Baptist W. M. U.

The norther Sunday caused some discomfort among churchgoers at the Baptist church due to the workmen failing to install gas stoves in the Sunday school class rooms as the company had agreed to do. The stoves were hooked Monday and all class rooms and auditorium are now in shape to be well heated.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Faith of Decatur are expected here next week to engage in business and will occupy the W. M. Simpson building. It is not known just what line they will feature, but probably be variety stock.

Remodeling

Work of remodeling the old public school building into a modern high school plant is to begin on Nov. 21 and pupils of the seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh and B third grades will be moved into the basement of the Methodist church, the Methodist church, the Christian church across the street from the Methodist church and into one other building not yet decided on.

Vacations will be rather generous for pupils and teachers during the next two months. Friday of this week will be a vacation, there will be two days at Thanksgiving and possibly two weeks for a Christmas-time frolic.

Telephone Company Remodeling Office

If your telephone is out for a few minutes one day soon, it can be laid to improvements now in progress at the local office of the San Angelo Telephone Company. The south-east room of the building has been converted into a large office and pleasant lobby with a new telephone booth and comfortable seats for the patrons. A new switchboard and distributors rack have been installed, the walls repaired, wood-work repainted, new linoleum laid on the floor and a door cut from the office to the bath room. A gas heating system has been installed by the West Texas Butane Co.

Marvin Barnes, local manager says he expects the work in the office to be finished within a week.

Blue Bennett Bridge Club

Miss Mettie Russell included Mrs. Marvin Simpson and Mrs. Ivan Puett as guests when she was hostess to the Blue Bennett Bridge Club Friday afternoon. High score was taken by Mrs. Craddock for members and Mrs. Marvin Simpson scored high for guests. A tally of the entire game showed the Blues in the lead for the afternoon.

Miss Russell used a profusion of autumn flowers for decoration in the rooms where bridge was played and at the refreshment hour she served pumpkin pie with whipped cream and coffee.

Mrs. Craddock will entertain the club two weeks hence.

Members present were Mesdames Cortez Russell, W. M. Clift, Rial Denman, J. S. Craddock, Delbert Vestal, F. C. Clark, Paul Good, T. A. Richardson, Chism Brown, S. E. Adams, J. A. Austin, J. C. Suead, Jr., Fred Roe.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER

War--War?

Surely there is enough to bear.

In each day's battle for the bread we eat,
In fortune that must veer with winds and tides,
In sleeveless conquest and the long retreat--

Consider--ere bare livelihood be won--
The grim forced marches that our feet must take,
The bitter streams that each must ford alone,
The clutch of fear when hope's bright lances break;
Consider them--the vigils by night,
The trysts we keep with sorrow in our turn,
The strength that must go down before Time's siege,
The shifts and desperate stragems we learn;
Consider them--the wounds a soul must take
Nor wince, nor cry, nor show a pitying scar;
The shattered loves--and count the sorry pile.
It is enough.

Oh, let no man add War!

War--

Listen to me. I know what I tell you--

War is defeat, tho' you lose or you win;

Victory's nothing of savor in houses

Where young feet went out and will no more come in.

Victory--that word is chattered of jawbones,

Beardless and fleshless and long in the molds;

Drummed out on brainpans with thigh bones

for drumsticks;

Whistled thro' gaps where lips writhed themselves cold.

What then is Victory? What is Defeat?

Come,

Those with the knowledge shall give us their word--

Metal-blue flies, with their fat parchment bellies,

The scavenger dog and the carrion bird--

"Either is feasting and each is a banquet;

Two words for a killing," their glutton reply.

"Nothing between them!" a purple-brown hoodie

"No morsel of difference," they chumble together--

The rat at the flank and the worm in the groin.

Look well on Victory--

Con Defeat over!

Let no man deceive you. They are the same coin--

A two-headed penny with Hell in its purchase,

The two-headed penny that Man has named War.

What--will you have it? I tell you it buys you

A gutsful of lead and your mother a Star;

A foul death, a beast's death, and nobody bettered,

Or blind days and maimed days and nights shot with fear.

Listen, I tell you--(Oh how shall I tell you?

God give me words to cry! God make them hear!)

Fresh from the Devil's own fingers it tumbles,

If it falls in your path let it lie, let it lie!

Who picks it up buys him--good value for money--

Blood on the acres and death in the sky;

A pestle wherewith to pound sweet lives to powder;

Scourges for innocence; racks for the just;

Torn sides and pierced feet; lungs turned to corruption;

Mouths oozing slime in the vermin-gray dust.

Plenty for money--Stark hunger for children;

Patterns of hands that beat madly on air;

Burden of wombs that are never to quicken;

A second cold travail for mothers to bear--

Plenty of money--Aye, more than you'll carry,

And change enough over to buy at the end

A place in the bread line; Grief for a bedmate;

And carking Regret for familiar friend.

Listen, I tell you. I know what I tell you.

They bait you with honor. They dazzle your eyes

With ribbons and banners--

But medals are lumber,

And Glory a fool's cap, and Pain is the prize.

I know what I tell you. I lived thro' a war once--

Four years for good measure--A war that we won.

(No doubt about it. It's down in the textbooks, Proved past all questioning, settled and done.)

Listen, I tell you. We won it. My country

Stood up, crowned the victor, in sight of all earth;

The laurels, the garlands, the palms and the triumph

Safe in her keeping--for what they were worth.

For what they were worth--

But she won it, I tell you;

(No man can dispute it. The truth is a blade.)

But I and my household--and millions more with us--

We lost it.

Our losses can never be paid.

