In a Jam

We wish to offer an explanation for the scarcity of news this week in the paper. You can readily see the cause. We had no time to handle all of the legal matter and get out an extra page, so we had to do the best we could. Naturally we like this business, but we also dislike to omit news. However, it won't be so bad next week.

Wonder what the sports writers will use for copy now as the football season is over?

Flaming Danger

The elevator's safety device checks Wentworth's drop to doom. Returned home, he blasts three gunmen out of existence as they attempt to capture him and then speeds to the city's airport, scene of several baffling plane tragedies. The Octopus kidnaps Nita, who manages to elude her guard long enough to inform the Spider of her predicament by phone. As he hurries back, she overhears Grafton and other gangsters discuss the death ray gun and a plot to destroy a mail plane. Discovered, she is locked in a room.

Wentworth scales to the roof, slugs the gangster on guard and rescues Nita, who tells him of the mail plot. He phones the airport, learns the plane has already taken off, and races to his own trim monoplane. His plan to signal the other ship down before it can be fired upon almost fails. The Octopus' men are finding their range with the death ray gun, which is housed in an innocent-looking trailer, when Wentworth attempts to signal the mail pilot down. Suddenly the Spider's monoplane shivers and molten metal drips from its wings. Then, like a flaming coffin, it zooms to earth!

This is the 10th episode of "The Spider's Web," the exciting serial now showing at the Alamo Fridays and Saturdays. Don't miss it!

"Don't," screamed Herrick. "How dare you? When you apologize, I want to kick myself and burst into tears. If you must wear your sheep's skin, do: we all know it comes off. But for you to bleat is indecent . . . Oh, yes, I can see you laughing, but that's because you don't understand. We're cast in two different molds. We come, I see, you conquer—I can't put it better than that. And I warn you, my simple serpent, I'm not going to let you go. You may take a Duchess' name and marry the Countess of Brief, but I knew you before they did and I'm not going to give them place. And when I change my name, as one day I shall—it'll mean that you'll have three houses, instead of two."

And there you have John Herrick, sterling, efficient, adroit, with a glorious sense of humor and the heart of a little child. His way with all was wonderful. Duchess, steward and scullion—he was at ease with the lot; and they with him. What is more, he inspired affection. It gave him pleasure to make his neighbors glad: and his neighbors recognized this and thanked God for such a man. Upon what I owe him myself, I will not insist, for I think these pages have shown that, but for his present help, I could have done nothing at all and Elizabeth must have been broken and Percy Virgil succeeded to her estate.

To three others I must pay tribute before I end this tale—for I shall leave it at Raven, which was for me journey's end.

Winter is still in my service, but soon will leave it to marry Brenda Revoke. I often think that his was a trying office, for all the time he stood upon the edge of the fray. No vengeance was his, and three times he missed the battle for which he longed. He knew too much or too little from first to last, and yet he never complained, but kept his eyes upon his duty and did it with all his heart. No servant was ever more faithful or gave a fuller measure than Winter did.

Of Elizabeth, what can I say? I think there is no one like her, but that is natural enough. Still, Herrick is a fair critic and the Duchess is hard to please. And both of them commend her. Of course she has her faults: but I am thankful for these, for otherwise she would be too good to be true. Her beautiful features have lost their wistful look, and a gayety, long confined, is now at large to leaven her dignity: but her ways are as gracious as ever, her gaze is as level, her shining head is as high.

And as, when a play is over, the most illustrious player stands last and alone upon the stage, the latest to figure here must be Harriet Vincentia Saying, Duchess of Whelp.

Till the first day I stood before her, lying abed, I never had comprehended what personality meant—that indefinable presence which needs no help of the body to make itself felt. And then I knew . . . because I was immediately subject to something far greater than me. Had she taken no action and never opened her mouth, that sense of subjection must nevertheless have endured, because her spirit ruled mine from the moment I entered her room. It was the same with us all. High and low went down before her, as grass goes down before the scythe, and I can think of no one who could today stand up and meet her on equal ground. Proud and strong and fearless, keen-witted, humorous, wise—above all, full of that "drive" that made a Conqueror out of a tanner's stock, she moved upon a plane that others sometimes climb to—and find the air too rare for their physique. And so she came down . . . for us. The fine, old eagle came down . . . and showed us her royal heart. I use the word advisably. Royal is as royal does: and the Duchess of Whelp does royally, because, I believe, she knows no other way.

