1889 - OUR GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY YEAR - 1939

VOLUME 49

ROBERT LEE, COKE COUNTY, TEXAS, FRIDAY JUNE 30, 1939

NUMBER 51

CAMPING WITH TROOP 50

Robert Lee and Bronte Boy Scouts returned from a four day camping trip at Camp Louis Farr Thursday, June 22. Scouts from Robert Lee were: Jack Tubb, Memory Gramling, Wallace Clift, Eddie Paul Good, Curtis Smith, Maurice Yarbrough, Joe Dodson Jr., Lewis Ott, Derwood Davis, Dan Parrish, and Daniel Mallow.

Scouts from Bronte were: Dick Wylie, Cumbie Ivey, Jack Good, Johnny Gregg, Billie Joe Wylie, and J. L. Humman. Scoutmaster T. M. Wylie and J. S. Craddock of Robert Lee were with the Troops at camp. Four Scouts of the Robert Lee Troop received their Second Class badges while there, from the Scout Field Executive. The Scouts were Jack Tubb, Memory Gramling, Wallace Clift and Eddie Paul Good. Scoutmaster T. M. Wylie presented two Scouts, Lewis Ott and Joe Dodson Jr., with their Tenderfoot badges.

A water carnival was held at camp in which Robert Lee and Bronte Troops won second place. Best all-around scouts were chosen from Bronte and Robert Lee. Dick Wylie was chosen as best all-around scout from Bronte and Jack Tubb and Memory Gramling tied for first from Robert Lee.

The Scouts did their own cooking and received much experience in that line. Everybody had a good time.

Wallace Clift, Troop Scribe.

To Close on Fourth

Practically all of Robert Lee business houses will be closed on the Fourth, and no doubt the old town will be deserted. If you intend going out of town on that day, be cautious. The highways will be crowded with cars and careful driving will help lessen wrecks. Last July 8,720 met death in traffic crashes, drownings, etc. The best assurance of being alive on the fifth is not to get behind the wheel if you are intoxicated.

Notice to Water Subscribers

The following water rate to take effect July 1, 1939.
First 2000 gallons $1.75
Second 2000, 35c per 1000 gal.
All over 4000, 25c per 1000 gal.
R. C. Russell, Mayor,
G. C. Allen, Com.
J. D. Dodson, Com.

J. C. Snead and Paul Good families are vacationing on the Llano river this week. They will probably fish some in the Gulf before returning.

Miss Bessie Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Parker, underwent an operation for appendicitis Monday morning. She is said to be doing nicely.

High-grade white Leghorn roosters for sale, $1.00 each.
Roy Taylor.

Cockeyed Conditions

Time was when everything of major importance was accepted without question. People went to church, because they considered it their duty. Now the world is asking, why go to church?

Time was that going to school was taken for granted. A lot of young people are asking now, why get an education when so many college graduates are out of jobs?

Time was when most young men looked either to the farm or the business house as a certain means of livelihood and future independence. Now they are asking, why go into business when 93 per cent of all business people eventually fail; and the government has to help the farmer make a living?

Most young people have one idea: Get hold of a car, drive like hades, have a swell time, and let the government look after you in old age. Living under these cockeyed conditions of the past few years has made most people wonder just which way is the right way. But, after all, straight living, honesty, thrift and economy will win, regardless of what may happen in between times.--The Canyon News.

Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Ditmore with their son Beal, visited relatives in Louisiana last week.

Dan Middleton has just completed a 6-room rock veneer residence on his ranch near Hayrick. J. F. Robertson was in charge of construction.

Simpson & Russell shipped out several truck loads of sheep to the Ft. Worth market this week.

WITH THE PICTURES

Friday and Saturday, America's No. 1 star, Shirley Temple in "Just Around the Corner" with Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, Amanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson and others.

This great big beaming picture turns the sunshine on. You'll want to join right in, to kiss the kisses, sing the songs, tap the rhythms, laughs.

It's full of a new bubbling mischief, romance and the tapping toes of Shirley and Bill Robinson.

A picture that makes you fall in love with life. Comedy.

Sunday and Monday "Ice Follies of 1939," starring Joan Crawford, supported by an all star cast. This is a top-notch picture--one you will surely enjoy. Also comedy and news events.

Wednesday, Errol Flynn, Olivia DeHavilland, Rosalind Russell and Patrick Knowles in "Four's a Crowd," a highly hilarious newspaper comedy. Errol loves Olivia, Olivia loves Pat, Pat loves Rosalind, and Rosalind loves Errol! Now, Errol likes Pat but Pat hates Errol until Rosalind meets Olivia! Oh, skip it... they're four people who love each other very much... and the picture's swell! Comedy.

