"BOB" KITTENS DEFEAT STEERS 33 to 13

To Bill Bancroft

In your writeup of the game our Steers played with your "Bob" Kittens there Saturday you classed the "Bobs" in class "C" squad without mentioning Robert Lee belonged to class C. You left the impression that Robert Lee was the heaviest. You failed to mention that those 4 large "Bob" Kittens who done most of the real work had 2 and 3 year experience more than our boys had. The steers still say they could beat the "KITTENS" bad. We haven't got a very heavy team but they are the out fightingest little team you ever saw, and those city sisters knew it, that is the reason they saved those 4 "Bobs," because they were afraid their pride would be ruined if they were defeated by our little country squad.

We still say the steers can beat the "KITTENS". Why don't you bring them over sometimes? We can show you we small town folks have some manners left. We will welcome all of you with kind courtesy. We will not be so rude as to laugh at your pep squad. Our smaler boys about town will not aggravate your girls all during the game and I know we have no boys in our town who would throw lemon and orange peel at your girls when they get into the bus. Our people know better and are reared better than that. That was not the first time Robert Lee people were treated with such discourtesy, as if we were negros, we can always come to your city expecting such ill treatment.

And as for that score of 33, it would have never been above '0' if those "Bobs" had not played. Thank You, The Editor.

CITY WATER OK

Fred O. Green received an official report, Tuesday, on a specimen of water sent to the laboratories of the health department at Austin earlier in the month which he says is very satisfactory. The report read, "Good. No contamination."

Mr. Green explained that our city water is classed by the health department as raw since it is untreated and he says for a small body of untreated water to be classed "good" means it really is good.

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW REGARDING THE PROPOSED NEW COURT HOUSE, REGARDLESS OF YOUR STAND ON THE ISSUE

As per the statement that I made in last week's paper, I will give you the facts concerning this issue.

1st. The commissioners court's position on this matter is strictly unbiased. We desire to conform to the wishes of the majority of the qualified voters of this county. It being the duty of the Commissioners Court to call an election for the purpose of determining this issue upon the presentation to the Court of petition which contains the required number of legally qualified voters, then, after such election, should it carry, the New Court House would be built, and if such election does not carry, it would not be built.

2nd. Coke County can secure a forty-five per cent grant from the FWA Federal funds, which would leave fifty five per cents to be furnished by Coke County by ways of a bond issue. To build a Court house that would meet the present demands and at the same time consider the future growth of this County, it would take approximately $132,000.00 to build a structure to meet the present and future demands: This would necessitate the voting of $72,600.00 bond issue.

3rd. Not knowing whether the voters of Coke County desire to build a new Court House or not, the Commissioners court has filed an application with the PWA for a forty-five per cent grant of the proposed costs in order to make these funds available should the voters of this County desire to build this Court house,--the dead line for such application being September 30th, 1938. Since filing this application I have been notified that it was necessary to have voted this bond issue by October 1st 1938 in order to receive serious consideration by PWA. However, if the voters of this county desire to build a new Court House, then the Commissioners Court will make every effort to obtain an extension of this time, which I think can be accomplished.

4th. To maintain the present court House, it is costing the tax-payer about three cents on the Hundred Dollar valuation, this money going for general repairs on the building and for rent paid out for office space that has to be obtained outside the present Court house.

5th. Should this bond issue be voted, the costs to the tax-payers will be approximately twelve cents on the hundred dollar valuation for a forty year period.

6th. This being a matter for the people to decide, I have given you the above information with the hope that the Commissioner's Court may continue to receive that needed co-operation that you have heretofore given, and which has been greatly appreciated. Again let me stress the Commissioners Court at all times refrains from trying to influence the vote of the people, but only tries to give you the facts in any issue that may arise, and then the people may vote their own sentiment.

Hoping that the above information is of some benefit to you, I beg to remain,

Sincerely,
McNeil Wylie, County Judge
Coke County, Texas.

A message from President Roosevelt to Mussolini asking him to use his influence on Hitler may be the real beginning of European peace. Also a message from Roosevelt to the ruler of Russia to use his influence on Hitler may be of some benefit to ward world peace. Mobilization of the British army made Hitler see that the outside world was not joking and he agreed to a conference of which we have no report at press time. Hitler's bluffs have come to a stop but he must not let his people know he is afraid of anything. As we go to press the 4 world leaders had not come out of the conference but it looks as if Hitler will get possession on Suedaten land from Czechoslovakia. Poland is bound to have a hunk also.

GARDEN CLUB PARTY

Mrs. Houston Smith entertained the Garden Club Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. Chism Brown gave a brief discription of the better known shrubs and flowers and a proper pronounciation of their names. Mrs. J. K. Griffith talked on tulips mentioning that while Holland is the original home of the bulb, growers in America have raised the bulbs with more success. She recalled that when the flower was first imported from Holland, one bulb was sold for $3,000 and that until the culture was perfected in this country, as much as three million dollars worth of the bulbs were imported yearly. Mrs. Griffith spoke briefly on the culture of tulips.

