More Screwworm Cases Found in Coke County

Coke County sustained its second, third and fourth confirmed screwworm cases of 1972 last week. All three cases came from the Silver area. The Wilkes Brothers submitted a confirmed sample taken from a pig; D. R. Coalson submitted a sample taken from a young calf; a third confirmed sample was submitted from Wayne McCabe's place north of Silver.

All operators are encouraged to submit for identification any worms found in livestock. The sterile fly applications are made as soon as possible following identification of samples submitted. The shower received during the weekend increase the danger of a screwworm outbreak in the area, said County Agent Sterling Lindsey. The control program is dependent upon larvae samples submitted by stockmen to hot spot treat the state. Not enough sterile flies are available to treat the entire state on a grid basis.

Regular livestock inspections, delaying surgery where possible, regular spraying, close inspection of purchased livestock and submitting samples of all worm cases will help control the screwworm.

If anyone should need mailing cartons, they can be picked up at Key Feed Store or the County Agent's office in Robert Lee; Bob's Cafe in Silver; or Denman's White's Auto Store in Bronte.

WASHINGTON
"As it looks from here"
OMAR BURLESON
Congressman
17th District

It is a popular thing nowadays for politicians to talk about closing "tax loopholes." The only thing is that it never has been quite determined just what a loophole is.

Over the years the Congress has written into the tax laws certain types of deductions from income tax, which may be taken for various things, including contributions to charitable and philanthropic institutions. This is sometimes lumped in as a loophole with the 50 some odd exemptions now permitted by law.

There is an impression going around that if all these allowances were done away with, everybody's taxes would be lowered. Edwin S. Cohen, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Tax Policy, and an authority on our tax structure, says this is hardly true. As a matter of fact, according to Mr. Cohen, it would not make any big dent in the individual's tax to the federal government.

The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction over all tax matters, has introduced legislation which, in a period from 1974 through 1976, would in effect remove 54 exemptions now on the tax books. After the tax exceptions are eliminated those thought to be justified would then be reenacted. This is a sort of negative approach and one which would greatly upset every individual business and corporation with plans for the future based on their tax liability.

In place of this type of proposal another bill has been introduced in the last few days which simply commits the Ways and Means Committee to study and examine the exceptions now permitted with the view of seeing which should be repealed and which should be maintained in the law.

It is being said by quite a few members of Congress and some candidates running for President that the rich do not pay their share of taxes and that they are able to take advantage of "tax loopholes," whereas the smaller taxpayer is unable to do so.

An example of a tax loophole is investment in municipal bonds which bear a much lower rate of interest than other similar investments and on which interest is tax free. This arrangement permits cities, towns and districts to issue bonds and sell them at an interest rate much lower than otherwise would be the case if the interest income was taxable to the purchaser. As a result, people who have voted bonds on themselves can be charged a lower rate than otherwise would be the case. Many wealthy people invest in these bonds but their income from interest is less.

Of the 54 items which may be considered as tax loopholes are the special exemptions for the aged and the blind. Billions of dollars are given to foundations engaged in charitable and educational activities. Certain allowances are made as incentives for economic expansion. An example of this latter is the oil, gas and other minerals depletion allowances and intangible drilling costs because of the big risk of the venture. The tax deduction is to encourage exploration to increase reserves.

Even the personal exemption of $750 per dependent comes within the exceptions. Out of between 75 and 80 million individual tax returns, there are 106 cases with income of $200,000 and on which no taxes at all were paid in 1970. The Internal Revenue still has some of the cases under study but the great majority of them have been checked out and found that the deductions appear to be within the law. Twelve of these cases involve individuals with adjusted gross income of $8.5 million, whose principal deduction consisted of charitable contributions totaling $4.2 million. Another 17 individuals paid no 1970 federal income tax because their deductions for state and local taxes exceeded $4.1 million, the amount they otherwise would have been charged.