Miss Mozelle Turney, after a three weeks rest here, left Wednesday for New London to resume her duties as instructor of Home Economics. She is on duty all through the year, and she is required to visit many sections of the country.

Return From 14000 Mile Trip

Bobby Lee Davis, Mrs. J. E. Milnolland, Stanton, and Leland Ariedge, Abilene, returned Wednesday from a 14000 mile tour of the United States and Canada. The tour required two months of travel.

Points of interest included both the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco World's Fair, Niagra Falls, Canada, Chicago, Yellowstone National Park, Salt Lake City, and many other important places.

In New York, the party had occasion to visit Radio City, Madison Square Garden, Jack Dempsey Cafe, and homes of the Vanderbilts, Rockefeller and Goulds.

The trio states that "it just can't be put into books." "Go and see for yourself."

Invites Attendance

I take this means of extending a cordial invitation to my friends and fellowmen to attend the services at Sanco, beginning Friday night, June 30. Bro. King, district missionary of district 16, will do the preaching from Sunday on through the meeting. Come and be with us! Pray that we will be led by the Holy Spirit.

H. L. Bloodworth, Pastor.

In the bout between Louis and Galento Wednesday night, 26 stitches were required to sew up three gashes on Tony's face that Louis inflicted. The fight lasted four rounds before the referee awarded the fight on a technical knockout to Louis.

DATES SET FOR SANCO CAMP MEETING

The Sanco Camp Meeting, for over 15 years held annually at Sanco in July, has been announced for July 20 to July 30 by the board of directors.

Rev. T. Perry Brannon of Chattanooga, Tennessee is the evangelist, widely known as tabernacle and radio preacher of the South. A five-day vacation Bible school is to be held in connection with the evangelistic services.

The camp grounds are located on Yellow Wolf creek, near the Sanco spring, in the mountains of northern Coke county.

Free barbecues at noon of Tuesday and Friday, second week of the meeting are provided annually through the hospitality of stockmen of this sheep and cattle country.

Members of the board of directors are: I. A. Bird, Green Preslar, L. S. Bird, J. J. S. Smith, Aubrey McKinley, Bryan Gartman, and J. L. Carwile, all of Coke county, and Frank Hayes who was formerly of Ft. Worth now of Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Delightful Time

Last Thursday night the Robert Lee Lions had as their guests brother Lions from Winters, Ballinger, Junction, Miles, Eldorado, and San Angelo for the district meet. An outdoor luncheon was prepared for the visitors but rain drove everyone inside the school building before they could be served. The food and tables were moved into the building and the eating resumed.

The luncheon was prepared by master hands, and consisted of barbecued mutton, "gentleman from Odessa," frijoles, pickles, slaw, potato salad, bread, etc.

Several splendid talks were made by visiting Lions, interspersed with a variety of entertainment.

The entertainment program opened with several numbers by a three piece band from Junction, and the Tucker twins from Winters, Anette and Janette, delighted the audience with songs and instrumental music, Benny Helen Turney gave two dance selections, and Maxine Slaughter a reading. The Ballinger club presented Jack Nixon with a device for answering questions.

The Lions and their guests were estimated at 150, and no doubt the threatening weather kept many from attending.

The next district convention will meet in Ballinger.

P. P. Fitzhugh is a new addition to the Robert Lee school faculty as Vocational Agricultural teacher. This is the first time the school has put on a vocational teacher. Mr. Fitzhugh comes highly recommended and no doubt will fill the place to the satisfaction of everyone.

European Money and Industry Seek Haven in North America; World Economy Upset Feared

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

INTERNATIONAL: Westward

Foreign investment was welcomed by the expanding America of 100 years ago. Today, with domestic money and industry idle, both Canada and the U. S. have enough trouble without inviting more. But one almost imperceptible result of Europe's dictator madness has been a knocking on America's gates by gold, men and industry from abroad: German Jews have brought their worldly goods; Czechoslovakia's industrious manufacturers have sought refuge for the plants that once supplied low-priced import goods for the American market. Results:

United States. Hit by industrial lethargy more severely than agricultural Canada, the U. S. has offered no refuge to foreign factories, largely because domestic manufacturers are sufficiently vocal to protest successfully. But money influx is something else. Secretary of Czech workers. Confidently expected is a compromise, but Czech workmen will not be imported. Other signs-of-the-times:

¶ One thousand farm families from Sudetenland are being settled in western Canada, the first 250 families having already arrived. Regarding Jewish refugees, Canada's immigration department makes no issue of race or religion, but demands that applicants either possess skill and money, or relations in Canada to support them.

¶ Foreign currency deposits in Canadian banks rose from $47,000,000 in 1938's first two months to $71,000,000 this year.

