Oil Industry Gives $22.7 Million Boost To Coke Economy

More than $22.7 million a year of economic stimulation for Coke County flows from its oil and gas wells each year, an annual study by Texas Mid - Continent

AD-LIB-BEN

Our frined of some 30 odd years, Wayne Kittley, who operates the Kerens Tribune, came out with some good ideas in what he would like to see in TV commercials.

We took the liberty of clipping part of his column of last week and here it is:

Things we'd like to see in TV commercials.

—A white bird flying out of a kitchen window with a clothes pin clamped on his nose.

—A cigarette smoker having a coughing fit.

—A young bride slapping the whey out of her husband who makes fun of her coffee.

—A smart alec kid falling off a plastic shield as it floats across a kitchen floor.

—A hot shot athlete cutting his face while shaving with "you know what."

—Somebody taking a sip of beer and throwing up all over the floor.

—For once we'd like to see the boss fire the jerk who tells him he's got bad breath.

—Wouldn't it be a change to have these happy dancers who chew gum, go into this intricate dance step and get tripped on a wad of used gum.

—Why couldn't, at least for once, a detergent fail to get the wash as bright and clean as brand X. After all, some folks get their clothes dirtier than others.

—The car without the gas additive could for once break through the bed sheet thrown across the road.

—And wouldn't it be terrible if the dashing young man got the brush off — AFTER using a certain mouth wash.

Looks like we just about missed on the rain this go around. Some reports said we had .6 of an inch late last week. It's all dried up now, however, and we've had to water our tomatoes already this week.

For the first time since the city was seized by imperial Rome in 63 B. C., the city of Jerusalem has Jewish soldiers standing guard over all its area. Jewish soldiers stand guard at all gates to the historical city; looking north to Damascus, west to Jaffa, and south to Bethlehem.

Israel's plan to retain the entire city have met with approval from no one but the Israelis, however, and they are probably going to run into lots of problems.

It sounds rather fine for the old city to be returned to the Jews, with their promise that it shall become a city open as a shrine to all faiths. But their determination on this score is go-

Oil & Gas Association showed today.

"As one of the 206 producing counties in Texas, Coke County's economy is sensitive to fluctuations in the oil industry generally," commented W. A. Landreth, Fort Worth, Association president. "Long range, the demand for oil looks strong and current production rates continue to provide Texas a major source of its income. On the other hand, Texas operators are beset by competition from other oil producing areas, government ceilings on natural gas prices, heavy tax payments, and a price for crude oil that is sufficient to encourage the amount of exploratory drilling that is needed to find future reserves."

Based on latest U. S. Bureau of Mines production figures, Coke County in 1965 produced 6.4 million barrels of crude oil, valued at $18.9 million and 30 billion cubic feet of natural gas valued at $3.8 million, and ranks 51st among Texas counties in production.

In addition, plants which process natural gas for liquids such as natural gasoline, butane and propane in 1965 produced more than 103.2 million gallons of liquids valued at more than $5 million.

A major distribution of income from sales of oil and gas went to county landowners in royalty payments totaling more than $2.8 million.

In 1966, a year that saw drilling in Texas fall to its lowest level since 1947, oil and gas operators drilled 37 wells in Coke County. Of these, 15 were wildcats seeking new fields.

The Association estimated that operators in the county spent more than $2.9 million in drilling last year, of which $1.2 million was lost in dry holes.

Sharing heavily in the county's production each year is the State Treasury, which received $1.1 million in production taxes in 1965 paid by the producers and royalty owners. Crude oil production paid $867,643 and natural gas production, $267,582.

Additional value is given oil and gas from the operation of processing plants. The Oil and Gas Journal lists 2 natural gasoline plants in Coke County, with a capacity of 125 million cubic feet per day.

A new justice of the peace for precinct 2 will be appointed when the commissioners court meets in regular session Monday. Commissioner Howard Brock said unless something unforeseen comes before the court, all applications will be read and considered and a new judge will be named.

A vacancy in the office was caused by the death of J. T. Liles, who served in the position since 1958.