That I cannot compute what I owe her is natural enough. There are some debts before which arithmetic pales.

Unearthly shrewd—and swift to act upon her shrewdness, handling men and women as a horse-master handles a horse, filling the weaker vessel with the virtue that ran in her veins, kind and understanding and generous, using us pygmies as equals, yet asking far less of us than she did of herself—from the hour that we called upon her she was the driving force behind all we did.

Though now there is no more to be done, our allegiance persists . . . "Tracery is her wash-pot: over Brief hath she cast out her shoe."

The mot, which is Herrick's, is just.

And we are as proud as content, because there is only one "Old Harry the Great."

See the New Suede Fashions, They're the Smartest Ever

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE style program for midseason and the soon-to-follow spring definitely stresses the importance of apparel made of handsome colorful suede. A most significant achievement in the field of modern costume design is the use of suede in a fabric way. Time was when imagination carried only as far as novelty hats and bags, gloves and belts, and perhaps a few added accessories.

These small beginnings of suede are past history now. Today designers are working with it as easily and creatively as if it were cloth or any other material. A dress, a coat, a jacket or blouse, in fact an ensemble entire of this supple, caressing-to-the-touch and superbly colorful medium is no longer a novelty but a grand and glorious fact.

Up to this season a dress of suede or a coat was more or less a luxury. It's going to be different this year, for in anticipation of a wide-spread vogue, leading shops and stores are featuring fashions that dress you in suede from tip to toe. And are these new suede clothes good looking! Just go to your nearest dealer and ask to see the newest in suedes and you will have the answer.

In these advance showings, daytime dresses in delectable colors (suede takes dyes so beautifully) are tailored and dressmakered and style-detailed so artfully, you know then and there as you gaze on them you will never be satisfied until you own something of suede, perhaps a frock with innumerable little pockets and a decorative slide-fastener or a swagger coat that is tailored to perfection or a bolero with the tie-sash that you can wear with any dress.

Out Hollywood way the fashion alert colony has gone in wholeheartedly for suede apparel. A suede jacket, suede hat and suede blouse make up the striking casual costume selected by Lynn Bari. See this ensemble pictured to the left in the illustration. The three-quarter length coat of suede in a luscious wineberry color has padded shoulders with four interesting pockets extending from the wide fold down the front. The 16-gore skirt is matched to the coat while the slide-fastened waistcoat is in pink suede. With this outfit Miss Bari wears open-toe wineberry calf pumps.

To brighten her black wool dress Eleanor Hansen wears a teal blue suede bolero with contrasting embroidered motif and belt that ties. See this attractive two-piece shown to the right in the picture.

The hat in the inset is of suede combined with felt. Mary Carlisle wears it. The felt part is in nut brown while the upward suede side is a mosaic rust tone to match a 14-inch long suede bag which is so capacious it carries everything.

Suede evening fashions are thrilling. A graceful cape of white suede trimmed in white fox makes a most beautiful evening wrap. A formal gown of delicate pink suede is bewitching. A long coat tailored of colorful suede with richly furred collar is eye-filling. Then there are charming jacket blouses of suede and waistcoats and boleros with bags and sash girdles to match and the latest is to add a whimsical muff of matching suede.

You can get cunning and very inexpensive collar-and-cuff sets of suede to add a sure style touch to your sports outfit. These are swank to wear with your about-town shirt-maker frocks.

Make Stocking Case For Dresser Drawer

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS.

THINGS that will have a ready sale at a fair or church bazaar; things that may be made quickly from odds and ends of material on hand; colorful, useful things for gifts—these are the requests that come in the mail.

