Why We Are for Roosevelt

(Excerpts from editorial in which the Scripps-Howard "string" of papers declared for the President)

Speaking generally, we are for Roosevelt for the same reason that we would have been for Jefferson or Jackson or Lincoln had we lived in their day. We are convinced that future historians, as the years bring the complete perspective, will record Roosevelt along with those.

We believe that in him the times providentially produced the man; that we have lived through an era far more dangerous than any of us fully realize; that our very form of government might have perished had we not been blessed with a leadership equipped with qualities of courage, vision, understanding, human sympathy and daring which must be present if a major crisis is to be survived.

Further, we believe that had we drawn in 1932 a Polk or a Hoover, a Buchanan or a Harding, our highly intricate economic system might have been completely smashed.

It is needed only to recall a few of the events--the banking paralysis, the food riots in the cities, the organized defiance of the courts in the agricultural regions, the use of the army against the veterans in the Nation's Capitol, the hunger and the desperation--to picture what might have happened had the ship of state then been turned over to a muscle-bound, tradition-minded and near-sighted pilot.

Thank God we didn't get one, but instead one who could keep his head when all about were losing theirs, who could remain calm-eyed while the panic reigned, who could be different, who would experiment, who could sense the full size of the peril and take such chances as were necessary to the rescue.

Lest it be thought that we are swept away with hero worship, let us record right now that we think this man's list of shortcomings high in ratio to the very size of his genius. That is true with the really great.

We have criticized him much and will much more, but what we are trying to deal with is the "net," the batting average. And this is higher, in our opinion, than that of any other public figure of our time.

When all the petty stuff which boils to the surface of any political campaign--when that is gone and forgotten, when 1940 shall have come and departed and a few decades have been superimposed, we predict that they'll be looking for a spot somewhere within view of the Potomac to build something grand to commemorate the name of the one who licked a depression that was worse than war.

Perhaps you think we are growing emotional. Maybe we are. We must admit that we are a bit fed up with the "Hate Roosevelt" chorus that has been sung in recent months by the very supermen that Roosevelt saved.

Huge Molar of a Prehistoric Beast Is Uncovered

From Sterling City News-Record

Last week we gave an account of a huge bone found by Fred McCabe on his ranch in Coke county. Last Sunday, Julius and Albert Bade brought to this office a fossil tooth which evidently belonged to the same kind of an animal to which belonged the huge bone found by Fred McCabe.

This great molar is in a fine state of preservation. It weighs 14 pounds and six ounces. The grinding surface of the tooth is from one inch to 4 1/2 inches wide and nine inches in length. The tapering root extended into the jaw to a depth of 10 inches. The grinding surface has 17 corrugations which shows that it belonged to a browsing animal whose food was shrubs and brush.

Evidently, the owner of this huge molar roamed this country ages ago--no telling how long. He was here during the Carboniferous Age when there was much rainfall, and foggy weather prevailed much of the time.

The climate was warm and there were great marshes in which grew giant ferns, palms and other vegetation. When his food failed through the change in climate, he perished from the earth and left only his bones to tell his life story.

P. T. A. Meeting

Regular school attendance of every child of school age in the district is the major project for this year as adopted by the Robert Lee P. T. A. in regular session Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Drue Scoggins, president of the local organization, suggested that room mothers might co-operate with the teachers in tracing the individual causes for nonattendance. Some general causes brought out in the meeting were, indifference on the part of the part of the parents, physical handicaps and lack of proper clothing.

A committee was appointed to solicit used clothing and a special project was suggested for cleaning and making over out-of-date garments. P. T. A. also proposes to render such aid as possible in cases of physical defect where parents are unable to pay for medical attention.

A fund was allowed for a gift to be presented to the grade having the largest representation of mothers at each regular meeting of the P. T. A. Mrs. A. E. Latham was authorized to make the purchase.

The organization voted to have a special booth at the carnival and to sell hot-dogs and hamburgers.

A number present paid dues bringing the paid membership to twenty-four.

Following the business session Mrs. J. Craddock gave a talk on Children and the Community.

Robert Lee Turns The Table Winning 12-0 Over Norton

Wingate plays here today. Lake View coming up.

A pass, Hickman to Hamilton, and a gain of 35 yards, was a feature play in the conference game at Norton Saturday when the Robert Lee Steers fought the Norton Eagles to a 12-0 victory. Especially good playing was executed by Hickman, Hamilton and Bean in the backfield, the Smith brothers in tackles and Gramling and Jordan in line work.

In 20 yard penetrations, Robert Lee made 4, Norton 1; first downs, Robert Lee 12, Norton 5; yardage in scrimmage, Robert Lee 210, Norton 103; passes completed, Robert Lee 2, Norton 8. So far, Robert Lee and Lake View are tied for the conference championship. There's lots of room for speculation about what's going to happen when Robert Lee meets Lake View.

The Steers meet Wingate on the home gridiron, Friday, today at 3:30.

Baptist Pastor of Blackwell to Preach Here Sunday

Rev. H. A. McHenry, pastor of the Blackwell Baptist church, will deliver a sermon to the Robert Lee congregation Sunday at the morning preaching hour.

Rev. McHenry is not an applicant for the pastorate here, he is not coming to preach a "trial sermon". He has accomplished big things in Blackwell and has been invited by some of the members here to come over and preach and render help and encouragement in his own way.

The Robert Lee church is deeply grateful to the Blackwell members for "loaning" their pastor for a day.

County Council

Twenty-four representatives from four P. T. A. units formed the Coke County Council which met in the Methodist church Saturday afternoon. Mrs. D. Hull of Bronte, president of the council presided over the meeting which was opened with the singing of The Battle Hymn of the Republic and a prayer by Mrs. Roy Brey of Green Mountain.

Mrs. Hull spoke briefly of the inspiration received at the district meeting in San Angelo and emphasized the importance of regular contact among the importance of regular contact among the several P. T. A. organizations and of the interchanging of ideas and plans.

Inspirational addresses were made by Mrs. Sam Powell of Green Mountain, first vice-president of the council; Mrs. B. H. Boykin, P. T. A. president of Green Mountain; Mrs. Drue Scoggins, president of Robert Lee A. T. A.; Mrs. Ed Cumbie, president of Bronte P. T. A.; County Judge Neil Wylie; D. K. Smith, superintendent of Silver Peak school, who also led the closing prayer.

