SCHOOL RALLY DAYS A GREAT SUCCESS

AN IMMENSE CROWD IN ATTENDANCE BOTH DAYS—DINNER ON THE GROUND AND A SPLENDID PROGRAM RENDERED.

Friday and Saturday was school Rally Days at Robert Lee, and it was a great event, well attended and a grand success in every particular. A heavy rain fell Thursday night and it was thought the attendance the first day would be light but that was not the case. There was an immense crowd present to greet the opening exercises. Nearly every school in the county was represented, and citizens from every part of Coke county were in attendance. A number of cars came up from Bronte Friday, but the attendance from there was small Saturday, owing to the fact that Saturday was Trades Day at Bronte. Promptly at 10 o'clock the parade started from the school building, about a half mile in length, and paraded the business district of the city. Milton Overall, the flag bearer, headed the procession with "old glory." Then came a float bearing the Rally Day Queen and her attendants. Miss Jodie Bell, one of Coke county's beauties, was seated on her throne in the center of the large and beautifully decorated float and was surrounded by her attendants of young ladies and boys. The Queen's guard consisted of six boys dressed as Knights, carrying lances, on handsomely caparisoned horses. Then came marching the grandmother drill, 16 little girls dressed as little old grandmothers. Then came two cars containing the Blue Bonnets, little girls from the primary room, each wearing a blue dress and blue bonnet and carrying bouquets of blue bonnets. These were followed by decorated wagons and cars occupied by the several visiting schools from different parts of the county, who made the welkin ring at every turn with their appropriate school yells. The grounds for the athletic exercises was well prepared, a large and roomy grand stand was erected, and everyone had a comfortable seat and the grounds were fenced. C. Garrett, of the Walnut school, one of the best all-round athletes in the west, was chairman and manager of the athletic exercises and W. F. Haywood acted as field and track judge. Lee Hester of Sterling City assisted in the management of the exercises. The following is the program as rendered:

FRIDAY
Song—Dixie, by all schools and visitors.
Each school was given five minutes to entertain the audience, which consisted of school yells, drills and dialogues of the several schools present.
The event presented by the Robert Lee school was a grand drill by 16 little girls, 14 little grandmothers and two maids. The little grandmothers were dressed in long dresses, white caps and aprons, specks and were furnished with a little rocking chair, snuff box, brush and knitting outfit. They were faultlessly trained and received the applause of everyone.

The Robert Lee Blue Bonnets drill was one of the prettiest ever witnessed. It was composed of about twenty little girls from the primary department, dressed in blue, with blue bonnets and each bearing a bouquet of blue bonnets. They were faultlessly trained in their drilling, and showed splendid tact and patience of their teacher, Mrs. S. B. Kemp.
Dinner time was announced and everyone sat down to one of old-fashioned picnic dinners that the thrifty housewives of Coke county is far famed for preparing. It was a feast, indeed, that everyone partook of bountifully and more than "twelve baskets" were gathered up after all had a sufficiency.

The hurrahers were all out with their witty remarks and when a good play was made by either side the grand stand went wild. Some good plays were made on both sides and Bronte has a good basket ball team, all pretty girls, but our pretty and athletic bunch were too much for them and they went down in defeat.

Emblems!

Since the dawn of civilization, some mark of recognition has been given to those who have distinguished themselves by deeds of heroism, or in any line of endeavor.
All Nations and States are recognized by some coat of arms, or some special seal.
Members of all Lodges and Fraternities wear badges as a token of membership.
Every ship carries at its mast a flag, that proclaims to the world what Nation it calls home.
All officers of the Army and Navy wear shoulder straps, which designate their particular rank.
So it is in business life, every article of merit has a trade mark, so it may be recognized at a glance.
No manufacturer can afford to advertise a trade mark, unless the article he sells has merit.
A trade mark is valuable only as it advertises the article which bears it.
In buying we would give preference to goods with a well established trade mark, thus avoiding expensive experiments.
Trade marks do not fix the quality. It is the quality that fixes the trade mark.
It is our contention that the line of goods bearing the P & O trade mark are the leaders in their class. Not as good as any other, but actually better, and they are backed by the strongest guarantee of any line of implements sold in America, and the guarantee is backed by one of the strongest implement houses in America, and our guarantee is added on for what it is worth. IS THAT WORTH ANYTHING TO YOU?
You do not risk getting skinned when you trade with us, as this is a money back house.

