Flood control structure dedicated

by DON HALEY, RUNNELS SWCD TECHNICIAN

A twenty-five year project was realized on Tuesday, November 17, with the dedication of the first flood water retention structure to be constructed on Elm Creek. The site was the James Nevins Ranch east of Winters. Approximately 75 interested persons attended the dedication and catered noon meal.

The project was a joint venture between the Elm Creek Water Control District (ECWCD) and the Soil Conservation Service (SCS). The ECWCD was responsible for securing easements and will assume maintenance and operation of the structure.

In addition to funding the project, the SCS assisted with engineering and technical aspects of construction of the year long project, which began on September 30, 1991.

Project sponsors were the ECWCD, Runnels Soil and Water Conservation District, Middle Clear Fork SWCD, Runnels and Taylor County Commissioners, Runnels Water Authority, the cities of Winters and Ballinger, and the SCS.

ECWCD board members are Walter Spill, Noble Faubion, W.C. Davis, Bud Everett, Clarence Wessels, Robert Holder, Greg Schwertner and Marcy Grun. Spill and Faubion are original members of the ECWCD since its inception more than 25 years ago. A ribbon cutting ceremony was held to officially dedicate the site by board members and property owner James Nevins.

The physical structure consists of a 2600 foot long dam rising to 27 feet in height. The dam will impound 200 acre feet of permanent water storage from a 9000 acre drainage area. The structure is capable of storing 1700 acre feet at flood capacity.

The flood control structure is important not only in downstream flood prevention, but in increasing the life span of area lakes such as Elm Creek and Ivy Reservoirs by reducing silt flow and subsequent silt build-up. With the addition of this flood control structure and others that will follow, excess water can be released downstream at a controlled rate, helping to protect downstream water sources as well as valuable crop and rangeland.

Police apprehend suspect

Charles Winferd Russell, 21, of Abilene was arrested by Winters police officers on Monday, November 16, for burglary of a habitation.

The arrest was made following information received from three alert citizens who notified police officers of the suspect. Winters police had received reports of two burglaries of motor vehicles on West Dale and Paloma streets occurring November 16.

Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Joyce Weems at $25,000 for Russell who remains in the Runnels County jail.

Sergeant Keith Collom of the WPD states that other charges against Russell may follow pending further investigation.