Here is another suggestion that has stood the test of practical use—a flat case that holds six pairs of stockings. What a relief not to have them all mixed up with underwear and other things in dresser drawers.

This case may be made quickly on the sewing machine. A piece of cretonne or bright ticking or other cotton material of the dimensions given here, and about two yards of contrasting bias binding are the materials needed. The diagrams given here in the sketch, explain each step in cutting and making the case.

If a more elaborate case is desired, silk may be used with ribbon for the bindings. A quilted silk case of this type would make an exquisite gift. Machine quilting may be used for this purpose.

Be sure to clip and save these lessons as they are not in either Book 1 or 2. These books are full of still other useful ideas, with complete cutting and sewing directions for each item clearly illustrated. They save the price of many patterns and you will use them constantly for references and inspiration.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery, has helped thousands of women to use odds and ends of materials and their spare time to make things to sell and to use. Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, is full of inspiration for every homemaker. These books make delightful gifts. Mrs. Spears will autograph them on request. Books are 25 cents each. Crazy-patch quilt leaflet is included free with every order for both books. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Unusual Coincidence Attends Visit of Governor of Nebraska

Executive of State Without Debt Appears at Moment Treasury Announce Huge Federal Debt; Spend Less When Income Drops, Cornhusker Formula.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Gov. R. L. Cochran of Nebraska visited Washington recently. Governors of states get around to Washington visits every now and then, but in the case of Governor Cochran's visit, there was a very unusual coincidence. On the day of his arrival, the treasury department happened to make public its routine monthly statement of the national debt and expenditures. It was late in December, so the treasury statement served to mark half of the federal government's fiscal year.

There was, of course, nothing spectacular about the fact that the treasury issued a debt statement. The government has lots of debt. But it was spectacular, even sensational, that the treasury statement of that day should reveal a new high record for the national debt on the day of arrival of one of the state governors, the chief executive of a state that has no state debt. Not a penny does the state of Nebraska owe. It bound itself by its constitution never to accumulate a state debt and, further, it restricted its counties and cities in the amount of debt they can create.

Some may disagree with me but I was very much impressed with the facts in the case of these two political jurisdictions. Our national government now is in debt to the staggering amount of $39,500,000,000 in direct obligations, and if one adds the outstanding bonds and notes of agencies and government-owned corporations which amount to about $5,000,000,000, your Uncle Samuel some way, some how, must pay nearly $45,000,000,000. And this at a time when one of its states, Nebraska, does not owe a thin dime!

Governor Explains How His State Kept Out of Debt

I had quite a conversation with Governor Cochran who was elected for the third successive term only last November—being one of two Democratic governors in northern states to be re-elected—about how the state had come through the depression with taxes low and no state debt.

I reminded him that most every other state had added to its debt; that taxes were higher and new taxes were added in every direction, and yet Nebraska, with many of the same problems, had kept its record clear. So, exactly what is the answer?

"The answer is very simple," the governor replied. "It is so simple that there is hardly a news story in it."

"It has been the policy of my administration to cut the cloth to fit—cut it to what we could pay for. If our state income was due to be less, I insisted that we spend less. After all, I guess that is your answer—spend less when you have less income."

How about those taxes?

"Well, it's much the same story," Mr. Cochran went on. "We feel that agriculture and manufacturing, retailing and service, every kind of industry, has a right to survive. I believe those engaged in it have a right to a reasonable profit, a reward for their work and efficiency in that work. Every time a new tax is added it comes out of the whole people. This statement that taxes can be shifted around is all the bunk. The whole people is going to pay and it is unfair for a state government to take everything. The state exists for the people; not the people for a state."

Shows Results of Minority Pressure From Many Angles

I called the governor's attention that in the current fiscal year, the national government is scheduled to spend something like $9,000,000,000 whereas its income, at the most, will hardly exceed five billions. The observation struck fire.

"That's what you get for letting government go into fields where it does not belong," he shot back. "There you have the results of minority pressure from many angles. In my campaign last fall, I told every audience that I had been taught it was wrong for a candidate to buy votes with his own money and I think it is worse to buy votes with other people's money or taxpayers' money."