Another 11 persons had losses in 1969 far exceeding the tax to be paid by them in 1970. Another group paid taxes on foreign investments to foreign countries in excess of taxes due on other investments in this country. The income of a number was from tax free municipal bonds.

Whether all deductions permitted under the law are justified many times depends on whose "loophole" it is and how much of it is to be closed.

It is perfectly well that the Congress and the Treasury Department should keep a close and continuous look at the various deductions now permitted under the law. At the same time, Congress should be thinking about means of cutting tax rates by reducing expenditures to the extent of maintaining a balanced budget.

BACK ROADS BECKON TRAVELER WHO WANTS INTERESTING TRIP

The summer travel season has not yet commenced, except for the earlybirds, but initial indications are that a growing number of motorists this year may decide to do it differently.

They will leave the superhighways to those who delight in telling their neighbors how far they traveled in a day, and choose their routes determined to see something.

This means taking to the back roads, or secondary highways. There is an amazing network of such roads—amazing because of the attention and investment paid the interest racetrack in recent years. Traveling the secondary system can make the trip much more enjoyable, especially for the traveler not rushed for time.

As a starter, the scenery consists of more than endless stretches of four lane highway. It includes numerous small towns, meadows and pastures, farm animals, plains and mountains. Numerous places will be found along the way where the traveler will want to spend some time.

Maybe nothing more than pulling off the road at a particularly majestic spot to enjoy a leisurely picnic. Or exploring some of the towns and hamlets along the way. Bufts of early American history in particular will see much that the travelers of fenced concrete never encounter.

Economic advantages also await the secondary road traveler. Motels, restaurants, gas and auto repairs generally have lower rates. Some of the home cooked meals to be found along these routes are enough to write home about.

People are friendlier off the beaten track, a fact which can add greatly to the enjoyment of the trip. All the ingredients exist for a memorable journey, the kind of vacation which calls for a repeat performance another year.

Such travels are not for everyone, of course. The impatient sojourner, intent on getting someplace, isn't interested in scenery, people or places.

He will withstand the monotony of the superhighway, the standardized service and the impersonal attention which comes with crowds with only minor irritation.

He will never know the relaxation he missed. His vacation recitals will consist of how fast and how far he traveled. If his listener winks at the empty tale, it is because he has discovered another way to go.

And he doesn't measure his enjoyment by distance or speedometer readings. —Austin American

BRONTE ENTERPRISE

For those who say the railroads are at the beginning of the end, here's a progress report from Santa Fe that says it's much, much more like the end of a beginning.

MORE POWER

We're adding 52 new giant diesels and rebuilding 50 older units to provide a locomotive fleet producing over 3,850,000 horsepower.

MORE CARS

1910 additional cars are coming in 1972, including 100 giant refrigerated hopper cars for in-bulk movement of potatoes, oranges and other perishables.

MORE TERMINALS

Santa Fe's new million dollar rail and truck terminal has now been completed at Houston, Texas to meet expanding truck, Piggy-Back and container traffic.

BETTER SERVICE

Run through trains with connecting railroads link —east, west, and southwest and save hours moving through Santa Fe's electronic classification yard in Kansas City.

BETTER PIGGY-BACK

We're expanding Piggy-Back and container service all along the Santa Fe to handle increasing domestic and international shipments.

BETTER IDEAS

An expanding microwave network linked to our data system for car tracing and locomotive utilization, and plans for the development of a unique coaxial train for moving containers are just a few of the new ideas at work on the Santa Fe.

MORE and BETTER are key words at Santa Fe. What we're doing, is why we're saying, rail service is still one of the most efficient ways to move freight. What we're spending says so too: over $100 million this year in railway capital expenditures. One billion in the last 10 years. Two billion since World War II.

The railroad industry and the Nation need sensible transport regulatory policies—administered with an even hand. We can take it from there—into a new era of railroading.

Still think the railroads are at the beginning of the end? For Santa Fe it's more like the end of the beginning!

Santa Fe —The complete transportation company moving by rail, truck, air freight, pipeline and land development.