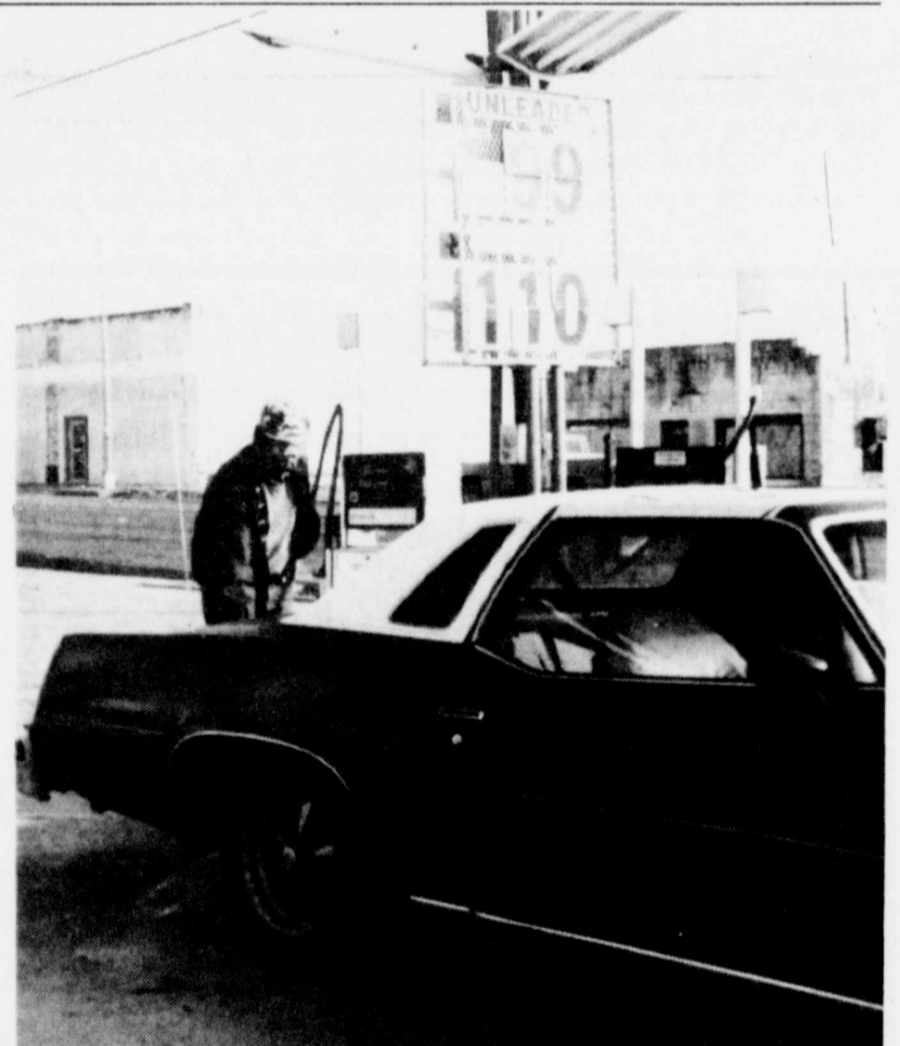

Property removed from the motor vehicle burglaries may have been discarded or hidden in the Sunlawn addition in the City of Winters. Sergeant Collom asks if any residents of this area discover anything unusual on their property, to please notify the Winters police department.

In other police business, two African-Pygmy goats were reported stolen from a house on West Roberts street on November 14. The goats belonged to Raymond Cisneros.

Arrested and charged with theft of livestock were Clint Johnson, Netasha Johnson and Raul Ochoa, Jr.

Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Joyce Weems at $10,000 for each individual. All three posted bond and were released.

Theft of livestock is a third degree felony.

OIL BUSINESS . . .

By Reg Boles ©1992

It is "Oil Patch Basics" time again, and, this time, we are going to talk about 'plugging back a well'.

Plugging a well back is the term used to describe the operation of leaving a deeper zone for a shallower zone. This operation assures that the new zone is the only contributor of fluid to the wellbore by sealing off the lower zone.

Let's look at a typical set-up where a plug back operation would be considered.

Well #1 is producing out of zone A at 5000 feet. The logs from the well say that zone B at 4000 feet might be productive, and some offset wells have produced very good volumes from zone B.

Zone A is not doing so well anymore, and it is just barely paying the bills making 3 or 4 barrels per day. The operator of Well #1 is ready to try something to increase production, so she is ready to recomplete to zone B.

Zone A makes some water (about 50 barrels per day), so the operator does not want zone A open after zone B is opened. (If she didn't mind mixing zone A with zone B, she would not plug back, she would just open zone B and "commingle" the zones.)

Before Zone B can be perforated, zone A must be plugged back. The first step is to remove any packers, etc. that might be in the way. Next, a cast iron bridge plug (CIBP) might be placed below zone A to localize the area around zone A's perforations. (This is done usually to minimize the amount of cement, if used, that has to be pumped to plug the area of zone A's perforations.) If there is not much 'rat hole' (open casing or open hole below zone A), then the CIBP below zone A would probably not be put in the well.

Next, some decisions have to be made. There are several different ways to plug back perforations. A CIBP can be placed above zone A without pumping cement into the perforations. Cement can be pumped below a packer into the perforations, and the packer can be left in the hole with cement on top. Or, cement can be pumped with no top plug left in the hole—packer or otherwise.

In this situation, a CIBP alone will probably not be sufficient, because zone A is being abandoned for good, and there is no reason to go back into the deeper sections of the well in the future. So, it would be a better seal to pump cement into the perforations, and not worry that the cement would have to be drilled out in the future. (Using just a CIBP might be advantageous if deeper zones would be accessed in the future, because a CIBP can be drilled out easier than a large chunk of cement.)