Refreshment with a Halloween accent were served during the social hour which followed the regular meeting.

Mrs. Allen will observe practice hours with the other grand officers Monday, in preparation for the regular work.

Mrs. Opal Stewart Assessed Two Years In Prison

The jury in the case of Mrs. Opal Stewart, after deliberating twelve hours, found her guilty of murder of Ed Smith and assessed the penalty of two years confinement in the state penitentiary.

Judge Sutton read the verdict to the defendant in open court at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Stewart, though worn from the trial which began Monday morning, showed little emotion when the verdict was read.

Fred O. Green was foreman of the jury.

Willard Humphreys, charged with the murder without malice of Toy Whitaker was, in effect, acquitted in district court by Judge Sutton on Oct. 15 when the judge sustained a jeopardy plea pertaining to a previous charge of drunken driving in connection with the death of Whitaker. Humphrey's trial in spring term of court had resulted in a hung jury.

Bills of indictment returned by the grand jury, yet to come up in court are:

Hugh Coleman charged with the possession and sale of liquor. D. A. Richards charged with the sale of liquor.

Bill Brown and Walter D. (Pooch) Hensley charged with theft of a hog.

W. L. Hensley, charged with forgery.

Paint Creek P. T. A.

The Paint Creek Parent-Teachers association met last Monday at the school building. Mrs. Effie Page, president, presided at a special business meeting. Plans for the year's work were discussed and the association decided to sponsor a party at the school house on Halloween night.

Members of the committee elected are as follows:

Chairman of Membership, Mrs. Delmir Sheppard; Chairman of Finance, Mrs. Lindsey McDorman; Chairman of Program, Mrs. T. Shelton; Chairman of Hospitality, Mrs. Rabb.

Why Not You Report It

We can't expect to find out everything if somebody doesn't report it. In this case it was the doctors place to step up to a phone and report it. It would only take a minute of his time.

It was recently learned, to those who do not yet know, that Mr. and Mrs. Bud Jones has a new addition to their home, born about a month ago. A boy or a girl, we did not learn.

Also, born to Mr. and Mrs. Millard Meek, about two weeks ago, a--.

We would be very grateful to anyone who will only spare a minute to call 69 and tell us John got a toe mashed. When something fails to appear in the paper, we get the cussing, whether we are to blame or not.

Arthur Brisbane

The average age of our Supreme Court justices is seventy-one years. Twenty-six years ago Chief Justice Hughes took his seat on the Supreme Court bench. President Taft rendered public service by appointing him to succeed Justice Brewer.

He left the bench to run for President against Woodrow Wilson, and would doubtless have been elected had he not gone to California. Had he been elected he would have remained in the United States and probably would have saved the country ten thousand million dollars that Woodrow Wilson shoveled out in his ecstasy of self-approval.

Rioting in London's "Mile End Road," in which the faces of men and women were slashed with razor blades and one man was thrown through a shop window, etc., seems rather "un-English," to put it mildly. Fist fighting has been encouraged by distinguished Englishmen, including judges, on the ground that it is "better than using knives."

Germany honors its youngest grandfather, Herman Jahnke, farm laborer, thirty-six years old. Married at seventeen, his eldest daughter became a mother at seventeen.

If all you want is children, that record is satisfactory, although any mouse family could beat it by 25,000 per cent, and almost any microbe by a billion per cent.

If good children were desired, it would have been better for Mr. Jahnke to have his first child at 36, and his first grandchild at 70; at least that was Plato's opinion.

Justice uses science—the electric chair, the lethal chamber—to punish criminals. The criminal uses science to carry on his trade. An SCS signal, purporting to come from a yacht in distress, drew the coast guard away from the coast of Hawaii, making it convenient for smugglers of narcotics to bring in their cargo. Tear gas, comparatively modern, was used to empty a New York theater where there was labor trouble.

Japan, until recently convinced, mistakenly, that this country is her enemy, and for excellent reasons keeping close watch on Russia and her anti-Japanese Vladivostok air-base and submarine base, now turns suspicious attention on dear old John Bull.

Britain is supposed to have asked nine nations to protest against Japan's demands on China. That should not worry Japan too much. The same old John Bull got fifty-one nations to protest Mussolini's attack on Ethiopia; but, paying no attention, the able Italian went ahead swallowing Ethiopia; sending the little Haile Selassie to live in Switzerland.

In his villa at San Remo, the Duke of Borea D'Olmo celebrates his one hundred and sixth birthday in excellent health. He has been active in Italian court circles since 1841, before the beginning of the United States-Mexican war.

Mussolini tells 200 farmers and industrialists to prepare for a "decisive conflict" that will be necessary "to preserve order against anarchy."

Those that favor the "present civilization," he said, will have to preserve it. "We are at the dawn of a decisive conflict between the representatives of order and anarchy."

Dr. Irving Langmuir, brilliant Nobel prize winner, announced a "counterpart of life," produced chemically; interesting, probably not important. Until some professor can produce "some counterpart of life" able to think, manufacture telescopes, explore the universe and run for office, man's domination will not be threatened. A cigar store Indian is a "counterpart," but not an Indian.

Senator Borah Maintains Independent Attitude

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho, whose attitude in the Presidential campaign is a matter of great interest to all parties, has declared he would confine his attention to state matters; but then, being irked by some criticism from Republicans he went further and said he was "going after the Republican party." The veteran said he had been accused of not being regular.

Senator Borah

"Well, what is a regular?" he asked. "A regular is a man with no ideas, who waits for someone to tell him what to do. My idea of being regular is in doing what you believe to be right in the interests of the people you represent."

"Let this be understood—I'm telling all parties, Republican, Democratic, Union—I'm going to advocate the things I believe in whether they cross party lines or not."

Pessimism Prevails at Last League Session

PESIMISM and discontent marked the final session of the League of Nations assembly, the leaders admitting that little had been accomplished. Carlos Saavedra Lamas of Argentina, president of the assembly, even asked if he might not raise the question whether "civilization is on the verge of a final breakup."

The question of reforming the league covenant provoked a bitter controversy on whether nonmember states should be consulted. Russia was understood to be anxious particularly to bar German influence and achieved a minor triumph since no definite action to solicit nonmember co-operation was taken. A committee of twenty-eight was named to study reform proposals.