A Family Reunion

The arrival of relatives from Caddo, Oklahoma, was the occasion for a family get-together at the J. J. Vestal home, Sunday when twenty-eight relatives were present. The visitors from Oklahoma were Mr. Vestal's daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Leinweber and her children, George, Paul, Albert, Mabel and Mrs. Ed Beaver and Mr. Ed Beaver and their little son.

Others who gathered at the old home Sunday, included Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Murtishaw, A. V. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Vestal and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. El Hatley and son, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McDorman and children, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vestal & baby and Aaron Vestal.

After the family dinner, pictures were taken and Mr. Vestal, who is eighty-four years of age, gave vent to his happiness by dancing a back-step.

Mrs. Rabin Very Ill

Mrs. G. A. Rabin, one of the earliest and most colorful of this county's pioneers, is critically ill at her ranch home in the Hayrick community where she has resided for more than half a century. Mrs. Rabin was taken to San Angelo last week for treatment but after numerous X-ray pictures, physicians gave no hope for her recovery and she was brought home.

All of her six living children are at her bedside. Mrs. Joe Turner came from San Antonio last week, Mrs. Charles Payne arrived from Holbrook, Arizona, Tuesday and Bill Weathers is expected today from his home in Jasper, Wyoming.

ARIEL CLUB NEWS

The Ariel Study Club entertained the Airlettes with a skating party Friday afternoon. After skating hours, the two groups drove to the Marvin Simpson ranch home where they were served a chili supper. Later, they gathered in the ranch living room and toasted marshmallows at the fireplace. All members of both clubs were present.

The Airlettes drew names of their sponsors for the coming year.

The local P. T. A. meeting will be postponed from this coming Tuesday night to the following Tuesday night, Nov. 22, due to the fact that the president, Mrs. Houston Smith, will be away attending the state convention and will give her report the following week. Otherwise, her report would be a month old before the organization could hear it.

Free-Hand Embroidery Design Is Fun to Do

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT IS not often that a mere matter of stitchery strikes a national note with Americans, but here is something from a school teacher that may touch your pride a bit. She says, "Your Book 2 on Gifts and Embroidery interests me because it is the only thing I have seen on this subject that shows simply and clearly how to use a little originality in hand work. The women of all nations but ours find pleasure in expressing their own ideas in embroidery and needle crafts."

Here is another free-hand embroidery design that should be as much fun as those in our book. This attractive border is suggested here for a bed jacket. You will have no difficulty in finding a pattern for a jacket as they are quite the thing to wear over sleeveless nighties. Your free-hand border will dress it up for a Christmas gift.

If the jacket is pale pink, the rows of running stitches might be in several tones of rose. The cross stitches could be in deep rose and turquoise blue to simulate flowers. The long and short stitches, shown at A and B, should then be done in apple green. Lines may be drawn with a ruler as a guide to keep the rows straight, and evenly spaced dots may be made to indicate the cross stitches beginning the spacing at the corners of the design.

Are you ready for Christmas; birthdays; and the next church bazaar? Do you turn time into money with things to sell? Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2 has helped thousands of women. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book. If you order both books, a leaflet on quilts with 36 authentic stitches will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging headache, persistent dizziness, attacks of drowsiness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. They are recommended by new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Rail Reorganization Predicted Following Denial of Wage Cut
By Joseph W. La Bine

COMMITTEEMEN LANDIS, STACY AND MILLIS
A cut would be ineffective, detrimental. (See TRANSPORTATION).

Transportation

In the opinion of three experts, American railroads have no right to cut 15 per cent from pay checks of 930,000 employees because: (1) it would be a stop-gap measure at best, only reducing the standard of living at a time when business in general is coming back; (2) the railroads' financial problem is still of short term aspect, having been critical less than a year; (3) although railway wages have not fluctuated so badly as wages in other industries, they have not been advancing proportionately so fast as in other industries; (4) a flat 15 per cent wage cut would not be equitable, since smaller roads—which are in worse shape—would derive less benefit than the larger, more prosperous lines.

This was the gist of a 40,000-word opinion handed down by President Roosevelt's emergency fact-finding commission after three weeks of deliberation. Board members: Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy of the North Carolina Supreme court; Dean James M. Landis of Harvard law school, once chairman of the securities and exchange commission; Professor Harry A. Millis, University of Chicago economist and former member of the national labor relations board.

Though offering a well-considered opinion, the commission gave no help to sorely pressed railroads. Only tangible result is that some solution of America's entire rail problem will probably be speeded. Possibilities: (1) Wholesale reorganizations, combines and abandonment of lines to avoid duplicated service, a program which the interstate commerce commission must approve, and which would probably decrease railroad labor employment; (2) agreement with labor for a temporary, smaller pay cut; (3) federal financial assistance, which would only pile higher the already high interest charges and would offer only temporary relief.

Reorganization is the most likely solution. Already pending before the I. C. C. when the fact-finding commission reported were proposals for three such plans.

Domestic

Opponents of the administration's foreign policy have long criticized Secretary of State Cordell Hull for censuring Japanese encroachment on U. S. affairs in the Orient, meanwhile allowing Mexico to expropriate U. S.-owned oil lands. Secretary Hull's answer has been that Mexico's problem may best be settled by arbitration, not through a hostile attitude that may destroy Western hemisphere peace. The latest Mexican step has been seizure of a headquarters building occupied by Standard Oil subsidiaries, an act which brought only feeble protest from U. S. Ambassador Josephus Daniels ("I made representations..."). But if the U. S. hopes to stalemate Fascism in the Western hemisphere by its kid-glove policy toward Mexico, it may be doomed to disappointment. Although President Lazaro Cardenas once said his country would sell oil only to democratic nations, he has just announced consummation of a contract to sell several million dollars' worth in Rome.