The club has entered a state contest of federated Garden Clubs in year books and their year book will be ready for distribution to the members at the next meeting which will be with Mrs. Frank McCabe at their ranch near McKinsieville.

Politics

Among candidates in Pennsylvania's primary election were Philadelphia Mayor S. Davis Wilson and Gov. George H. Earle, both running for Democratic senatorial nomination. Candidate Wilson lost, was subsequently indicted for misconduct in office by a grand jury summoned by Candidate Earle. In another phase of the campaign, Atty. Gen. Charles J. Margiotti ran for gubernatorial nomination, using as campaign fodder the charges that Governor Earle had extorted money from state contractors and employees, and "sold" legislation.

Appointed to investigate was a Dauphin county grand jury. Almost immediately Governor Earle sprang into action, summoned the legislature and rushed through special bills which would defeat the grand jury's investigation, would instead leave the quiz up to the governor's hand-picked legislative committee.

Fortnight ago this committee met, yawning politely over six days of perfunctory testimony. Not until Accuser Margiotti himself took the stand was there much interest. His testimony: (1) That Governor Earle's administration leaders had "sold" legislation to beer and movie interests for $150,000; (2) that Governor Earle prompted him to go ahead with the probe of Philadelphia politics; (3) that the governor had borrowed money from Matthew H. McCloskey Jr., contractor working on many state jobs. When Witness Margiotti had finished, administration critics admitted he had been permitted to speak more freely than they expected.

Still to be heard from were scores of witnesses including State Rep. Charles Melchiorre, Philadelphia Democrat, and Governor Earle himself, whose senatorial campaign will be decided a bare two months hence. Also to be heard from was the state Supreme court which is deciding legality of the legislature's "rubber stamp" bills, one of which would remove District Atty. Carl B.

Foreign

A month ago, long before Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler challenged the world at his Nuremberg Nazi congress, before Geoffrey Dawson's London Times editorialized on the advisability of giving Germany her way, Great Britain showed signs of weakening in the struggle to keep Czechoslovakia intact. All summer her Viscount Runciman had tried to make peace between Prague and 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans who wanted autonomy and eventual annexation by Germany, yet nothing was accomplished. Moreover, though Britain was pledged to aid France, who has a pact with Czechoslovakia, it has long been apparent that what England wanted, above all, was peace.

Fortnight ago, as Berlin and Prague veered on the edge of war, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain took the airplane ride, speeding to Fuehrer Hitler's chalet at Berchtesgaden in a desperate effort to stave off a conflict that would certainly involve all Europe. Next day he flew back, hastily calling his cabinet into session. To France went an invitation: Would Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet come to London for a conference? They would, and did, rushing across the channel like hungry dogs after a bone.

By this time it was apparent Europe's two greatest democracies were playing ball with Adolf Hitler, were willing to sacrifice Czechoslovakia to keep Der Fuehrer satisfied. After a week-end's study, the

PREMIER MILAN HODZA
He was down, but not out.

French statesmen went home. A few hours later, from simultaneous cabinet meetings in London and Paris, came announcement of the scheme that spelled Prague's doom.

The scheme: (1) Cession to Germany of Sudeten areas in Czechoslovakia which are overwhelmingly German; (2) a plebiscite to determine future status of Sudeten areas where German population is more than 50 per cent; (3) international guarantee of Czechoslovakia's remaining boundaries.

It was plain that Prague had been sold down the river without a hearing, since the British-French plan received French cabinet approval before Czech Minister Stefan Osusky was officially notified in Paris. When he finally was told, Minister Osusky's lips trembled as he asked newsmen: "Do you want to see a man convicted without a hearing? Here I stand."

Though immediate responsibility for the sell-out was directed first at Neville Chamberlain, observers soon placed it on France's doorstep. Actually, Premier Daladier had inspired the English conversation with Hitler, had urged Britain to back down on Franco-British agreement of April 29 to defend Czechoslovakia. But whatever the cause of this capitulation, it probably cost both Premier Daladier and Chamberlain a good-sized chunk of public support.

Still left to straddle was Czechoslovakia's unequivocal opposition to the scheme. Shouted Premier Milan Hodza: "In the name of the lawful authorities of this state I declare that . . . the government will defend completely the integrity of the state. A plebiscite would be unacceptable." While Hungary and Poland began looking for liberation of their minorities in Czechoslovakia, while Soviet Russia considered coming to Prague's aid, a moot question was whether the orphaned nation might not become another Spain, in which Communistic Russia and Nazi Germany would furnish the manpower for a civil war.