The assembly approved reports of its economic and disarmament committees. The economic report carried a British proposal to create a commission to study accessibility of raw materials. The United States and other nonmembers would be invited to participate. The report of the disarmament committee approved the reconvening of the world disarmament conference.

Disorders in Palestine Are Dropped by the Arabs

ARABS of Palestine, who had been on "strike" for 175 days in protest against unrestricted immigration of Jews, were persuaded by the British to call off the strike, which had been accompanied by great disorders and the killing of several hundred persons. The Arab high committee issued an appeal to Arabs throughout the country to return to work quietly; and this command was obeyed generally. Sir Arthur Wauchope, British high commissioner, was said to have informed the British government that it was now safe for the royal commission of investigation to begin its work of inquiring into the grievances of the Arabs.

Austria Private Armies Forced to Dissolve

KURT SCHUSCHNIGG, chancellor of Austria, is taking his place among the European dictators. In order to consolidate military power in his own hands, he decreed the dissolution of all private armies, this being aimed especially at the Fascist Heimwehr headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg. The prince directed his followers to obey the edict, and Major Fey, Starhemberg's rival for control of the Heimwehr, called on the elements recognizing his leadership to preserve order.

The chancellor's order also affected his own Catholic storm troops. All the private troops were ordered consolidated with the Austrian state militia. This would increase Austria's official armed forces to about 158,000 men. The dissolution decree met strong opposition within the cabinet, and was voted after three ministers had walked out.

Schuschnigg's task now is to actually disarm the private armies. If he succeeds in doing this, his complete control over Austria may be conceded. It is recalled that the Heimwehr was ordered to disarm in 1931, that the government seized many weapons, and that a year later some 40,000 Heimwehr men appeared fully armed and uniformed. Von Starhemberg may not be really squelched this time, either. It is a certainty that he has a powerful friend in Premier Mussolini of Italy.

Typhoon in Philippines Kills Many Persons

ONE of the worst typhoons in the history of the Philippines swept across Luzon island, killing scores of persons and destroying villages. At least 310 perished and the authorities feared the death list would be much larger for four hundred were reported missing. Eighty-two bodies were recovered from the city of Cabanatuan alone.

Waterway Money Allotted for Atlantic Coast

MEMBERS of the Atlantic Deep-sea Waterways association, assembling in Tireton, N. J., for the annual convention, were informed by President Roosevelt that funds totaling $24,000,000 have been allotted for waterway improvements along the Atlantic coast during 1937. In a letter to President J. Hampton Moore of the association, to be read to the convention, Mr. Roosevelt also said:

"This year has been noteworthy in witnessing the completion of the 1,435 mile inside route of the intra-coastal waterway from Trenton to Miami. Much credit for this accomplishment belongs to your association and it is to be congratulated therefor. Other waterway projects of permanent value to the nation sponsored by your organization have been completed or are progressing in a satisfactory manner."

John L. Lewis States Labor Peace Terms

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the A. F. of L., who had just been calling on President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., told the newspapermen that the prospects for peace between the warring factions in the federation were better and that those participating in the controversy were becoming "more temperate." However, that same evening John L. Lewis, the dynamic leader of the Committee for Industrial Organization, rather dashed the aforesaid prospects for peace. In Washington he laid down, as the only basis for restoration of peace in the ranks of organized labor, a program consisting of these two propositions:

1. Revocation by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor of the order suspending ten C. I. O. unions on charges of insurrection.
2. Isolation of certain mass production industries which would be organized strictly on Lewis' "one big union" theory.

Russia Angry Warns Fascist Nations

HELP given the Spanish insurgents by Fascist countries so enraged soviet Russia that she gave notice that, unless it ceased she would free herself from any obligations to the agreement for neutrality. The representatives of the 27 nations on the international committee of non-intervention in the Spanish war were about to meet in London, and Moscow's challenge caused a real sensation. Moiseyevich Kagan, soviet delegate on the committee, specifically named Portugal, Italy and Germany as the offenders and called for an investigation. It is believed that if Russia is not satisfied in this matter she will send airplanes and other war material to the Spanish government.

The committee refused to take any action on the Russian complaint, averring that the charges were not specific enough.

Spanish Fascists pushed their lines so closely around Madrid that they called on the government to surrender the capital immediately and thus save it from a destructive bombardment.

Marble Cake

½ cupful butter.
1 cupful sugar.
1¾ cupfuls cake flour.
½ teaspoonful salt.
1½ teaspoonfuls baking powder.
½ cupful milk.
1 tablespoonful maple sirup.
1 tablespoonful melted chocolate.
½ teaspoonful cinnamon.
¼ teaspoonful nutmeg.
¼ teaspoonful allspice.

Place butter in warm place where it will soften slightly, but must not melt. Cream sugar in butter gradually. Add the yolks of the eggs, which have been beaten. Sift flour and salt together several times and add alternately with the milk. Sift baking powder in a little of the flour, which is added last. Fold in egg whites, which have been beaten stiff.

Place one-third of the mixture in a separate bowl and add spices, sirup and melted chocolate to it. Drop a spoonful of each mixture alternately into cake pan. Bake in moderate oven.

This cake is excellent to serve if the meal seems a little rich. It is not heavy and is delicious without icing.

Household Questions

In washing painted woodwork use a pail of lukewarm water to which has been added about five tablespoons of kerosene oil. Wipe with a dry, clean cloth.

To polish a table that has become spoiled by hot dishes, apply a few drops of essence of peppermint with a clean cloth and rub briskly.

A teaspoonful vinegar beaten into boiled frosting when flavoring is added will keep it from being brittle or breaking when cut.

Never allow cold water to run into an aluminum pan while it is hot. If done repeatedly the rapid contraction of metal will cause pan to warp.