Foreign

After the peace of Munich, France's Premier Edouard Daladier went to great lengths justifying his position before the senate and chamber of deputies. He won confidence by assuring Frenchmen that if Munich's treaty was a capitulation—which he denied—France would never again capitulate. But Premier Daladier's promise is not borne out in fact. At the Marseille convention of his Radical-Socialist party he outlawed communists from the government, plainly a move to curry favor with communist-hating Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini. Many observers believe this decision shows Premier Daladier is frantically grasping for a straw, since by repudiating the communist party he throws away a large part of his Popular Front support. Not only will the premier lose his next election, but France will probably break off her treaty with communistic Russia.

Utilities

New Deal dams and power plants have offered public utilities serious competition, forcing down their prices and creating an unfriendly breach between electricity executives and the administration. One government power project not yet started is the St. Lawrence waterway, which President Roosevelt praised during September when the war scare first began. At that time, partly because he feared a lack of power reserve, partly because such a shortcoming might be good advertising for a St. Lawrence project, the President appointed a commission under Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war.

SECRETARY JOHNSON
The war department made peace.

When the commission reported recently, it failed to mention St. Lawrence waterway plans. But it made bigger and more puzzling news by drawing executives of 14 large utilities to Washington and getting their promise to start expanding. If this was a peace gesture, it was overshadowed by explanations that utility expansion is an important step in the government's defense program and a healthy move toward business recovery.

The program: In 15 areas (all east of the Mississippi) utilities will spend an immediate $350,000,000, boosting it to $2,000,000,000 if power consumption increases normally the next two years. Only government function will be Reconstruction Finance corporation aid.

Though generally regarded as an optimistic sign, utility expansion has been minimized in some quarters. The 1,000,000 new kilowatts in generating capacity is only a 3 per cent boost in U. S. power potentiality, considerably below the average increase in good business years.

NEW YORK.—To administer the wages and hours law, which recently went into effect, Elmer F. Andrews left a job which gave him shorter hours and more wages. E. F. Andrews Has Taken on Full-Time Job As New York state industrial commissioner, his salary was $12,000, and he could get by nicely with a seven or eight-hour day. This job pays $10,000, and, considering its volume of detail, its complications, its novelty and its controversial entanglements, it looks like a 24-hour shift for Mr. Andrews.

He is a professional engineer, born in New York, earnest and diligent, a glutton for detail, living moderately in Flushing with his wife and three children until his removal to Washington. In addition to his five years as state industrial commissioner, having succeeded his former chief, Miss Frances Perkins, in that office, his experience in wage and hour adjustments has been with industrial concerns and chambers of commerce.

After his graduation from Rensselaer Polytechnic institute, he was pilot in the U. S. army air service in the World war. He built railroads and factories in Cuba and engaged in construction work in New York City, planning civic improvements for the Queensboro Chamber of Commerce, among other large-scale enterprises. In these years he engaged in compensation studies for various industrial groups.

Never belligerent, Mr. Andrews has been more of an arbiter than a fighter, although he did take on certain employment agencies for a battle when he was industrial commissioner. He swings no nightstick, and tells the employers this isn't going to hurt them in the least.

THE late Newton D. Baker liked to discourse on the importance of "keeping intellectually liquid," and free from embarrassing alliances and commitments. John J. H. Amen Distinguished Harlan Amen, runner-up for Thomas E. Dewey in the national racket-busting tournament, is that way, too. Assigned to the sensational crime and graft clean-up in Brooklyn, he allows the reporters to drag out of him the admission that he "never belonged to anything."

As an assistant United States attorney, he has been netting racketeers steadily since the United States put teeth in the Sherman act in 1934. In view of J. Edgar Hoover's revelations as to the overlapping of crime and venal politics, Mr. Amen's political detachment is interesting. It is also interesting in our new realization that federalization of our government has been in part due to the failure of the states really to govern.

He is a grave, aloof aristocrat, with an academic background of Phillips-Exeter, Princeton and Harvard. He is a son-in-law of President Cleveland, with a residence in Park avenue, great intellectual and social reserve.

Jas. Marshall Alarmed Over Jobless Youth James Marshall, president of the New York board of education, is alarmed about our jobless youth, aged from 18 to 24. He says it was this condition which made fascism in other countries and we had better watch our step. He proposes a drastic national solution.

Mr. Marshall is a lawyer by profession, the son of the late Louis Marshall, one of the most eminent lawyers in New York's history. He was appointed to the board of education in 1935 and became president of the board last June.

"Well, well," said Herrick. "And who ever heard of two guests abusing their host at table until he's carried away and then getting down to his brandy and having a rubber of bridge? You know it's blasphemous. I don't believe the Borgias ever did that. And I'll lay lil Percy's got ear-ache. 'Three swine to one pearl!'"

I forgot what answer I made, but I know I sent Winter to bed and, after two or three minutes, went up to my room. But I did not intend to sleep; for the "pearl" was out of my sight.

I had seen her into her suite 20 minutes before. I trusted to see her come out in a little less than eight hours. But I had no faith in Elsa, and—Virgil had his back to the wall. Had there been but one door to her suite, I would have slept across it. But there were four doors to her suite, and one was outside I could not so much as watch them: Argus himself could have watched but one at a time.

I took off my coat and lighted a cigarette.

As I threw the match out of the window, somebody knocked at my door.