A packer or equivalent must be run into the hole to squeeze cement into the perforations under pressure, but it does not have to be left in the hole after pumping. When the top plug is left in the hole, there is a greater permanence to the plug back.

The operator in this hypothetical case decides just to pump cement and leave the packer after dumping a few sacks of cement on top of it. There is almost no chance to re-enter the zone A perfs after this job is completed, and the seal should be a very good one to prevent communication with zone B.

Now, the well is ready for new perforations in zone B. If successful, the new completion will provide new life to the old well.

This typical case is very common in the oil patch. There are also other common situations that are a little more complex than that presented here. If zone A was not a total loss, temporary plug backs with retrievable bridge plugs (RBP) would be tried to allow testing zone B before abandoning zone A. Also, multiple zones might have to be plugged back or some unique spacing of perforations in a thick zone might cause multiple plug backs. The possibilities are many, as is the case in most situations in an oil and gas well.

This will be the last installment of "Oil Patch Basics" for 1992. We will use the fourth issue of December to discuss oil prices in 1993. I am working on a theme for 1993's "Oil Patch Basics" and will have it ready by the fourth week in January, our first 1993 installment. If you want to see something in particular, write this paper to my attention.

From The Well

by Pastor Jim Hanson

Soon it will be Thanksgiving. I love that day. It is chuck full of remembrances. We need to remember, to be reminded of where we came from. It helps us to know where we should be going.

Our Thanksgivings were a special time. For sure it was church, and that was OK, because we sang "Thanksgiving songs" like "We Gather Together To Ask The Lord's Blessing" and "Now Thank We All Our God." And the preacher, who happened to be my dad always had some stories of the Pilgrims, the Mayflower, and the Plymouth Plantation. So it was OK. It got the day off to a good start. Just like the pilgrims, we gave thanks.

And it was special food that day. Turkey and dressing, sweet potatoes, home made biscuits, and pumpkin pie. And dad always reminded us that the turkey was part of it, part of the first Thanksgiving. And the pie. And the cranberries. The food was part of the remembering.

After dinner, maybe a short nap and then games. This was a holiday and so it meant some play. Dominoes, cards, sometimes Monopoly. Everybody got to play. Because Thanksgiving was for everyone.

It was a tradition. Part of the American Heritage. Goes way back to the first Thanksgiving in this country, in October of 1621. The winter of '20 and '21 had been devastating. Six died in December. Eight in January. When the worst was finally over, they had lost forty-seven people. Almost half of the original number. Thirteen out of eighteen wives died, only three families remained unbroken. But through it all, their hearts remained soft toward God. The high point of their week remained Sunday worship. When the beat of a field drum would summon them to the morning and afternoon services.

Their fortune began to turn on a fair Friday in the middle of March, an Indian, Samoset came to visit them. A few days later, he returned with another, Squanto by name. His tribe had been annihilated, not a man, woman, or child of his tribe was left alive. He had no reason for living. But when he met the pilgrims, so like babes, ignorant of the ways of the wilderness, he found his reason for living. He taught them how to catch eels, how to plant corn the Indian way, how to fish, how to stalk deer, plant pumpkins among the corn, find the best berries, and trap beaver.

His teaching and training proved well. The crops came in. And the pilgrims were brimming over with gratitude. Governor Bradford declared a day of public Thanksgiving and invited the Indians. They came early. Ninety of them! The women were worried sick that there wouldn't be enough food. But not to worry. The Indians did not arrive empty handed. They came with five dressed deer, a dozen fat wild turkeys, and taught the women how to make a tasty pudding out of commel and maple syrup. Finally they showed them how to make popcorn! The pilgrim women brought their vegetables and using their precious flour introduced the Indians to blueberry, apple, and cherry pie. And between meals, games, foot races, wrestling, and even military drills. Things went so well that Thanksgiving Day was extended for three days.