GUNLOCK RANCH

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the fourth of July. Jane Van Tassel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tassel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Doctor Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman. McCrossen and the young stranger tie in the various events. Denison then drops a cigarette carelessly. Racing down the track full tilt, he picks up the cigarette. The verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane Van Tassel is asked for her bracelet and throws it up on the track. Just as Denison rides to pick it up a yell from Barney Rebstock, McCrossen's henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Doctor Carpy. Back on Gunlock ranch, after two years in Chicago, because of her father's illness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tassel. She tells McCrossen who brought her home and he denounces Denison as a cattle thief. Later she asks Doctor Carpy why her father is unpopular and he tells her it is because of Van Tassel's ruthless and unscrupulous character. McCrossen tries to woo Jane, but is sharply rebuffed. Once again she loses her way in the hills and meets Denison. On impulse she gives him her bracelet for guiding her home. Their interest in each other grows, she reveals her identity to him. Jane is distressed to learn from Carpy that her father had wronged Denison. The Texas had worked at Gunlock as foreman and been promised a share in the profits. When he quit, Van Tassel reneged. In reprisal Denison has been running cattle off Gunlock ranch. Shamed and humiliated, Jane avoids Denison, but longs to see him. When at length they meet, he confesses his love. Forest fires sweep the area, endangering the ranches. Jane sends cowhands from Gunlock to aid Denison. When McCrossen refuses to help, she discharges him.

Half a dozen cowboys had edged up to listen to the controversy. Jane whirled around to them. "Boys," she said, speaking in lower but very determined tones, "take no more orders from Dave McCrossen. He's no longer foreman here."

Reeling off her words rapidly and firmly, Jane explained the situation to her growing circle of listeners. "Now I have discharged McCrossen," she said in conclusion, "and I want all of you boys who are loyal to me to ride with me over to the fire line on the Denison ranch and see what we can do to save his buildings. Those of you who will go, line up here with me."

One of the boys, Bull Page, stepped promptly to Jane's side. Before he reached it, four more were on their way. Barney Rebstock and a crony stood still. It meant that they sided with the foreman.

"Now, Bull," she added snappily, "hunt up as many of the other boys as you can find and let's get going."

Within a few minutes, with the ponies dancing and the men shouting, a party of ten headed south for the Denison ranch.

Not until they reached the last crest of the hills separating the two ranches and Jane looked over on the lowlands of the smaller ranch, did she catch her breath in sudden fear. In the distance she saw a formidable wall of white smoke billowing into the sky above the timber along the border of the reservation.

In the nearer distance lay Denison's buildings. Between the two points a second fire burned, curving like a great scimitar along the cut-over lands surrounding the ranch.

"Bull!" she called fearfully to her nearest cowboy. "What does it all mean—is there anything that can be saved?"

"Why, I can see where they've been back-firin'. Can't tell much about it till we get closer. Come on, boys! Push 'em over the hill. If this is too fast for you, miss," he yelled, "follow us!"

But nothing was too fast for Jane. The city girl was always on their heels.

With the ponies in a lather, the Gunlock crew pulled up short before the ranch-house corral, where a party of fire fighters just from town were starting for the front. Henry Sawdy, smoked and scorched, was guiding them out. Bill Pardaloe headed the town men. In the bunch were the evangelist preacher, Big Bill Hayes, alias Panama; the liveryman, McAlpin; Spotts; the bald-headed and profane barber; Selwood, the cattleman, with half a dozen of his men; Jim Laramie, from away up in the Crazy Woman country, with a bunch of cowboys.

Jane saw a man riding up from the creek, but it did not look to her like Bill Denison. Not until he drew near and lifted his hat hastily to her as he rode over to talk to Pardaloe, did she realize it was he.

As rapidly as possible he greeted the newcomers, told them where they were most needed, pointed and started them on their way, and turned to Jane.

The boys, including Jane's contingent, dashed off with much shouting and yelling. Conspicuous among them rode the evangelist preacher, Panama, his heavy, straight black hair dancing up and down under his sombrero, and with him rode his neophyte, the bald and profane Jake Spotts.

"Oh, Bill!" exclaimed Jane, as Denison rode up. "I'm so sorry."

"I hope I didn't stir things up over there, by sending that message. I shouldn't have done it, only—I promised," he said in a dry, cracked voice.

"Don't think about the small things, Bill. You should have sent long ago. I brought all the men I could."

"McCrossen refused to come?"

"He was kind of mean—so I came myself—I hope I'll do for a substitute."

His answering smile was joyful. "It was too good of you to come, Jane. But now I've got to ride right out again. Would you step into the cabin and rest up before you ride back?"

"Ride back? Yes, but who's going to cook for all these men? I'm going back to get Quong and bring him over in the chuck wagon and take possession here."

Noon passed before Jane got back to Denison's and installed herself with Quong in the kitchen.

One man, severely burned, came in from the front towards dark. Carpy could not be reached till morning.

Afterward He Sat Down Beside Jane on the Bench Outside the Door.

Jane bandaged the man's arms and fed him; Denison rode in late, smoked and scorched anew, but tireless.

"Bill," she asked, sitting down opposite him, "tell me honestly: are you holding it?"

"Jane, to tell the truth, I don't know. Sometimes I think we are—sometimes it looks bad. In a forest fire, every hour must tell its own story; that's about the size of it."

It was late when they walked out of doors together. The southern sky was angry red. "It'll be a hard day tomorrow, Bill," said Jane. "There's nothing more I can do here tonight. I'm going home. I'll be back by daylight in the morning. You go to bed. You must be dead."

"I'll ride over along with you, Jane."

"No, you will not."

"But, Jane, you're not going to deprive me of riding home with you?"

"Yes, I am."

"Oh, please!" He pleaded with her like a boy. "I've been counting on it all day."

"I thought you'd been fire-fighting all day."

"Fighting fire and thinking about you and saying, 'Tonight I'll ride home with Jane.' Oh, girl! If you knew what that means."

Bull Page stood by the ponies. Denison saddled his own, and Jane and her escort set out for Gunlock.

They did not ride fast. There was so much to talk over. Both were serious. Denison knew better than Jane how grave the danger was both to himself and to her. But he had his hour with the woman he loved, and for that hour what else in the world mattered?

"Oh, Bill," protested Jane, faintly, sick at heart with the happiness of listening to his words. "Don't! You mustn't say such things. I won't listen to you, Bill. I'm nothing but a girl, and you're making me a goddess or a fairy—stop such nonsense. Not one word more, Bill Denison. If you keep on, I'll break out crying. Here's the house, anyway. Good night. I'll be over in the morning at daylight. Think well of me, Bill. I always shall of you!"

Every available man was out on the front lines when Jane reached the threatened ranch after daybreak. Quong kept the little stove in the kitchen hot, and Jane, busy about the cabin and looking after the boy burned the day before, did not realize how fast the morning was going, until Carpy arrived from town to dress the lad's burns. He greeted Jane and, with her to help, went to work on his patient.