"And here is something for you to think about: as long as you plan on pensions or aids or security or whatever name the thing is—if you plan on fixed amounts to pay people—however deserving they may be, you are going to have pressure for more and more. What must be done is the nation must face the facts—call this stuff what it is—call it charity, and make it unpopular. Unless you do, the thing that faces this country is a huge population of panhandlers."

Within a few days after Governor Cochran's visit, word was given out at the White House that President Roosevelt will send a special message to congress early in the new session, asking that the social security act be broadened to cover more people. The act, as it stands, was described as having many inequities, many injustices, and it might have been added safely that it contains many impossibilities. Senator Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, long has complained about some of these and he has urgently called for amendment of the law's provision that would set up a "reserve fund." This reserve fund, calculated to reach the fantastic figure of $47,000,000,000, eventually, is supposed to be invested and the interest from that investment is supposed to be enough to pay the old age pensions, etc.

Social Security Money Goes Into Treasury General Fund

The Michigan senator repeatedly has sought information from the so-called experts as to how this money could be invested in government securities, and has had no answer. The truth is that there has been no cash reserve set up at all. The money paid in for social security tax has gone into the treasury's general funds to be appropriated and spent like any other dollars. And the further truth is that if there had to be full payment now, congress would have to appropriate other money to pay it.

There is no way to forecast what is going to come out of the congress on the President's projected proposal. In some quarters, one hears declarations that congressional investigation of the whole cobwebby situation is the only way to arrive at a firm foundation. Other places are sources for observations to the effect that the federal government can not handle charity or pensions or assistance matters of any kind without stinking fumes coming therefrom.

Adverting again to what may come from the all of the discussion concerning social security, one can not ignore the possibility of a wholesale revision of the law so that a fixed monthly sum will be paid to persons attaining some stated advanced age. There were too many members of the house and too many members of the senate elected last November after having hinted they were favorable to such a course when they were hunting for votes. As a matter of fact, there are probably about 100 house members who pledged themselves outright to vote some type of Townsend plan or who said they would support a modification of the present law to provide early and large cash payments.

And Loans to European Countries Remain Unpaid

As I hear these various plans discussed and as I hear other ways of spending money projected, I am more and more impressed with the sound thinking of Nebraska's Governor Cochran. Where is all of this money coming from? I have neither the money, nor the answer.

In the midst of all of this, what should be catapulted upon the scene but a proposal to loan money to the Central and South Americans. The idea is to loan them money and help them buy products of the United States—and thus keep the Europeans out of our neighbor countries. I do not know enough about the program to analyze it because it is a far-fetched and intricate scheme. Probably, we ought to do something to keep the Americas for the Americans, but it was only December 15 that we were reminded again that the United States loaned something like $11,000,000,000 to a flock of European nations to help make the world safe for democracy.

On December 15, according to the treasury figures, there was a little over $2,000,000,000 of that money due—and unpaid.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the Diet of Expectant Mother. Some General Rules for Wise Eating at This Important Time

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

DISTINGUISHED writers and sociologists, both here and abroad, have concerned themselves in recent years with the writing of a Children's Charter and a Baby's Bill of Rights. These efforts are commendable because they demonstrate a forward-looking attitude . . . a genuine attempt to better the lot of the next generation. Indeed, they represent a concerted effort to do for children in general what mothers have always tried to do individually for their own children.

Before a Baby Is Born

But not every mother realizes what all nutritionists know—that to a not inconsiderable degree, the very foundations of good health for the child are laid down before he is born. For it has been well said that good nutrition for the infant begins with good nutrition for the mother.

Unfortunately, many people, even in this enlightened age, still cling to superstition and old wives' tales when it comes to choosing the proper foods for those important months before a baby is born.

Some Common Fallacies

As a result, some expectant mothers overeat, frequently of the wrong kinds of food; others do not take enough of the foods that are required to maintain top health for the mother and build the baby's body soundly; while still another group believes such antiquated notions as the idea that a woman may eat whatever she "craves" during this period.