Labor

Mushroomed in little more than a year from 20,000 to 400,000 members, C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers of America is headed by Homer Martin, one-time preacher, is run by young zealots who split last June into two factions accusing each other of communistic leanings. Result was President Martin's dismissal of three vice presidents and a secretary-treasurer, temporary suspension of another vice president.

Fearful lest his pet union be torn asunder, disliking U. A. W.'s publicity, John L. Lewis finally secured Homer Martin's permission to intervene after the latter insisted U. A. W.'s autonomy be preserved. To Detroit went C. I. O.'s Sidney Hillman and Phillip Murray for a two-week study.

Outcome was labor peace, temporarily at least. Though Homer Martin won his autonomy plea, he gave in on other points, allowing Peacemakers Hillman and Murray to decide whether U. A. W.'s suspended officials shall be reinstated. In the future, they will help U. A. W. settle inter-union squabbles.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Sugar, Sirup and Molasses; Describes Correct Use of Sweets, Peerless Body Fuel

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE is an old saying that good things come in small packages. That is particularly apt when we pause to consider the nutritive value of sugar in its various forms. For two scant tablespoons of sugar supply as much caloric value as does three-fourths cup of cooked farina, or one and one-third eggs, or the lean meat of one lamb chop.

Sugar is a highly concentrated fuel food which burns quickly and completely in the body furnace.

The Sugar Bowl Is a Dynamo

It has been said that our present day civilization could not have reached its present heights without the driving force that sugar gives to men and women. And it is a fact that until comparatively recent times, only the very wealthy could afford this quick energy food which we now consume at the rate of more than 4,000,000 tons a year, or more than 100 pounds annually for every man, woman and child.

This peerless fuel food was once regarded almost as a medicine because of its ability to relieve fatigue and sustain vitality. And no wonder! For sugar is transformed into heat and power in less time and with less effort than any other foodstuff.

A Real Stimulant

While starchy foods require an average of from three to four hours for digestion, the body begins to burn a ration of sugar from 10 to 30 minutes after it is eaten.

It reaches the blood and muscles in a few minutes—as rapidly in fact as alcohol! That is why concentrated sweets, which are largely sugar, are so effective in combating fatigue.

Athletic coaches are well aware of the unique power of sugar as a stimulant and restorative of energy. That is why school and college youths are so frequently given highly sweetened beverages and other concentrated sweets before engaging in athletic competition.

Military leaders also appreciate how it increases endurance, and sweets are an important part of the soldier's ration. During the World war civilians were urged to reduce their consumption of sugar in order to make larger amounts available for the army, and most people found it difficult indeed to forego this agreeable food.

Indispensable for Most People

Sugar is such an indispensable ingredient in cakes, cookies, pies, puddings and ice creams, it is so necessary in beverages, on breakfast cereals and with fruits that it seems a great hardship to do without it even for one meal.

We are extremely fortunate, most people will agree, to live in an age when sugar is so high in quality and so reasonable in price. In the Thirteenth century when sugar was introduced to England through India, it cost the equivalent of ten dollars a pound in the monetary terms of today.

Refined sugar is now priced at a few cents a pound and one pound supplies over 1,800 calories! Moreover, when you buy a branded product, backed by a well-known name, you have the assurance that quality and purity are of the highest.

Moderate Use Desirable

Like all sources of great power, however, sugar must be handled with care. Too much sugar may prove as disastrous as too little. Possibly because of this, several false notions have grown up regarding this splendid food.

It is often charged that sweets cause indigestion, and it is true that when consumed in excess, they may ferment and result in irritation. Therefore, moderation should be the watchword.

But that is an excellent rule to follow in regard to all kinds of foods. For when consumed in excess, any food ceases to be beneficial.

It has also been charged that sweets are harmful to the teeth. But recent investigations suggest that the teeth are far more likely to deteriorate because the proper minerals and vitamins have not been included in the diet.

It is, however, desirable to restrict the amount of sugar given to children. That is because it quickly satisfies the appetite and may therefore decrease the consumption of other good and necessary foods, particularly those containing an abundance of minerals and vitamins. Children therefore can best take sweets in the form of sweetened puddings, gelatin, cooked and fresh fruits, and fruit juice and milk beverages.

A Food of Many Forms

The quick pick-up of sugar can be obtained in many forms besides the sparkling crystals of granulated sugar with which we are most familiar, or the brown sugar which is quite similar in composition, except for a larger moisture content, despite popular notions to the contrary.

Most fruits contain easily digestible sugars, the percentage in dried fruits ranging from 50 to 75 per cent. Milk sugar is also easily digested. Honey, molasses, corn sirup and the popular blended sirups are usually eaten in combination with other foods and are therefore unlikely to be consumed in too large amounts.

