From Department of Health

"High up on every health officer's list of 'Disease Prevention Duties' at this time of the year, is the reminder, 'Typhoid Fever Immunization,' stated Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

"Through the protection of public water supplies from contamination, the pasturization of milk supplies, vaccination against the disease, improved sanitation of homes not served by protected water supplies, sanitary supervision of sources of food supplies and other protective measures, typhoid fever can be controlled.

"Here are the facts: As somebody has aptly said, 'Nobody catches typhoid -- he swallows it.' Typhoid is a filth-borne disease. It causes great suffering and many deaths. That is not all. It is like an endless chain. A certain number of the people who have the disease and recover from it, become 'carriers.' They continue to pass the typhoid-producing germs in the discharge from the bowels and kidneys. If the discharges are not disinfected before they are disposed of, the germs may spread into the soil and pollute it, or they may be carried into an unprotected water supply and contaminate it. A carrier may also spread typhoid when he handles or prepares food and is not careful to wash his hands.

"In vaccination against typhoid we have an effective means of protection which lasts for a certain period and then must be renewed. If you have not been protected against typhoid within the last two or three years, go to your doctor and have it done now. The disease is both preventable and unnecessary."

Practice Meet

In the practice meet held on the Robert Lee field Saturday afternoon Mr. Keeling and his track boys practically scooped up the whole thing. Of the thirteen events run off, the Robert Lee boys took twelve. The events and men winning were: 100 yard dash, Hickman; 220 yard dash, Hickman; 440 yard dash, Peays; 880 yard run, Milligan; 1 mile relay, Williams, Milligan, Peay, Hickman; high jump, Thedford; broad jump, Williams; shot put, Newton; discus, Newton; javelin, Newton; 120 yard high hurdles, Williams; 220 yard low hurdles, Newton; 1 mile run, Woods of Bronte.

The boys go to Barnhart Saturday to attend another big invitation meet and great things are expected of them considering the honors they won at Veribest.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Sauls are moving in Miss Ollie Green's house with Judge Wylie and his mother.

Prospects Good for Highway Project

According to information received by Judge Wylie, the prospects for a project on highway 208 from Robert Lee to the Tom Green county line, appear favorable. The WPA office has agreed to give a work order if the county can place forty men on the job. The forty men are available and a work order is expected within about ten days.

Tri-Mesa Bridge Club

The Tri-Mesa bridge club met Monday evening at the J. S. Craddock home with Miss Mary May Craddock as hostess. The St. Patrick's Day theme was carried out in tally and score cards and in refreshments. Shamrock sprigs were placed on the salad plates.

Those present were the hostess, Dorothy Clift, Pauline Roe, Christine Glenn, Charline Morrow, Lois Vowell, Virginia Griffith, Mrs. G. L. Taylor.

Mrs. Taylor won high score. The next regular meeting will be with Mrs. D. K. Glenn at Bronte.

The two divisions of the club, with Dorothy Clift and Christine Glenn as captains, are contesting for high score. The contest closes with the next meeting, after which the losing division will entertain the winners with a special party at which the men will be guests.

Some Good Typists

Recently The San Angelo Standard printed an item lauding a Bronte typing student with a speed of 38 words a minute. Too bad Robert Lee is barred, by the interscholastic league rules, from giving them a race in the county meet next week.

Mary Lou McCutchen writes 50 and 60 words a minute without error and Ruth Sparks and Geneva Scoggins are close behind. During the past five weeks Mary Lou has not had a single error in the work handed in, Ruth has one error and Geneva has made four.

Typing was added to the course of study only this year and since Robert Lee does not yet have credit in this work, the students cannot contest in the league.

Sunday Services

The Rev. L. U. Spellman will preach for us and will hold Quarterly Conference next Sunday morning. Everybody invited to all the services of this church.

I will preach at Edith at 3 p. m.

O. E. Moreland, Pastor, Methodist Church.

Sanco Camp Meeting

The Board of Directors of the Sanco Camp Meeting, now in its thirteenth year, have invited the Rev. W. O. Love, evangelist, and Walter Haith, singer, to do the preaching and lead the singing for the meeting July 16 to 26 this year.

Rev. Neill Hawkins, recently a student at Wheaton College, Illinois, and son of Rev. W. E. Hawkins, Jr., founder of the Sanco meeting, was invited as a special worker with young people, and Ulmer Bird, of Robert Lee, was placed in charge of the annual Young People's Bible and Christian Life Conference held in connection with the meeting each year.

A floor has been placed in the dining hall, which has been walled and enclosed with windows.

This annual camp is conducted by the farmers and stockmen of Coke county for ten days each summer, using the big tabernacle, two church buildings, kitchen, dining room, and camp grounds on the banks of Yellow Wolf creek, just above the big spring that has been a landmark since the early settlement of the country.

Tuesday and Friday of each encampment a free barbecue provided by the stockmen of the surrounding country and cooked by "Cedar Mountain" Johnson of Bronte is served at the ground, with pickles, bread, and ice-cream.

The board of directors of the Sanco Camp Meeting are: I. A. Bird, ranchman and registered Hereford breeder of Sanco, J. L. Carwile, farmer of Sanco, Green Preslar and Aubrey McKinley, stock-farmers of Sanco, J. J. S. Smith, ranchman of Edith, and W. H. Maxwell of Bronte. L. S. Bird of Sanco is secretary.

Notice to Subscribers

The Observer has a number of subscribers on the mailing list that their time has expired. We would be glad to carry you but the postoffice department require that all newspapers keep their mailing list paid up. That is the reason we put on our 50c rate each year so as you can renew at a saving. Your name on the margin of your paper shows your expiration date. So if you miss your paper after this month you will know the reason.

A number of farmers are planting corn this week. With the good season in the ground, and the fine weather that has prevailed the past few weeks, it should come up quickly and get off to a good start.

Misses Christine Glenn and Mary May Craddock are in Stephenville this week end attending the ex-students banquet and visit with Miss Louise Roe, who is a student of John Tarleton.

Probable Sale of Saul's Ranch

The estate of John Sauls, deceased, comprising 15,832 acres in Coke county and 582 in Williamson county was appraised in the Coke county court Monday, March 16, at the value of $167,400.

The court appointed J. S. Gardner of Robert Lee, as administrator of the estate in preparation for the sale of the land in Coke county. This property is ranch land lying along the Colorado river north west of Robert Lee. It is understood that R. H. Harris of San Angelo is the probable purchaser and that terms of the sale have been agreed upon.