ASIA:

Crossroads

No mystery to white men in the Orient is Japan's purpose in getting obstreperous over foreign concessions in Tientsin and other Chinese cities. With the rest of coastal China conquered, Japan finds European settlements its principal obstacle to consummation of the "new order" program. Thus observers expect continually expanding pressure unless Britain protects its rights in the Tientsin concession which Japan blockaded recently. Should Britain capitulate, as she has done repeatedly the past few years, Shanghai, Hankow, Amoy, and Canton concessions will be wiped out immediately to end a fascinating chapter in modern Chinese history:

Concessions and settlements date back almost 100 years, constituting a special position for occidental powers which thereby gain importance far out of proportion to the individual settlement's size. Example: Though all foreign areas in China total about 17 square miles and house only 50,000 white men, Japan has been forced to divert her attack around them.

The white man's star began descending in the East 40 years ago when Japan ousted British concessions from her own insular territory. At Tientsin, eight settlements that began in 1860 have dwindled to three (British, Italian and Japanese). Only in Canton have European settlements missed trouble.

Minus concessions, the U. S. nevertheless helps rule Shanghai and Amoy, also protecting American residents who live in other large Chinese cities. American garrisons, stationed to help maintain order at Shanghai, Tientsin, and Peking, may yet be called upon to take their choice: Resist or bow out of China with other white men.

Russia's rich Ukraine ranges from the Carpathian mountains of central Europe almost to the Caspian sea, embracing 360,000 square miles and populated by 53,500,000 Russians, Slavs and Germans. Through its east and central part run rich valleys of the Dneiper and Dneister rivers, which for years have fed vast Russia. To the east, in the Donetz river basin, lie vast deposits of coal, iron ore and man-ganese, ace cards in the deck of any military nation.

If Adolf Hitler's fascination for the Ukraine was once a puzzle, public interest has zoomed to such heights since he captured Czechoslovakia and thus made a path to the east, that the Ukraine's resources are now public knowledge. Even "Mein Kampf," which outlines Der Fuehrer's plans for wresting the Ukraine from Russia, revealed far less than a new U. S. bureau of mines study. Data:

The Ukraine's coal reserves are 72,300,000,000 tons; iron, 4,066,000,000 tons; ferruginous quartzite containing large iron percentage, 40,800,000,000 tons; manganese, 441,000,000 tons; lignite, 510,000,000 tons.

★ Glamour to Perfection

By Virginia Vale

THERE'S a man in Hollywood who is perfectly happy if he's asked to make lightning. He is Gustav Rohrbach, one of those motion picture celebrities whom you never see on the screen and very seldom read about—men and women without whose aid motion pictures could never have become as technically perfect as they are.

Rohrbach can create all sorts of special effects, but making lightning is his favorite—he says he gets the same kick out of it that a boy gets from running to a fire.

It's no great stunt in itself, he says; you just bundle together a dozen or so high-intensity carbons on the end of two long sticks, put the sticks on a hinge, plug them into an electric circuit, and then operate them by hand. But unless you're very careful the carbons weld—then there's a chance of burning out fuses, and possibly setting the studio on fire.

If you want to see some of his work, go to Principal Productions' "Way Down South"—he did seventeen lightning effects for it—chain, bolt, summer and all the other varieties of lightning except the one known as ball, which very few people, including, Rohrbach, have ever seen.

Remember "Front Page", that sizzling picture of newspaper life? It's to be re-made, but since censorship is stricter now than it used to be the story will be changed a bit. Instead of focussing interest on the hero, a hard-boiled reporter, the heroine will get most of the lime-light. The most encouraging thing about the announcement is the fact that Irene Dunne will portray her.

Alexander Korda is launching a new star in "The Thief of Bagdad"; his name is John Justin, he's 21 years old, and has had a sort of Errol Flynn career—he's been rancher, deckhand, farm worker and actor, and traveled around the world. Korda sent out a call for a young player for the role of the prince, hundreds of young men applied, and John Justin won out, and got a seven-year contract.

Sabu, the "Elephant Boy," is also in the cast, and will make his debut as a singing star.

Jack Dawn, Metro's mighty man of make-up, sort of took some of the screen girls' glamour apart a while ago. If you've seen old photographs of Hedy Lamarr you must have marveled at the change in her. Well, Mr. Dawn explained that her mouth was made over to give it that luscious curve; her hair was done in loose waves and that long bob was decreed, her eyebrows were revamped so that there was more space between them. But, he added, she had a practically perfect face to begin with!

The personnel of "We, the People" hopes that there won't be another lamb on the program for a long, long time. The one that traveled from Kansas to New York, "Mary's Little Lamb," developed an appetite for microphone wiring that had the engineers practically crazy.