Brock said anyone who would like to be considered for the job should apply in person or by mail. Applications should be turned into the office of County Judge W. W. Thetford.

Brock also said, for the information of the public, that anyone who is kin to any member of the commissioners court will not be considered for the job.

CORRECTION

The Enterprise was in error last week in information contained in the story about release of reserve acreage for grazing. The story said the grazing would be allowed for four months, and it should have said one month (July).

J. E. Quisenberry, head of the ASC office in Coke County, said this week that one month of grazing is all that is authorized at this time. However, he said there is a possibility the time will be extended if drouth conditions continue.

Farmers and ranchmen may sign up for the grazing through the month of July.

H. M. Stevens was dismissed Monday from West Coke County Hospital in Robert Lee where he had been a patient several days,

Darrel Windhaus Writes Of Experiences In Mexico

Mexico D. F.
July 2, 1966

The past couple of days have been eventful. A couple of nights ago I went up to the top of the Latin American Tower; it is the tallest building in North America. It was built in 1957 by the Mexicans with American financing. Not one worker lost his life during the project. The tower has three tiers and is 42 stories tall. The sight from the observatory is breathtaking.

I was stopped by two policemen . . . I did not have any back lights. ut I talked my Bway out of paying 50 pesos ($4). The next day I checked the wiring, found a short and corrected the problem.

Yesterday I went to a home in a very poor colony to get some practical working knowledge of life in a poor district. It was a rewarding experience.

A couple of nights ago I had a flat tire on the great Paseo de la Feorma, the show case avenue of Mexico, D. F. The Paseo has a total of 3 lanes of traffic, with three islands dividing them. The traffic is chokingly heavy.

Last night I went to the nearby mountains alone to a height of about 10,000. The sight of the valley and D. F. is moving. Today I nearly got into some trouble. I drove up to a spot in the mountains about 1,500 feet more to climb to a point of 12,800 feet. The height was too much for my lungs. Very few Americans go here. The people seem to dislike anything that represents the USA. -Civilization is about 5 - 6 miles down from this little town. The kids throw tacks in front of the car tires, and the adults gave a weird smile, when they saw my Texas license plates. I finally stopped and asked some kids why they throw tacks in front of the tires, but when they realize I speak their language, they finally began to talk.

At night it gets to be about 36 degrees F. The kids go to primary school, but very few go on to the 7th. The American Legion maintains a school in this town, but the kids do not especially support it. They are suspicious of outsiders, especially Americans. The people are half Mexican and half Indian (Mestizos). They are not handsome. They are moderately fair skinned to brown and have flat and square faces. They are strong, and the women work in the corn fields just like the men. They wear thick winter type clothes. Their language is Castilian Spanish (correct Spanish). The adults stand about 5'6" and have large lungs.

The land around this place is rich. Corn is grown more than any other thing. The people say that deer roam the mountains and are a source of meat. Snakes are also present.

When I came down from the mountain, I vomited and my lungs were irritated for at least five hours.

The city is beautiful. The people are proud of their capital and keep it clean. The asphalt jungle is sprinkled with wide avenues, green grass and pretty trees. The sidewalks are very wide, as are most of the residential streets (compared to the dirty border towns). The streets are lighted at night with six street lamps per block. D. F. is as clean as Dallas and is more beautiful.

Traffic in D. F. is where they goofed. The city is about eight times the size of Big D, yet this city of 6,300,000 uses east - west and north - south expressways of four to six lanes, two to three lanes each way. Also Mexicans engineers like traffic circles. At one place, 16 different streets meet at one circle.

I drove to Acapulco with a friend in the green bomb. There is hardly anything between Cuernavaca and Acapulco except mountains and some jungle.

Tree farmers have plantations of palm trees from Acapulco to about 25 miles inland. Acapulco is the market for their country.