The Town Where I Live-- It's My Town

Little Boy Blue

Author Unknown

Little boy blue, come blow your horn,
There's a government agent counting your corn,
Another one is lecturing the old red sow
On the number of pigs she have and how.
Pa's gone to town to find out what
He can do next month with the old meadow lot.
Ma's at the radio hearing 'em tell
How, under the new deal, there aint no hell.
Aunt Mamie's in Washington drawing big pay,
From the PDQ and the AAA.
The hired man quit when work didn't please,
And got a job trimming the government trees.
They'll be telling you soon, if you dont take care,
Where you can live and what you can wear;
What you can pay for your pants and your shoes,
So this is no time to be taking your snooze.
Little boy blue may be buried deep,
Under the red tape, but not asleep.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington. — President Roosevelt has very neatly called the bluff of his critics that he is wasting billions from the treasury and doing nothing to replace it. With much less ballyhoo than ordinarily precedes the presentation of tax legislation to congress, the President sent a message to the Capitol calling for new tax levies approximating a billion dollars in yield and in so doing dropped into the laps of the house and senate critics one of the hottest potatoes they have ever been called upon to handle. If one were to characterize the play in the language of baseball, since spring is here, I believe one could say that congress either must play ball or let the runners score.

Hot Potato for Congress

It was the greatest tax bill ever submitted in peace time. Whether the proposals the President has made are economically sound or whether the levies he thinks advisable will do the job he expects of them, of course, remains to be seen. But the fact cannot be dodged that Mr. Roosevelt has figuratively settled down around the ears of those who have constantly challenged the waste inherent in his vast reform and recovery program with a straight-from-the-shoulder demand upon congress that it vote new taxes.

It is a most interesting situation, politically. In nearly a score of years of Washington reporting experience, I cannot recall having seen so much squirming and wriggling as well as fretting and mumbling among representatives and senators. It is only natural that they do not wish to go into a campaign for re-election when there is the certainty that here, there and everywhere they will be confronted with heckling as to their vote for new taxes — assuming they will vote terrifically heavy levies as the President has suggested, and as present indications seem to assure. They have no heart for a tax increase at this time. But, to repeat, they are faced with a situation in which they must either vote for new and heavier taxes or else they will be forced to swallow many long winded speeches in condemnation of the President's course.

Whatever the merits of the Roosevelt proposals may be, there is no course open for his opponents except to support him in the general move to pay as you go. Unless they support these new tax levies, all of the howling and shouting and tumult about a reduction in the treasury deficit becomes just so much belly-wash.

Force Hands of Opponents

Opponents may differ with the President as to the details of his tax plan but the situation he has created for them compels that they stand with him. To do otherwise would be not only inconsistent but rather dumb.

Frank Kent, the able news commentator, summarized one phase of this situation the other day by saying: "It makes no difference that the situation which compels the imposition of new and heavy taxes is largely Mr. Roosevelt's fault. And it makes no difference that the move is forced by the exigencies of his campaign for re-election and is designed to spike the most damaging charge against him—that he has piled the debt mountain high and by terrific expenditures menaced the national solvency. All that and more may be perfectly true; but for the Republicans and his non-political critics, who have been assailing Mr. Roosevelt for months because of his failure to balance the budget to either obstruct or hold back now that the President urges congress to provide by taxation the money to pay for the vast gifts it has voted would be beyond the limit in political insincerity and hypocrisy."

On the other hand, it seems to be the consensus among Washington observers that Mr. Roosevelt ought not to be allowed to get away with one declaration which he made in submitting his tax proposals to congress. He said that the necessity for these new taxes arose from the Supreme court decision invalidating the processing taxes upon which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and its subsidies to agriculture was predicated. Of course, that may be true at the moment, but, as one frequently hears pointed out in Washington conversation, the President used the bounties to farmers and the AAA itself as one of his keystone policies. The fact that it was unconstitutional surely cannot be said to be the fault of the Supreme court and yet was the implication in the President's message.

Blames High Court

On the other hand, it seems to be the consensus among Washington observers that Mr. Roosevelt ought not to be allowed to get away with one declaration which he made in submitting his tax proposals to congress. He said that the necessity for these new taxes arose from the Supreme court decision invalidating the processing taxes upon which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and its subsidies to agriculture was predicated. Of course, that may be true at the moment, but, as one frequently hears pointed out in Washington conversation, the President used the bounties to farmers and the AAA itself as one of his keystone policies. The fact that it was unconstitutional surely cannot be said to be the fault of the Supreme court and yet was the implication in the President's message.

part of the taxes was due to congressional action in passing the bonus, which he vetoed and congress made operative over that veto. Again, I hear it questioned that congress is actually to blame. It is being said with great frequency that had Mr. Roosevelt made the fight against payment of the bonus this year that he did a year ago, it is almost inconceivable that congress would have passed it over his veto.

It is being said in this connection that if Mr. Roosevelt really had desired to kill the cash payment of the bonus, his stalwart leaders in the house and senate could hardly have afforded to refuse his request to vote against it. Instead of that situation, the record shows that such recognized spokesmen as Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate, Senator Harrison of Mississippi, Senator Byrnes of South Carolina and Senator Radcliffe of Maryland, a personal friend, all voted to pass the bonus over the President's veto. I may not be thoroughly acquainted with the maneuvers of politicians but I cannot believe these men would have turned their backs on the President in the bonus fight unless they entertained a feeling that he did not seriously object.

So it simmers down that the men who a year ago and two years ago voted the President almost limitless power and limitless funds to deal with an emergency are now compelled, if they intend ever to be statesmen, to stick by, vote the taxes and take it on the chin if that is to be the reaction from the voters. After all, it is merely the taxpayers who are the goats and as usual the taxpayers have not a great voice in their own defense. As to the President's tax proposals themselves, congress is asked to levy an unprecedented type of tax on undistributed corporation profits. New processing taxes to replace those outlawed by the Supreme court, being designed to be constitutional, are proposed and a tax which the President described as a "windfall" tax to recover a considerable part of the old processing taxes returned to taxpayers was suggested. He asked also that levies be laid on dividends which are now exempt from normal tax on individual incomes.

Taxpayers the Goat

The "windfall" tax is designed to offset the action of the Supreme court which ordered the return of the processing taxes as having been illegally collected. In other words, the administration is attempting to get by one method what the Supreme court said it could not get in the manner it employed.

The tax on undistributed profits of corporations is the center of all kinds of controversy already. Opponents of this levy maintain that if the government forces corporations to pay taxes on reserve funds they have laid aside for the proverbial rainy day, such as we have experienced for the last six years, none of them can stand the gaff of another depression. Mr. Roosevelt contended that his tax proposal in this direction, which would take away approximately one-third of such reserves, was designed only to prevent the piling up of cash by corporations instead of distribution of those funds to stockholders.

There will be much hauling and filling, many charges and counter-charges, much maneuvering and manipulation as congress mulls over the new tax bill. It will pass some kind of new taxes and citizens will begin early next year to take out of their pockets money to pay off the deficits of the reform and recovery program.

Some 75 years ago, the government organized mail service to inland points without railroad facilities, calling this new service the Star route. This service has been continuously in operation in scores of communities and it is continuing to operate exactly on the same basis as it did three-quarters of a century ago. So, this is a plea in behalf of those who carry the mail on the Star routes and for better service for Star route patrons.