ODDS AND ENDS—Nelson Eddy's fans will love "Balalaika"—in it he's to sing thirteen songs. . . . Allan Jones returns to the screen via a Paramount contract; he's been practically a forgotten man for too long. . . . Jean Arthur took her dog to the dress rehearsal of the "Only Angels Have Wings" broadcast, but when she had to cry it holed so that rehearsal stopped till she calmed him down. ### ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"When Clocks Stopped"

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Bryan Carlock of Bloomington, Ill., is one man who knows exactly when his adventure started. Other folks may be a little vague about the exact hour and minute of their life's biggest thrill.

When death is staring you in the face, you don't stop to look at your watches and say, "Ho, hum, if I don't get out of this mess pretty quick I'll be late for dinner." Neither did Bryan, for that matter. But he knows the time.

He knows it because, when the blow struck, all the clocks and watches stopped. It was the end of time. The end of the world! The end of everything! The day was March 10, 1933, and Bryan had arrived in Long Beach, Calif., just that morning, to visit his sister, who was married to an army officer, Lieut. Chester Linton.

She and Bryan had gone down town in the afternoon and returned home at 5 o'clock. The clocks and watches stopped at exactly 5:55!

In the meantime, they were busy getting dinner ready. Chester Linton had come home. Sis was in the kitchen making salad and biscuits. Potatoes were boiling on the stove and the roast was in the oven. The rest of the family was in the living room. Bryan was reading and the children—a girl and three boys—were playing on the floor.

Sis came in and said, "Are you all hungry? Dinner will be ready in a few minutes." And then—

The Building Began to Rock and Sway.

And then—terror! The words were hardly out of his sister's mouth when the building began to sway and rock. There was a roar that sounded like thousands of firecrackers exploding all at once. Tables and floor lamps fell over. Plaster crashed down from the ceiling, and the floor bulged upward and burst open.

Says Bryan: "I thought the world was coming to an end. The whole house was rocking like a boat. I couldn't get my voice for a moment,

When we couldn't run any more, we walked.

and when I did, I cried out, 'What is it?' Then I heard Chester say, 'Earthquake! Get out!' As he said it, the wall beside him crumbled and fell out into the street."

The apartment was on the second floor of a brick building at the corner of Broadway and Linden. They started for the stairway, and Bryan says when he reached it it was moving like an escalator. Sis and the kids were safely at the bottom. The lieutenant was behind him. Bryan was half way down that tottering stairway when his foot went through a broken step and caught there.

He struggled to extricate himself, but the harder he tried, the tighter he seemed to be wedging himself in. Now, the lieutenant was at his side, trying to get him out. Plaster was still falling from the walls and ceiling. At last the lieutenant got him loose, and they ran out into the street.

Across the Street a Neighbor Was Killed.

On the other side of the street, a neighbor was lying dead on the lawn—a great chunk of cornice beside him. He had run out of his home at the first shock of the quake, just as the cornice fell, and it killed him. The whole neighborhood was in confusion. Some men were carrying a woman into the bungalow next door, her leg torn and bleeding.

And then, another terrible cry was passed from mouth to mouth through the stricken area. "Tidal wave coming!" "We were only three blocks from the ocean," says Bryan, "and we took the kids and began running inland. We had had nothing to eat. The roast and potatoes and other food back home had been blown against the north wall of the kitchen.

When we couldn't run any more, we walked. We went on that way for two or three hours, through streets filled with debris and ruin and desolation. Soon the city was under martial law.

They were all exhausted by this time. There was still no sign of a tidal wave and, tidal wave or no tidal wave, Bryan wasn't going to go a step farther. They held a council of war and decided to return to the neighborhood of home.

They wandered back toward the ocean and, within a block of the Lintons' wrecked house they found an apartment building which was still in pretty good shape, and managed to get shelter for the night.

Bryan Noticed His Foot Was Damp.

For the first time, then, Bryan noticed that his right foot was damp. He pulled up his trouser leg and found the foot covered with blood. There was a nail in the calf of his leg. Evidently it had been thrust there when he got caught in the broken stairway. "There was a doctor in the house," he says, "and he dressed the wound. I was walking like a drunken man, and the doctor told me I was 'earth shocked.'"

The tremors continued all through the night. They stayed in the apartment house, but in the morning they had to move on, for the city's mains had been broken and there was no gas or water. They went to City Hall park, where relief work was getting under way, and there they were put into a truck and sent to Lennox, about 12 miles from Los Angeles where a woman's club had been turned into a dormitory.

"They gave us medical attention there," says Bryan, "and a lot of us needed it. A lot of the women were hysterical. One of the nurses there had been in hospitals in France during the war and had been bombed by the Germans, but she said it didn't affect her nearly as bad as the quake did."

