Sacred Harp Singing Sunday J. W. Wilkerson

Next Sunday, May 29th, beginning at 1:30 p.m. at the new Robert Lee Baptist church an old fashioned singing will be conducted, especially for the benefit of the old-timers. Most of the songs to be sung are found either in the Sacred Harp or the Christian Harmony or both, and some of them are found in many of the later books. We expect singers from Coke and adjoining counties, who will lead such fine songs as "Amazing Grace", "Sweet Union", "Mount Pleasant", "Coronation", "Sweet River", "Easter Anthem", "Struggle On", and many others of this type too numerous to mention. We are aware of the recent departure of many of the old timers of Coke county in recent years, and regret that we did so little to show our appreciation for the foundation of civilization so heroically laid by them. Some of their mothers and fathers sang these old songs to them, while they were children, and the opportunity to sing and listen to these songs will be a means of infinite happiness to them. Are we going to give the old folks a break? Folks, this is a time for you to see to it that your father, your mother, your grand-father or grand-mother or any other of the fine old people you know are provided with a means to get to this singing.

Connor Reunion

The old Connor home here was the scene for a reunion of several members of the S. M. Connor family, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Connor came up from Carrizo Springs with a load of vegetables from their garden there.

Those who attended the family dinner included Mrs. Joe Garrett and children of Carlsbad, N. M. Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Davis and children of Fitch, Mrs. Russ Mathers and children of Colorado Herbert Connor and family of Colorado, Ava Sue Gray of Carrizo Springs, Ruthelle Gray of Abilene and a nephew of Mr. Connor, C. M. Connor of San Angelo.

Mr. and Mrs. Connor returned to Carrizo Springs Tuesday. They say they are having fine health and like the country and people but they will always think of this as home.

Local Girl Gets Degree

Chanda Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Brown of Robert Lee was among the seventy-three seniors of Abilene Christian College in Abilene, Texas, graduating May 30 with a Bachelor of Science degree.

Of this group of seventy-three, 38 applied for B. A. degrees while 35 ask for B. S. honors. In the 14 fields represented, business administration and education each were major of ten candidates for graduation.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Warren and his sister, Mrs. K. Therrel of Dallas, accompanied their mother, Mrs. John Warren who arrived here last week for an extended visit with relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at the graveside Sunday afternoon for J. W. Wilkerson, one of the earliest West Texas cow hands, a man who knew much of old "cow days" lore and loved to relate his experiences. Mr. Wilkerson would have been 77 on next July 22. Coming to Texas when a small boy, he began when he was quiet young to work with various cattle outfits and in 1921 he came to Coke county and began work with J. T. Thetford and has had residence in Coke county most of the time.

He is survived by a son, J. D. Wilkerson of Big Lake and three daughters, Mrs. Jimmie Childress, Mrs. Frank Salvador and Miss Gladys Wilkerson, all of San Angelo. There are also four grandchildren.

Death came about nine o'clock Sunday morning following an illness of several days from a heart ailment. Burial was made in the Robert Lee cemetery late Sunday afternoon with the Rev. Earl Hoggard conducting a service at the graveside.

At the time of his death he was making his home with the J. T. Thetford, Jr., family.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Havins felt the effects of close lightning about 2 o'clock Thursday morning when lightning struck a telephone line near their home. One wire extends across the creek and one goes into the Havins house. The two wires were burned black and fell to the ground, and had wave kinks in them about every two or three feet. Where the line goes into the house the paint was scorched and the front screen door had a piece broke out of the top and lower pannel and at the bottom where, apparently the lightning made for the ground, a clip was broken out of the concrete porch. Also a window pane lying on the porch was crashed. There were several in the house and all were awakened to feel themselves stunted for a moment.

Other who happened to be looking in that direction got to see how lightning might set something on fire. The two telephone lines remained solid red for about a minute and bits of fire dropped from them, then the lines broke. The telephone company report many telephones burned out.

You can have the lightning, I think I'd feel safer in a coal mine.

James Newton is to work with his father on the construction of the A. F. Landers home which will begin as soon as a shipment of Lumber arrives. James and his wife have rooms in the W. H. Bell home.

Born to Mrs. Manuel McCullough, May 19, a 11 pound girl. She was named Vera Katherine.

Senior Ambitions

Tonight the high school class of '38 will change the tassels of their caps and march from the auditorium equipped to enter higher institutions of learning.

Only a few members of the class could be reached for an interview but from statements and hear say the plans for the outgoing seniors are briefly stated thus: Bryce Stewart has made application for entrance at C.I.A. next September and most of her graduation gifts are of the "college going" sort; Katherine Scogging, having accomplished two years work in one, has soaring ambitions for college work but has not yet decided on the school; Ed Hickman, the star athlete of '38 plans to win laurels for Tulane University; Bobbie Lee Davis is not yet decided between Tech and San Marcus; Faye Gunnels, a hot shot at the typewriter, has her sights set for business college in San Antonio; Grace Robertson and Gene Roberts think Draughons Business College at Abilene is more to their liking; while Beatrice Wojtek and Lawrence Higgins have chosen the business college at San Angelo and they will likely be joined by Edna Walker unless other opportunities are more attractive; Buford Peay will likely enter the "fish pond" at Tech next fall; Dick Grambling, having been rejected in his application for naval service, will try the next best thing when he decides what that will be; Doris Simpson plans to work during the summer but has not made plans farther; James Smith plans to go to school but his plans are not complete; David Key, Finnell Smith, Lorene Fikes Patsy Lee Haywood and Joyce Green were not interviewed but rumor has it they have not settled on definite plans for the coming year.

Ministers Are Recalled

DIPLOMATIC relations between Great Britain and Mexico were broken because of the dispute over Mexico's action in expropriating foreign oil properties. President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico took the initiative by recalling Primo Villa Michel, Mexico minister at London, and ordering the closing of the legation indefinitely. The British government promptly directed Minister Owen St. Clair O'Malley to leave Mexico together with his staff, the legation being put in charge of Consul Gen. J. Dalton Murray.