There is a bill in congress now which proposes to provide better service for those carriers and for patrons of those routes. When one recalls that the boasted phrase of the Post Office department—"the mails must go through"—had its origin with the Star route carriers, it seems that the time is long since gone by to consider justice for these faithful servants.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Use of Dinitrophenol

"USE of the drug dinitrophenol should be adopted only as a 'last resort' for reducing weight, but in spite of the danger attending its use it is a valuable drug when properly administered."

The above quotation is from the group of physicians in San Francisco—Drs. Maurice L. Tainter, A. B. Stockton and W. C. Cutting—who have been experimenting with this drug for about three years.

However as dinitrophenol may be obtained in any drug store and the dosage is on the package, it is important that physicians study this drug and its effects so that if no good is obtained by its use at least no harm can come to their patients.

There are a number of points that must be remembered in the use of this drug. The size of the dose depends upon the size or weight of the individual, because an individual weighing 150 pounds may weigh more in proportion to his figure or physique than one weighing 300 pounds. The usual dosage, however, is prescribed in accordance with the weight, one weighing 150 pounds taking half the size of the dose of another weighing 300 pounds. This would be simple enough except that all overweighted do not react the same to the drug. Thus one gets a skin rash, another abdominal symptoms, another the symptoms of shock, all by the use of the "average" dose, while others take almost twice the average dose with no symptoms except that of heat and profuse sweating.

The fact that must always be remembered is that while fat is a liability or menace to health, nevertheless while it was being put on it was in a gradual manner, and the body was able to add the few ounces daily without trouble. Similarly if fat is to be removed you can understand that it should be removed in the same gradual manner and there will thus be no "shock" to the system which is the danger in using fat reducing drugs. As stated by Dr. L. F. Bishop, Fordham university, some months ago, "Fat may be removed by taking certain drugs, but only at the expense of strength and health, and an alarming weakness of the heart often results. The reduction of weight by drugs disturbs other organs in the body."

May Cause Shock.

Now while dinitrophenol does not put the extra work on the heart that is done by other drugs—thyroid extract for instance—nevertheless the severe sweating and the rapid loss of the fat, which fat may be supporting certain organs, so upsets the usual workings of these organs that shock or ill health may result.

Drs. Tainter, Stockton and Cutting state that so effective is the drug in burning up the tissues that the temperature of the body is raised and the drinking of much water to dissipate the heat is urged. The treatment was administered to 170 patients and the average loss of weight was 17 pounds in an average treatment period of 83 days. Thus if you divide the amount of the average weight loss (17) by the number of days (83) it shows that the average daily weight loss was between three and four ounces.

I venture to say that any physician by studying his patient's food needs, supervising a carefully selected reducing diet, and prescribing an increased amount of exercise—however slight—can obtain a weight reduction of three to four ounces daily without shock or danger to the patient.

Coronary Thrombosis

YOU are reading very often these days of individuals dying of coronary thrombosis.

This means that the coronary artery or blood vessel that carries the blood to the heart muscle so as to enable it to squeeze blood out through the big tube to all parts of the body has become blocked by a clot of blood called a thrombus. Naturally if blood cannot get through this vessel which is the size of a goose quill then the heart will have no strength with which to pump and the patient will die.

However all these patients do not die because when the blood finds that it cannot enter this blood vessel because the clot or thrombus blocks it then it "makes" its way around this vessel through smaller tubes or blood vessels and gives the heart muscle enough strength to keep pumping the blood.

Lesson for March 22

JESUS TEACHING TRUE VALUES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 12:13-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matthew 6:33. PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Good Gifts. JUNIOR TOPIC—When Is a Man Rich? INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is Most Worth Living For?

The common tendency of men is to be engrossed with the gifts of God instead of knowing him as the heavenly Father and enjoying his blessed fellowship. Man's supreme need is to know and enjoy God himself.

I. A Warning Against Covetousness (vv. 13-21).

1. The occasion (vv. 13-15). One of the company requested Jesus to be umpire in a disputed estate. Two brothers were in trouble over an inheritance. Christ refused to enter the sphere of the civil law and warned against the spirit of avarice. His mission was pre-eminently spiritual.

2. The warning enforced (vv. 16-22). This was done by the parable of the rich man. He showed most clearly that to be concerned with earthly riches while neglecting God is the highest folly. Concerning this man, note:

a. His increased goods (v. 16). His riches were rightly obtained, for the ground brought forth plentifully. A man may be rich because the Lord's blessing is upon him.

b. His perplexity (v. 17). His lands were producing more than his barns would hold. He did not want it to go to waste. No frugal man wants to see the fruits of his toil perish. If he had possessed right views of life and a sense of stewardship before God, he would have seen that his barns had enough for his personal needs, and would have distributed the surplus to the needy.

c. His fatal choice (vv. 18, 19). He chose to enlarge his barns, and give up his life to ease and luxury. It ought to be a delightful task for men whom God has made rich to devote their time and energy to the distribution of their possessions to benevolent objects.

d. The awful indictment (vv. 20, 21). God calls him a fool and this is no arbitrary judgment. Riches furnish neither contentment in life nor guarantee of the continuance of life. It is not only foolishness but madness to forget God while engaged in heaping up riches. Soon the man must die and his riches may get into the hands of unworthy men or even curse the lives of the children who inherit them.

II. The Certain Cure for Anxiety (vv. 22-34).

Having shown the folly of the rich man who gained gold and lost God, he now urged the disciples to trust God and dismiss all anxious care.

1. The argument (vv. 22, 23). This is summed up in one brief sentence: "The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment."

2. The illustrations (vv. 24-28). a. God's care for the fowls (vv. 24-26). The ravens do not sow nor reap, they have neither storehouses nor barns, yet they live, for God feeds them. If God does not forget the fowl, certainly he will do more for his children who have been created in his likeness and image and redeemed by the precious blood of his Son.

b. God's care for the flowers of the field (vv. 27, 28). If God is so careful of those flowers which appear but for a day, how much more will he clothe his children?

3. The exhortations (vv. 29-34). a. The getting of food and clothes should not be man's chief concern.

b. Seek the kingdom of God (v. 31). Those who make God's kingdom first shall have all of their needs supplied (Phil. 4:19).

c. Be not afraid (v. 32). God's good pleasure is upon his own and all good things he will give them.

d. Practice self-denial in order to give gifts to those in need (vv. 33, 34).

III. Be Ready for the Coming of the Lord (vv. 35-40).

Having warned the disciples against the acquisition of worldly goods, while forgetting God, and shown them the needlessness of anxiety for food and clothes, he shows them the blessedness of being in a state of readiness when the Lord shall come. Conviction as to the certainty of the Lord's coming is a sure cure for worldliness and anxious care.

This attitude of heart he made clear by two parables; that of the return of the Lord, and that of the thief. The Lord will be so pleased with those who are waiting for him that he will take delight in sitting at the banquet with them, and he will even serve them.

All Around the House

To make pistachio flavoring, mix together equal parts of vanilla and almond flavoring.

When making slip covers for furniture, ample room should be allowed for seams, easy slipping on and off, and for shrinkage in washing.

A tablespoonful of ammonia added to the water in which glass jars are washed, will make the glass very clear. Rinse well before using.