"Our little group got off easily. My sister and her little girl had been hit by plaster and the three boys had their legs skinned. The lieutenant had had the presence of mind to hold a chair over his head, and he escaped without a scratch. But the thing that saved us all from death was our delay in getting out of the house. If we had gone out while the debris was still falling we would have met the same fate as our neighbor across the street."

NICHOLAS HORTHY

Not since the World war has he commanded a ship, but Admiral Nicholas Horthy has commanded a navy-less, kingless kingdom since he was elected regent of Hungary in 1920. Just turned 71, he is credited not only with averting Nazi German domination of Hungary's domestic affairs, but is also hailed as "the liberator of more than 1,000,000 Magyars from Czech oppression." The latter refers to Hungary's grab when Czechoslovakia was broken up last spring.

Though he has often visited Berlin and been flatteringly entertained by the Nazis, Admiral Horthy has followed a course of friendship with reservations. On his birthday he told parliament that, although advocating continued co-operation with Germany in foreign affairs, Hungary must not lapse into economic dependence by neglecting her own industrial development.

Still a fighter, Admiral Horthy flattened with his own fists six Nazi demonstrators who began shouting in the Budapest opera house last winter. Then he brushed a spot of dust from his blue naval uniform and stalked back to his seat.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Young, pretty Jane Barnes, who lived with her brother, Baldwin, in Sherwood Park, near Washington, was not particularly impressed when she read that rich, attractive Edith Towne had been left at the altar by Delafield Simms, wealthy New Yorker. However, she still mused over it when she met Evans Follette, a young neighbor, whom the war had left completely discouraged and despondent. Evans had always loved Jane. That morning Baldwin Barnes, on his way to work in Washington, offered assistance to a tall, lovely girl in distress. Later he found a bag she had left in the car, containing a diamond ring on which was inscribed "Del to Edith—Forever." He knew then that his passenger had been Edith Towne. Already he was half in love with her. That night he discussed the matter with Jane, and they called her uncle, worldly, sophisticated Frederick Towne. He visited them at their home, delighted with Jane's simplicity. He told them Edith's story. Because her uncle desired it, Edith Towne had accepted Delafield Simms, whom she liked but did not love. She disappeared immediately after the wedding was to have taken place. The next day Jane received a basket of fruit from Towne, and a note asking if he might call again. Mrs. Follette, widowed mother of Evans, was a woman of indomitable courage. Impoverished, she nevertheless managed to keep Evans and herself in comparative comfort by running a dairy farm. Evans, mentally depressed and disillusioned, had little self reliance and looked to his mother and Jane for guidance. Edith Towne phones Baldy in answer to an ad. She asked him to bring her pocketbook. Jane calls on Frederick Towne in his elaborate office. He gives Lucy, his stenographer, a letter to Delafield Simms, in which he severely criticizes him. Unknown to him, Lucy and Simms are in love with each other. Towne takes Jane home in his limousine. She introduces him to Evans, who is jealous of Towne. Baldy goes to meet Edith Towne at her hiding place. He convinces her that she should return home and face her friends. She is interested in Baldy. Later they eat in a restaurant, where Edith sees several friends. She knows they will see it that the news is spread.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

On this same afternoon little Lucy Logan was writing to Delafield Simms.

"It seems like a dream, lover, that you are to come for me in February, and that then we'll be married. And that all the rest of my life I am to belong to you.

"Del, it isn't because you are rich. Of course I shall adore the things you can do for me. I am not going to pretend that I shan't. But if you were poor, I'd work for you—live for you. Oh, Del, I do hope that you will believe it.

"The other day, Mr. Towne said in one of his letters that you had always been fickle, that there had been lots of girls, Eloise Harper before Edith. And I wanted to scream right out and say, 'It isn't true. He hasn't ever really cared before this.' But of course I couldn't. But I broke a pencil point, and as for Mr. Towne, who is he to say such things about you? I haven't taken his letters for the last three years for nothing. There's always somebody—the last one was Mrs. Laramore, and now he has his eye on a little Jane Barnes, whose brother found Miss Towne's bag and the ring. She's rather a darling, but I hope she won't think he is in earnest.

"And now, my dear and my darling, good-night. I wonder how I dare call you that. But I am always saying it to myself, and at night I ask God to keep you—safe."

CHAPTER VII

Jane, in Baldy's absence, dined on Sunday with the Follettes, in the middle of the day. In the afternoon she and Evans went for a walk, and came home to tea in the library.

Stretched in a long leather chair, Evans read to Jane and his mother "The Eve of St. Agnes."

At the moment, Mrs. Follette was weighing seriously the fact of Jane as a wife for Evans. She was pretty as well as cheerful. Had good manners. Of course, in the old days, Evans would, inevitably, have looked higher. There had been plenty of rich girls eager to attract him. He had had unlimited invitations. Women had, in fact, quite run after him. Florence Preston had rather made a fool of herself. And Florence's father had millions.