Corn sirup is often added to milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals, breads and desserts. It helps to make these foods more palatable and adds 60 calories with every tablespoon. It is so easily digested that it is often used in infant feeding.

Molasses provides significant amounts of both calcium and iron and is a good sweet for growing children. One and one-half tablespoons of molasses supplies as much calcium as one and one-half cups of diced carrots. It is a wise mother, therefore, who uses it in making the cookies that children like so well.

The mixed or blended sirups that are so popular with griddle cakes and french toast on cool fall days, also add palate appeal and energy values to the diet.

For in whatever form sugar is consumed, it remains nature's shortcut to press-the-button heat and quick, healthful stimulation.

I was six steps short of the landing which gave to the upper door, when Percy spoke—to bring my heart into my mouth.

"Oh, and bring my pistol, damn you. It's next to the torch."

The man was beyond the curtains masking the upper door.

Herrick and I stopped dead.

An instant later the curtains were dashed apart and a transient glimmer of light revealed our enemy.

Then—

"Who said it was shut?" he screeched. "It's open wide. They've done it on you, you poisonous fools. Where's Elgar? Get hold of Elgar and tell him to watch the drive."

With that, he thrust into the tower.

He could, of course, see nothing, but his foot at once encountered the heavy length of carpet which we had laid on the steps.

"Hullo! What's this?" he muttered.

I heard him pass on to the carpet, but what further movement he made I could not tell, for the pile was tremendously thick and deadened all sound.

With Herrick one step below me, I crouched there, straining my ears. We were just clear of the carpet, standing upon the stone.

Then Virgil spoke again—and made me jump like a foal.

"God in heaven," he yelled. "Why don't you bring that torch?"

The man was three steps above me—and coming down.

I dared not try to hit him—I could not see; but, quick as a flash, I seized the end of the carpet and jerked it downstairs towards me with all my might.

His feet whipped from beneath him, with a foul but forgivable oath, Percy Virgil fell violently on to his back. As he did so, still holding the carpet, I flung myself full upon him, enveloping him in its coils. Moved by some brilliant instinct, Herrick fought his way past us and, seizing the head of the carpet, flung this over and down.

Remembering Percy's orders to Elgar, I hurled myself up to the doorway and on to the landing beyond.

"Well done," breathed Herrick. "Which way?"

The mighty landing was empty, but, as we bolted across, a man came full tilt up the staircase, the head of which was six feet from Elizabeth's door.

So dim was the light and he was making such haste that though we must almost have met, I think he would have let us go by, but I dared not take the risk, and hit him, very reluctantly, full on the jaw.

As he crumpled and fell downstairs, Elizabeth's door was opened, and Herrick and I passed in.

Thirty seconds later, the four of us left the castle by way of the staircase—turret by which, two nights before, we had hoped to come in. The drive was clear. If Elgar had had his orders, he had not yet had time to carry them out. We darted across the gravel, slipped down the steps to the garden and hastened, Elizabeth leading, to where the walk began that led to the belvedere.

Twenty minutes later Winter, still breathing goodwill, was leading us down to where he had berthed the car.

If our narrow escape had shocked us, the drive to Raven ministered to our minds.

Arrived there, Herrick found a note addressed to him.

Sir,

I am told that you are returning to Raven tonight. A man, of the name of Max Bracher, was found by Salzburg yesterday afternoon. He corresponds to your description of the man of that Christian name. Your identification of him is desired, and I beg you will visit Salzburg without delay. When found, he had been dead for some hours, shot through the back.

Your obedient servant,
Sergeant of Police.

I confess that from this time on a mediaeval vigilance ruled whatsoever we did.

Herrick visited Salzburg against his will, and viewed the corpse of the man we had known as Max. No evidence had been discovered—against Virgil or anyone else. Even the bullet was useless, for it had spread irreparably. The same day, Thursday, Elizabeth, resting at Raven, laid her plans. I sat by her side in the meadows, and listened—and watched the woods.

The Duchess of Whelp was at Tracery, 35 miles from Innsbruck and 90 from where we lay. Tales out of number were told of the state she had kept, of the things she had said and done, of the efforts which had been made to obtain an invitation to enter her house. If the half were true, it is clear that for years before the War, the Chateau of Tracery sheltered a second Court.

And now, though she shut herself up, her writ still ran; and though the "fountain of honor" no longer played, its peaceful pool was reflecting, as never before, the vivid presence now nearly eighty years old.

"I shall go there tomorrow," said my lady. "And you, if you please, will drive me—there and back. At least, we'll be breaking a record. No one—gone uninvited to Tracery for certainly fifty years."

"With all my heart," said I. "But won't you take Winter, too? I mean, it'll look more important than if you just roll up with me at the wheel."

Elizabeth seemed to reflect.

At length—

"Perhaps you're right," she murmured, pulling the grass. "I wish and Elizabeth cross the threshold into the hall.