Afterward he sat down beside Jane on the bench outside the door.

"So," said he, "you're playing good Samaritan. How are you holding out over at Gunlock?"

"All right; the danger is all from this way. If we can hold the fire over here, it's not likely to bother us. Oh, doctor," exclaimed Jane, springing to her feet, "what does that mean?"

Riding out of the woods south of the ranch house, she saw a party of men slowly advancing. Doctor Carpy's eyes were more practiced. "Some one hurt," he said tersely. Jane was in a flutter. "Keep cool," admonished Carpy as he rose. "We'll soon know what it's all about."

Riding between two men, supporting him on his pony, a third man riding behind the trio, Carpy saw the injured man, hatless and coatless, and heard him suppress an occasional groan. Carpy walked forward to greet the party. "Well, boys," he asked, "who is it this time?"

Jim Laramie answered. "Why, doc, it's Jake Spotts. There's been a bad accident. Jake and Panama got cut off by the pass. Stayed too long. I'm glad you're here, doc; he's hurt pretty bad."

"No!" screamed Spotts, so blackened and burned as to be unrecognizable, and writhing in pain. "It ain't me, doc; it's Panama! Damn it—go back, boys, and get Panama. I tell you, go back!"

"Denison has gone to get him, doc," explained Laramie. "Keep quiet, Jake, you only make your leg worse. It's his leg, doc."

Carpy motioned. "Bring him into the cabin."

The unfortunate barber, eased, with many groans, off the pony, was laid on the dinner table, asking for water and half deliriously calling for Panama. Carpy examined Spotts. He found to his relief that the man was not seriously burned.

"It's his left leg," explained Carpy a little later to the group; "broke down near the ankle."

"Doc," moaned the hollow-eyed, lantern-jawed barber, "I'm all right. For God's sake get the boys to go back after Panama."

Carpy saw that nothing but a bluff would quiet the pain-racked man. He turned to the men standing by and winked. "Here, you fellows! Get right out and hunt for Panama. And don't show up here till you find him!" thundered Carpy.

Keeping up a rapid fire of talk, Carpy opened his bag, set out his needed appliances and his bottle of chloroform, gradually subdued the man, got him, with Jane's help, under the anesthetic, and working in his shirt sleeves and in the intense heat at a breathtaking speed, finished the operation, sat down, drew a cigar from his waistcoat pocket and lighted it.

"Jane," he said, "I suppose this is your first surgical case?"

"Yes, Doctor."

"You'd make a good nurse, girl."

"Doctor, what do you suppose he meant calling so for Panama?"

Carpy explained. "Today," he continued, "Panama was his partner on the line; the men work in pairs generally."

"I hope they'll find him all right."

"I hope," observed Carpy thoughtfully, "he'll be all right when they do find him."

"There come some of the boys. Denison is with them," Carpy said suddenly, pointing to the edge of the woods. "They're halting. They've got something slung across the back of a pony. I'll walk over."

CHAPTER VII

Dr. Carpy walked hurriedly to the edge of the woods where the men gathered closely around him.

"Best thing to do is to take off that old bunkhouse door, Bill," said Carpy, when he saw whom they were carrying. "We can lay him on that and carry him over here to the shed."

They had brought Panama out of the burned timber where Denison and Bull Page had found him. They had taken in a pony, bareback, to where he lay, slung the big fellow across it, and thus carried him through the woods.

Panama was lifted from the pony and laid on the door. A colored neckerchief was laid over his face, and with stumbling steps he was carried back of the bunkhouse. Two sawhorses had been set to support the door, and on it Panama lay at rest. His companions made ready to start back for the fire lines.

"Now, boys, watch out," said Denison gravely. "We can't afford any more mistakes like this. If Jake and Panama had listened to me they wouldn't have got cut off. Bull," he added, speaking to Page, "get up a pair of ponies, if you can find 'em, and hitch 'em to the light wagon. Carpy wants Panama taken right in town to the undertaker's."

The injured barber was coming to. He had been carried to the bunkhouse and was propped up on a bench outside the doorway. He looked at Carpy wistfully. "Tell me, Doc," he begged, "have they found Panama yet?"

I did what little I could do for him here. But I've not got what's needed here for treatment. Panama's got to go to town. They're hitching up the wagon."

Spotts started up, on fire. "Then I've got to see him before he goes. Don't let 'em start till I see him, Doc. Where is he?"

Carpy tried in vain to quiet his patient. He might as well have tried to stop a forest fire by talking to it. "Keep your leg quiet, Jake. You mustn't have any excitement tonight. I've done my best for you. Now, damn it, dry up! I tell you you can't see him."

A dreadful light dawned on the barber. His gaunt jaw dropped, his hollow eyes flamed. "Doc!" he cried out. "Panama's dead!"

The word rang in Carpy's ears for many a day. "Jake," he said brusquely, "I've tried to soften things for you—doesn't seem to be no use. They pulled him out of the woods after the fire passed a grove back of Gunlock Knob."

Shakespeare Cause of Controversy in Germany; Rothe Backs Own Translation

A violent controversy over Shakespeare has arisen in Germany, writes Dennis Sugart, in the London Listener. It was started by a certain Hans Rothe, who has been trying for many years to replace the "classic" and almost sacred Schlegel-Tieck translations by his own, which attempt to present Shakespeare in a modernized version.

The Schlegel-Tieck translations have been the most successful among the scores of Shakespeare translations of the last 150 years. Rothe claims that these romantic translations have now lost their popularity, and he has been trying for some ten years to put over his own version of Shakespeare, which, he maintains, is better adapted to the present-day mind, as well as to modern stage.

He attempts to present the genuine Shakespeare, freed from all the dross of inferior co-authors. His theory on this latter point is based largely on the so-called "sound-analysis" of Prof. Eduard Sievers, who has devised a method of analyzing the sound and has found that each writer's diction is just as unique as a fingerprint, thus rendering it possible to distinguish the styles of one writer from another.

Rothe is supported by the German producers, who to a large extent play his versions (although they have to pay royalties for them, while the old versions, of course, are free of charge). He is strongly opposed by philologists, academicians and a large number of critics who charge that his Germanized plays and his methods are unscientific.

VOTE!!!