I was at the oak in a flask, to find Winter standing without, with a key in his hand.

"I forgot to tell you, sir." He entered and shut the door. "You gave me this key and told me to lock up the Rolls. Her doors, I mean. But I 'aven't been able to, because this isn't the key."

"Isn't the key?" I said, frowning, and with that I took it out of his hand.

"It isn't, indeed, sir. I tried it again and again."

"But . . ."

And there I stopped dead—with my eyes on the key I was holding between my finger and thumb. Winter was right. This was not the key of the Rolls. Although she did not know it, Elizabeth Virgil had the key of the Rolls. I had handed it to her on Friday, with the rest of her things. It was now, perhaps, under her pillow. But this was her master key . . . that fitted all five of her locks.

CHAPTER IX

Whilst I changed, I gave Winter his orders. These were, in short, to pass the night on the landing, watching the door which gave to Elizabeth's suite.

"If anyone tries to enter, put your torch on his face and hold him up. The door may be opened for him; but don't like Elsa's face, and he's not to go in. When you've got him, lift up your voice and shout my name, and I'll be with you before you know where you are. I shall be in the staircase-turret, closely watching the other door of her ladyship's rooms."

"And if you want me, sir?" said Winter.

"I'll call her ladyship. She'll let me through her suite and on to the stair. I don't think anything will happen, and, but for Elsa, I'd tell you to go to bed. But it's thanks to me that she is inside that suite, so it's up to me to see that she does no harm."

And there I remembered Elgar, the man for whom Virgil had called when we had escaped from the tower. I had learned from Elizabeth that he was Virgil's chauffeur and was as much trusted by his master as he was distrusted by everyone else at Brief.

But when I mentioned his name—"He's away just now," said Winter, "with Mr. Virgil's car. There's a knock in the engine or something they can't get right."

"So much the better," said I, and spoke as I thought.

And that, I think, shows how ill equipped I was to deal with a man of Virgil's capacity, for I should at once have suspected the absence of his chauffeur and car. But I am ashamed to say that it did not occur to me that, if there is work of any kind to be done, the lugger will take an offing, instead of staying in port. Be that as it may, I read the danger-signal as being a piece of good news; then I took up my pistol and torch, and we left the tower.

To post Winter took but a moment; and then I was treading the steps down which I had knocked the servant six days before. My shoes were rubber-soled, and I made no sound, but, as I have said before, the well of the staircase was lit, and the first floor, to which I was going, was very much better illumined than was the landing above. Still, there were shadows enough about, and I carefully kept to them.

As luck would have it, I knew the whole of my way. I was not going down to the hall: I was bound for the picture-gallery, where we had gathered that evening, before dinner was served. This lay upon the first floor—a fine, long room, and its range of windows was broken into three bays by two of the staircase-turrets with which the castle was served. And the first of these, I knew was Elizabeth's own—I had seen her come out of its door at a quarter past eight.

Using the greatest caution, I left the magnificent staircase and stole to the gallery's doors. Happily, these were open, but here the darkness was thick, so I put to the doors behind me and drew my torch. And there my luck went out, for the torch I found to be useless. It was dead.

Now I could, of course, have gone back; but, since Winter needed his torch, it meant going back or sending him back to my room: so I made up my mind to go on, because, though I should have liked it, saved. For some extraordinary reason, no one was coming to answer the call of the harp.

Expecting to be discovered and put to shame, I had, of course, relinquished my delicate enterprise; but now there was plainly no reason why I should withdraw, provided that on my way back, when my watch was done, I set up the harp again by the light of the dawn. So I ventured to hold on my course.

Before I had covered six feet, I touched the door of the turret to which I was trying to come . . .

Now I had expected the staircase to be in darkness; but the moment I opened the door, I knew that a light was burning beyond the oak. For a moment I found this strange. Then I remembered that I had left lights burning on the staircase within the tower and decided that the practice was natural where dangerous steps were serving a private room.

I took the key from the lock, stepped across the threshold and closed the door.

I was now in a little, stone passage which ran through the castle wall and gave directly on to the turret-stair: the wall being four feet thick, the passage was four feet long, for the turret adjoined the castle, yet was complete in itself. An electric light was burning where passage and stairway met, thus my head and down the back of my neck . . .

It was that that cleared my brain, and though my head was aching, from that time on I was healthy in body and mind.

I lifted my head and looked round. I was sitting in the passage, just clear of the turret-stair. Percy Virgil was sitting on the stair, a step or two up. And a man who I knew must be Elgar was standing in the passage beside me, pitcher in hand.

Percy Virgil picked up my pistol, looked at the safety-catch, weighed the thing on his palm and slipped it into his coat. Then he glanced at his wrist-watch and fingered his chin.

"You are very convenient, Mr. Exon. I should have got you later, but probably only after an ugly scene. And I do so dislike being crossed . . . But now you've avoided all that, and, what is more, you have made my path very smooth. You see, my cousin is going. The Lady Elizabeth Virgil is leaving the castle tonight. That was always understood, not by you, or that silver-tongued fairy, the Duchess of Whelp. But it was understood by me—as soon as I heard that my cousin was coming back. You see, I don't want her here. I really made that plain about ten days ago. But some people won't take a hint . . . Well, now she is going for good. She will never come back."

The man stopped there and leaned forward, with glittering eyes.

"My luck came in, Mr. Exon, when you knocked over that harp . . . We were going, Mr. Exon. Elsa had received her instructions and Elgar was on this stair. And then you knocked over the harp . . . And so I held everything up and waited for you."