The day began with prayer. "God our maker doth provide for our wants to be supplied." And for this, we give thanks. Then and now. It's a tradition well worth keeping.

WINTERS 4-H CLUB—This group of 4-Hers enjoyed a 4-H meeting which was educational and fun. Dr. William Beasley, past Dean of Students and past Vice-President of Hardin-Simmons was the guest speaker.

4-H Club has interesting meeting

The Winters 4-H Club met on Monday, October 26 at the Mt. Carmel Catholic Church hall. Brent Jacob presided over the meeting. Shelley Meyer gave the inspiration and Angela Jacob led the 4-H Motto and Pledge.

Mike Mauldin, County Extension Agent, handed out medals to those 4-Hers who were unable to attend the 4-H Achievement Banquet. Those who did attend were recognized, as well as those who participated in the Bike-A-Thon. Mr. Mauldin reported that the Winters 4-H Club made $290.16. He went on to say that the Runnels County Club is planning a trip to Texas A & M University at College Station for the annual A & M Career Day on Saturday, November 21. While the 4-Hers are there, they will attend the A & M and TCU football game. Anyone who is interested needs to call the Runnels County Extension Office as soon as possible as there are a limited number of tickets. The cost is $40 and includes the chartered bus fare, meals, and football tickets.

Winters 4-H members are asked to bring 5 Christmas Cards in stamped envelopes to the next 4-H meeting. These cards will go to the residents at the Winters Nursing Home.

Shelley Meyer introduced the guest speaker, Dr. William Beasley, who is past Dean of Students and past Vice-President of Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene. (He also happens to be Martha Pinkerton's Dad!) Dr. Beasley brought two of the six white horses from Harden Simmons. He told the 4-Hers about the two horses who are named Cotton and Chuck. Each horse has a unique story of his or her life and how he or she came to be a part of the team of horses at Hardin-Simmons. Dr. Beasley has written and published books about each of the white horses.

These famous horses have been in parades all over the country, including the Macy's parade and the presidential inauguration parade.

After Dr. Beasley told the 4-Hers about the horses, he and Tim, the young man who takes care of the horses, let the 4-Hers ride the horses. Everyone enjoyed riding one of the famous white horses.

Michael Prewitt gave a demonstration on "How to Saddle a Horse". He showed the 4-H members the technique of properly saddling a horse and defined some of the terms used.

Refreshments were served by Tiffany Prater, Michelle Paschal, Chanda Hoppe, Travis Grohman, and James Andrae to about thirty-four members.

Debbie Sudduth gave an update on the "Homemade Christmas Tree" contest, stressing that the official contest center is Bill's Woodworks at 107 N. Main St. Debbie added that about 15 entries have been accepted to date.

Poe's Corner

by Charlsie Poe

After the L.B. Watkins marriage at Ballinger in 1938, they continued working together to establish their home.

Mary's parents gave them a bantam hen so that they could raise baby chickens. The little hen had to fight off hawks, and even a cat, with Mary's help, to save her baby chicks.

"We had pigs to feed for winter meat and chickens nearly the year 'round," says Mary. "I set every hen that would let me. We had a garden and my parents continued to let us can vegetables from their garden."

Their first child, Jerry Dean, was born in 1939 while they lived at Norton. They moved to the Kennedy farm at Wilmeth in 1940 and farmed on the halves. Marilyn was born the following year.

The house was large and had running water. It had a fenced-in yard shaded by mesquite trees, where Jerry could play.

"We pulled cotton, headed maize and hauled bundle feed for our cows. Butter and eggs were sold to buy groceries," Mary recalls. "We were buying 100 chickens at a time now and raising them in a brooder with a lamp in it. We ate the roosters and kept the pullets to lay eggs and to sell."

The Watkins had always dreamed of having a farm of their own. All the money that could be saved was paid down on a farm they were buying one mile east of Wilmeth. "We sold butter and eggs to buy what we needed, or did without, and moved into our new home in the fall of 1943," Mary says. "Richard was born there and somehow we made all our payments."