The greatest possession of a free people is the ballot--the right to vote. It is a defender of our liberties and a weapon against injustice.

Yet that invaluable heritage is not prized by millions of otherwise good citizens. Proof of this statement can be found in undeniable statistics. In most elections, less than half of the persons who are entitled to vote do so. It is exceptional when an election brings to the voting booths more than fifty per cent of enfranchised citizens.

One result is that public officials are elected by minorities--the vote of the majority is silent. Another, and worse result, is a flagging of interest by the people in a thing which vitally affects us all--our government.

This year, there are great issues before us. No matter where we may stand, it is our duty as well as our privilege to mark an X opposite names of our choice on the ballot. Only by doing that, can we have popular government.

In Germany the right to vote has been virtually abrogated--at the last election citizens had a choice of endorsing Hitler or of leaving the ballot blank, there being no opponent. That is true of Italy, of Russia, of Greece, of a dozen other powers. And here in America, where we still have that right which preserves freedom, half of us don't trouble to exercise it.

So--vote on November 3. Vote for Roosevelt, Landon, Lemke, Thomas--whoever you believe is the best man for President. Do the same for other officers. It is your inalienable right to vote for whomever you please. And only by voting on the men and issues of the time, can that right be preserved.

Hymn To Roosevelt

The Republicans are all enthused
And they are making lots of noise
They are trying to elect Landon
Like a bunch of country boys.

They are getting all excited
For they sure want to win
They have got "oh! Susanna"
A-trying to sing him in.

"oh! susanna" is awfully pretty
But I am sure proud to say
She will never land Landon
Where Roosevelt sits today.

"oh! susanna" is very popular
For they sing it everywhere
But the Democrats won't listen
There's better things to hear.

I haven't any education
And I am not good in election
But Roosevelt fed the hungry
And he saved a revolution.

They talk about the billions
That Roosevelt threw away
But he had to spend that money
Or they would be hungry today.

Anyone saying he's extravagant
Is a dirty trifling skunk
When Roosevelt took the throttle
The ship was almost sunk

You will hear his opponents talk
And tell what they could do
But Roosevelt fought the battle
And he surely pulled us through.

If he had not spent the money
And have spent it in that way
Our cities would have been
Just a pile of debris today.

Fake Eye Specialists Exposed

(This article is released by the Post Office Department, so that the public may have a thorough knowledge of the scheme described and how to combat it.)

Post Office Inspectors have broken up a nation-wide organization of crooks who pose as eye specialists through the arrest of a number of its members in separate parts of the country.

It is estimated that the public has been swindled out of more than a million dollars by the crooks, some of whom are said to have made more than $350,000 out of what is known as the Glimmer Racket.

The postal inspectors could not believe that reputable eye specialists would perform delicate eye operations except under the most sanitary conditions where there was no danger of infection. When they learned that men claiming to be specialists, connected with the most renowned hospitals of our country, were performing such operations in the living and dining rooms and kitchens of country homes and collecting unreasonable fees from their patients, they became skeptical and decided to investigate.

But where were they to start? They found that the names used were fictitious. They were usually similar to those connected with some nationally known institution, or associated with remedies known for generations to practically all the people. It seemed at first that the swindlers had left no trace behind. But after coming to the conclusion that the alleged renowned eye specialists were, in fact, a band of fakers, the inspectors devised means for identifying them and bringing them to justice.

The scheme has been confined mainly to aged and infirm persons residing in rural communities. The swindlers specialize on those who are 70 or older. The ease with which they extort large sums from their victims is surpassed only by the brutality of their scheme. Often the victim is left temporarily believing he has been saved from cancer, blindness or paralysis, when he has not been benefitted and has been deprived of his last dollar.

The post office inspectors found that the racket was nation-wide and that the swindlers traveled by automobile, remaining in one State but a short time. They realized that the different States, unaided, could not cope with the racket. Therefore they joined with the State enforcement agencies in identifying and locating the swindlers. The result so far obtained have proven the efficacy of such plan.

Editor's note: --Owing to the length of the article sent out by the Postal Department exposing this racket, we are unable to use all of it. It certainly makes in-

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—Some time ago I reported in these columns that Mr. Roosevelt had sent a commission to Europe to study consumer co-operatives. I said at that time that the commission was likely to find itself unable to reach an agreement concerning a report to the President on the consumer co-operatives and that in the event they were able to reach an agreement, the publication of their findings would be delayed until after the election.

The commission has returned to this country and has gone through its labor pains to the end that there are six different views, an opinion by each of the six different commissioners concerning the value or lack of it that consumer co-operatives have.

But it is important to know developments concerning this commission because it appears that by engaging in an investigation of the consumer co-operatives, the President has awakened a number of different interests in our own country to the fact that there are some kinds of co-operatives which are not helpful. The fuss stirred up by failure of the six commissioners to reach an agreement makes it seem unlikely that there will be any unanimity of opinion in congress if and when Mr. Roosevelt attempts to gain action in a legislative way to encourage creation of these co-operatives. In other words, if a move is made in congress, or if the Chief Executive attempts to force congress to enact legislation favorable to consumer co-operatives, we are likely to see a vigorous legislative battle. Personally, I hope that happens. Unless that end materializes, there is every likelihood that the average person who has not access to full information will be inclined to favor consumer co-operatives, without realizing he is lending his influence, whatever it may be, to fostering institutions that in the end are certain to cause heartaches and financial losses.

I am in a position to say that the one thing upon which the President's commissioners were able to agree was that consumer co-operatives in Europe constitute the focal point for radicalism. Not a single consumer co-operative was found, I am told, that was not controlled, managed or inspired by radicals of one breed or another, mainly, communists. These hotbeds of radicalism constitute "pressure groups" that have been able to impress governments in the various countries of an ability and an influence that do not actually exist with them. That is to say, these groups, like minority groups everywhere, are cohesively organized and they are vocal, in addition. The result is they have been able to force upon peoples in many countries restrictions over private and independent initiative, or to gain for themselves exemptions and privileges not accorded to others. The result is an obvious alignment of peoples into fresh factions, the tendencies of which are dangerous.

It may be news to many persons that we have consumer co-operatives in this country and that these agencies or units already are being fostered by the United States government. I refer to the activities of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell, who has installed in the resettlement colonies various and sundry consumer co-operatives. It may be news as well to many to learn that Mr. Tugwell has spent almost two million dollars in financing these co-operatives to get them started. And the third bit of news respecting this circumstance is that a book written by James Peter Warbasse is being used as a guide for the creation of these consumer co-operatives in federal resettlement projects.