"Now what will they find tomorrow? Not one, but both of you gone . . . Abduction? Well, hardly. They don't abduct people like you. What about an illicit elopement? A passionate flight? Oh, that's absurd . . . Wait a minute. Consider that beautiful scene in the belvedere? This evening . . . at sunset, Mr. Exon. Yes, you were watched—by a most reliable man. And then the key to her bedroom . . . that a lady gave to her swain? And then the dressing-case . . . which Elsa is packing now? Elsa—there's a good girl. She will speak to her own reactions—with tears running down her cheeks: how she and you fought for her darling and how her entreaties were foiled by the way of a man with a maid. Aunt Sally may put up a show, but she won't be able to face these basic facts. And I hardly think she'll lay them before the police. I mean, they might miss the idyll and get the blurb . . ."

He got to his feet and yawned.

"Go and get her ladyship, Elgar; and tell Monna Lisa I'm not going to wait all night. If she can't pack a dressing-case—"

"It is ready," said Elsa's voice, as Elgar went up the stair.

"You see, Mr. Exon," said Virgil, "the way to win in this world is to go all lengths. It's simpler, swifter and safer—every time. Think what I should have been spared if I had taken that course ten days ago. But there . . . One lives and learns. Take my two, er, assistants, for instance." He threw a glance up the stair. "I can count upon Elsa. She's wanted in Bristol for forgery—a very bad case. But on Elgar I have no hold: so, though he does not know it, he hasn't got long to live. I think he will be run over—I'm not quite sure. But here they come."

He picked up a length of cord and then stepped over my legs and out of the way. The next moment Elgar appeared, with Elizabeth over his shoulder, as though she were wounded and senseless and he was bringing her in.

"Put her ladyship down," said Virgil, making a knot in his cord. Elgar unshouldered his burden and set it down on the steps.

My eyes met those of my lady, and order came back to my soul. "Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased?"

Where Rice is a Luxury
While rice is a universal food to almost all classes of people in the Orient, oddly enough it is a semi-luxury to 150,000,000 poor people living north of the Yangtze valley in China. Millet is the staple food in that locality and rice is eaten only on festive occasions.

And at Last I Knew I Was Saved.

I could tread upon Virgil's toes without seeing his face.

The gallery seemed broader than I had thought, but at length I was touching the curtains, which had been drawn. At once I turned to the left, for now I had found the windows, I had to do no more than follow their line along. And because I had my bearings, perhaps I moved with less care than I should have shown. In any event, I had almost come to the door, when I brushed against something unwieldy—and knocked it down.

Now when a man who is trying not to be heard knocks over a chair or a table, it shortens his life. But when he knocks over such a thing as a harp . . .

Not only was the crash appalling, but every string of the instrument sounded its liquid note. Indeed, as I stood there, trembling, I thought that the dulcet announcement would never die, and when at last it did, I should have been glad to die with it, because in all my life I never felt so much abashed. Discovery was, of course, inevitable. I had not only waked the household: I had declared where I was: for the harp, like that of the giant in Jack and the Beanstalk, had lifted up an unmistakable voice.

I wiped the sweat from my face and waited for the sound of men running and voices raised. Virgil, no doubt, would come thrusting—to rub my nose in the desperate mess I had made. I began to try to prepare some halting explanation which was not beneath contempt . . .

I do not know how long I stood still, but as the moments went by, yet nobody came, I began to dare to believe that I was to be spared. The silence which I had shattered was absolute as ever: no faintest indication of movement came to my ears. And at last I knew I was lighting the steps up and down as well as the passage itself.

I leaned against the wall and heaved a sigh of relief. Harp or no harp, I had gained the position I sought, and Winter and I between us commanded Elizabeth's suite. If . . .

And there I heard a girl laugh . . . a stifled, mischievous laugh . . . to tell me she knew I was there.

It was Elsa, of course. I knew that. She must have heard the harp fall and have left Elizabeth's suite to see what the matter might be. And then she had seen the door open and, probably, me come in.

There was only one thing to be done.

"Is that you, Elsa?" I said, and stepped to the curling stair.

Looking up, I saw her standing, point-device as ever, back to the wall.

Then somebody standing behind me laid me out.

The first thing that I remember was Percy Virgil's voice.

As I lifted my head, he spoke, and a gag was clapped into my mouth—a pad of sweet-smelling silk, which I afterwards found was one of my lady's chemises, fresh from some drawer. When I tried to sit up, I found that my hands were not free. My wrists were strapped tight together, behind my back.

I was still too dazed to make any useful effort, so I laid my head back on the steps and closed my eyes, determined to stay where I was till my strength and my senses came back, for though I could not think straight, I knew that I needed them both as never before. For a moment I seemed to be swaying, although I was lying still . . . Then somebody made me sit up and pushed me head forward and down . . . Then water was poured on

An Error in Oaths

A story of the "wild and woolly West" of days gone by is told by Col. A. A. Anderson, artist, sportsman and head of the Yellowstone forest reserve, in his book, "Experiences and Impressions." Once he attended a local trial held in the judge's home in a log cabin in the Wyoming mountains. The judge, after having leafed over the statute books of Wyoming, told the jury to hold up their right hands. He then proceeded to swear them in. But just as he had finished, he looked again in the statute books and said:

"By Jupiter, I swore the wrong swore. I will have to swear you over again!"—Kansas City Star.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Off Kinsale Head"

HELLO EVERYBODY:
If you go to see Patrick J. Hanley at his home at Richmond Hill, N. Y., he might show you an old life preserver that he acquired at sea, on the afternoon of Friday, May 7, 1915, off the Old Head of Kinsale on the coast of Ireland. And maybe Pat will even tell you the story of that life preserver and how he got it, and that's a moving tale. Pat wouldn't part with that old contraption of cork and canvas for half the wealth of the Indies, for it carried him safely through his life's greatest adventure. And how great a danger it was you will easily realize when I tell you that although Pat lived, eleven hundred and ninety-eight others lost their lives before it was over.

