AD-LIB-BEN

A couple of boys walked in The Enterprise office Thursday morning and asked the writer of this column if he would like to do a good turn for the community. Frankly, we were rather cautious about answering their question, but finally found out what they wanted without too much of a commitment on our part.

These boys are of Pony League age and are in dire need of a sponsor for their baseball team. They pointed out that the Little League organization is all set up and that they would like to get the Pony League underway before the season gets along too far.

Any volunteers??? It would be a fine gesture for somebody to offer these boys some help.

Our right arm, Eddie Alexander, is on vacatoin this week, so we'll cut this business short this week and get back in the rear end of this salt mine.

UNCLE HUIE from HOG CREEK says

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

It says here that ever onct in a while the city of New York has to git money from the state of New York to operate on. That's mighty consoling news. If a big city can't make both ends meet, there ain't no point in a feller like me even trying to git 'em together.

I reckon them New Yorkers is using the same philosophy I use, just taking things easy and not letting my "arrears" interfere with my sleep, although I shore hope this idea don't git popular over in them foreign countries where we got so much "aid" staked out.

Come to think about it, New York City ain't in a class by herself. The United States spends several billions more ever year than she takes in, which puts me and Uncle Sam in the same class when it comes to balancing the budget. Them Republicans in Washington quote Abe Lincoln and holler that they are going to balance the budget, and the Democrats quote Thomas Jefferson and holler they've about got the budget balanced. Both of 'em talk a good budget but neither of 'em has balanced the dern thing since I wuz kneehigh to a mesquite stump.

I ain't balanced my budget in 20 year, ain't lived within my means onct in 10 year, and it's a great satisfaction to know that New York, Washington and me all handle this situation about the same way.

Of course, they might be some bankers write in and say that the paper ought not to print such things, as it might be a bad influence. You just tell 'em, Mister Editor, that the opinions expressed here don't necessarily represent those of the paper. I think that's the way them big papers handle it when they git in a hole. As a matter of fact, the opinions expressed here don't even represent those of my old lady. Just New York, the United States, and me is lined up together in this thing.

I see by the papers this morning where the boys at a Alabama high school is wearing their shirttails hanging out in protest over the girls wearing them sack dresses. Considering the nature and extent of the crime, I think them boys is making a very mild protest. But my neighbor says them sack dresses is a improvement in modesty. He says it ain't nothing to see frying size gals walking around up town these warm days in not enough clothes to keep a jaybird from freezing to death on a cool morning. And he says their mamas is as bad if not worse. The only difference, he says, is that the gals has got that certain somepun that their mamas don't have no more. In fact, he allows, if these mamas knowed how they looked going north to a feller coming from the south they would go home and put some clothes on.

Yours Truly,
Uncle Huie

Renshaw Operates Last Week's Mystery Farm

Oscar Renshaw is the operator of the mystery farm appearing in last week's Enterprise. The farm which is located 3 miles west of Bronte, is owned by Mrs. James A. Hallmark of Clyde. It consists of 60 acres.

Renshaw is married to the former Essie Pearl Eads. They have one daughter, Jessie Pearl.

In addition to operating the Hallmark place, Renshaw also has 100 acres of the Fletcher place, to the west, under lease.

His cotton allotment on the home place amounts to 52.7 acres and he has enough on the Fletcher place to bring his total cotton acreage up to 116½ acres. Raising cotton is Renshaw's favorite crop. However, he said he always tries to raise a few cows to go along with his row crop operations.

All of his acreage is in cultivation except for 40 acres. It is all terraced, and he hopes the soil conservation practices will help him to make a good cotton crop this year.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The large investment of stock and fixtures lost by fire May 25 in Bronte at Bronte Pharmacy and Smith Dry Goods had a regular routine of checking as to the origin of the fire, which started in the rear of the store.

Thorough examination was made by investigators from every angle and of every person who could possibly have had any connection.

Mr. Rippetoe voluntarily and insisted that he himself take the "lie detecting test" to disprove any doubt which might arise regarding him. The test was made in Midland, Texas, at the Texas Dept. of Public Safety, and will always remain there for future reference to anyone.

The Rippetoes had rented their building in Bangs, Texas, also had engaged the moving van from Abilene for the moving of the drug store and home. They were out of town to find their new home in Bangs at the time of the fire.

We, the undersigned, are happy to repeat the department's report: "Mr. Rippetoe's examination was the clearest and cleanest we have ever made."

The cause of the fire was definitely determined as "heating of electrical wiring."