To remove iron rust from white washable materials, spread stained place over a vessel of actively boiling water and squeeze lemon juice on stain. After a few minutes, rinse the fabric and repeat the process.

A paste made of dry starch and water brushed over a grease spot and allowed to dry on will remove spot if not of too long standing.

Lamb fat makes an excellent shortening for gingerbread and cookies.

To protect a candle from drafts when carrying it about the house, place wax on bottom of glass and set candle into it.

As soon as your furnace fire is out and cellar thoroughly cleaned, whiten the walls with a cold water paint or whitewash.

Corroded tops of salt shakers may be used for some time if given a coat of one of various colored enamels.

A curtain roller or a rod run through both hems of a glass curtain will stretch curtains so they will not have to be ironed. Hang up until dry, then remove rods and press hems of curtains.

Cheesecloth bags filled with cornmeal and rubbed lightly over soiled wall paper will remove much of the winter's dust.

The Town Where I Live—It's My Town

The eyes of America are again turning toward other shores.

The trouble--and trouble of the utmost seriousness--is putting in its appearance in both Europe and Asia. The potential importance of what is happening in those continents, puts the long drawn out Italian-Ethiopian embroglio in the shade.

One dramatic recent event was the assassination of a number of high Japanese officials by war-seeking army officers. The Japanese censorship closed down tight, but reports that drifted out indicated that many regiments of soldiers were in a virtual state of revolt, that the military authorities on the run. Emperor Hirohito managed finally to bring order out of chaos, and elaborate preparations are being made to punish the assassins. However, the way the Japanese wind blows is clear--there is a strong minority in high places that believes war is inevitable, thinks that now is the time to dig the trenches and start firing.

Second event to make big news was Roy Howard's interview with Director Stalin of the U. S. S. R. Stalin told Mr. Howard unequivocally that Russia was prepared to fight Japan, or any other country for that matter, if a pacific settlement of difficulties could not be made. The director referred especially to Japan's encroachment on the theoretically independent Mongolian Republic, which is a highly important buffer state to Russia. Stalin said Russia was prepared to take up sword any time to insure Mongolian freedom. This is the first time that Russia has made its position clear--and, whether you like Stalin's views or not, he has the reputation of meaning exactly what he says, and of backing up his threats when the time is ripe. And Russia, under the Soviet, has become a first-class military power.

Third event to make banner heads was Germany's sudden military reoccupation of the Rhine, in violation of the Locarno Pact. This was not unexpected by the expert observers, who were sure Hitler would do it eventually, have been wondering for a year or two when he would act. Hitler justified the occupation by saying it was necessary to German equality, that no martial intentions were behind it. But Germany's neighbors, especially France, think otherwise.

French commentators are free to say that war with Germany is inevitable--some say next year, few put the date further off than 1938. Both England and France are being very polite to Russia these days, and there is talk of military agreements between these two to unite in case of trouble. In turn, hopes that England will help her in case worst

Claud Callan Says

We were terribly surprised yesterday when we went to borrow a hundred dollars from our banker. He is a member of our church and has heard us pray in public many times. On more than one occasion he has complimented us after hearing us, and every Sunday he calls us brother, so we thought sure he would let us have a hundred dollars without a word, but he immediately suggested we get someone else to sign the note with us. Yes, that is true, he didn't seem willing to take our religion as security. Well, we finally suggested Uncle Dan on the note. Uncle Dan never goes to church and he is terribly wicked. The only thing he has to recommend him is his worldly goods, but our banker agreed to lend us the money with Dan on the note. We got the hundred dollars, but we had to have a sinner's signature.

Claud Callan in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The approach of spring suggests gardens and home and lawn beautification. Few things add more to a home than a neat and well kept lawn with judicious plantings of shrubbery. In one middle-west town each year the clubs of the community back a city beautification program of some kind. This serves to center attention on the idea and results in a more general cooperation among the citizens of the community. Towns putting on such a program year after year develop a sense of civic pride that grows as time goes on. --Miles Messenger.

comes to worst in the Far East. Russia is the connecting link between Europe and Asia, must keep an eye both east and west as a result.

England has announced a n armament building program of unprecedented size--a program so vast and elastic that nothing more than futile guesses can be made as to its terrific eventual cost. Special attention will be given to building up her air force, and to making it equal to Germany's, which is now supposed to be the best in Europe.

On Germany's side, there is a rumor that Hitler and Mussolini are getting together in building a new alliance. Some experts, however, doubt if this is true.

There is the troubled and confused picture as it looks at present. War can break out next week or next year on any one of a half-dozen fronts. Italy, Germany and Japan are the worst danger spots--in those countries, there is apparently a large measure of public demand for another holocaust of the 1914 variety.

The "Good Old Times"

We hear much from older ones about the "good old times" of their youth. But were they good times? Certainly not if judged by present standards of living. Those of us who passed through reconstruction times in the South had little opportunity for education. Two or three months each year in a pay school in dead of winter was about all the teaching we received. And the amount of work we did around home after school hours was "plenty." Some of us walked three miles to school; now our grandchildren insist on riding in an automobile a short distance to school. We had no paid instructors to tell us how to play "shinny", "cat" or townball but we enjoyed the game as much as though we had high priced coaches. Nor did we have cafeterias to furnish us hot meals at noon. We carried our own lunches; which often consisted of corn pone and a bottle of molasses. We had no free school books, and sometimes one Davies' arithmetic was used by a half dozen pupils. A slate (we had no tablets) might be passed around for half the school to "do sums on". Yet, somehow we acquired the fundamentals of an education; and some of us, more desirous to learn than others; completed our education by reading good books. Furthermore, those "good old times" produced a pretty good brand of civilization, even if some of the grandchildren are ashamed of granddad and grandma. There were sacrifices and privations, but maybe such things really brought the "good old times", for they built up a feeling of independence and self-reliance that has been a great asset to our Southland. --Homer Price, Marshall, Texas.

"Madam," said the policeman kindly to the little old lady who persisted in crossing the street, anywhere but at the corner, "you are jay walking again."
"No such thing," she snapped. "It's rheumatism!"

CENTENNIAL NOTES

Texans, celebrating 100 years of independence this year with the Centennial, may boast that the Lone Star State comprises one-twelfth of the area of the entire United States. Texas is larger by 83,000 square miles than France. Russia is the only European country with an area larger than Texas.

The Texas pecan crop exceeds one million dollars in value annually. The pecan will be featured in many Centennial year fairs and expositions.

The Texas capitol at Austin, attraction for many Centennial year visitors, was built for the state in exchange for 3,000,000 acres of public land which were converted into the XIT ranch, at one time the largest ranch in the world.

The world famous King ranch, with headquarters at Kingsville, one of the Centennial Celebration cities, is larger than the State of Delaware. The Santa Gertrudis ranch house on the ranch is called the finest "finest house" in the world.

Visitors to Texas during the 1936 Centennial celebrations will be exempt for a period of 90 days from the state's new laws, providing that motor car drivers must be licensed.