At least, she was in; but, as the door was shut and I turned to the car, I confess I felt far from sure that she was to be received. And if she was not, what then? The packet contained no less than the king's great ring, with which she was hoping to gain the access she so much desired. If the Duchess of Whelp was scrupulous, well and good; but if she was not, Elizabeth would be dismissed—and the ring was gone. And "Old Harry" might well be hostile to a girl that made bold to remind her that the bearings which Tracery flaunted were rightly hers.

I sat down on a step of the Rolls and lighted a cigarette, while Winter stood like a statue beside his charge, determined, I think, to show that he could maintain the pace which the major-domo had set.

The house was imposing, but grim, and plainly had not been cared for for several years. Massively built of stone, wind and weather could do it but little harm, and I bowed—something awkwardly, dimly aware of Elizabeth sitting beside the bed and smiling at me to tell me that all was well.

Old Harry inclined her head.

"How d'you do, Mr. Exon. Come here, if you please."

I stepped to her side, and she put out a hand which was blazing with three magnificent rings.

I took the fingers in mine and put them to my lips.

"I am told you're a man of action," she said, "and so it seems. But you're not very quick off the mark." She tapped the papers that lay on her delicate quilt. "This getting business. Why did you wait so long?"

"For two reasons, madam," said I. "First, for several months I was not myself. I found life hard to handle and had no brains to spare for anything else. And then I shrank from interference with a state of affairs which had been established so long."

"And then you saw Percy Virgil?"

"Yes," said I. "He's—he's not a nice-looking man."

"He'd look very well from a galloos," observed the Duchess of Whelp. She turned to Elizabeth. "What made you allow Mr. Exon to carry you off?"

"That," said Elizabeth, "is what I keep asking him."

"Sex," said Old Harry, firmly. "You liked subjecting yourself to the strength of the male. It's been done before. The Sabines kicked and screamed for the look of the thing; as a matter of hard fact, they were tickled to death." She turned upon me. "And what do you mean, Richard Exon, by hiding this lady at Raven for over a week?"

Her attack was so sudden that I was taken aback.

"Madam," said I, "it seemed the best thing to do."

"Did it, indeed?" said Old Harry. "Well, God preserve us all from your benevolence. The Lady Elizabeth Virgil, for whom the cities of Europe are being surreptitiously scoured, sharing two young men's lodgings ten miles from her father's house! And who's this Herrick person? I knew a Naseby once . . ."

"He's one of the best," said I. "And he pulls far more than his weight. As a matter of fact, he's the present Lord Naseby's heir."

Quick Changes in Government

Nicaragua, the largest Central American republic, is believed to hold the record for quick and kaleidoscopic changes in government, observes a writer in Collier's Weekly. Between 1839 and 1855, 396 different persons ruled the country, their average reign lasting less than 15 days.

No Evidence Had Been Discovered.

I knew what to expect. I know that she visited Brief very shortly before I was born, and my grandfather knew her well; but my—my uncle has never seen her since Mother was killed."

I sat up at that.

"Are you sure that he saw her before?"

Elizabeth started, and a hand went up to her head.

"Good heavens," she breathed.

"Exactly," said I. "I'll lay he's never set eyes on the Duchess of Whelp. Your father saw her—and knew her; but the younger son—the 'bad hat'—was not at Brief when she came. He can't deny her visit, because he knows it took place. It was a great occasion. Brief was delighted to honor so rare a guest. And so your uncle is bound to pretend he was there. But he wasn't—because he isn't the man he pretends to be; and all he knows of her visit is what he's picked up from the staff."

"That's right," said Elizabeth, slowly, still pulling the grass. "What a fool you must think me for not having seen it myself."

"How can you?" I cried. "I've known the truth for a year, and you for less than a week."

At eleven o'clock the next day I stood with my hat in my hands at the foot of Tracery's steps. Elizabeth stood at their head, some ten feet up. We were waiting for the door to be opened, in some suspense.

At last the door was opened, and a man all in black, with knee-breeches, inclined his head.

His manner was ceremonious and very polite, but left in my mind no doubt that he did not mean to admit "The Lady Elizabeth Virgil" or anyone else.

When he had finished speaking, I saw my lady nod. Then she held out the little packet she had in her hand. A salver appeared from nowhere . . .

I do not know what she said, as she laid the packet down, but after a little I saw the man bow and turn

Eskimo Language Difficult

The Eskimo language is one of the most difficult to learn, with the result that few traders or explorers have tried to learn it. Consequently there has developed, in intercourse between Eskimos and whites, a jargon similar to the pidgin English used in China. It has a vocabulary of from 300 to 600 uninflected words, mostly derived from Eskimo, but some derived from English, Danish, Spanish, Hawaiian and other languages. It is this jargon which is usually referred to by travelers as the Eskimo language.