President Cardenas

While the suspension of relations is a direct outgrowth of the oil seizure, the immediate cause of Cardenas' action was what he considered Britain's "insolent" methods in demanding a claims annuity of $85,000, due since January 1 for damages to British interests in a revolution years ago. Foreign Minister Eduardo Hay handed a check for the amount to Minister O'Malley, told him of the recall of Minister Michel, and said: "May I be allowed, however, to call your excellency's attention to the fact that not even powerful states with ample resources at their disposal can boast of having fulfilled their monetary obligations."

This, of course, was an allusion to Britain's repudiation of her war debt to the United States.

Labor and political organizations in Mexico lined up solidly in support of Cardenas in the dispute. The majority bloc in the chamber of deputies described the diplomatic break as "absolutely justified."

Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, took up the Mexican affair on his return from Geneva. An important factor in the situation is consideration of Britain's oil supply if war should come in Europe.

Air Mail Week

CELEBRATION of National Air Mail week, marking the twentieth year of the service, opened when Mrs. Roosevelt accepted, for her husband, a sheet of the new air mail stamps from the Washington postmaster. The anniversary was observed in many parts of the country, a notable event being the first use, in Chicago, of an autogiro to carry mail from the airport to the post office.

Fall of Suchow Near

DISPATCHES received in Shanghai said the Japanese forces were closing in on Suchow, great Central China rail junction city, and that its capture was momentarily expected. Thousands of Chinese troops were believed to be trapped in that area with little chance to escape.

Encirclement of Suchow followed the cutting by Japanese columns of the railway at which operations of the invaders had been directed for five months. The Japanese then pushed rapidly toward Suchow, taking the cities of Pihshien and Siaohsien which were desperately defended.

Hanes in Treasury Post

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT nominated John W. Hanes, who has been a member of the securities and exchange commission less than five months, to be assistant secretary of the treasury.

It is likely that, before the end of 1938, Mr. Hanes will succeed Roswell Magill as under-secretary of the treasury. Mr. Magill, who is on leave from Columbia university, is anxious to return to his old position, it is reported.

Mr. Hanes may not assume his new duties until the reorganization of the New York Stock exchange is completed. He will be the first New Deal assistant secretary of the treasury who has been identified with Wall Street investment banking. When selected for the SEC he was a partner in the firm of C. D. Barney & Co.

THE United States Supreme court ordered the Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia to show cause why its orders against the national labor relations board in the Republic Steel company case should not be vacated. The circuit court refused to permit the labor board to withdraw its case against the steel company for the purpose of instituting further proceedings and thus averting judicial scrutiny of its conduct. The lower court also restrained the board from taking any further proceedings in the Republic case pending the certification of the transcript of the record.

In another case involving the labor board the Supreme court ruled that strikers do not lose their employee relationship.

Woman Ambassador?

THERE is a good chance that the United States will be represented at Moscow by a woman, for Mrs. Charles C. Broy is under consideration for the post of American ambassador to Soviet Russia, which Joseph E. Davies recently relinquished to become ambassador to Belgium. Mrs. Broy, who is a Texan by birth, is the wife of an American foreign service officer and the widow of Representative Thomas U. Sisson of Mississippi. She was recommended for the ambassadorship by the chairmen of the foreign relations and foreign affairs committees of congress, and has the backing of many prominent members of congress. If appointed and confirmed, she will be the first American woman to be an ambassador.

Mrs. C. C. Broy

Mrs. Broy was officially presented to Secretary of State Hull by Senator Key Pittman, but the secretary has known her personally for 16 years.

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Describes the Need for

IRON and COPPER

Shows How You Can Help to Avoid Anemia by Including These Blood-Building Minerals in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City

OF ALL the nutrition problems that challenge the homemaker, none is more important than supplying her family's need for iron. This mineral is sometimes described as the supreme element in nutrition because it is an essential constituent of the blood.

How Blood Is Constructed

If you should examine a drop of blood under the microscope, you would observe that it is composed of red cells and white cells. In normal blood there are about 25 million times a million red blood corpuscles, owing their color to the iron-bearing protein hemoglobin. They carry oxygen to all the body tissues, and remove the carbon dioxide formed during the combustion of body fuel.

A reduction in the amount of hemoglobin in the blood may cause shortness of breath, quickened respiration and an accelerated heart action. Lack of appetite, weakness, and a slowing of all vital functions may also result from the diminished supply of oxygen to the tissues.

Lack of Iron May Lead to Anemia

In many young people the blood does not function normally, though frequently parents are unaware that anything is wrong. You may scold them for being lazy, for lacking interest in their work, or never heeding the things you tell them, when the real trouble is due to iron starvation which, if long continued, may lead to anemia.

The person who has a tendency toward anemia usually tires easily and lacks pep; complains of cold hands and feet; worries over trifles, and may have a complexion that is anything but rosy.

The great danger of an iron-deficient diet is that it deprives the body of its chief defense against disease. For when the quality of the blood is poor, one becomes an easy prey to infection. Moreover, if a serious illness occurs, lowered resistance makes it difficult to fight it off.

Including a List of Foods Rich in Iron, Copper

READERS are invited to write for a free bulletin containing a list of foods rich in iron and a list of those rich in copper. Also included are sample menus showing how to plan a balanced diet containing adequate amounts of foods rich in these blood-building minerals. Send your request—a post card will do—to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Anemia may be due to loss of blood, deficient blood formation, or to increased blood destruction in the body. The different forms of the disease are sometimes classified as primary and secondary anemia.

Primary anemia is usually known as pernicious anemia. It is a grave condition in which the marrow of the bones has lost its power to make red blood cells.

Secondary or nutritional anemia may result from loss of blood in an accident, or it may follow a long, infectious illness. For any infection lowers the iron reserve in the body. But the most common cause is a diet lacking in sufficient iron over a long period of time.

How Much Iron?

It is believed that about 10 per cent of the total hemoglobin in adults is destroyed daily. And for this reason iron-rich foods must be included in the diet every day.

Investigators have found it difficult to determine the exact iron requirement, but according to the latest estimates, from 12 to 15 milligrams a day will not only provide adequately for bodily requirements, but will allow a reasonable reserve.

Women Need More Than Men

Women require more iron than men, in proportion to the body weight, to make good the losses that occur during the menses. Expectant mothers need a generous amount of iron, not only to provide for their own needs and for the normal development of the fetus, but to create a reserve supply in the baby's body which will last through the period of lactation.