But now—? Mrs. Follette knew how little Evans had at the moment to offer. She hated to admit it, but the truth was evident. Watching the two young people, she decided that should Evans care for Jane, she would erect no barriers. As for Jane, marriage with Evans would be, in a way, a rise in the world. She would live at Castle Manor instead of at Sherwood Park.

It was after five when Baldy telephoned triumphantly: "Jane, Edith Towne has agreed to go home to-night. And I'm to take her. I called up Mr. Towne and told him and he wants you to be there when we come. He'll send Briggs for you and we are all to have dinner together."

"But, Baldy, I don't know Edith Towne. Why doesn't he ask some of her own friends?"

"She doesn't want 'em. Hates them all, and anyhow he has asked you. Why worry?"

"I'll have to go home and dress."

"Well, you're to let him know at once where Briggs can get you. I told him you were at the Follettes."

Jane went back and repeated the conversation to Evans and his mother. Mrs. Follette was much interested. The Townes were most important people. "How nice for you, Jane."

But Evans disagreed with her. "What makes you say that, Mother? It isn't nice. It will simply be upsetting."

"I don't see why you say that, Evans," Jane argued. "I am not easily upset."

"But with all that money. You can't keep up with them."

"Don't put ideas into Jane's head," his mother remonstrated; "a lady is always a lady."

But Jane sided now with Evans. "I see what he means, Mrs. Follette. I haven't the clothes. I haven't a thing to wear tonight."

"Oh, I wasn't thinking of your looks," Evans got up and stood on the hearth-rug. "But people like that! Jane, I wish you wouldn't go."

She looked up at him with her chin tilted. "I don't see how I can refuse."

"Of course she can't. Evans, don't be so unreasonable," Mrs. Follette interposed; "it will be a wonderful thing for Jane to know Edith."

"Will it be such a wonderful thing for her to know Frederick Towne?" He flung it at them.

Jane demanded, "Don't you want me to have any good times?"

He stared at her for a moment, and when he spoke it was in a different tone. "Yes, of course. I beg your pardon, Janey."

Mrs. Follette, having effaced herself for the moment from the conversation, decided that things between her son and little Jane Barnes might reach a climax at any moment. "I believe he's half in love with her," she told herself in some bewilderment.

As for Frederick Towne, she didn't consider him for a moment. Janey was a pretty child. But Frederick Towne could have his pick of women. There would be nothing serious in his friendship with Jane.

Jane called up Towne. "It was good of you to ask me," she said. "I am at the Follettes, but I'll go home and dress and Briggs can come for me there."

"Come as you are."

"You wouldn't say that if you could see me. I took a walk with Evans this afternoon and I show the effects of it."

"Evans? Oh, Casabianca?"

"What makes you call him that?" "I thought of it when I saw him waiting for you at the top of the terrace. The boy stood on the burning deck—" he laughed.

"I don't think that's funny at all," said Jane, frankly.

"Don't you? Well, beg your pardon. I'll beg it again when I get you here. Briggs will reach Sherwood at about seven. I would drive out myself, but I've an awful cold, and the doctor tells me I must stay in. And Cousin Annabel is sick in bed with a cold, so you must take pity on me and keep me company."

Jane hung up the receiver. It would, she decided, be an exciting adventure. But she was not sure that she liked Frederick Towne . . .

Evans walked home with her. The air was warmer than it had been for days, and faint mists had risen. The mist thickened finally to a fog which rolled over them as if blown from the high seas. Yet the sea was miles away, and the fog was born in the rivers and streams, and in the melting snows.

They found it somewhat difficult to keep to the road. They were almost smothered in the thick gray masses. Their voices had a muffled sound. Evans' hand was on Jane's arm so that they might keep together.

"Jane," he said, "I made a fool of myself about Towne. But honestly—I was afraid—"

"Of what?"

"That he might fall in love with you—"

"He's not thinking of me, Evans, and besides he's too old—"

"Do you really feel that way about it, Jane?"

"Of course—silly."

He could not see her face—but the words in her laughing lovely voice gave him a sense of reassurance.

"Janey," he said, "if I could only have you like this always. Shut away from the world."

"But I don't want to be shut away. I should feel—caged—"

"Not if you cared."

There was in his tone the huskiness of intense feeling. She was moved by it. "Oh, I know what you mean. But love won't come to me like that—shut in. I shall want freedom, and sunshine. I'll be a gull over the sea—a ship in full sail—a gypsy on the road—but I'll never be a ghost in a fog."

His hand dropped from her arm. "Perhaps you'll be a princess in a castle. Towne can make you that."