Now, the name of James Peter Warbasse may not seem important. Many persons have written books, but there are not many volumes extant in the United States that advocate changes in the form of our government. Yet, there are propositions in the volume to which I have referred which do just that and these books, as I have said, are serving more or less as a guide for the people whom Professor Tugwell has "resettled."

With this brief presentation of the facts, it seems to me it does not take much imagination to see the basis upon which the promoters of the consumer co-operatives are building their structure in this country. Taking these facts into consideration with the information brought back by those who made the study for Mr. Roosevelt, it is made to appear at least that a foreign link is somehow or other being forged, and that link, I believe, is designed as a fundamental unit in the general radical program to change the form of our government as well as the form of our national life. I can arrive at no other conclusion.

There is still another phase of this general proposition of consumer co-operatives that ought to be of interest to every producer in this country. Let us assume, for example, that they were perfect in organization and management; that they prospered and expanded in numbers and that they were rendering genuine service to the people. If that condition were to obtain, does it not occur as a natural question that with so much strength, the consumer co-operatives would eventually establish a class alignment between producer and consumer? It seems to me that the natural course of events would lead to this end, and if it did lead to this end I am afraid that because there are more consumers than there are producers, the producers would get the dirty end of the deal. They would be short-changed because they would be outnumbered.

This phase seems the more important, because the food stores, food fields generally, are the sectors in which these consumer co-operatives operate best. As a matter of fact, the food field is the most fertile field for experiments anyway and here is quite apparently another experiment that has fastened, or is fastening itself as a parasite upon the agricultural industry of this country. I know there has been some argument that the consumer co-operatives are the answer to the effort to destroy chain stores. That is not so. Chain stores in foreign countries have licked the co-operatives. They have virtually destroyed them where the co-operatives attempted to drive the chain stores out of business. It becomes important then to recognize that while the United States has many chain stores, it has not now and never will have as many chain stores as it has independents.

Again, here is a threat to independent business men, particularly to the small shop owner, whether he be in a large city or in the thousands of small towns and villages where the owners of such stores are important to their communities and pillars of strength in our national society. If the consumer co-operatives get going, I predict a further decline in the number of independent merchandise houses throughout the United States. For that reason, if for none of the others that I have outlined, it does seem important that the consumer co-operatives move in this country should be stopped in its tracks and that those responsible in an official way for encouraging this sort of thing should be shorn of power.

It may seem a far cry from the farm field to the price of beer as a working man finds it, but there is a direct connection and recent developments again demonstrate the fact that our whole economic structure is quite closely related. There is an increase coming in the price of beer. Either the working man and others who like beer are going to pay more for it, or else they will get a smaller glass. The answer is that ingredients entering into the production of beer have increased in price to such an extent that, according to official figures, the brewers are now paying about $1.50 more for the things that enter into the production of one barrel of beer than they did when the sale of beer again was legalized.

This circumstance is significant for the reason that it shows conclusively how tampering with the currency upsets the general balance within our economic structure and results sometimes in displacement of markets and sometimes in diminution of sales. In the case of beer it probably will result in a displacement of markets, rather than any decline in the amount of beer consumed, despite the fact that the ultimate consumer will be paying more.

How ARE YOU TODAY

Dr. James W. Barton TALKS ABOUT

Our Bodily Fuel.

MORE and more we are realizing that in comparing the body to a machine or boiler—a man-made piece of metal—we are doing a great injustice to this wonderful work of creation—our body.

It is true that the boiler takes in fuel and manufactures heat and energy but that is as far as its likeness to the body goes. That body of yours must take in fuel (food) enough to keep it warmer than the surrounding air, and must create energy for the workings of the body itself and for the extra work which the huge muscles on our body were meant to do.

But the food we eat must have the raw materials in it to do more than give heat and energy; it must be able to supply materials for all the various kinds of cells of the body—nervous cells, muscle cells, bone cells, liver, kidney, and all the various juices necessary for the proper working of the body processes. And as these cells are wearing out all the time, the food eaten must be able to repair them.

And still another important point is that while all the fuel in a boiler gives heat and energy, the fuel or food taken in by the body in addition to giving heat and energy must be made up of different kinds of fuel or food stuff, each of which has definite use or uses.

Functions of Foods.

Thus proteids (meat, fish, eggs, cereals) not only repair or build up tissues, but create so much extra heat that all the body processes work faster and create that much more energy.

The fat foods (butter, cream, fat meat, egg yolks) also create heat and energy but burn more slowly and what isn't needed may be stored as fat. Fat is also helpful in preventing the proteid foods from burning too rapidly.

The starch foods (bread, potatoes, sugar, pastry) are not builders but great heat and energy producers; in fact starch foods supply two-thirds of the body's energy. The starch foods also help to spare or save the proteid foods from being used up too quickly. In addition to proteins, fats and starches, there are the mineral salts, vitamins (which make foods more active and prevent various ailments) and last but perhaps most important, water. Water must be taken in foods and as water itself if the body is to do its work; every individual cell needs water daily.

As we think of all the different kinds of foods and what they do to or have done to them by the body, we realize how different the body is to a machine.

Overweight and Diabetes.

When insulin was discovered by Drs. Banting and Best, Toronto Canada, and was shown to prevent death from diabetes, it was naturally thought that diabetes would gradually disappear; or at least that the number of cases would rapidly decrease. Now, insulin was a wonderful discovery because previously young people afflicted died in a short time, and adults attacked by diabetes in later life died in a very few years.

With ordinary care with the diet young and old are enabled to live comfortably and safely by the daily use of insulin. As far as our present knowledge is concerned insulin will have to be taken daily the rest of their lives.

But notwithstanding this wonderful discovery the cases of diabetes are not decreasing. This may be due in part to the fact that more people live to middle age than ever before because the percentage of babies that are now saved at birth and during their first year is greater than in former years. Another factor may be that more patients learn that they have diabetes.

However, notwithstanding that more people report their diabetes, it would appear that there is still an increase in the number of diabetic patients with diabetes.

Dr. Barton.