The percentage of iron in the baby's body is about three times that of the adult. Nature has wisely designed this reserve to make up for the low iron content of milk which constitutes the chief food during the first six months of life. Nutrition authorities believe, however, that better health results when an iron-rich food, such as egg-yolk, is introduced very early into the diet. This helps to prevent the slight anemia which was formerly regarded as unimportant, but which is now recognized as making the baby more susceptible to infection and retarding growth.

Children's Requirement High

It is desirable to keep the iron intake at a high level throughout childhood, for it has been discovered that better health results when a surplus is allowed above the daily requirement. But there is a very special need for iron in girls from the beginning of adolescence through the eighteenth year.

Iron-Rich Foods

To maintain top health and prevent the possibility of nutritional anemia, the homemaker must learn to meet the daily iron requirement of her family and not leave this vital matter to chance.

Iron-rich foods include egg yolk, liver, molasses, dried beans and peas, whole grain cereals, lean meat and green leafy vegetables. While milk has only a small amount of iron, experiments show that its iron is readily absorbed and is utilized to good advantage.

Eggs are such an excellent source of iron that one egg yields about one-tenth of the standard requirement. Lean meat furnishes a considerable amount, but liver is so much richer that it should be eaten frequently. Dried beans are inexpensive and when baked with molasses become a good source of iron.

It is a pity that parsley is so often used only as a garnish, because it has a higher iron content than most green leafy vegetables. Though potatoes contain only a moderate amount of iron, they are usually consumed in sufficient quantities to make them a significant source.

Copper Also Necessary

Investigation has demonstrated that adequate iron alone is not enough to prevent nutritional anemia, for the body cannot convert iron into blood pigment unless copper is also present. Therefore, in order to obtain the full benefits of iron, the diet must contain sufficient copper. Foods that supply copper in abundance are liver, nuts, dried beans and peas. Smaller but significant amounts are provided by whole grain cereals, dried fruits and poultry.

I shall gladly send to every homemaker a list of foods rich in both iron and copper, and also sample menus showing how to plan a balanced, blood-building diet.

I urge you to write for this material and keep the blood-building foods in mind when planning menus. Never forget for an instant that good blood is the best form of life insurance.

After a while she drew the manuscript from its envelope. For weeks Nora had been too worn and tired to peruse the articles her husband was sending out. Now, reading critically, her heart sank still lower. The editor was right. This wasn't on of Don's joyous narratives. It was the work of a harassed, half sick man, driving himself on because the need of money was imperative.

Part of the thousand dollars James Lambert had tucked into her gold mesh bag had paid the charges at the nursing home in London. The rest (long saved for an emergency), melted away during the months of sickness in South Africa. Dreading to run up bills, Nora had paid the Cape Town doctor at every visit, not realizing that if the man possessed a conscience he would doubtless have deducted something from the sum total. There had been medicines, too, expensive medicines; and nourishing food that cost real money. And now Don, burning the candle at both ends in a desperate effort to provide for his loved ones, was failing to make good. She would not show him that letter. She could not.

What Nora did was to sit down at the kitchen table, spread out the rejected manuscript and proceed to imbue it with the missing charm. And because she knew her husband's style so well—because she had listened spellbound while he talked of his adventures, she did it superbly. Her tired eyes lighted as she read it over, knowing by instinct that her work would "get across." And then she made the wisest move of all: wrote simply and honestly to the London editor (she had to check herself from beginning the letter "Dear old life-preserver!"), confessing what she had done to this Cape Town Letter—telling him something of the unforeseen troubles which had descended on them—agreeing to watch over her husband's work, speaking quite frankly of the reason why they must return to England at the time planned. And at the end: "You will understand, of course, why you must send no answer to this letter; but if in its present form you find the article available for publication, kindly forward a check to Mr. Mason as soon as possible . . ."

"And never let anyone persuade you," she said months later when Don learned the truth, "that Englishmen, for all their cold exteriors, haven't the warmest hearts in the whole world!" For just when her husband was beginning to worry about the missing check, a letter arrived bearing the familiar heading. The editor, it seemed, had learned of his contributor's recent illness, regretted it deeply, and suggested not trying to write till he was quite himself. Enclosed was a check for the last article (an especially good one), as well as for the three to follow, "on which, my dear fellow, you are at liberty to take your time." And with kindest regards to Mrs. Mason, he remained very cordially indeed . . .

"But how in thunder," asked Don, lifting puzzled eyes from this welcome missive, "did the old boy learn that I've been sick? And why does he lug you in all of a sudden?" "Well, don't ask me!" responded Nora, so guilelessly that for the time being Don hadn't a suspicion of her intrigue.

After that things really did improve. The tension lessened. Don did better work. The little son was growing rosy; and Nora, rested herself, admitted (although it went against the grain to do so) the surpassing beauty of Cape Town harbor—the grandeur of Table Mountain rising majestically behind the city.

Thus a day arrived when she braved the eyes of a scandalized community, and stopped at the house of a woman who, like a ministering angel, had appeared one chill, gray dawn to offer help.

"Whoever sees me will be horrified, I suppose," she said to Don, "but after all, why should that matter? I was at the breaking point when she helped me out, you know. It wouldn't be decent not to say good-by to her."

"Of course it wouldn't," Don turned from locking a steamer trunk to add: "I'll go with you, dear."

But Fate had other plans. Because of some error about their stateroom Don was called away; and Nora went alone.

"I just dropped in to say good-by." Her hostess, obviously astonished at the call, was leading her into a small, tidy living room. Nora had not expected its surprising neatness. Then she saw that the woman herself looked neater—more self-respecting, and continued: "We leave for home tomorrow; and I've never half thanked you for all you did for us."

"You don't need to, lady." The voice sounded a shade breathless. "It wasn't—nothing. I—" The woman, seated across the little room, arose suddenly. "I heard you folks was pullin' out tomorrow and I got somethin' for you—a sort o' good-by present, if you don't mind. I was goin' to carry it over after dark."

Touched, and a trifle puzzled, Nora watched her open a bureau drawer and take out a small box tied with a bit of scarlet ribbon.

"Will—will you promise me somethin'?" she asked, her voice still shaken.

"Why not?" said Nora. "Weren't you a real friend in time of need?"

