians, and Ramon Cisneros was the Indian horse handler. Coy Hord was the driver of the antique automobile. Mac Sayes was the driver of the surveyor. Thomas Hicks was the driver

Bredemeyer, Randy Springer, David Evans.

A standing ovation was given to Jim Lincycumb for his work on the set construction.

Rhea Parramore expresses a heartfelt "Thanks" to all the cast and crew for their time and effort in making the Centennial Pageant a tremendous success!

of the covered wagon. These people came to rehearsals and four nights of the show. They had to pack up their horses, wagons, and automobile and bring them each night. They made my job easy by saying "Yes" when asked if they would do it and by being there each night so I would not have to get replacements.

Bahlman Chevrolet, Winters State Bank, and Farmers Seed and Supply made copies of prop lists and detailed script, thus making my job easier.

Charlie Poe and Newman Smith provided historical slides of Winters and Runnels County. These two terrific friends saved me many hours of research and many dollars.

Paul Tharp assisted me in making slides of Winters and Runnels County as it is today. Without his assistance I would still be taking slides for the pageant although it is already over.

Paul and Lavera Tharp, Randall and Susan Conner, Glen and Marsha Shoemaker, and Dry Manufacturing provided the slide projectors. Quality Interiors graciously volunteered to make the huge screen. Winn's and Higginbotham's generously gave discounts on props and materials to make props. Walden Flowers donated broom weed, Grannie's Attic, Flowers Etc., Susie Leady and Joni-Lyn Ladies Apparel, Factory and Outlet donated materials to make props.

Kozelsky Cabinet shop built the saloon doors, Darrell Rains, of Rains-Seale Funeral Home, and Mike Meyer of Winters Funeral Home, supplied the prop tent. Sergeant Gary Tiller and the National Guard came to my aid by supplying a mess tent for dressing rooms for the cast. Tina Sherman provided a picture of the Winters Band. Grannie's Attic, Flowers Etc., Bill and Josie Hoppe, Charlene Craven, Lou Hamilton and many members of my committee supplied props. Stacy Wheeler, Natasha Snuffer, Heidi Young, Russell Moore, Rhonda Bethel, Chris Dry, and Tammy Dry, J'Dan Miller and Aaron Bradley cut the cedar props, sanded and painted flag poles, then stapled flags to them.

I apologize if I omitted anyone. I don't think less of you than the others—I was just too busy and/or tired at the time to write your name down and my mind isn't what it once was. I love and appreciate each of you! You saved me from a nervous breakdown and physical collapse! Thanks again! Now that it is over—wasn't it fun? LET'S DO IT AGAIN NEXT YEAR!!!

Longest week of golf to benefit American Cancer Society

A unique golfing event to benefit the Texas Division of the American Cancer Society, the Longest Week of Golf, has been set for July 13-20 at golf courses across Texas.

The Longest Week of Golf hopes to raise more than $250,000 to support American Cancer Society programs. The event is open to every player in Texas and friends who want to come and enjoy golf for a good cause.

Tom Kite, the 1989 PGA Player of the Year and the tour's top money-maker, is the honorary chairman of the event. Kite is featured in television public service announcements promoting the Longest Week of Golf.

To participate in the event, foursomes secure pledges based on the number of holes played in one day. Players golf throughout the day to raise money for the American Cancer Society while enjoying their hobby.

"Almost one in three persons will be diagnosed with cancer in his or her lifetime," said Myron H. Dees, chairman of the state volunteer committee planning the event. "Through events like the Longest Week of Golf, we are hoping to make an impact on this statistic by providing the necessary funds to fight the disease."

"The money raised by the American Cancer Society is used to provide assistance to cancer patients right here in Texas, as well as to support major cancer research," Dees said.

"Because of the efforts of the American Cancer Society and all those who battle against cancer, we are looking at almost half of all patients surviving. Earlier detection and treatment could save even more lives—proof that we need to increase the programs of the American Cancer Society," he said.

"The American Cancer Society is helping people in every community in Texas because it is a community-based organization," Dees said. "We are encouraging everyone to support all local efforts to raise funds for the American Cancer Society."

The American Cancer Society provides educational programs and materials for the public and for health professionals on cancer, its symptoms, treatment, detection and prevention. It is a volunteer organization, relying on volunteers to conduct fundraising and education, as well as provide services and rehabilitation programs to cancer patients.

The American Cancer Society is the nationwide community-based voluntary health organization dedicated to controlling cancer through research, education and service.

To sign up for the Longest Day of Golf or to be a sponsor, call your local American Cancer Society, or ask for a special Longest Day of Golf packet by calling toll-free 1-800-ACS-2345.

Beef Producers' Checkoff Compliance Explained in New Brochure

Questions on how the beef checkoff program operates are answered in a newly released brochure available from the Texas Beef Industry Council.

The easy-to-read brochure entitled "Understanding the Beef Checkoff" helps beef producers meet their legal responsibilities under the Beef Promotion and Research Act of 1985. This act authorizes TBIC to collect $1 per head every time bovines are sold.

"Time has shown that the beef checkoff is an effective, positive way to fund promotion, education and research of beef," Anne I. Anderson, TBIC executive director, said. "Our goal is to make collection of the checkoff dollar as effective and positive. We produced 'Understanding the Beef Checkoff' specifically to help producers gain more understanding about their checkoff program."