Maybe you've already got a hunch what this story is going to be about. Maybe that mention of Kinsale Head has struck a responsive chord in your memory. Then again, maybe it hasn't. It's been more than 20 years now, and few people remember that the Old Head of Kinsale was the scene of that greatest of marine disasters, the sinking of the Lusitania.

Was Passenger on the Lusitania.

Yes—Pat Hanley was on the Lusitania when a German submarine shot a torpedo into its innards and sent it plunging to the bottom. The big ship had successfully dodged the U-boats all the way across the Atlantic. She was racing down the home stretch, and the passengers had forgotten their fears and were beginning to have a good time when suddenly, at two o'clock in the afternoon there came a loud report.

Pat Hanley had shaved and come up on deck about 15 minutes before, and he saw it all, right from the first. A panic started immediately. People ran wildly about the ship searching for their friends and children. Then—in less than a minute—the ship began to list. "Right there," says Pat, "was where people started drowning. They got on the incline and started sliding. The deck rail was broken away to starboard and they fell wholesale into the water. An officer bellowed through a megaphone that everyone must get on a life preserver, but two-thirds of the passengers were in such a state of collapse that you couldn't get them to stand still to get a life preserver on them."

Pat found a life preserver and started stripping off his outer clothing. A woman ran into him, and down he went on the slippery deck. With difficulty he managed to keep from sliding overboard like many others had done. But he got to his feet again and began working his way aft.

Only five life-boats got clear of the ship with passengers. A sixth got fouled in the davits and the people in it were dumped into the water. "They fell like a load of sand," says Pat, "and I noticed that not one of them seemed to survive that upset. I saw two more boats hurriedly pushed off so that people in the water could cling to them. After that there was no chance to launch any more on either side as the ship was under water to the second deck on the starboard side."

Only five lifeboats got clear of the ship.

Pat arrived safely at the stern of the ship and, with about 40 other men, made ready to jump. "We couldn't take a chance jumping from the side," he says, "for it looked as though the ship might turn over on top of us if we did. Already the water was full of bobbing heads. Suddenly a shower of water and soot shot up from the second and third funnels of the ship, drenching the after-deck and turning us all black as ink spots. The ship was going down steadily now, and we all realized that if we didn't jump soon the suction would carry us down when she went under. Overboard we went."

Fishing Trawler Came to Rescue.

By that time an Irish fishing trawler—the first craft to come to the rescue—was just arriving at the scene of disaster. Pat, held up by his life preserver, began swimming toward it. Says he: "It was a sailing vessel equipped with four big oars which the crew pulled like Trojans. Already they were picking people out of the water by the dozen. Lifeboats were rowing out to it, unloading their passengers and going back to pick up more. The small boats made several trips back and forth, but they only picked up those who showed signs of life. By the time we reached the trawler there were 500 others already on it."

The time Pat spent on that trawler was an adventure all in itself. The cockpit—the deck—the hold—all of them were literally jammed with people. Up on deck the passengers had to stand close together and hang onto one another, for they were packed right to the edge of the deck and there was no railing to keep them from going overboard. When the last bit of available space was occupied with the task of saving a human life, the little craft took in tow three lifeboats filled with more of the rescued, and started away from the scene.

Less Than 800 Were Saved.

Pat clung for his life to the man next to him. Now the waters were full of other craft steaming—rowing—sailing to the rescue. A large boat hove to and took the crowd off the trawler. While the trawler went back to pick up more survivors, the big boat, with Pat aboard it, steamed toward Queenstown harbor.

But the trawler didn't pick up another load like her first, for the records show that less than 800 people were saved out of a total of nearly 2,000. Pat says they met several patrol boats coming to the rescue, but they were too late to do anything but pick up the dead.

The boat Pat was on landed him in Queenstown at about nine o'clock that night. The next morning he was asked to go down to the Cunard pier, which had been converted into a temporary morgue, to see if he could identify any of the poor souls who had lost their lives.

Pat still has the life preserver he wore when he jumped over the stern of the ill-fated Lusitania—a souvenir of a remarkable adventure. He'll get it out and show it to you and tell you the story of it when you drop over there of an evening. But for the sake of the people who don't know Pat well enough to be dropping in on him, I'm glad he's given us a chance to spin that yarn here in this column.

- ★ Greta Suits Garbo
- ★ Felix Gives and Takes
- ★ Good, Hard Advice

—By Virginia Vale—

PITY Greta Garbo! She has been criticized in the past for practically everything that she did, and when, on arriving in New York from Europe a short time ago, she did some of the things that she had been criticized for not doing, she promptly walked into more criticism.

People had jumped on her because she didn't go out more. So she went everywhere—to night clubs, theaters, restaurants. She walked down Fifth avenue and looked into windows. She had fun.

And she dressed as she likes to dress—in a tailored suit, flat heeled shoes, a classic felt hat. She wore her hair in a long, straight bob. And what a storm of criticism broke over her head!

She ought to dress up, said her critics. She ought to wear the kind of clothes that the department stores want to sell to other women, said they. (only not in so many words!). Because, if a glamorous person like Garbo could wear such simple clothes, all the other girls who want to be glamorous might decide that it was the woman, not the clothes, that counted.