"Friend!" echoed the woman, a nervous, unsteady laugh escaping her. "Well, lady, it's this I want: Promise you won't open this box till you're out at sea; and—and that you won't never try to get it back to me, noways."

"That's easy," smiled Leonora, anxious to put the other at her ease. "Why should I want to send it back?"

"You'll know when you see it. Your man might not like to have you take it—from me, you know. But you tell him that if I was to kick off sudden some guy would steal it off me most likely. And—and I want give it to you—most more'n I ever wanted anything I—" she hesitated, then broke out passionately: "Say! you're the first good woman that's spoken a kind word to me for 15 years! I'm dirt to 'em all; but if they knew how I got this way— Well," her voice dropped, dully—"that don't matter now. I'm used to it. But you keep that safe, lady. I come by it honest. A man give it to me once—the only decent fella I ever knew . . ."

And next morning, a bright, clear morning as if Cape Town were doing its best to overcome an unfortunate impression, they set forth in a second-class cabin (Oh, shades of Leonora Lambert!) on what was to be a most momentous voyage. Safe in the depths of Nora's handbag lay a small white box tied with a scarlet ribbon. The English boy, reluctant to see them go, was on the wharf. His was the last face they saw in Cape Town. His the last voice they heard. Above the confusion of departure it reached them clearly: "Good-by and Good Hope!" South Africa's farewell to the departing voyager.

How near, and yet how infinitely far away that year seemed now! Thus mused Nora as she watched the rising tide encroach, slowly, but surely, on their resting place. What things one lived through and emerged from unbroken! And here they were where they started life together, she and Don, back at "the shack," a very crowded dwelling place, "because," said Don, regarding Carl Venable's last gift to Nora, "because, my dear, with a baby-grand and two grand babies, there's hardly room to come in out of the rain!"

Yet Leonora was so happy at being home again—so lost in ecstasy over the piano, that nothing else seemed of the least consequence. It was a long, long cry from that day six years before when she had regarded mere cobwebs and the lack of running water with such keen dismay. What inconveniences hadn't she put up with in those six years? Nora smiled at the thought, and observed abruptly:

"What a parlor ornament I once was, Don! Do you remember that until you brought me to the shack I'd never known the want of a kitchen apron?"

Don turned his head, and without disturbing their younger son, who sat astride him, reached out and lifted one of Nora's hands, her right hand. It was the delicately formed, sensitive hand of a musician—long-fingered, slender. Nothing could mar its perfect contour; yet it was also the hard, brown hand of a woman who had labored at tasks that leave their scars. It was a hand that had washed innumerable dishes; scrubbed floors; patched; darned; ironed; but on one finger blazed a thing of undying beauty:

a matchless Kimberley diamond, the "good-by present" of a woman in far off Cape Town.

Don kissed the palm of that work-worn hand, and said, addressing his small son: "She's a wonder, isn't she?"

"A perfect winner," agreed the baby; and they both laughed before Don questioned: "Where's brother vanished to?"

Nora glanced down the beach to where a small boy in a scarlet bathing suit was beginning operations on a tunnel that was to reach "Aunt Connie way over in Capri!"

"He's constructing a subway to Italy, I believe. The U. S. A. agrees with the kiddies, doesn't it?" This question, innocent in itself, was, as developed later, merely an opening

"Even this single month has made a difference in them," Nora continued, choosing her words with care. "Jimmy has gained a pound, and Donald, two. I almost dread . . ."

Don moved to scan her face for a stealthy moment.

"I've been rather expecting that, my dear," he said.

Nora laughed, touching his hand as if to reassure him.

"Afraid I'll turn domestic?" she queried lightly.

"You are domestic," asserted Don. "That's one of the reasons why I love you. You can create a home in the barest of hotel rooms, darling. Haven't I seen you do it numberless times? Haven't I seen you take a tumble-down villa overlooking the Lake of Como, and with the aid of a couple of Italian blankets and a brass candlestick transform it into such a place of peace and beauty that even Mussolini (if he had the good luck to get inside), would cease to dictate for a moment and let himself relax? If we were to occupy an igloo in the Antarctic, I've no doubt you'd make it so attractive that the penguins would stand 'round begging to come in! You are a wonder, Nora, just as I observed a moment since. Why, I'll wager you could take that weather-beaten old barn back there beyond the dunes and make a home of it!"

"Let's get back to the barn."

"I could!" said Nora. Two words, two words spoken with such a triumphant ring that in a flash Don comprehended things that had been puzzling him: a recent preoccupation on the part of Nora; a day when he found her staring, dreamy-eyed, at the old barn; a trip to the Port that seemed unnecessary . . .

He sat up suddenly; deposited his outraged baby on the sand, and exploded with undue violence: "Nora, you can't mean it! You're crazy! That hideous old stable!"

"It's a lovely stable," defended Leonora, "and we can buy it for almost nothing. The owners moved to Portland years ago when the house burned. Don. They're tired of paying taxes and waiting for a summer colony to spring up next door and boom land values. They'll take $300 for the whole place—an acre facing the broad Atlantic! Imagine that! And the barn's thrown in. They don't consider it worth mentioning."

"It's not," said Don. His face was just a bit forbidding. "And it strikes me, Madam, that you're rather astonishingly well informed."

Nora was forced to laugh at this merited attack.

"I've taken pains to be," she admitted honestly. "Not to deceive you, Don, or to put something over on you in an unguarded moment, but because I had to know just where we stood. I'm not asking you to settle down forever, dear (How could you earn a living in such a spot?), but I'm homesick for a place to call my own—a refuge in time of need—a nook to hold the lovely things we just can't help collecting—a haven when there's a baby to be born. It's no fun bringing a child into the world during a storm at sea, as—as I did Jimmy."

Don looked at her in silence for a moment. When he spoke there was a trace of anger in his voice.