In view of the fact that recent nutrition work has given us more knowledge than ever before of how and what the expectant mother should eat, dietetic errors during this period are particularly deplorable.

Building Better Babies

Every expectant mother should be under the care of a physician, and usually he gives specific advice concerning the foods that may be eaten and those that might better be avoided. But every woman will be a better mother if she understands something of the functions and fate of foods, with particular reference to this period.

Don't Overeat

Generally speaking, the same foods that are required for a well-balanced diet under ordinary circumstances are the ones that will best serve the needs of mother and child during the months before a baby is born. There are, however, certain modifications of the diet that may well be taken into consideration.

First, a word about the amount of food consumed: It is not necessary to eat more than is required to satisfy the normal appetite, in the belief that large quantities of additional food are needed. Nutritionists have demonstrated that the energy requirements of the expectant mother increase only during the last three months of gestation. Thus, it is not necessary to increase the caloric intake for the first few months, though toward the end of the period a gradual increase in caloric intake may be made under the direction of the physician. It is advisable, however, to emphasize that the character of the additional food consumed, as well as the amount, should always be taken into consideration.

Building Materials

It is important to pay special attention to the amount and kind of protein that is eaten, since over this may well be obtained from eggs, dried fruits, whole grain cereals and green leafy vegetables. It has been found that the thyroid gland is unusually active in the expectant mother. And in those sections of the country where the drinking water and soil are deficient in iodine, physicians frequently recommend the use of some food such as iodized salt.

Adequate Bulk or Cellulose

It is most desirable that enough bulky foods be included in the diet to help maintain regular health habits.

This requirement should be taken care of automatically if generous amounts of fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals are consumed. For in addition to their minerals and vitamins, all these foods likewise supply bulk which aids in promoting regularity.

The wide use of fruits and vegetables will also help to build up a liberal alkaline reserve, which helps to safeguard health during the period of gestation.

If all these factors are taken into consideration, the expectant mother will not only help to preserve her own health, but will take constructive measures to give her baby the blessings of a sound start in life. Then as the healthy, contented infant grows into the healthy, happy, active toddler, and later becomes the healthy, well-adjusted school boy, the mother can indeed be proud of her handiwork!

Questions Answered

Miss E. D. M.—Yes, in most of the foods containing vitamin G, this vitamin is associated with vitamin B. White of egg is the only food in which it is definitely known to date that vitamin G occurs without vitamin B.

Mrs. S. D. L.—It is true that nuts furnish protein similar in quantity to that found in cream and top milk. Nutritionists do not agree, however, that the protein is the complete equal of milk protein in quality.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Scorch Marks.—Bicarbonate of soda is useful for removing scorch marks from white silk. Make into a paste with cold water and leave on the stains until dry.

Beautifuling the Hands.—After using lemons, don't forget to wipe off your hands with the skins. They will remove all stains from vegetable paring and soften and whiten the skin.

To Whip Evaporated Milk.—Evaporated milk can be whipped by this method: Cover can with two inches of cold water, bring to boil and boil for five minutes. Then cool and chill the can thoroughly, pour milk into cold bowl and whip with a cold beater.

Squeaky Carpet Sweeper.—If your carpet sweeper squeaks, apply oil on a feather or from a small oil can. Use the oil on the bearings and around the wheels. Then run the sweeper over a paper to catch any surplus oil so it won't drip on your rugs.

Care of Aluminum.—Aluminum is one material which is apt to warp if cold water is run into it after it has been removed from the fire and is still very hot. Either wait a bit before putting the pan to soak or run boiling hot water into it for soaking.

Shining the Stove.—Before blackening the kitchen stove go over it with a cloth dipped in vinegar to remove all the grease.

Wash Gloves Often.—Gloves should be washed often to prevent hard rubbing, which injures the finish and loosens the dye.

QUESTION
You never seem to have a cold, Ethel.

ANSWER
Perhaps I'm just lucky. But I always use Luden's at the first sign. They contain an alkaline factor, you know.