Acapulco is two towns in one. It is a great tourist town and at the same time a lazy fishing town. People like Ritz and Hilton have constructed big hotels along the beaches. There are about 15 principal hotels, and perhaps 50 or more in all. There are 28 beaches seven or eight of which are good. Hundreds and thousands of people work on the beaches. It seems Yankees pay for everything except walking on the sand. Life guards are available and a couple of beaches have nets to protect swimmers. The water is ok, clean and the beaches are free of trash. But the water depth drops off sharply, and thus, bathing is potentially dangerous for non swimmers.

Taking a ride on a glass bottom boat, I got to see into the bottom of the bay, which is rocky and clear. There are all kinds of fish and thousands of sea animals. When I got back to the boat ramp a 30 pound shark and a 150 pound sailfish were on display.

Acapulco has an eight lane boulevard that skirts the Pacific for 3 - 4 miles. It is called Calzada Presidente Miguel Alaman, and Downtown is strictly provincial, and does not reflect the tremendous amount of spending that occurs along the beaches and the hotels. Many of the people wrestle a living from the sea and are poor.

I eat in a restaurant just off the main tourist drag, yet only a few blocks from the pulse beat, an intersection of the "local" downtown. The prices are very reasonable, and the place is clean, but tourists do not here. One of the favorite dishes of Mexicans is served here — fish served in a bowl with sauce juice and three, or four lemons, with salt. Acapulco is a good place to spend a vacation. If you plan it right are bilingual, it does not have to be expensive.

Mexico, D. F.
July 9, 1966

Tonight I drove around a bit, and walked around downtown for an hour or so. I got in town about 1 a.m. The streets were congested at places because the late movies had ended. There was more traffic at this hour (2-3 a.m.) than at 9 - 10 p.m. in downtown San Antonio at Houston and St. Mary's streets. Many places were still open for business.

It is really something to walk on the main drags at night because there is so much to see. During one hour I saw a one - car accident, three or four flagged down by tough looking motor police, two drunks fight, a policeman physically haul in a drunk, saw a guy vomit all over street corner, saw people who sell newspaper sleeping on the streets under their stands and display counters, had a moocher approach me for money, and saw some very poor and starving people look at some trash somebody dumped on a side street.

Yesterday I went downtown to buy a book. I walked, and the walk was worth all the time. I was especially interested in obtaining new ideas for home construction. Some of the designs are fabulous and some are crude. My walk took me through several typical zones of any large city. I went through a mile of a tenant district. In one area, the government had stepped in in the middle fifties and built five large edifices, each 11 stories tall. A main artery of six lanes goes under a complex of apartment buildings for a total of a quarter mile or more.

About one mile from the heart of the town, I saw an old building that has 1577 on it. I was fascinated by these buildings. The walls are thick and the windows are large. The walls are worn on the ground floor because people have chipped them for hundreds of years. Most of the old buildings date back to 1780 to 1880. I ducked into several old buildings just to see the inside. They have courtyards and the main halls have cellars. I got a strange feeling as I went into these places because of their age. The shadows have seen many, many generation pass.

Last night I talked to a Mexican who is extremely anti - American. We talked from about 1 - 5 a.m. He is a rare breed since he can be termed an intellectual. The talk was educational and well worth the time. It is too bad he is a victim of propaganda.

Yesterday afternoon I saw a bear act on the corner where I am living. A fellow had a trained bear and was going through routines for handouts.

Mexico, D. F.
July 10, 1966

This afternoon I went to the famous Plaza Mexico to see a bullfight. This is the largest bull ring in the world and seats 80,000. The first fight was good but the next five were horrible.

Now a few words about stadiums. Mexico, D. F., had its share of stadiums. The Hipodromo Racetrack Stadium can accommodate 250,000. The Aztec Stadium seats 105,000 and is going to be the Astrodome of Mexico. Houston was lucky because they had the money. D. F. built this huge stadium before the one in Houston, but a top was not installed, due to a sudden lack of funds. The National University of Mexico also has a large stadium that seats 80 - 90,000. The stadium is constructed out of lava rock, and is a wonder of the world, sure enough.

Mexico, D. F.
July 13, 1966

Today I visited the great cathedral in downtown D. F. It was begun in 1577 and was completed in 1828. It is huge. The main ceiling is about six to seven stories high. The main bell tower is about 20 stories high. There are 100 to 150 columns which support the ceiling.