ODD ADVENTURE ON A RAILWAY.

Ruse of a Criminal to Escape Arrest Comes to Naught.

It was some years ago that Gretchen Hecker, then a girl of eighteen, was aboard a train for Berlin.

She went all alone on the train and was alone in the compartment until one of the stops a man got in.

Gretchen looked at the man, not understanding what he meant. "Your coat, and be in a hurry. Take it off. I'm going to put it on and you shall put on mine."

When the train stopped at R. the man was about to get out when he caught sight of a policeman standing right where he must be passed.

The student was evidently in an amiable mood—most students are—and as soon as he was asked to take a cigarette and, turning to the criminal who he supposed was a woman, asked her to smoke.

"You should be at home with your mother," said the student, looking at her. "What business is it of yours?"

"You little boy," said the student, "You should be at home with your mother."

"What business is it of yours?" asked the student haughtily. "One would suppose the boy to be a girl. I'll bug him if I like."

With that he seized Gretchen and pulled her face down on to his chest so vigorously that when he released her the mustache had fallen off.

"Well, well," said the astonished student. "What's this? Are you trying to escape from justice in disguise?"

"You should be at home with your mother," said the student, looking at her. "What business is it of yours?"

"You little boy," said the student, "You should be at home with your mother."

"What business is it of yours?" asked the student haughtily. "One would suppose the boy to be a girl. I'll bug him if I like."

With that he seized Gretchen and pulled her face down on to his chest so vigorously that when he released her the mustache had fallen off.

"Well, well," said the astonished student. "What's this? Are you trying to escape from justice in disguise?"

A DIPLOMATIC PROBLEM.

It Was Raised by a Doll's Dress at the Court of the Czar.

A certain doll was once the cause of a curious diplomatic situation. Diplomats and statesmen were called upon to discuss the gowns of this doll.

When a president of France went to Russia to cement his country's alliance with the czar he neglected no means of obtaining favor at the Russian court.

These were of course phonographic dolls, and though their form and exquisite dressing were the work of French art, they owed their ability to talk and sing to Edison.

Now, one of these dolls was a little girl, dressed in white muslin, with a waist of blue silk.

"Good day, little mamma!" Then, after some further remarks, the doll began to sing "Mal-brouck s'en va-t-en guerre," which is sung to just the same air the song we call "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The other two dolls were more remarkable for their costumes than anything else, though they, too, could speak.

"The costume made for this doll was the dress worn by the peasant women of Alsace and Lorraine.

Wise statesmen at once decided that this would not do at all, since it might have a tendency to indicate that at the Russian court Alsace and Lorraine were regarded as rightfully still part of France.

Accordingly, after much consultation, it was decided that the little peasant doll should be deprived of her Alsatian costume and left only with those which had accompanied her of Normandy and Brittany.

"I don't see," said the erudite barber as he stropped his razor, "why our customers complain that men of our profession are exceedingly loquacious.

Of one thing I feel quite certain, that the reading of good literature is necessary to the growth of the mind and the strengthening of character, especially in young people.

"God be thanked for books. They are the voices of the distant and the dead and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages.

Weeds if they are pulled out of a lawn at a time when they are full of seed will receive a degree of care for the seeds which is almost touching.

In Europe the stranger makes the first call. In England and this country the resident makes the first call.

Some continentals do not consider it out of the way to use toothpicks at the table. They sometimes have little jeweled weapons to use in this way.

"I watched a French waiter's face the other day when she was talking to him, and I'll be blamed if he didn't look as if he had the toothache."

For a Simple Wedding. If the bride wears a street costume she should also wear a hat and coat to complete it.

At a wedding, light gray or tan is preferable to darker colors for a wedding suit.