"Are you implying that I don't know it? That I underestimate the horror of that experience—for you, my dear? Do you think I'd have risked waiting so long to sail (even though we thought there was time to spare) if we hadn't been so damnably hard up that I felt I must squeeze every possible shilling out of South Africa? Why, I even considered sending you on earlier, alone, Nora, and was afraid you couldn't stand the trip with the boy to look after! I wonder if you've the least conception of how I felt that night when you woke me to say that things were imminent and I found the ship rocking like a cradle and the only doctor on board too sick with fever to lift his head off the pillow. I—I was sick myself, Nora, sick with fear. I mean, remembering what you went through before. You don't know me if you think I'd let you take a chance like that again. You don't—"

"Oh, come!" broke in Nora, smiling a little. "One would think I'd accused you of neglect! And I didn't need a doctor with that marvelous Norwegian nurse you dug up from among the passengers and my capable husband, who took her orders like a soldier. It's you who's the wonder of the family, Don. You never let me see that you were nervous—not for a minute. I remember thinking: 'Don wouldn't be so calm if things weren't going right'; but I was frightened just the same, terribly frightened, especially when the storm was at its height and my vivid imagination pictured the ship just ready to go down. And if everything hadn't been normal this time—Well, let's forget that possibility. Let's get back to the barn."

"Pony?" questioned James Lambert Mason with what appeared to his admiring father as rare intelligence.

"You hear that, Nora?" he asked grimly. "Why, even the kiddie understands that a barn's intended to shelter only cattle."

Nora laughed.

"Since when have ponies been considered cattle, darling?"

"Oh, you may laugh," said Don, and his wife knew instantly that something hurt him, "but when I remember all you gave up for—for me, Nora, the thought of your living in a stable—"

"The Christ Child was born in a stable, Daddy."

They both turned, startled, not having heard the approaching feet of their elder son. He stood behind them, his scarlet bathing suit a patch of gorgeous color against the dunes, his big, brown eyes regarding his parents soberly.

"So He was," said Don, and pulled the scarlet figure down on his knee. Across the child's dark head his eyes met Nora's. This serious first-born of theirs, whose five short years had been spent almost entirely among elders, possessed an uncanny way of getting at the heart of things. Sometimes it awed them, as it did now.

"Cows?" questioned the baby, and sat down again, this time on Nora.

Meaning of Whitechapel

Whitechapel is a parish and parliamentary district, east of the nucleated city of London. It is one of the poorest portions of the metropolis and was formerly notorious for its criminal population. From 1888 to 1891 it was the scene of the atrocities of Jack the Ripper. Within its boundaries are the tower of London and London Hospital. It is intersected by Whitechapel road. The name is derived from a former medieval chapel, whence all distances east of London were calculated.

The Modern Grandma

If you are one who remembers Grandma as a sweetly wrinkled old lady in lace cap who sat by the fire and knitted on winter evenings, and rocked and fanned herself on the porch in summer, then you are just another old-timer. The activities of a Grandmother's Club recently organized in Chicago will give you an idea how vastly Grandma has changed. The club boasts a membership of 39 grandmothers. One of its members is a candidate for mayor. Another employs 300 people in her candy factory; a third heads the B.&O. women's department; a fourth manages a $3,000,000 estate; a fifth (with 13 grandchildren) manages a gravel pit. Like younger folks, these grandmas play as well as work, listing as their favorite exercise swimming, horseback riding, bowling and gardening. Mister, you certainly don't know what you are talking about when you suggest pulling out the rocking chair for Grandma of this day and age.

Using whitewash is still another way of killing two birds with one stone. You not only beautify and brighten whatever you apply the solution to, whether it be residence, garage, outbuildings or trees, but you at the same time lessen the danger of contagious diseases in the community. Lime has come to be recognized as the very best disinfectant that can be used around the house. Spread on the yard in proper amount it also feeds the soil and helps the grass to grow, though care should be taken when used for this purpose to see that the quantity is not too generous. It furnishes protection from the weather for fences and buildings and insects that feed upon wood steer clear of lime when it is applied in the form of whitewash. And there's still another advantage, too, not to be overlooked--it costs so little. No other disinfectant, and of course no kind of paint, can be had for so little money. No other brings such a widespread return on the investment.

Wheat Insurance

The 1938 Agricultural Conservation bill carries an insurance clause. This insurance is for wheat only and will be put into effect for the 1939 crop.

County Committeemen H. A. Williams and J. A. Caudle, County Compliance Supervisor H. L. Scott and County Agent H. E. Smith attended a meeting in Coleman, Texas, on May 19th to learn this phase of the program.

Coke County has not been classed as a wheat producing county in the past but due to the increase in wheat production in recent years this county will probably receive a wheat allotment in July when secretary Wallace releases these allotments.

All producers who grow wheat and harvested it for grain should work up the history record on their farm for the past 10 years. That is the number of acres planted to wheat each year, and total pounds of wheat produced from this acreage.

The insurance is all crop insurance and it is optional with the producer. The premiums are to be paid in wheat. The rates are determined from the yield allowed the county.

Mr. H. A. Williams of the Wild Cat community has been appointed Wheat Insurance Supervisor for Coke county. Any producer who intends to grow wheat in 1939 should contact Mr. Williams and consult him about the insurance. Mr. Williams will take all applications for insurance.

"Monster From the Swamps"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, if I seem to be continually harping on the fact that adventures are things you meet up with most frequently at home, you can put it down to the fact that I am continually being reminded of it. Just the other day, while looking through a sheaf of letters I came to a story by a woman who had an adventure on a farm. Well—of course, there's nothing unusual in that. The funny part of it was that the farm was in this country, and the adventure was of a sort you'd only expect to run into in the jungles of Africa or South America, or to read about in some account of the grim battles between men and animals that the ancient Romans used to stage in their gladiatorial arenas.

The woman is Lottie Hawco—Mrs. John Hawco, of New York city. And the animal she fought with was a wild boar. I'll bet a lot of people—including me—didn't know there were wild boars in this country. But there are, as any South Carolina farmer can tell you. How they got here is an interesting story.

You see, the ordinary barnyard breed of pig is nothing in the world but a descendant of the wild boars you read about in tales of old-time Merrie England. Those boars were tamed and fattened and domesticated until, over the space of six or eight hundred years they became the fat, lazy, gluttonous animals you see in hog pens the country over.

How Pigs Get Wild and Dangerous.

But a pig will stay fat, and tame, and lazy only so long as he's kept in captivity and stuffed with chop suey from that well known galvanized iron can out on the back porch. Once he gets loose and goes back to the woods again and has to rustle for his own food—well—then he gets thin and tough and rangy. His tusks grow out, and in a generation or two he becomes a boar again—just as wild and as dangerous an animal as ever he was when he roamed the marshes and forests of old England in the days of Robin Hood.