And her hair! Here was all this controversy going on, about wearing the hair up instead of down, and all over town women were breaking down and having their hair done high—which delighted the hairdressers—and then along came Garbo with hers down, and uncurled! She ought to wear her hair high! She ought to wear clothes—horse clothes! She ought to be ashamed of herself!

And Garbo went right on wearing her hair down and wearing her comfortable old clothes, and looking beautiful and glamorous!

"Sing in the shower if you are learning how to be a singer," says Felix Knight, who's become one of our most popular young tenors of the radio. "The tile walls of a bathroom lend resonance and size to the voice and this makes it easier to hear yourself sing." Neighbors who live on the same road in the Connecticut countryside with Felix report that they always know when he's taking a shower, so apparently he practices what he preaches.

According to Billy House, the CBS comedian, if you want to get on the air and stay on, all you have to do is be funny. Just as simple as that! He's been at the business of amusing people for more than 25 years—circus, vaudeville, musical comedy, motion picture and radio audiences have laughed at him. He admits that it's quite a trick to land on the air (complete with sponsor) in the first place, and that you have to work like a dog to keep the popularity that you've won.

There's Fred Allen, who's had the same sponsor since 1934. So has Jack Benny. Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor—any number of them have climbed to success on a ladder of laughs. And Bob Burns' record shows how fast you can shilly up that ladder, after years of trying, if you can just find the formula that makes people chuckle. Two others who have made a fortune by being funny are George Burns and Gracie Allen.

ODDS AND ENDS—It's a specially built microphone with an electric filter that makes "The Shadow's" laugh sound so creepy . . . When you see champagne in a movie it's really vinegar and bicarbonate of soda; if the actors drink it, it's soda pop . . . Horace Heidt is always looking for new voices, acts and faces; he's the only band leader who operates a complete stage show in connection with his band.

The Life of a Tyrant

A dictator is no more free than the rest of the people. He is beset and bedeviled by his obsession.

The kind of good nature that has to be inspired by a resolution to be good-natured is a little forlorn.

What Is Wealth?

Sometimes a very wealthy family is one that has five residences in different parts of the country—and maybe one in Paris—and no home.

Coast-to-Coast Hike

Men have walked from New York to California. The fastest time that we find was made by an amateur walker, Abraham L. Monteverde of Mays Landing, N. J. He left New York on May 6, 1929, and walked, via Philadelphia, to San Francisco, arriving there on July 24. He covered the 3,415 miles in 79 days, 10 hours and 10 minutes. The former record of 80 days, 5 hours was held by John Ennis. The famous walker, Edward P. Weston, made the distance from New York to San Francisco in a little over 104 days in 1909.—Detroit News.

NEVER SLEEP ON AN "UPSET" STOMACH

Neutralize excess stomach acids to wake up feeling like a million

To relieve the effects of over-indulgence—escape "acid indigestion" next day—do this: Take 2 tablespoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water—AT BEDTIME.

While you sleep, this wonderful alkaliizer will be sweetening your stomach... easing the upset-feeling and nausea... helping to bring back a "normal" feeling. By morning you feel great.

Then—when you wake—take 2 more tablespoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with orange juice.

That is one of the quickest, simplest, easiest ways to overcome the bad effects of too much eating, smoking or drinking. Thousands use it.

But—never ask for "milk of magnesia" alone—always ask for "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for November 13

THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:13; Matthew 5:21-26, 38-42.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not kill.—Exodus 20:13. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer.—1 John 3:15.

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

The sanctity of human life finds its foundation in the fact that God created man in His own likeness and image. Because that is true no man has any right to take the life of another for any cause except at the direct command of God. Only by the orderly process of law for the protection of society and in accordance with the Word of God may there be any such action by man toward man. Both of these truths are declared in Scripture in God's covenant with Noah (Gen. 9:5, 6), which was made possibly a thousand years before the Ten Commandments were given to Moses.

Life is held rather cheaply in our day. Nations count their boys and girls as only so much "war material." Life is destroyed on the highway, in the shop, or in the home. Let us declare again the solemn command of God, "Thou shalt not kill."

I. The Prohibition of Murder (Exod. 20:13).

The word "kill" in this commandment is one which means a violent and unauthorized taking of life, and is therefore more properly translated "murder." Not all killing is murder. A man may kill another entirely accidentally, or he may be the duly constituted legal officer carrying out the law of the land in taking the life of one who has forfeited his right to live because he has slain another. There is also the right of self-defense, be it individual or collective. But these are the only exceptions; let us not attempt to justify any other.

Murder is too prevalent in our land. In 1936 there were 13,242 outright killings—a murder every 40 minutes. The head of the United States secret service estimates that there are 200,000 persons at large in our land who "have murder in their hearts and who will take human life before they die." Also in 1936 there were 37,800 deaths in automobile accidents. Some of these were by unavoidable accidents, but many were really murder because the one responsible drove with defective brakes, dangerous tires, or while he was intoxicated. Add to these the deaths in industry caused by failure to provide proper safeguards or healthy working conditions, and by the exploitation of child labor, and we say again, that we should cry aloud, "Thou shalt do no murder."

II. The Cause of Murder (Matt. 5:21, 22).

The Sermon on the Mount, from which the rest of our lesson is taken, while it "describes the character of the citizens of the earthly kingdom which the Messiah came to set up" and "assumes a class of people already saved, regenerated, and in fellowship with their King" (James M. Gray), does provide fundamental principles for the guidance of the Christian.