Critics Hail New "San Michele" In Story Of Surgeon

"WHEN The Great Surgeon was the third son of a wealthy and respected family, destined for an envied naval career. As the years passed, he was thrown unwillingly into a human cataclysm of revolution and battle against my own countrymen was the starting point of my individual life and of my career as a surgeon."

So begins the fascinating story of a great London Surgeon who's anonymous autobiography has been written for Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Writing under the name of George Sava, this brilliant surgeon tells how, by sheer accident, he was launched on a career in medicine; and how, penniless and friendless, he struggled against fate year after year to get a medical education, to become a famous surgeon.

The story which began in the July Cosmopolitan and will continue for several months, is launched on a Caspian battlefield. The author, a White Russian, has just seen his best friend shot down. Carrying him to the base during retreat, the author looked about for a doctor.

No doctors, no instruments, and his best friend was dying! A bullet in his breast was killing him. If the bullet stayed, his friend died; if the bullet were removed there was a chance for recovery. So the author unclasped his knife, held it in the fire until it was red hot. The operation successful, Sava determined to become a surgeon.

"I made up my mind to devote my life to fighting death instead of killing and maiming. I resolved to become the modern helper of the poor and suffering: a surgeon!"

As it did to all White Russians, poverty came to this young man starting out on the long trek that was to make him the surgeon he hoped to be. He was alone, but determined.

Into Bulgaria he went, to secure a job as mechanic in a sugar refinery, but after four months of hell, he resigned. Next he became furnace stoker in a hospital, and between his stoking he eavesdropped at anatomy demonstrations and at night he broke into the mortuary and did his own dissecting in a dim, eerie light—until one night he was caught, and lost his job. But then the doctor who had ruthlessly thrown him out of a job turned and said: "You have proved that you are very clever at histology and anatomy. I shall be glad if you will accept the post of demonstrator."

In the early installments of "The Healing Knife" in the Cosmopolitan, George Sava tells how he gave up his post as demonstrator to follow the girl he loved to Paris, and how he dropped out of school, so she could finish her studies, only to have her deceive him; how he became progressively a writer, a lighting artist on the stage, a wanderer, an artist's model, and a student in Italy without a lire to his name.

Critics who have read the work of the mysterious "Mr. Sava" pronounce it "another Story of San Michele" which was a phenomenal best-seller.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Death's Sleigh Ride"

HELLO EVERYBODY: Kathleen Donovan of Chicago is bringing us a regular hair-raiser of a yarn—the tale of an adventure that happened to her in 1888, when she was a little girl.

In those days, Kathleen lived on a farm in Alcona county, Mich., with her mother and dad, and her five brothers and sisters. It was pretty wild country up there then.

Hunters Shunned Desolate Forest.

"There were thousands and thousands of acres of forest," Kathleen says, "where even the most daring hunters never camped. Settlers were few and far between. On the borders of this wild tract were just a few settlers, living along a road that was fairly passable."

Kathleen says that winter hung on until an unusually late date in the year 1888. The cattle in the neighborhood were on short rations, and the wild life in the woods was beginning to feel the pinch of hunger. It was not an uncommon occurrence, on those long cold nights, to hear timber wolves howling, calling comrades to join in a raid on some farmer's barnyard.

The nearest neighbors lived five miles away, and there wasn't much visiting between families. But one Sunday morning, in March, a family came over to Kathleen's home to spend the day, bringing their own little girl with them.

They had walked the whole distance in the morning, before the sun began to melt the snow, and intended to remain until evening when the muddy road would freeze again, and walk home by moonlight.

Horses were scarce in Michigan in those days, but Kathleen's dad had just bought a fine, young team.

Kathleen's Dad Suggested a Sleigh Ride.

"They were splendid for driving as well as on the plow," Kathleen says, "and my father suggested that if our guests would remain until about 9 o'clock, when the mud and slush on the road would be well frozen, he would drive them home and we children could have a sleigh ride."

Well, sir, that plan was agreed upon. When night came, they started out, dad and the neighbors on the seat and the kids burrowing into the straw pile in the back of the sleigh. After an hour's ride they reached the friend's house, stopped for a cup of hot milk, and then started for home again.

The kids were enjoying the ride. The moon was bright and the sleigh slid easily over the frozen road. They had covered about a mile of the distance when, away to the south, they heard the long, piercing cry of a wolf. Immediately, other wolves took up the cry. Inside of half a minute it seemed to Kathleen as though the whole forest were ringing with their terrible howls.

"I heard my father exclaim, 'My God!' and from that moment on we children knew it was a race for our lives. There were three of us who had taken the little excursion—my brother, who was about 10, my sister, who was 12, and I myself, then about 8.

A Race for Life With Hungry Wolves.