Two Juicy Pies

Pineapple Chiffon Pie: Beat four egg yolks slightly, add one-third cup sugar, three-fourths cup canned pineapple juice, two tablespoons lemon juice and one teaspoon grated lemon rind. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Cool. Beat four egg whites stiff, add one-third cup sugar and fold into first mixture. Line pie plate with pastry and pre-bake five minutes in a hot oven. Fill with mixture, reduce heat to 350 degrees, and continue baking for twenty minutes or until the mixture is set and a delicate brown. Cool. Makes one large pie.

Pineapple Apple Meringue Pie: Combine two cups canned pineapple juice, one cup sugar and a two-inch stick cinnamon, and boil two or three minutes. Pare, core and cut four greening apples in eighths, add to syrup and cook gently until tender but not broken. Remove carefully to a plate. Smooth together two tablespoons flour and two tablespoons water, add the hot syrup and continue cooking for a few minutes longer or until thick and clear. Cool. Lay apples evenly over bottom of a baked pie shell, and pour over the thickened syrup. Cover with meringue made with three egg whites and six tablespoons sugar. Bake at 300 degrees for fifteen minutes or until a delicate brown. Makes one large pie.

PINEAPPLE JUICE

In Modern Menus

THE best thing to do with pineapple juice is to drink it. Everyone is agreed on that. But did you know that it can be used in making all sorts of dishes, from soups to pies, and that the results are most delicious? If you doubt it, just try the following recipes. The first two are for soups and the second two for pies, just to prove our contention. We know that if you try the first, you'll try all the rest.

Orange and Pineapple Bouillon: Mix three tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon arrowroot. Add one cup water, stirring until smooth. Cook until clear and transparent; then cool. Add two cups orange juice, one-fourth cup lemon juice and the contents of a No. 2 can pineapple juice, chill thoroughly and serve in glass cups or tall slender glasses. Serves eight.

Chilled Fruit Soup: Soften four teaspoons gelatin in four tablespoons cold water, and dissolve with one-third cup sugar in one cup canned pineapple juice heated to boiling. Add another cup of pineapple juice and one and a half cups orange juice. Chill, and, as it becomes thick, beat with egg beater occasionally to keep broken up. Add the pulp of two oranges, cut in small pieces, together with any juice from them. Let stand a short time longer, and beat again just before serving. Serve either in scooped out orange shells or in tall glass sherbet glasses. Serves eight.

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

"We further agree that we will refund such part of the purchase price of the car or truck as has been paid by the purchaser, including any used car or truck applied as part payment or, at our option, the allowance price thereof in cash, thereby canceling the sale if the purchaser so requests; provided that this request is made by the purchaser at or before o'clock on, 1936, and the car or truck is then returned to us in the same condition as when delivered."

Hitler Rearms Rhineland; Other Nations Protest

EUROPE'S dogs of war were growling ominously and tugging at their chains, but those chains, being forged in England, seemed likely to stand the strain.

Adolf Hitler

Reichsfuehrer Hitler brought on the new crisis by his abrupt and dramatic action in denouncing the Locarno treaty and remilitarizing the Rhineland. He first informed the ambassadors of the countries signatory to the pact as to what he intended, and then delivered a ringing speech in the hastily summoned reichstag, eloquently defending his action.

At the same time Hitler was sending into the formerly demilitarized strip along the Rhine some 25,000 troops of all arms. This he declared was a "symbolic" army, and in his public utterances he asserted that Germany was not thus making a warlike move and did not desire war, but was determined to defend herself. He upheld his unilateral abrogation of the Locarno treaty on the ground that France had already violated it by making a mutual assistance agreement with Russia, which pact is pending in the French senate. To show his desire for peace, he offered a plan which includes: A demilitarized strip of German, French and Belgian land; a 25-year non-aggression treaty among Germany, France and Belgium, with Great Britain and Italy as guarantors; inclusion of the Netherlands in the system of pacts; and air pact with the western powers; a non-aggression pact with Germany's eastern neighbors, including Lithuania; and return of Germany to the League of Nations after her equality is established and her sovereignty restored.

Reaction in the capitals of Europe was quick and in some cases almost violent. Premier Albert Sarraut of France appealed to the League of Nations, asking that sanctions against Germany be applied. He also called a meeting of the signatories to the Locarno pact. In a radio address he warned Hitler that France would not stand for his action, and asserted that the reichsfuehrer's new plan was not at all acceptable. Meanwhile there was intense military activity along the eastern frontier, and within a few hours the Maginot line, that wonderful system of border fortifications built since the World war, was completely manned.

Italy's position in this squabble was interesting. Called on by France to support the protest against Germany, Mussolini took full advantage of the situation to get all he could for his own cause. He promised to stand by France and uphold the Locarno pact if the league would slacken the sanctions that were imposed on Italy as a result of her Ethiopian adventure. Poland gave assurance that she would carry out faithfully her obligations under the Franco-Polish accord; and the nations of the little entente not only promised support but warned France that if she did not bring Germany to time they might be forced to abandon their alliance with France.

Now it devolved on Great Britain, real arbiter of peace or war, to define her stand. For France demanded full support in return for the assurances she had given when trouble impended in the Mediterranean. The British statesmen refused to get excited over the affair and it was left to Capt. Anthony Eden, youthful foreign secretary, to set forth his government's position. After consultation with Prime Minister Baldwin and others of the cabinet, Eden appeared before the house of commons and declared that any attack on France or Belgium in violation of the Locarno treaty would force Great Britain to go to their assistance. He added, however, that he was thankful to say there was no reason to suppose "the present German action implies a threat of hostilities."

Eden said he had already protested to Ambassador Von Hoesch against the military re-occupation of the Rhineland, telling him the effect on British public opinion would be deplorable. "The abrogation of the Locarno pact and the occupation of the demilitarized zone," declared Eden, "have profoundly shaken confidence in any engagement in which Germany may in the future enter. It strikes a severe blow at the principle of the sanctity of treaties which underlies the whole structure of international relations."

Eden indicated Great Britain was willing to consider Reichsfuehrer Hitler's proposals for new peace covenants.

Senators in Washington who expressed any opinion were unanimous in saying that the United States must be kept out of any European war, regardless of developments.

Power Plans of TVA Blocked by Court

PLANS to furnish TVA power to the city of Knoxville, Tenn., under a project to be financed with PWA funds were blocked by a temporary restraining order issued by the District of Columbia Supreme court.

The order was granted on the petition of the Tennessee Public Service company which contended its $4,000,000 investment in Knoxville would be rendered practically worthless, if the government brought cheaper power into the city.

Also in the District Supreme court, 66 producers of soft coal attacked the Guffey coal control act as unconstitutional in its entirety on the ground that it invades the rights of the states and deprives producers of their property without due process of law.

Seizure of Telegrams to Be Investigated

THE senate adopted a resolution introduced by Senator Borah requiring the federal communications commission to make a full report on its "alleged seizures" of private telegrams for Senator Black's committee on lobbying.

Senator Steiwer of Oregon attacked the doings and methods of the Black committee, contending the rights of citizens were being infringed. Mr. Black made a heated defense.