They are 17 altars in the main church, along with seven chapels. Gold is everywhere. I have never seen so much gold leaf paint. Behind each altar is a panel plate - painted with tinged gold. The largest candles are about four inches in diameter and about six feet tall. The five doors to the front entrance are about 10 feet wide and 25 to 30 feet high. The wood is hard and heavy, and four to six inches thick.

The floor of the cathedral is not even because the foundation is slowly giving away. The main cathedral is at least three fourths of a block wide and two blocks long. The whole cathedral plant covers at least 4 square blocks in downtown. I was really impressed. It is indeed a wonder work of man.

Mexico, D. F.
July 14, 1966

Today I went to the National University of Mexico. What a place! An M. D. friend showed me the showcase, and it's strictly first class. The main plant covers about 15 square miles, and 75,000 students attend. Each field of study is represented by a school. Each school has its own library, class rooms, cafeteria, etc. The buildings are modern, being constructed in the late 1950's. I went through the main building, 20 - 25 stories; the central library, about 12 stories; and other buildings, including the big medical complex.

The green grass is trim and pretty trees are all around. I also went to the physical plant. Many kinds of sports facilities are here. Many games were in progress and I could not resist the spirit. I played a couple games of basketball and the Doc and I played a couple of students a couple of games of "21". We won both games, but within five minutes of normal action I was laboring to play. After 10 minutes, I was panting and could hardly move. My lungs were starving for heavier air. It took about four hours to get over the initiation.

After the basketball games, I saw the huge swimming pool, one of which will be used for Olympic Games in 1968. It took billions of dollars to build the university.

D. F. is the sixth or seventh largest city in the world and the largest Spanish speaking city in the world. It lives up to this billing. One of the main downtown drags is full of thieves. This drag is frequented mostly by lower and middle class people. It is a main shopping place for "regular" people. Buses are thick as flies. I walk on this street a lot because I can learn a lot.

Learning also means dealing with a few thieves. I have been directly approached by at least three. I keep a pocket comb in my billfold, so the trousers will catch it if any slob tries to lift it, and a lot of times I wear a rain coat at night. A crowded bus and in a street crowd are the best places to be took, I think.

Mexico, D. F.
July 21, 1966

Several days ago I visited the pyramids of Teotihuatlan, the site being about 25 miles NE of D. F. I scrambled up to the top of the largest pyramid, the Sun Pyramid. I then walked around the ruins of the ancient Aztec city. The Aztec engineers obviously were extremely intelligent. Today I visited the famous Chapultepec Castille and the National Museum of Anthropology.

Chapultepec Castille, the French showcase in the 1850's - 60's, is loaded with priceless treasure. The Spanish and Mexican governments have preserved everything. The French spent close to $20 billion on this showcase in the 1850's and 1860's. I saw the flag used at the Alamo (1836).

The National Museum of Anthropology is some place to visit. It takes three hours simply to stroll through the three decked horseshoe shaped building. Everything is here that represents the development of man in evolution and scenes that represent life in the provincial territories of Mexico.

A couple of days ago I visited the National Palace — the White House of Mexico. The building is about three blocks long times three blocks wide, is three decks high, and is heavily guarded, for the President works within the confines of the palace. The history is presented in a huge mural that covers more than one block long by 20 to 35 feet high. The weight of the palace is also causing the ground to give way.

Pachuca, Hidalgo
July 24, 1966

I went to Pachuca with a couple of friends to spend the day loafing. Pachuca is a dirty mining town of about 50 - 60,000, and is located about 50 miles NE of Mexico, D. F. The elevation of the city is about 8,500 feet, thus making it one of the highest cities in Mexico. Silver and gold are mined here, and silver is king. An endless number of things are available in local shops, that are alloys, and there are some articles of pure silver. The largest silver mine in the world is just outside of Pachuca. American capitolist finance the mining operations.

I drove through the clouds between D. F. and Pachuca, and the cool breeze was refreshing. I can see now why the natives wear wool sweaters.