In this matter of murder, Jesus cuts right through the outward aspects of the matter and points out that an angry hatred in the heart is the root of all murder. If we hate, we have murder in our hearts. Circumstances may hinder its fulfillment, but the danger is always there until we remove the cause. Just being angry—calling our brother "Raca" (the modern equivalent of which is "nobody there"), and calling him "thou fool," which classifies him as "morally worthless"—these are the three dreadful downward steps to murder. And they begin in anger. May God help those of us who have strong feelings that we may not yield them to the devil in anger against our brother!

III. The Prevention of Murder (Matt. 5:23-26, 38-42).

Prevention with God means more than putting up a barrier to keep us from killing. He deals with the heart, and thus puts the whole life right. It is not even a question of how we may feel against our brother. If he has sought against us we are to do all we can to win him. He may be unreasonable, grasping, and unfair. However, the spirit that will win him is not that of retaliation or sullen submission to the inevitable, but rather a free and willing going even beyond what is required.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

Are Your Children Eating Clean Food? Asks C. Houston Goudiss—Points Out Hazards of Neglected Hand-Washing

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

"I DO feed my Johnny correctly," a young mother said to me not long ago. "I give him milk and eggs and vegetables and fruits. And still he has colds! Would you mind telling me just how you reconcile that with all this talk about our newer knowledge of nutrition—and how it helps children to have better health?"

"I don't know," I answered. "But I wonder if it would be convenient for me to meet Johnny?"

"Certainly," she replied. "He'll be home from school in a few moments. He usually stops at the school playground for an hour or two, to play dodge ball with the other boys."

A moment or two later Johnny appeared. And a more grimy little lad I had seldom seen, certainly not outside of a neighborhood such as we sometimes describe as underprivileged!

Johnny's hands were dirty. His face was dirty. His knees and legs were streaked with mud. There was a lollipop in his mouth, though he quickly pulled it out when his mother made the introduction.

I could not refuse his hand when he put it forth in a gentlemanly gesture, though I noted that some of its visible soil, and doubtless some unseen germs, were transferred to my own hand during the greeting.

No sooner had we unclasped hands than a tremendous sneeze all but engulfed Johnny. And in spite of his almost adult manner at meeting a stranger, he had not learned to cover his nose and mouth during a sneeze. The lollipop was sprayed with moisture—and germs. Two seconds later, the child put the lollipop back in his mouth and continued sucking it!

And yet his mother could not understand why he had colds!

Contaminated Food

I have pointed out many times that in my opinion, a mother's foremost responsibility is to feed her children a diet that takes into account all the recent amazing discoveries of nutritional science. Only by so doing can she hope to give them a sturdy body with straight bones, strong responsive muscles, a good circulation and sound healthy nerves.

But the parent who permits her offspring to eat with unwashed hands and thus take countless germs into his body with every mouthful of food is scarcely giving that food a chance to build the kind of body and brain every mother desires for her child. On the contrary, she is risking the danger of grave illness. For the micro-organisms which cause 92 out of every 100 deaths from communicable diseases enter or leave the body through the mouth or nose.

Health Linked to Cleanliness

All of us have heard the expression: "Cleanliness is next to Godliness," though to observe some of our school children eating their lunches, one might have reason to believe that both mothers and school boards have forgotten this old copy-book maxim! But it bears remembering, every day and all day. For the writer who said that soap and civilization go hand in hand was not far from the truth. Certainly, soap-and-water cleanliness and good health are inseparably linked, and habits of personal cleanliness are a vital factor in safeguarding children against infections and disease.

We often compare a correct diet to the bricks with which a well-constructed building is erected. But if food represents the bricks with which the edifice of health is built, surely cleanliness is the mortar!

Keeping Everlastingly at It

Most babies are kept clean by their mothers because mothers know that they cannot keep their babies well if they do not keep them clean. If the same careful policy were followed in later childhood, it is almost certain that there would be less illness among children.

Unfortunately, many mothers relax their vigilance the moment their child is ready for school. In some cases, they believe that the child has had sufficient training and can be relied upon; in other instances, they believe, or hope, that further training will be supplied by the school!

A Mother's Job

But the mere fact that a child is old enough to go to school does not make him less of a child. Nor does it make his mother less of a teacher and guardian. On the contrary, it multiplies her responsibilities!

More than ever the child needs careful supervision of his health habits. For now he is in daily contact with countless other youngsters, from many types of homes. More chances to pick up germs! More chances to disseminate germs should he be permitted to go to school with the sniffler!

Mothers must increase, not decrease their vigilance. They must assume responsibility for the observance of all the habits that safeguard health. These include the daily bath; the daily change into clean clothing; the frequent washing of the hands, and always before eating; the twice-daily brushing of the teeth; regular elimination; regular hours for meals; and the necessary hours for outdoor play and for sleep.

What About the School?

Mothers must remember—and must emphasize to their children—that diseases may often be traced to unclean hands, and to germs sprayed in the air by persons having coughs and colds.

Teach your children to muffle every cough and sneeze in a handkerchief. And be sure they have a handkerchief handy for the purpose. Teach them to keep their fingers out of their mouths, likewise pencils and other objects. Teach them to wash the hands and face frequently.

If they are to carry out this last instruction, it is imperative that soap and towels be available in school washrooms, as well as at home. Investigate conditions at the school your child attends. If facilities are not adequate, do something about it. Either arouse other mothers to help rectify the omissions, or failing that—have your child carry soap and paper towels from home!

By teaching cleanliness to your children, by making it a regular part of their training, you will help to safeguard their health and the health of every other child with whom they come in contact in their daily lives.