"My sister covered my brother and me with straw and told us to lie flat under the seats. The horses seemed to understand our terrible danger and fairly flew over the road.

"From the first alarm, there was no need to urge them. I had seen the flash of fire from their feet when they bounded forward. When we were about two miles from home we could see dark shapes on the long straight road a scant half mile behind us."

The kids huddled on the straw in the back of the wagon. None of them spoke until Mary, Kathleen's older sister, put her head down and whispered:

"When I jump, don't tell father. Let him keep right on."

Kathleen stared at her sister. She was going to sacrifice herself to delay those wolves for a few moments. Kathleen caught Mary and clung to her. Her brother told Mary he would certainly scream if she jumped. And meanwhile the wolves were gaining!

The horses were doing their best, but they had a heavy sleigh to haul, and the wolves were running free. They were less than a quarter of a mile behind now, and the sleigh was a mile from home.

Mother Was Handy With Shooting I. on.

The sleigh creaked as it lurched along the road. They were almost in sight of home when they heard the report of a rifle. Then, they heard a second shot. Thus, they knew that their mother, at home, had heard those terrible howls and was ready to help them.

As they rounded a turn in the road, they saw a great bonfire built near the spot where the sleigh would turn into the yard. A wolf is afraid of fire, and they knew if they reached that blaze alive, they'd have a chance. As they came closer to home, they could see Mother standing near the fire. Dad owned two fine repeating rifles—the first that had ever come into the locality—and Mother had brought out both of them.

Closer and closer they came to the blaze. And still the wolves gained on them. As the sleigh turned into the yard and pulled up beside the fire, Mother threw one of the rifles to Dad. And together, firing shot after shot, they held the pack at bay.

Kathleen says there must have been at least 30 wolves in the pack. They circled around the big fire, snarling and snapping, while Mother and Dad blasted away with the guns. When nine had been shot down, the pack broke and scattered. And the next morning two more were found dead a short distance away.

When the wolves were gone, the horses were cared for. Says Kathleen:

"There was a look of wonderful thankfulness on my mother's face as we gathered around the kitchen fire, but all she said was, 'Children—your prayers. And then to bed.'"

But I wonder if any one of those kids did any sleeping? How about it, Kathleen?

And Yet They Call It Sweet Remorse!

Telephone on the sports desk rings. "Say," comes the inquiry, "did that umpire rule right on that play today? Is it true that when a batted ball hits an umpire before a fielder has a chance to field it the batter gets a hit? Are you really telling me the truth? That's the rule? It is? You mean it? The umpire was right?"

"Well, that beats anything I ever heard. You're sure that's the rule? The reason I want to be sure is because I threw some of those pop bottles at the umpire and I ain't gonna start being sorry unless I have to. You're sure that's in the rules?"—Kansas City Star.

Mme. Arman de Caillavet profoundly influenced his career and became his lifelong friend. She was clever and had a host of acquaintances among the leading figures of literature and politics. She constantly worked for the fame of Anatole France and forced him out of his inertia into composition. Extracts from their correspondence show the impor-

Whites Not All Civilized

People of the white race who are afflicted with a superiority complex because of their skin color should do a little traveling. They'll find people of their own race still uncivilized.

In North Algeria, North Africa, there is an Arabic speaking tribe called the Kabyles, who are said to be the purest white race in Africa. Yet they are almost totally uncivilized, live in primitive fashion, and worship heathen gods.

Missionaries have established mission stations to try to civilize and Christianize them. This tribe is only one of several uncivilized white groups still to be found in the world.

tant part she played in his writings. In the dedication of Crainquebille, the author said: "To Mme. de Caillavet, this book which I should not have written without her help, for without her help I should write no books."

Honesty From Honesty

Every honest man will suppose honest acts to flow from honest principles.—Thomas Jefferson.

On the Highway

It is a curious trait in human nature that we will take off our hats when a woman enters an elevator, and be most apologetic if we bump into somebody inadvertently; but the instant we get our hands on a steering wheel we damn all mankind—woman and man alike.

Too often, we are inclined to look upon traffic guides and regulations as irritating restrictions designed primarily to keep us from having a good time, when the truth of the matter is, they have been devised solely for our convenience and comfort.

Invented Hot Dog

The inventor of the hot dog was the late Harry Mozely Stevens, caterer at the New York Polo grounds, probably about 1900. Stevens gave the credit for the introduction of the term, hot dog, to the late T. A. Dorgan (Tad), noted sports cartoonist. The name was probably suggested by the popular belief that wienies were made of dog meat.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. Lesson for October 2

THE ONE TRUE GOD

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:2, 3; Isaiah 45:22; Mark 12:28-34; 1 Corinthians 8:4-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.—Deuteronomy 6:5.

Today we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus and related New Testament passages. It is appropriate to point out that, far from being outmoded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent re-study and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards.