(Windhaus' final letters tell about seeing a big street fight, attending a soccer game and making a return trip to Acapulco, where he spent considerable time trying to buy gifts to take home to his family.)

Social Security Should Concern Young Families

Why should a man with a wife and young children concern himself with anything that seems as far away as social security?

A new booklet, "Social Security Information for Young Families," specifically designed to answer this question is now available, social security district manager, Ted. F. Mollering announced today.

"Social security is not just a retirement program, and it is not just for old people," Mollering said. This new booklet gives the young worker important information about the survivors and disability protection that he and his family have now.

Nine out of ten families in Robert Lee have social security survivor protection which can amount to over $75,000 in benefits if the breadwinner in the family should die, Mollering pointed out.

Disability insurance is the other social security program of particular importance to the young worker. After just five years of work under social security, the worker and his family are eligible to receive monthly benefit payments if he should become severely disabled and the condition is expected to last a year or longer.

Mollering said that "Social Security Information for Young Families" explains in detail survivors and disability protection, what it can mean to a family, and how to make an application should it become necessary. Also included is information on how to check your social security account and the financing of social security.

Copies of this pamphlet may be obtained free of charge from the social security office at 3000 West Harris in San Angelo.

City To Get EDDD
On September 10

On September 10, customers in Bronte and 13 other General Telephone towns in West Texas will become the first to have a new long distance service called EDDD, according to R. R. McCullough, district manager. The facilities which make it possible for approximately 40,000 customers in Bronte, Big Lake, Carlsbad, Christoval, Eden, Eldorado, Mertzon, Miles, Ozona, Robert Lee, Rowena, San Angelo, Sonora and Sterling City to dial person to person as well as station to station calls will be located in the office at 14 West Twohig, San Angelo.

Cost of the project making the new service available will be over $1,200,000.

Plans for a project of this magnitude must be laid well in advance, McCullough stated. During the past three years, new central office buildings have been built in Carlsbad, Christoval, Eldorado and Sonora. New central office equipment has been placed in these buildings. Additional long distance circuits have been added between San Angelo and the area towns that will have access to the EDDD network. All customers in the exchange involved now have seven digit telephone numbers except Sterling City. Sterling City customers will be assigned seven digit numbers at the time of the EDDD conversion.

Expanded Direct Distance Dialing (EDDD) is different from the conventional Direct Distance Dialing (DDD) in that it allows customers to dial person to person, collect, credit card or special calls as well as station to station calls.

Here's how EDDD works: On September 10, two new numbers — 112 and 110 — will become a part of the telephone long distance routine. Dialing one of these two numbers first connects you with equipment which permits you to dial your call. To dial a station to station call, you simply dial the access code — 112, then the area code of the town you are calling — then the 7 - digit number you are calling. To dial a person to person or special call, you dial the access code — 110, then the area code of the town you are calling — then the 7 - digit number you are calling.

McCullough noted that instructions for EDDD service will be in front of the new telephone directory which customers will receive in September. In addition an EDDD instruction booklet will be mailed to all customers at the time of the conversion outlining how to use this convenient, modern telephone service. The company also has speaking teams to explain this new service which will appear before civic clubs and other groups upon request to McCullough's office.

McCullough indicated that the overall conversion to Expanded Direct Distance Dialing which will involve 14 exchanges and 40,000 telephones between now and the cutover on September 10 is the largest and most complex project ever undertaken in San Angelo. When the project is complete, West Texans served by General Telephone Company will be able to dial to most points throughout the United States and Canada.

CARE OF SHEETS IMPORTANT

Those new sheets will last a lot longer if they're properly laundered and cared for.

The specialists recommends that tucked - in sheets be loosened from all edges of the bed before they are removed. Pulling sheets without loosening them will weaken the fabric and may slit weak spots. Mitered corners should be loosened to avoid ripping. If the sheet should rip or tear, mend it before laundering. Small tears will become larger in washing.