In 1944 electricity came to the farm and that greatly changed the way of keeping food. Mary had an electric iron and there was a radio for the family. They acquired an ice box that had been repossessed. It was "sign-up and wait your turn to get one" during the war.

In 1952, during a seven year drought, oil was discovered on the farm. It could not have been more welcomed anywhere than at the Watkins'. Rita was born that year and Marilyn needed braces on her teeth. Richard was treated by a neurologist in Dallas. Thirteen trips were made to Dallas that year. Marilyn wore braces on her teeth for several years. This required many trips to Abilene.

After Richard's treatment in Dallas, the family moved to Abilene to enroll him in a class for special children to help him with his speech. This was done with oil money.

"In 1952 we had butane put in the house and built on more rooms. We had heat in each room and an inside bathroom for the first time," Mary says. "I finally got some good cookwear."

The Watkins bought the place near Wingate where they now live in 1953. They were faithful members at the Wilmeth Baptist Church. L.B. was ordained a deacon at age 27. Both he and Mary taught Sunday School classes for 27 years or more before coming to Winters in 1971. They have worked in many different capacities in the First Baptist Church at Winters. They did volunteer mission work in Washington for one year.

Two Winters residents were elected to major positions on Texas Baptist boards during the annual meeting of the 2.5 million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas in Corpus Christi, Nov. 9-10.

Lula M. Harrison, retired, was elected to serve on the board of trustees of Hardin-Simmons Baptist University.

Glenn W. Shoemaker, pastor, First Baptist Church, was elected to the BGCT Executive Board. The 193-member Executive Board conducts the business of the BGCT between annual sessions.

Texas Baptist institutions include eight universities, two academies, Hispanic Baptist Theological Seminary in San Antonio, seven hospitals and children's homes and homes for the aging in multiple locations throughout the state.

Southern Baptists in more than 5,500 Texas congregations support these institutions through the Cooperative Program unified budget, which also provides support for missions causes in Texas, throughout the United States and in 126 foreign countries. The basic 1993 Cooperative Program operating budget is $63.5 million.

Runnels County Pecan Show

The 1992 Runnels County Pecan Show will be on Tuesday, December 8, in the Ballinger Community Center, according to Mike Mauldin, Runnels County Extension Agent, and Anthony Lange, Horticulture Committee Chairman.

Pecans are probably grown by more people in Runnels County than any other crop and a Pecan Show is an excellent way to learn about pecans. Everyone is encouraged to participate in this year's show.

Pecans may be entered at the County Extension office in the County Courthouse in Ballinger, Alderman-Cave in Winters, the Norton Gin, Ballinger Feed and Seed, or the First National Bank in Rowena. No entry will be accepted later than Thursday, December 3, at 5:00 p.m.

Each single entry should consist of not less than 45 pecans of the same variety. They should not be cleaned or rubbed to the extent that the shape or color is altered. They should be packed in paper or plastic bag with the exhibitor's name, address, and variety of pecan, if known. This year an entry fee of $3 per entry will be charged to offset expenses. Exhibitors are limited to one entry of each named variety they grow. However, a grower may enter as many seedlings, known hybrids, or natives as he wishes.

Divisions will be: Commercial, Classic and Native. Champion and Reserve Champion will be selected from each division. A plaque will be presented to the Champions and Rosettes to the Reserve Champions.

The public is invited to attend open house and public viewing of the entries from 1:00-4:00 p.m. on December 8 at the Community Center.

Appointment to service academies

U.S. Congressman Charles W. Stenholm has announced that the deadline for applications to the United States Service Academies is just one month away.

The deadline to apply to any military academy through Congressman Stenholm's office is December 1, 1992.

Applicants who wish to serve as commissioned officers are strongly encouraged to contact Jayne Schoonmaker in Congressman Stenholm's Stamford office. For information call (915)773-3623 or (915)672-1322 or write to P.O. Box 1237, Stamford, Texas 79553.

Many of the readers were given "Really Radical Reader" badges to wear during their participation.