What It Is All About

When from the human heart the cry goes up "What is it all about?" it is no true answer to look only at that part of experience which comes to us through certain sensory organs, and reply: "It is about atoms and chaos; it is about the universe of fiery globes moving on to impending gloom; it is about non-computative algebra," but rather it is about a spirit in which truth has its shrine, with potentialities of self-fulfillments in its response to beauty and right.—A. S. Eddington.

STAR DUST
 Movie • Radio
 By VIRGINIA VALE

THE life of a motion picture star leaves a good deal to be desired, no matter how much money or fame or fun he has. There's the little matter of the effect of the studio lights on the players' eyes, for example. You don't hear so much about "Klieg eyes" now as you used to, but the danger is there just the same.

William Powell has had really serious trouble with his eyes of late, and Eric Blore is so careful of his that he will work only a certain number of hours a day—about four or five. Can't afford to take risks, you know. Blore is a delightful person. Has an English accent off the screen as well as on. Goes visiting on other sets in his favorite costume, a resplendent lounging robe and dark glasses.

When motion picture actresses come to New York for the first time they usually state for publication that they just couldn't wait to see the sights—the places like Central park and the aquarium, that all tourists want to see. But in Anne Shirley's case that was what she did really want to do first. Born in New York, she was taken west when she was five, and when she took her first eastern trip not long ago she made a bee line for Central park.

She drove around it in the morning, dashed off for lunch, and returned to walk around it in the afternoon. After looking forward for years to doing just that, she couldn't get enough of it.

"Dodsworth" is a grand picture, one of those perfectly finished pictures that Goldwyn so often gives us. In the making they seem to have done something to Mary Astor's voice; it is a velvety contralto. Walter Huston gives a superb performance, of course, in spite of the fact that he played the role so often on the stage that he might be excused for being awfully tired of it.

On the RKO sets they call Helen Broderick and Ann Sothern "The Rocking Chair Twins," because the girls insist on having rocking chairs to rest in between shots, instead of those canvas-seated arm chairs with their names on the backs.

And there the girls sit and rock and rock, for all the world like old ladies on country hotel porches.

Lily Pons will try anything. She is working hard on "Street Girl" at present; remember when it was made as a silent picture with Betty Compton? (Incidentally, the title is going to be changed.) But she is also getting ready for appearances with the Metropolitan Opera company in New York, so she is learning to dance.

She will sing in "Coq d'Or," and will also dance. Heretofore when this opera was given, the singers sat on the sides of the stage and merely sang, and the action was taken care of by trained dancers. Lily's role was danced by the premiere ballerina, the last time the opera was performed.

Jeanette MacDonald seems to like long engagements. She was engaged to Bob Ritchie for years and years, but nothing came of it—perhaps because Gene Raymond came along. Now he and she are engaged, but say that they won't be married until June.

John Boles has a new movie contract, which he wouldn't sign unless it stipulated that he wouldn't have to sing! He has been rushing about the country making personal appearances and doing so well that he had to play return engagements almost everywhere. His delightful wife, Marcellite, journeyed to New York, planning to see him there between hops.

Meanwhile his latest picture, "Craig's Wife," has been released. Rosalind Russell is the new role which permits her to be as disagreeable as she possibly can.

Lesson for October 25
CHRISTIANITY AS LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-4; I Corinthians 13.
 GOLDEN TEXT—And now abideth faith, hope, charity (love), these three; but the greatest of these is charity (love). I Cor. 13:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Paul Was Not Afraid.
 JUNIOR TOPIC—Courage in the Night.
 INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Christian Love Is and Does.
 YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Law of Life.

By way of Athens the apostle Paul and his co-workers came to Corinth, one of the great commercial and social centers of Greece. It was a city known for its magnificent architecture and its patronage of the fine arts, but even more widely known for its abandonment to vice and wickedness. Here Paul, the apostle of faith, demonstrated that his faith was rooted in love, and it was to the Christians who were dwelling in this infamous spot of corruption that he addressed his supremely pure and beautiful discourse on love.

The first portion of our lesson finds Paul at Corinth, and provides an introduction to the study of the love chapter from I Corinthians by showing from his experience that

I. Love Is a Fact, Not a Theory (Acts 18:1-4).

The man whom we now recognize as perhaps the greatest preacher and teacher of Christian truth who ever followed the Lord Jesus Christ "came to Corinth." That great and busy city in all probability knew nothing of his arrival and cared nothing for his message. No one met the distinguished messenger of God and received him into a home of comfort and honor.

But God had not forgotten him. For we read that Paul "found a certain Jew"—a convert to Christ, and his noble wife, and "abode with them." Persecution had sent Aquila to Corinth, and he was there for Paul to find.

And the humility of loving service expresses itself further in the fact that the one who was to bring Corinth the glorious message of the gospel did so at his own cost. He labored with his hands at the trade which he, as every Jewish boy, had been taught by his father. Christianity does not ask, "What will ye give me?" but "How much can I give?"

In his first letter to the church which grew up at Corinth we find the inexhaustibly rich chapter in which Paul so fittingly describes true Christian love. It is impossible in any short discussion of this passage to make a complete study of it, but we note

II. Four Truths About Love (I Cor. 13:1-13).

1. Love is superior to the other graces (vv. 1-3).

Life has many excellent gifts and men seek after them. How do they compare with love? Glowing eloquence, the far-seeing eye of the prophet, mountain-moving faith, self-sacrifice—without love they all lose their worth; in fact they are nothing. All the attainments of men apart from Christ are vain and empty.

2. Love is necessary to the other graces (vv. 4-7).

There is a sense in which love is not so much a grace in itself as the underlying and motivating power, which shows in every fine and noble expression of Christian character. Study these verses to see how patiently and unselfishly love works.

3. Love is permanent; other graces fail (vv. 8-12).

Some gifts will cease, for there will no longer be any need for them. They are temporary in their value or simply a means to an end. But love—it began with God in eternity and will go on with him through eternity. Why then do we labor and seek after these other graces so diligently and neglect the one grace which is above them all, for

4. Love is supreme (v. 13).

Even over those other graces which with love will abide, namely, faith and hope, love stands supreme. It is the fundamental of all fundamentals. Without it all else is empty and futile. And let us remember, this is not pie in the sky; it is fact and to be translated into daily life.

Hardships
 Wounds and hardships are our courage, and when our fortunes are at the lowest, our wits and minds are commonly at the best.