There are plenty of those backsliding wild hogs in the back country of South Carolina, and the farmers hunt them down and round them up because they destroy the nests of the wild turkeys in the neighborhood.

The Boar Viciously Attacked Lottie's Mother.

And that brings us to Lottie Howco who, on February 16, 1931, was visiting with her mother and her sister, Inez, on a farm near Osborn, S. C., where a wild boar hunt was in progress.

A bunch of men from the neighborhood had been out all day, combing the marshes with packs of dogs, roping boars and herding them—alive—into a big high-sided farm wagon. They had just returned home with six or seven boars—big, vicious fellows, waist-high to a man and weighing three or four hundred pounds—animals that could break a man's leg with their huge, crunching jaws and which frequently did disembowel the fierce dogs that hunted them with one sweeping blow of their long, protruding tusks.

The men backed the wagon up to a strong enclosure and were untying the boars one by one and cautiously prodding them into the pen. Lottie, her mother and sister were standing near by, watching the proceedings—and then—suddenly—a terrible thing happened.

Attack by a Savage Boar.

The men had unloosed the largest boar and were prodding it toward the pen when it turned, squeezed between the wagon and the enclosure and rushed out into the open, gnashing its great teeth and foaming at the mouth. It headed straight for Lottie's mother, who was standing nearest the pen, and before she could turn to run, it was on her, throwing her in a heap to the ground, biting at her savagely.

It was the most terrible sight Lottie ever beheld in her life. Charlie, the foreman, stood with his mouth agape, too surprised for a moment to even move. Sister Inez, paralyzed with fright, clapped her hands over her ears and began to scream. Lottie herself was numb with terror, and for precious seconds—seconds that seemed like a lifetime—she stood rooted to the spot. All the rest of the men were on the other side of the pen, or on the wagon, too far away to reach the spot in time to do any good.

Then, all of a sudden, Lottie came to life. She can't explain what happened, but it seemed as if a spring inside her had suddenly been released. She sprang forward, threw herself on the snarling, screaming, rolling jumble of woman and beast, singled out the boar and began beating and mauling and scratching it with insane frenzy.

Surprised Him, So He Fleed.

The boar could have killed Lottie with one thrust of its sharp, pointed tusk. Lottie's mother had been saved from death thus far only by her long skirts and thick clothing. But taken by surprise, the boar couldn't quite figure out this wild new menace that came beating and kicking at his flanks—tearing and scratching at his eyes. It was a thing of fury. It didn't seem one whit afraid of the boar. And an animal will often reason that if you are not afraid of him, then he must have good cause to be afraid of you.

This one did just that. Snarling and grunting, he turned to flee from this inexplicable new attack. He got about three steps, and then he found himself tangled up in the ropes of the men who, by this time, had come around from the other side of the pen to deal with him.

The next thing Lottie knew, she was back on the porch of the farm house with her mother, looking over herself for injuries. She doesn't even remember helping her mother to the porch, and to this day she can't figure out how she came out of that fight without a scratch on her body.

Lesson for May 29

MAINTAINING PERSONAL EFFICIENCY

LESSON TEXT—Dan. 1:8-16, 19, 20; I Cor. 9:24-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. I Cor. 9:25.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Daniel Pleaseth God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Ten Times Strong.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—In Training for the Game of Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Liquor's Effect Upon Working Efficiency.

Personal efficiency is a subject which is receiving much attention in our day. There has never been so much accurate and usable information as we now have regarding diet, exercise, and medical care. The mind as well as the body has come in for attention and scores of books are available on the development and full use of the powers of personality. Some of these are trash, but others are helpful. Business is co-operating with the school and the home in giving boys and girls the opportunity to grow up to be useful and happy members of society. The church adds its important contribution, although we must confess that it is far from what it might be by the grace and power of God.

I. A Sound Mind in a Sound Body (Dan. 1:8-16, 19, 20).

Daniel and his three Hebrew companions had been brought to Babylon as captives, and were there chosen to enter the royal school for future service at the court. Every provision was made for the students chosen for that school. Their diet, however, included not only meat which was unclean to the Jew but wine, which Daniel knew to be undesirable. It took holy boldness to ask to be excused from that which the king had prescribed, but Daniel was blessed not only with courage, but with tact and courtesy. A ten-day test of a simple diet and water proved so successful that the plan was continued. At the end of the three-year course the Hebrews were not only physically stronger but mentally and spiritually superior.

The experience of Daniel and his brethren is not just an incident eagerly grasped at by "blue-nosed reformers" to prevent their neighbors from "enjoying" intoxicating liquor. The testimony of science, of business, of experience in all ages, proves that the use of even an amount of alcohol so small that the user does not feel its presence materially "reduces endurance, accuracy, and rapidity of muscular action of all kinds" (Emerson). It so cuts down the ability to think clearly and to react promptly to danger that it is absolutely taboo with such responsible workers as railroad engineers. It is not a stimulant, but a narcotic, which dulls the nerve centers. Dr. Edward Rosenow says, "The use of alcohol as a beverage is never justified. There is no such thing as the right use of beverage alcohol."

Such information as the above is available in publications of temperance organizations, books by various writers, and even in publications by state liquor commissions. It is published in newspapers and magazines and circulated by safety organizations and insurance companies. Yet, unbelievable as it may seem, the use of liquor is on the increase.

II. Success in Life Calls for Self-Control (I Cor. 9:24-27).

Paul delighted in illustrations taken from the athletic field. He talked of running a race, of fighting a good fight. He knew the athlete's need of keeping his body under.

The one who serves his school or athletic association in physical competition gladly surrenders his personal liberty to the guidance of the coach. He eats carefully, sleeps full nights, exercises consistently, and above all does not use alcohol in any form. Listen to the words of great athletic coaches—Yost: "I would not waste my time trying to train or develop one who uses alcohol." Stagg: "Coaches and trainers are dead against the use of alcoholic liquors, even beer."