"Why do you keep harping on Mr. Towne? I don't like it."

"Because—oh, I think everybody wants you—"

And now it was she who caught at his arm in the mist, and leaned on it. "I'm not the least in love with Frederick Towne. And I shall never marry a man I don't love, Evans."

When they came to the little house they found old Sophy nodding in the kitchen. She always stayed with Jane when Baldy was away. So Evans said "Good-night" and started back.

He found the path between the pines, walked a few steps and stumbled. He sat down on the log that had tripped him. He had no wish to go on. His depression was intense. Night was before him and darkness. Loneliness. And Jane would be with Frederick Towne.

He had for Jane a feeling of hopeless adoration. She would never be his. For how could he try to keep her? "I'll be a gull over the sea—a ship in full sail—a gypsy on the road—never a ghost in a fog."

And he was just a ghost in a fog! Oh, what was the use of ever "climbing up the climbing wave"? One must have something of hope to live on. A dream or two—

How long he sat there he did not know. And all at once he was aware of a pale blur against the prevailing gloom. And then he heard Jane's voice calling, "Evans? Evans?"

He answered and she came up to him. "Your mother telephoned—that you had not come home—and she was worried."

She was holding the lantern up to the length of her arm. In her orange cloak she shone through the veil of mist, luminous.

"My dear," she said, gently, "why are you sitting here?"

"ing this way because of me?" she asked in a shaking voice.

"Because of everything."

"Evans, I won't go to the Townes if you want me to stay."

He looked up at her as she bent above him with the lantern. She seemed to shine within and without, like some celestial visitor.

"Would you stay, Jane, if I wanted it?"

"Yes."

He stood up. "I don't want it. Not really. I'm not quite such a selfish pig," his smile was ghastly.

She was silent for a moment, then she said, "I'm going home with you, Evans. Wait until I tell Sophy to send Briggs after me."

He tried to protest, but she was firm. "I'll be back in a minute."

She returned presently, the lantern in one hand and her slipper bag in the other. "I put on heavier shoes. I should ruin my slippers."

As they trod the path together, the light of the lantern shone in round spots of gold, now in front of them, now behind them. The fog pressed close, but the path was clear.

"Evans," said Jane, "I want you to promise me something."

"Anything, except—not to love you."

"It has nothing to do with love of me, but it has something to do with love of God."

He knew how hard it was for her to say that. Jane did not speak easily of such things.

She went on with some hesitation. Her voice, muffled by the fog, had a muted note of music.

"Evans, you mustn't let what I do make you or break you. Whether I love you or not, you must go on. You—you couldn't hold me if you weren't strong enough, even if I was your wife. And there is strength in you, if you'll only believe it. Oh, you must believe it, Evans. And you mustn't make me feel responsible. I can't stand it. To feel all the time that I am hurting—you."

She was sobbing. A little incoherent.

"And you are captain of your soul, Evans. You. Not anyone else. I can't be. I can be a help, and oh, I will help all I can. You know that. But—I love you like a big brother—not in any other way. If anything should happen to you, it would be dreadful for me, just as it would be dreadful if anything happened to Baldy."

"Janey, my dear, don't," for she was clinging to his arm, crying as if her heart would break.

"But I do care for you so much, Evans. I was frantic when your mother telephoned. I wasn't quite dressed and I made Sophy get the lantern, and then I ran down the path, and looked for you."

He stopped and laid his hand on her shoulder. Her weakness, her broken words had roused in him a sudden protective tenderness.

"My little girl," he said, "don't. God helping me, I'm going to get back. And you are going to light my way. Jane, do you know when I saw you coming towards me with that dim lantern it seemed symbolic. Hope held out to me—seen through a fog, faintly. But a light, nevertheless."

"Oh, Evans, if I could love you, I would, you know that."

"I know. You'd tie up the broken wings of every bird. You'd give crutches to the lame, and food to the hungry. And that's the way you feel about me."

He had let her go now, and they stood apart, shrouded in ghostly white.

"God helping me," he said again, "I'll get back. That's a promise, Janey, and here's my hand upon it."

She gave him her hand. "God helping us both," she said.

He lifted her hand and kissed it. Then, in silence, they walked on, until they reached the house.

Iron Will Float

It is usually said that iron will not float, but it will. A ball of iron placed in a pan of liquid mercury will float and even support other weight on top of it. Stones and other heavy objects will also float in mercury. The reason is that mercury has a specific gravity of 13.59, while that of iron is 7.84. Iron will not float in water because the specific gravity of water is 1, so that an equal volume of iron is 7.84 times as heavy as water.