Move Toward Peace in Italo-Ethiopian War

THROUGH its committee of thirteen the League of Nations appealed to Benito Mussolini and Emperor Haile Selassie to consent to immediate negotiations for an end to hostilities and a definite re-establishment of Italo-Ethiopian peace.

Giuseppe Motta

Though consideration of the proposal by his cabinet council was delayed a few days, Mussolini accepted the plan in principle as a basis for conference. It was made plain that Italy would not take the initiative and would retain occupied territory.

Haile Selassie accepted the proposal without reservation. In recent days his armies in the northern sector have been routed in big battles and have lost many thousands of men, and the Italians have penetrated far toward the interior of the country; and in the South the invaders were preparing for a rapid advance.

Back of the league's appeal was the standing threat of extension of sanctions to include an embargo on oil. This suddenly brought about a situation rather disconcerting for the league. Dr. Giuseppe Motta, Swiss foreign minister, gave a warning that if the oil embargo was applied his country might feel it necessary to leave the league in order to preserve its neutrality if the consequent threatened war in Europe resulted.

Koki Hirota Forms New Cabinet for Japan

KOKI HIROTA, former foreign minister, formed a new ministry for Japan and submitted the names to the emperor. He, besides being premier, takes the foreign minister's portfolio. Lieut. Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi is put in as minister of war and Admiral Osami Nagano as minister of navy. Military leaders insisted that Hirota "show a proper recognition of the gravity of the times and the necessity for renovation of Japanese foreign policy," and to this demand he yielded somewhat.

Koki Hirota

Hirota issued a statement saying that "the present empire situation requires independent and positive readjustment of our foreign relations in order to liquidate this emergency."

Hachiro Arita, new Japanese ambassador to China, told the press in Shanghai that "it is fundamental that China recognizes Manchukuo and that the other North China questions should be settled on the spot."

Maybe Peace, After All Building in a Big Way A Level-Headed King One Strike Method

Arthur Brisbane

The real war news from Europe—it sounds like peace news—is that England has refused France's request for immediate assistance in forcing Germany's armies from the Rhineland. England even hints that France may be partly to blame.

France appeals to all members of the League of Nations "in a fight for peace." But, with England holding back, other signers of the Locarno pact are not inclined, in the language of the day, to "stick their necks out."

The United States is doing and spending in a big way. The Public Works administration says more than $1,000,000,000 worth of projects have been completed, with $2,200,000,000 of other work still under construction. Twelve hundred millions have been spent for materials, all involving labor; $630,000,000 for wage payrolls, by PWA. Organized labor presents a building program of $500,000,000 to occupy the idle building trades.

If money holds out, and the inflation bonds keep their value, this will be remembered as the building age.

A level-headed young man is the new English king. After seeing the new giant Cunarder named for his mother, walking seven miles up and down in it, he visited the slums of Glasgow, called the worst and "reddest" in England. Some ultra "left wing" city councilors refused to be presented to him. "That's perfectly all right," said the king. "Tell them I'll come and have tea with them instead." This he did. Two thousand ship workers cheered and called him "Good Old Teddy."

The king, who visited individual tenements, knocking at the doors, patting babies on the head, keeps up with the times. No English king did that before.

There are different ways of handling strikes, depending on public officials. At Akron, Ohio, a strike of milk drivers disturbs consuming families and producing farmers.

Herman E. Werner, public prosecutor, says coldly: "Anyone who interferes with milk deliveries will face prison, and the order will be 'Shoot to kill!'"

Akron has 16,000 men out of work; too many, at one time, for that sized place, and the city is tired of it.

How many millions would be killed, gassed, bombed, ripped to pieces by shrapnel and machine-gun fire before Hitler or the nation back of him could be persuaded that he is not a reincarnation of Frederick the Great, or Napoleon?

This time a murderous war would be deliberate. No grand duke heir to an imperial throne has been murdered to supply the spark.

Japan is the question mark in the war situation, but wise Japan would not deliberately antagonize all her customers and friends in western Europe by striking at Russia, in a war interesting to all of them.

It is probable that Japan this time, as in the last war, would send "observers," thoughtful and silent, to watch the white races cutting each others' throats.

Mrs. Akeley, who used to help her husband hunt lions and gorillas before he died, has been to Africa on her own account and reports that in south East Africa natives cling to their old ways and methods; nothing will change them.

The chief who is sick wants a witch doctor to come, howl, dance and tell him that he has been bewitched into swallowing a small crocodile, which is biting his insides.

Next summer, Chicago entomologists will watch 50,000,000 mosquitoes, after they have been dyed red, green, yellow, blue and brown, and learn how far mosquitoes can fly.

The treasury finds that in the first eight months of this fiscal year it has accumulated a deficit of $2,410,000,000. The country took in $2,348,000,000 and spent $4,758,000,000. In prosperous times, the country's total income is $90,000,000,000; but when will those "times" come back?

Tod West was in a stupor, half asleep, and half the befuddlement induced by raw whisky. He rolled over and cursed thickly. He coughed and struggled up to one elbow, staring about in the darkness. He coughed again; then the instinctive alarm in human beings for natural elements out of control shocked him into a state bordering full consciousness.

His feet hit the floor. He flung the door wide open and made for the stairway. He could not breathe, could not see. He turned about and ran for his room again, choking and gasping. He fumbled at the catch of his window, threw up the sash and his great voice roared into the black night.

"Fire!" he yelled. "Fire!" And again: "Fire! Help! Fire!"

He threw a foot to the wet roof and scrambled out, slipped, rolled over, threw his arms wide and brought himself to a sliding stop almost at the eaves.

"Fire!" he yelled again. "Hi, you! Turn out! Fire!"

Kerry Young shrank close against the chimney.

His plan had worked more promptly than he had dared hope for.

A voice came out of the night: "Where? What's a-fire?"

A light showed in the next house. A door slammed.

"Fire!" came a shout from down the street.

The town was turning out, while Tod West was making his way down the birches that had given Kerry easy access to the roof.

Footsteps sounded below Young; voices were raised. Leaning over the edge of the roof, cupping a hand over his mouth to make his location more difficult to determine should any be curious, he yelled:

"Get the furniture, boys! Get Tod's stuff out!"

He whipped his coat from the line, and put it on, running along the ridge toward the break of the dormer.

"Get Tod's goods out!" he heard someone yell. Feet drummed on the wide porch, he heard a heavy object drawn across the floor below.

In a second he was inside the window from which West had made his exit. He found the chair, found the holster with its burden. He slipped pistol and holster into his pocket, threw the chair through the window to the roof, followed it with the small table, and scrambled out himself.

The gathering crowd was in front. "Smoke's so damn thick can't locate it!" someone complained loudly.

"Careful of that clock!" another cried. "Take it into my house!"

Kerry slid down the birches, slipped into the timber which grew close to the rear of the house. Then, circling to the street, careful not to reveal himself in the lights which came from other houses or the lanterns carried by a half dozen men, he watched.