Paul rightly points out that all these sacrifices are made by men for what is but a transient earthly crown. How much more should we do for the sake of our souls. Temperance instruction may well stress the physical and mental degradation that follows the use of alcohol, but above all let us teach boys and girls that its use has sent countless souls to eternal punishment and separation from God. We should be deeply moved by the loss of personal efficiency, but what shall we say about the loss of a soul?

Five Second Prizes $10.00 Each

Ten Third Prizes $5.00 Each

ONLY a few days are left before the close of our big Cake Recipe Contest. For all entries must be postmarked not later than May 31, 1938.

But there is still time for you to enter a recipe. Send in the directions for that cake which your family says is the best ever . . . which you bake for company . . . or always send to the church fair.

It will only take a few moments of your time to write out the recipe and you have nothing to buy . . . no letter to write. There never was an easier contest! Just fill out the attached coupon calling for your name, address, the brand of shortening, baking powder and flour used in your cake. Clip the coupon to the recipe and mail it to C. Houston Goudiss, author of the "WHAT TO EAT AND WHY" series in this newspaper.

16 Cash Prizes.

The winning cakes will be selected by the experienced home economists on the staff of the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory that he maintains in New York City. The recipe adjudged the best will win $25.00 for the lucky homemaker who submits it. There will be five second prizes of $10.00 each and ten third prizes of $5.00 each. Prize winning recipes, together with those receiving honorable mention from the judges, will be printed in a booklet, to be distributed nationally.

Simple or Elaborate Recipe.

There are no restrictions as to the type of recipe that may be submitted. Your favorite cake may be plain or frosted. It may be baked in layers or in a loaf—put together with a cream filling or topped with a meringue. It may be chocolate, maple, mocha, spiced, Devil's Food, a jelly roll or a Lady Baltimore. The proof will be in the eating!

That $25.00 first prize would come in handy for buying summer clothes or something special that you want for the house. You have nothing to lose, everything to gain, so why not write out your recipe—now. Attach the coupon and mail it to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Tin Pan Alley

This term is applied, not to a street, but to an area in New York city which is largely occupied by music publishers, especially the publishers of modern popular songs and arrangements. The area lies, roughly, between Forty-fourth and Forty-ninth streets and between Broadway and Eighth avenue. The designation, tin pan, is due to the discordant sounds afflicting the ears of passersby when different songs or arrangements are being played at one time by various instruments in adjacent publishing houses.

NERVOUS?

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy has been an effective social and political ally of both her father, former mayor of Boston, and her husband, ambassador to the Court of St. James. But the news that, in accordance with her husband's decision, she presented only seven American women at court is one of her rare appearances in the headlines.

The 11 engaging Kennedys have been viewed more or less en bloc in the news and Mrs. Kennedy has never been in a very sharp lens focus.

She was one of the prettiest of Boston debutantes, 30 years ago, a rollicking girl with black hair and eyes of Irish blue. Back home from her convent training, she taught her father "Sweet Adeline."

He was John F. (Honey Fitz) Fitzgerald, and in his campaigns he sang his way to memorable political fame—riding like a surfer on the long, lingering "swipes" of the song taught him by his daughter—"the flower of his heart."

Joseph P. Kennedy, her childhood playmate, was twenty-five years old when they were married in 1914. He borrowed $2,000 for a down payment on a $6,500 house. Their fortunes grew as their family, with Mr. Kennedy president of a bank, in a year or two after their marriage.

Mrs. Kennedy once told a Boston drygoods clerk that she bought 200 suits and dresses a year. It takes a heap of shopping to make a home, like the Kennedys', and she became known among her friends as a paragon of household efficiency comparable to the one in Solomon's off-hand apostrophe to such skills and virtues.

Now she is mistress of the "castle" which was once J. Pierpont Morgan's home; also of a beautiful mansion in Bronxville, N. Y., a huge summer estate at Hyannisport, Cape Cod, and a villa at Palm Beach, built by one of the Wanamakers.

She is slender and girlish, comely and vivacious, weighs 115 pounds and takes size 14 in dresses. Vionnet makes her gowns and she is envied by other women for her magnificent jewels— notable among them being a ruby and diamond bracelet which, it is said, is matched only by the one the Aga Khan gave his princess.

But she never lets the children run to unseemly display, holding them to restraint in regime and dress. Even without all these adventitious fixings, say her friends, she would be an admirable ambassador's wife, with her own quite adequate equipment of tact, charm and intelligence.

MAN and boy, this journeyman has helped process a lot of explorers' and adventurers' copy through the news mill. If it was ghost-written, it had only slick and synthetic excitement, like Ersatz pastry, and if it wasn't it was usually dull. Happily in contrast are the doubtlessly authentic and personally written yarns of W. H. Tilman, leader of the British Mount Everest expedition, now getting under way.

These stories from the Tibetan base camp have a professional ease and fluency, along with a ring of integrity which gives assurance that Mr. Tilman is really writing them. There is no ghost on the job here.

Mr. Tilman is thirty-nine years old, a keen-faced, hard-muscled Britisher of medium stature.

He has climbed mountains in the Alps and in Africa, including Mounts Kenya, Kilimanjaro and Ruwenzori. This is his fifth expedition to the Himalayas. The entrants in this high hurdle event are not youngsters. N. E. Odell is forty-seven, F. S. Smythe is thirty-seven and the others are all over thirty.

Star Dust

- ★ Andrea Steps Along
- ★ Lone Ranger Craze
- ★ All-Age Shaggers

By Virginia Vale

ANDREA LEEDS has been stepping right along since she did so well in a minor role in "Stage Door." She went on to do well in "Goldwyn Follies," is working now in "Letter of Introduction," and will play opposite Joel McCrea in a picture called, so far, "Youth Takes a Fling."

Which all goes to show that she was right when she refused to go on as just one more contract player. She felt that she wasn't getting anywhere, you'll remember, and got out of her contract, and all Hollywood said she was crazy, as she had just one performance to her credit at that time.

And then—"Stage Door."

The "Lone Ranger" craze is growing every day. The actor who plays the "Ranger" in the screen serial may go on a personal appearance tour. National Broadcasting company has arranged for transcription rights of the radio program for the South, Canada and Australia—at present it's heard on a 42-station tie-up three times a week. There's talk of a circus stunt and of a cartoon strip for the newspapers. And the country will be flooded with books, cowboy suits, chewing gum, sweaters, and all the other merchandise that can be used in profitable tie-ups.