Don't use a sheet as a laundry bag. This puts a strain on the sheet and increases snagging and soiling. Time can be saved by not folding sheets before they are put into the laundry bag.

When line - drying sheets, fold the sheet hem to hem and lap about four inches over the line. After securely pinning the sheet, straighten the selvages with your fingers. When sheets are dry, fold them as they are removed from the line. Ironing is not necessary if sheets are folded evenly.

When drying sheets in the dryer, they should be removed before they are completely dry unless the dryer has a moisture sensing control. Remove sheets as soon as the dryer stops. If sheets are folded immediately after removal from the dryer, you'll save a lot of ironing time. You may, however, prefer to press at least the top 12 inches, which will show when the bed is made.

HOME ECONOMICS BRIEFS

Precooked dry beans that cook in 20 to 30 minutes are now on the market in most states. Old fashioned navy beans soup or popular baked beans can be ready for the table in less than an hour from start to finish.

Flat - sided containers for freezing are more space - saving than cylindrical and tub - shaped cartons.

American or cheddar cheese claims a place in every cheese assortment. There are three strengths which range in price from high to low.

Mild cheddar has been aged for 60 to 90 days, a short period in the life of a cheese, but it contributes to the lower cost. Medium cheese is aged six to nine months. It develops a stronger flavor and is more costly in terms of handling and storing. Sharp cheese spends a year or more in the aging and curing rooms while the full strong flavor is brought to its peak, and the processing expense rises.

County Agents News Column

By STERLING LINDSEY

Several people have called the past few days stating something is eating the leaves of their pecan trees. They suddenly found a limb that had been skeletonized.

In most cases the culprit has been the walnut caterpillar. They are heavy eaters, fast growers and can change the appearance of a tree almost overnight.

Two control methods have been used by various ones with equal success. The walnut caterpillar is usually easily controlled with a DDT spray. A mixture containing 2 level tablespoons of 50% DDT wettable powder per gallon should do the job.

Another way to control this pest is to break or cut off the branch on which they are feeding and burn it. Normally the walnut caterpillar will feed in a small group or area. When they are only a day or so old, all the worms will probably be on one small twig.

The Coke County 4-H Horse Show will be held at the Bronte Roping Arena on Friday, July 7. The halter classes will be judged starting at 6 p.m. and the performance events will be held that night. We will give more on the show next week.

While we are on pecans - the second generation of the pecan nut casebearer should emerge near the end of this week. A few early birds could be here already. This generation should not inflict as much damage as the first generation. But, they will take some pecans unless control practices are undertaken.

I have not checked any trees at present to see if the second generation is here. Normally, the second generation hits six weeks after the first hatch. This would mean they should be present between June 30 and July 5.

The hatch period of the second generation is not as well defined as the first. They tend to lengthen the period with each hatch.

A study conducted at the McGregor Station shows that crossbred steers can bring just as high a price at the market place as straight bred steers.

There has been a stigma associated with crossbreds in the past - and almost invariably they would bring less than a comparable straight bred animal.

Walter Kruse, of Texas A&M University's Livestock and Forage Research Center, marketed 26 crossbred steers this spring that brought an average of $23.25 per cwt. He sold 30 Hereford steers that brought $23.24 and four Angus steers that brought $22.96.

"There was no significant difference in price whether the animal was straight bred or crossbred," said Kruse.

The highest price paid per pound was for a Hereford steer that brought $24.30 per cwt.; the lowest price per pound was for a Brahman cross at $22.10 per cwt.

About the only noticeable price difference was in steers weighing less than 800 pounds. These brought about 50 cents less per hundred.

Kruse points out these steers were sold at community auction in Central Texas - but he believes there is a lessening of price discrimination against crossbred steers over most of the state.

The Protecting LIGHT

This lighted tower is a light shining in the darkness to guide sailors and ships through the night. Our Lord is our light who guides us faithfully through life, even though it be as a stormy sea — He knows the way. His word, as proclaimed in His church, will light your way and bring peace, joy and comfort.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm 119:105.

Attend the church of your choice this coming Sunday and receive the blessings awaiting you.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.