Furniture was already scattered about the dooryard. Two men were on the roof, shouting puzzled questions to one another.

"Hell!" someone said. "There ain't no fire, boys! It's that damn chimney!"

Smoke was clearing from the interior. Tod West, garbed in his underwear, stood confused and crestfallen in the center of the group, his hair in disarray. He had a ludicrous appearance. Moments before he had been in panic, had turned out the town . . . and all for nothing!

Under cover of the excitement Kerry Young, the pistol in his pocket, made for the trestle, running when he safely could to put distance between himself and the crowd back yonder. He wanted to be away where he could laugh himself sore! The most powerful man in the community . . . smoked out, in his underwear!

Nan Downer, so Kerry Young discovered the next forenoon, was the most businesslike young woman he had ever encountered.

He sat on a stool before the drafting-board, translating into line and colors field notes that had been given him.

And while Kerry was thus employed, Nan talked business with two fishermen. With maps spread before her and detailed information at command, the girl made such a sales-talk as Kerry had never before heard. She pictured the selective logging operations which, under her plan, would continue indefinitely all over the property; pointed out how streams always would have their watersheds cloaked under such a scheme, how deer and grouse and all wild things would forever find food and shelter in a forest so administered.

She had figures in her head and argument in her wit; and behind all this, she had conviction: The men—men of affairs, surely—listened intently, and when they had asked their last question, cleared up the final detail of the proposal, one said:

"I rather think, Miss Downer, that we can deal. Of course, it depends on how the rest of our crowd reacts. But you've got us so well steamed up that I wouldn't be surprised if we'd be back here with money in a few days and ask you to draw the papers!"

That was encouraging, surely, but when they left she witted suddenly and sat down at her desk as if weak.

Young, watching her, said, after a moment:

"What's wrong?"

"Nothing," she answered. "Everything!" She faced him, her eyes dark with trouble. "I think they're sold; I think at least two more groups are ready to deal. But under the terms of my contract with the Northern Wood Products company—which is Tod West—I can't deliver the title we must deliver until another principal payment is made. He's . . . he's sort of got me in a corner!"

"That's tough!" Young said and glanced at his coat, hanging from its hook.

In the pocket was Tod West's pistol. Would the findings of ballistic experts, relating to that pistol and the ball which took her father's life, be a help to this girl? He shrugged.

That evening Young borrowed a car from Holt Stuart.

"I'd like to run in to Shoestring for a bit," he said.

"All right; take my car," the other responded, but without much graciousness and as Kerry walked away Stuart watched him, frowning a little. Then, with a sigh, he turned toward Nan's office.

"How'd Young get along?" he asked.

"He's like lightning, Holt! See all that he did today!"

The other followed to the board and nodded.

"Fast, all right; good job, too."

"But . . . you don't like him, do you?"

He did not reply at once. Then he burst out explosively:

"I've got nothing against Kerry Young. It's . . . it's just the idea, Nan, of having him in here with you all day, after the way you looked at him the other night! And me . . . I've been so crazy about you ever since—"

Her hand stole over his mouth, cutting off the words.

"You should be ashamed!" she cried.

"Holt Stuart, you act like a child! Jealous of a stranger when—"

"Oh, Holt, don't you see? Don't you see that I've no time to think of anything else but the job?" Nan said in a deprecatory manner.

"Still, you're blushing! I've got a lot of things to talk over now, but I'm going to cool off first!"

He stamped out and Nan laughed reprovingly at his boyishness.

The road from West's Landing to Shoestring was only a sand trail through choppings and standing timber; where it traversed swamps, corduroy had been laid. Young's eyes were fixed ahead, on the alert for spring-breaking chuck-holes and stumps. So he did not watch behind, did not observe the ancient flivver with a tattered top which kept pace with him.

Ezra Adams was in his shabby office behind the small waiting-room when Young walked in.

"Kerry!" the old man whispered.

"What brings you here? And so soon?"

He shoved his spectacles up and peered anxiously into the younger man's face.

"Yeah. Soon, sure enough. But we can't begin soon enough in this case, can we?"

He reached into an inner pocket and produced pistol and holster.

"What the dickens 've you got here?"

Young looked at the door behind them. He turned and closed it before he made reply.

"That, Coroner Adams, is perhaps the gun that killed Cash Downer."

"No! You don't say!"

He sat down and motioned the physician to another chair.

"You see, a lot happened yesterday."

He went on then, relating the pertinent events which had transpired since Ezra had left him. He told the story of how he obtained possession of the gun and arranged matters so that it would be natural for West to believe it had been lost or mislaid or appropriated by some of his townsmen.

"Now, even if we can hook up bullet and gun, it will prove nothing. West could swear he found the gat or bought it from a deer-hunter after the shooting; could get away with almost any story of how he came to have it."

"Hinkle's story looks bad for West. But if the State police report that the gun which West has been packing fired the bullet which killed Cash, then we'll know that any effort we make to hang the thing on him won't be wasted. Does that make sense?"

Ezra nodded emphatically.

"I'd say it did . . . sound sense! Now,"—turning to his safe,—"here's the bullet I took out of poor old Cash's brain. I'll get these things right off to the police."

"Meantime, we've got to lay low and wait and watch. What other plan have you?"

Young frowned and scratched his temple.

"None. Finding the murderer is one thing; finding the cash is another. If it's only just commenced to come into circulation, we may expect more of it. If West has it, he's too smart to keep it around his place. I'd say, offhand, he's the sort that would cache it in the bush somewhere. The important thing, as I see it, is to try to get a line on his hiding-place for the money before he suspects us of being busy on the Downer matter at all."

"And the situation's getting awfully tight. Nan's got a chance, it seems, to commence selling big tracts of stuff with logging rights, under the prescribed plan, reserved. She can't give title until she's negotiated another payment on the contract with West. It looks to me as though he had waited for her to do the work and now's going to step in and skim the cream."

"Young, we've got no time to lose. . . . Who'd have thought"—Ezra exclaimed, rising and as he stood up letting his voice rise as well—"who'd have thought that we'd ever get enough in the way of suspicion to start diggin' into the Downer case again? Young, I sure am glad you came down the Mad Woman day before yesterday!"

And on that, Frank Bluejay, who had been standing in the waiting-room, one ear against the panel of that closed door, made his way on moccasined feet to the entry, and disappeared in the darkness.

Later that night Tod West had his report from the 'breed.

"I couldn't hear no-ting on'till the las'," he said. "The Doc he said then they was startin' diggin' up the Downer case again."

"Is that all?" West put the question sharply.

"All I could hear. They made a lot of talk before, but they said it so low."

"Well, that means nothing, then." But his voice shook and in the dusk he could see the other look at him intently.

"You keep after this Young, Frank. I want to know everything he does . . . everything, understand!"

Bluejay made no response for a moment. Then he muttered:

"I don't like that man, Tod. He's one damn fool. He's strong as hell. He ain't scared of no-ting."

"And he's got you scared?"

"Naw, he ain't got me scared!"—boastfully. "Maybe so he'll get himself into trouble with me yet, eh?"