Charlie Chaplin's latest discovery, Dorothy Cummingore, has been given a contract by Warner Brothers, and you'll see her first in "Three Girls on Broadway."

Bing Crosby can continue with his present radio sponsors for ten years if he wants to. It's said the advertising agency connected would like him to sign an agreement for that length of time, with the usual year to year options. His present contract still has eight months to run. Of all the Hollywood folks who have gone on the air, Bing has been the most successful and shows no sign of diminishing popularity.

Bing Crosby

Benny Goodman recently gave his second concert in Boston, before a packed house; as in Carnegie Hall, in New York, the first thing anybody knew the younger set in the crowd was out in the aisles beginning to "shag." An usher hurried forward to stop them, whereupon a conservative looking, middle-aged gentleman stopped the usher. Seems he'd decided to learn the "shag."

ODDS AND ENDS. . . . Paul Muni seems to be all set to do "The Life of William Tell" . . . When Frank Lloyd directs "If I Were King," with Ronald Colman, Frank's daughter, Alma, will play "Colette" . . . Joe Penner's new picture, "Go Chase Yourself," is his best one yet . . . Walt Disney divided $50,000 among the people who helped him to make "Snow White" . . . Max Baer is coaching Robert Taylor for "Knock Out" . . . The objection to Shirley Temple's making personal appearances has been that she was too young to appear behind the footlights . . . But Mary Pickford began when she was five, and it didn't seem to hurt her any . . . In "Four Men and a Prayer" you'll see Richard Greene, recently arrived from England, who, it is said, will be groomed for stardom . . . Now it's announced that Maude Adams' movie tests were so successful that she will not appear in "The Young in Heart," but in a production giving more scope to her talents.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Better Buttered Beets.—A teaspoon of freshly grated horseradish added to cooked, buttered beets will give a pleasant flavor. This is especially suggested when roast beef is served.

Ready Paint Brush.—To have a paint brush always ready for use, keep the bristles suspended in raw linseed oil.

Cooking Rhubarb.—Fresh young rhubarb needs no extra water, because it has so much juice of its own. One good formula for rhubarb sauce is two parts of fruit to one part of sugar, cooked very gently over a low fire until the liquid forms a syrup.

When Dyeing Clothes.—To prepare garments for dyeing, remove all trimming, buttons and buckles, and rip out hems, pleats and linings so the dye can penetrate evenly throughout the fabric.

Crisp Cole Slaw.—To have crisp cole slaw, shred the cabbage and allow it to stand in cold water a short time before seasoning.

HOW to SEW RUTH WYETH SPEARS

This Rag Baby Sits Down Gracefully

THE charm of a rag baby depends upon her figure. She may be molded with your fingers if the cotton stuffing is pushed into place very tightly a little at a time with the blunt end of a pencil. An extra bit of cotton may even stretch the fabric considerably to give chin and chest a shapely contour. Leave the opening for stuffing under one arm. Stuff the legs up to the knees, then sew across. Stuff up to the hips and then sew through the body again, as shown, before the upper part is stuffed. This makes the doll jointed at knees and hips.

To make a pattern for the doll, rule an eight by fourteen inch piece of paper into one-inch squares. Number the squares, as shown, then outline the doll so that the lines cross the squares exactly as they do here in the diagram. Back and front are cut alike. The dotted line around the doll in the diagram indicates the seam allowance. Eyes, nose and mouth are embroidered, yarn is used for the hair, and the dress is made of straight pieces.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest sewing book contains three pages of doll clothes; 90 embroidery stitches; fabric repairing; table settings; gifts; many useful articles to make for the house, yourself and the children. Price 25 cents postpaid, coins preferred. Just ask for Book No. 2, and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines, St., Chicago, Ill.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

Ripe Sliced Strawberry Jam

4½ cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit 7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar ½ bottle fruit pectin

TO PREPARE fruit, cut about 2 quarts fully ripe berries in halves lengthwise; cut large berries in quarters.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit, solidly packed, into large kettle; mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 3 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

The Very Idea

"Can I try on that gown in the window?"
"Certainly not, madam!"

Next Best Thing

Billy, aged six, was having a holiday, his school being closed on account of chicken-pox.
"Have you ever had chicken-pox, Keith?" asked Billy.
Keith, aged four, was not to be undone.
"Oh, no," he said, airily, "but I've had egg on toast."

A COMEDOWN

"Whenever I look at you, Martha, I think of Greta Garbo."
"Do you really, Bert?"
"Yes. But what's the use? A fellow like me has to be content."

All for It

"Do you prefer this hat turned down, dear?"
"How much is it?"
"Seven-fifty."
"Yes—turn it down."

Easily Pleased

"And I may say, my girl, that very few men would marry you."
"Very few would be enough."

A dangerous zoo bear is to be destroyed. One way of putting him on the carpet.

Oh, So!

"I can't marry you—we're intellectual opposites."
"What do you mean?"
"I'm intellectual, and you're the opposite."

Mover (struggling under heavy commode)—Say, Harry, did you say this was light oak?

What the Butler Said

A man visited the house of an old friend where the butler paid him every attention, and finally saw him into his car.
The man, who was miserly, did not tip him. As a delicate reminder the butler said: "Sir, if you lose your purse on the way home, remember you didn't pull it out here."

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

Frank Perciful recently bought a new combine through the W. K. Simpson Company. Mr. Percifuls combine and one owned by Cortez Russell and Marvin Simpson will operate in this section of the country in the grain harvest. While some oats are too short to cut and will be pastured, a rough estimate of the oats crop generally is of a 20 to 25 bushel yield. Dry weather of the past week or ten days has caused the grain to ripen fast.

MOTHER

Mother, when the night is falling,
When the light of day fades out,
Then I hear your sweet voice calling,
And I listen, still, devout--

Days of youth of daily learning,
New words you would teach me dear;
Now come back with tearful yearning,
While I lie pent up in here.

Days of youth of joyful laughter
Mother when I was with thee,
Without thinking what came after,
Sweet, o' dear sweet memory.

Mother dear, I'm so sorry,
Though it is of no avail,
Mother dear, now don't you worry,
I'll come back some day from jail.

Esther Walls.