The lessons begin at the right point, for the first commandment properly deals with our conception of God. What a man thinks about God determines his entire outlook on life. We begin right when we declare that there is but one God.

I. The Truth Stated—There Is One True God (Exod. 20:2, 3).

Jehovah means "I will be what I will be," or "I am that I am." (Exod. 3:14). His very name declares God to be the self-existent, eternal one. How infinitely gracious then is the use of the word "thy" in verse 2! He—the great I AM—is my God.

There are many things concerning which we do not speak dogmatically. There are even Christian doctrines about which spiritual and earnest men may honestly differ, but regarding God we say with absolute assurance and complete exclusiveness—there is but one true God. If He is what He claims to be, if God is not to be declared to be a liar, then it is beyond the realm of possibility that there could be any other God. Hear it, ye men and women of America who in an enlightened land and age bow down in heathenish worship "before the god of gold, the god of self, the god of wine, the god of success, the god of fame, the goddess of pleasure, the god of licentiousness." The one true God says, "I am Jehovah . . . thou shalt have no other gods before me."

II. The Truth Explained.

1. God is our Deliverer (Exod. 20:2). He who brought Israel out of the bondage of Egypt is the one, and the only one who can deliver men from the bondage of sin. If you think that a sinner is not in bondage read Titus 3:3 and Romans 6:16 and then read the verses following in both passages, and not only see but follow the way of deliverance.

2. God is our Saviour (Isa. 45:22). Again note that "there is none else" who can save. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

It was this verse that led one of the world's greatest preachers, Charles Haddon Spurgeon, to accept Christ as his Saviour when he was just a humble lad. Perhaps some boy or girl who reads these lines may do likewise, and become a great instrument in God's hand. Teacher, perhaps the Spurgeon of the next generation will be in your class today. Win him for Christ!

3. God is Love (Mark 12:28-34). In 1 John 4:8 the truth is stated in all its glorious simplicity. "God is love." He not only loves us, and calls on us to love Him, and enables us to love both Him and our neighbors, but He "is love." Love is of the very essence of God's nature. He is the source of all true love. He is love.

It is worthy of careful note and emphasis in our teaching that the recognition and appreciation of this truth on the part of the scribe brought him near to the Kingdom of God, but not into it. He was "not far from" but he was not in it.

4. God is our Father (1 Cor. 8:4-6). Paul is speaking of the eating of meat offered to idols, and points out that such false gods are really nothing. This is true not only of the idols of wood and stone, but of supernatural beings, demons worshiped by primitive peoples. There are such spirit beings, active even in our day in such cults as spiritism, but they are not divine, not true gods (v. 5).

The true God is a Father, yes "the Father," of whom are all things and we're in Him (v. 6). As there is but one God, there is also but one Lord, Jesus Christ through whom the one God has wrought all things, and through whom we also come to God. If we have Christ we have all; if we have not Him we have nothing. Is He your Saviour?

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

M. S. writes: "I followed the directions in Book 2 for a fabric hat and it was so satisfactory that I wonder if you could tell me how to use a piece of woolen material that I have to make a hat for my little girl who is just starting to school?"

Here is a cunning schoolgirl hat that's easy to make. You need two pieces of goods—one for the hat and one for the lining. They may either match or contrast. Each piece should be 1-inch longer than the measurement around the largest part of the child's head. The depth of the pieces should be half their length. The diagram at the upper right of this sketch shows how to make a paper pattern for the hat. Cut a square piece of paper 1/2-inch wider and deeper than half the head measurement. Mark point A on the right edge half way between the top and bottom as shown. Points B and C are marked at the center top and bottom of the paper. The dotted lines are guide lines to help shape the curved lines between A and B and C and D. Point D is the center front of the top of the hat pattern and is placed on a fold of the goods in cutting each of the two layers. The diagonal line from A to C is the center back seam line.

Stitch the back seam of both hat and lining and press it open as at E. Now, place the two pieces right sides together and stitch as at F. Turn right side out, baste along turned edge and stitch as at G. Gather the top as at H and finish with a ribbon or a stitched fabric bow and a feather.

NEW WILLIAMSBURG, VA., IS SETTING FOR MURDER STORY

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. — Residents of this completely reconstructed village have been waiting to see which of its several thousand visitors would write the first novel based upon the changes which have taken place here.

The great Johnson novel, "To Have and To Hold," written many years ago, went a long way toward immortalizing the old Williamsburg.

Old residents of Williamsburg and the students and professors in the College of William and Mary who lived through the reconstruction period — who saw the old town rebuilt before their very eyes, agree that there is a great story to be told.

Leslie Ford, prominent writer who lived for some time in Williamsburg, has at last written the expected novel—a murder mystery called "The Town Cried Murder," which starts in the September issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine.