"Yes, maybe," growled West. "But you watch him; you're on the pay-roll to watch him, remember."

The 'breed walked away and West turned within. Alone there, he wiped the clammy sweat from his face and stood motionless a long time. He did not like the word that Frank Bluejay had brought back from town, nor had he liked the way the 'breed looked at him when his voice shook.

He turned to the cupboard and took down a fresh bottle of whisky; then, after a moment of indecision, put it back resolutely.

"Not too much of that," he growled, and began to pace the floor, calling on all his resources for clear thought and careful poise.

This Young was evidently bent on remaining in the country. But why was he running to Ezra? And what did he know about the Downer case? A persistent, arrogant devil! He was the one man West could recall who had clashed with Frank Bluejay and not shown at least some hesitation. He was the only man he knew who had put fear into the 'breed's heart. . . .

At that he paused, squeezing his lower lip thoughtfully.

Bluejay, afraid of Young; Bluejay, knocked off the trestle by Young; Bluejay, savage and vindictive; Bluejay who, could he be certain of escaping detection, would sooner kill than not. . . . West stood still for a long while. "Perhaps," he muttered to himself, "perhaps!" And later: "Sure! . . . By God, I'd bet on it!"

He turned to the doorway, staring out into the star-hung night. Insects sang and the river murmured. Somewhere a radio blared. Up-stream, he could see the lights of Downer's headquarters. After he had held his eyes there for a time he turned with a sort of moan and walked with determination to where his whisky waited.

CHAPTER IX

For a week Kerry Young made maps, sitting in the office with Nan Downer for hours each day.

Sometimes long intervals would pass without a word being exchanged. Again, she would go to him abruptly with some question and her manner would betray her profound respect for his judgment. He had said that he could do many things in and about the woods; she learned the truth of his statement. Intelligent as she was, well as she had been trained by her far-sighted father, flaws had developed in her procedure, errors in judgment had gone undetected.

Young did not force his opinions, did not offer advice. But when she brought matters to his attention in which he discovered flaws he pointed these out.

Daily he assumed stature and importance to her undertaking.

"You're right again!" she cried once.

"You're always right. It's you who should be running this job."

"Me, take root?" he laughed. "Me, settled down in one place?"

"Why not?" she challenged and, curiously, he asked that of himself.

Tip rose then from his place beneath the drawing-board and nuzzled Nan's knee, which made it unnecessary to pursue that question further.

"I must run down to the mill for a half hour," she said.

The dog watched her prepare to depart.

"Want to go, Tip?" Young asked. The dog wagged an affirmative. "All right, then; go along."

Nan stood in the doorway, watching. The retriever apparently could not believe this order to follow another. "Go on!" Kerry said. "Go with Nan!" And dogglishly dumfounded with Nan he went, close to other heels for the first time since puppyhood.

It became a little game between the three. Whenever Nan went out Tip gave evidence of wanting to go, but always he awaited Young's order before following. And once, when the girl had crossed to the Landing to send a telegram and was urgently wanted by telephone, Kerry scrawled a note, gave it to the dog and told him to find Nan. . . . He did, after much running here and there and sniffing at the ground, and it would have been difficult to determine which was the more pleased, girl or dog.

"You'll finish tomorrow," Nan said, looking over Kerry's shoulder. "Can I get you to make next a new cruise of the stuff northwest of Townline lake?"

"You can get me," he said with odd soberness, "to try to do about anything you want done."

The words gave him a strange giddy feeling.

"We'll go tomorrow morning, then," she replied, overlooking his inference.

With a canoe on a trailer behind her car, they drove to the end of the road which gave access to Townline lake. Then they set off on that body of water to spend the day making a swift reconnaissance of the country in which Young was to work.

A family of ducks swam before them, ruffling the placid surface. The mother's head was raised high, she uttered low quacks of warning and the brood clustered close about her. As the canoe drew closer, the old one took wing and the youngsters, doing their best, skittered along the water, half flying, half swimming, making a great to-do.

A little breeze arose and the lake, which had lain like a burnished plate of steel, was touched to life. Lobes of light blue appeared, turned to indigo, and ran together until the body of water lay like a great sapphire, flecked with emerald islands. An eagle soared majestically above and as they rounded a point a deer, having late breakfast in the shallows, lifted its head in quick alarm and loped noisily for cover.

"Water's cold," Young remarked, trailing a hand.

"Like ice! This lake is terribly deep in the channels. The Indians say it never gives up its dead, and Father said that was probably so."

Young's eyes held on Nan's competent shoulders, watching their rhythmic swing. Her voice came back to him talking of the job, but he caught only the music in it. Why, he told himself, the thing that had made of him a wanderer was gone! He had at last found an answer to his doubt of responsibility for ruining old Jack Snow. Knowing that, why wander farther? Why not take root . . . and here? Surely Nan Downer was the most lovely, the most . . .

"We'll land here," she was saying, breaking off this wild train of thought. "I can see the corner stake. Father had a survey made three years ago."

They landed. Nan produced a map, and spread it on a log.

"Here we are. Right here. This creek—Otter—is alive with trout, and beaver ponds make it splendid fly-fishing, which is what the sort of folks who might buy will want. There are bass and other fish galore in the lake. One of the best yarding areas for deer in the country runs right down into Section Twelve, here. There are some moose too, and plenty of grouse."

"This happens," she continued, "to be the northwestern corner of our holdings. The road we used today is the only one that comes close. There's no one at all in the country beyond. Tod West knows it like a book and I guess he's the only white man alive who does."

Tod West. The name struck temper within Young. Tod West, who had ruined one he loved in boyhood; who now sought to ruin one he perhaps was to love in maturity.

Little did Kerry reckon in that moment that Nan's idle remark connecting West and that vast lonely country beyond them would one day come back to him, would pound in his ears with the rush of fevered blood, that he would fight a fog of sickness and pain to remember it . . . to remember that none but Tod West knew those vast swamps and untracked uplands!

They went on. A covey of half-grown grouse fluttered out of the way, not particularly alarmed. A spotted fawn ran before them and a spruce hen stared stupidly from a low limb. Bear sign showed in the game trail and a wolf had passed that way last night. Off to the right sounded a sudden tremendous crashing which could only have been a moose, making away from man, his worst enemy.

Here was an old burning where lightning had started fire. Wild geese and fireweed abounded and Young stopped, watching bees work in the brilliant blossoms.

Tomato Once Scorned

Although some authorities place the origin of the tomato in the Second century, the history of this popular vegetable really begins with an English writer of the Sixteenth century, John Gerard, whose "Herbal" still stands the test of time, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Gerard was a surgeon, who was born at Nantwich, Cheshire, but he lived in Holborn, London, where he had a large garden. He knew the tomato as the "Pomum amaris," deriving the name, no doubt, from the Italian "Pomi del Mori," apples of the Moor. This became "Pommes d'amour" in France and "Love apples" in England. Tomatoes were eaten in Europe for at least a hundred years before Americans would let them come upon their tables.