QUICK QUOTES

CLEAN GOVERNMENT
GOOD POLITICS

"TODAY the extermination of organized crime is gradually progressing from city to city. Its sponsors are being exposed and driven from power. The people have learned they need no longer tolerate the furtive alliance between the upper and the under world. In high places it has been learned that clean government can also be good politics."—Thomas E. Dewey, District Attorney of New York.

Pull the Trigger on Lazy Bowels, and Also Pepsin-ize Stomach!

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

Phone Office 69 Night 68

There are some women who never take an interest in affairs other than those around their home and village. Some say they are too busy to read. But there will be all of these souls aroused when they discuss and make a feminine attack on Mr. Hitler's latest edict. He feels the lack of manpower wasted in the manufacture of cosmetics and demands a 90% reduced production. This goes far after telling the ladies to have babies, do without bread, join the army. Something will make our women folks interested in international affairs and this is it! When you place a ban on beauty preparations, "them's fightin' words, Mister".

"Air ye goin' my way?" The young fellow who has been planning to take to the road this summer and hoping to go places and see things by "bumming", has been given a word of advice from J. Davis, the King of Hoboes. He warns that already there are about 20,000 youngsters on the road and an expected 50,000 by July. The odd jobs to be found are scarce and the risk of hunger, jail and association with criminals is common. Folks in Robert Lee will do their best to keep their young off of the road for such traveling is apt to produce trouble and sorrow. It is too often that the paths aren't straight.

It was just last summer that we wrote about the work they were doing on the watermelon to make it the right size to fit in a family ice-box. Some fellows were experimenting and had developed a fruit that was about the size of a cantaloupe and could be stored easily. Things are moving mighty fast and you have to keep on your toes. In the old days this was a country of big families and larger appetites. Turkeys had to be big to secure a place on a self-respecting dinner table then. Fifty-pounders were commonplace. But today the Department of Agriculture is working hard to produce a turkey that will be small enough to fit the small pans in the small ovens of the small families with the small incomes. Come Thanksgiving we may be surprised in Robert Lee.

Miracle Man

Come on, Lee O' with thy basket of loaves and fishes. Convert the loaves into mountains of bread and the minnows into whales of fried fish.

Give unto each of us as thou has promised, thirty pieces of the long green without raising taxes.

This can be done O, Lee O' by the same methods as the loaves and fishes were made sufficient for the multitude.

Thou art a miracle man, O, Lee O'. Thou saidest so in meaning during the days of thy running and flying. Come on with thy stuff and show thy power over the politicians!

Kill the law that kills the killers that they may go forth and kill those whom they might seek to rob.

Keep thy mind open as to the Hossrace law, and trouble not thyself if the sorrel wins the race and the other fellow gets the money, for they shall gnaw a stump and flee unto the hiweed where the cottontail croucheth from the hound pup that roareth after rabbit meat.

Take thy lute each Sunday morn and sing unto us songs of thy promises that we may not forget them, even if they are now in the jug where the whiskey once stood. -- Uncle Bill in Sterling City News-Record.

OPEN MIND:

Well, the Legislature has adjourned now comes the fuss and feathers. I think it is a shame for any sane man who will deny the good people of Texas a right to vote a constitutional amendment I don't think they are a true Democrat. They remind me of the people spoken of in Gods word who said, "Let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach".

They Legislature is the only power that can submit a constitutional amendment to be voted on. Some of our legislators refused to grant this right to the people of Texas. They made most all kind of speeches against submission time and again, just as though the good citizens of Texas were too ignorant to know what they wanted. I think we are unfortunate to have such men in our law making body. If such men should dominate our government as some are trying to do it won't be long till common people of Texas will not be allowed to exercise their rights at the polls.

Now the boys are back, some telling the voters what all they did, how hard they worked for grandma and grandpa. Some of them voted against submission but they seem to have a great love for them, also the crippled children and the blind, and will soon be making preparations for another campaign.

They remind me of the three old maids who met to tell their experiences, the first told her experience, then the second told hers, they called on the third, she stood up and said let us all take a puke.

Judas, betrayed Christ for thirty pieces of silver. So boys be careful lest your sins find you out.

Humbly submitted,
M. H. Havins.

New Job-Creating Program

A new assault upon unemployment, through a large-scale, long-range program of self-liquidating projects, was recommended to Congress on Thursday by President Roosevelt.

The program calls for an outlay of $3,800,000,000, of which $870,000,000 would be expended next year and the balance over a period of from two to seven years.

In the long run, the President said, every penny passed out would returned to the Treasury.

The plan actually is not new. It was suggested to the President during the 1938 Congress and for a while was seriously considered, but was dropped in favor of the PWA-WPA program.

Curiously, the idea has the backing of some of the President's advisers who have made almost a religion of the need of balancing the budget. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., is regarded as god-father of the scheme, and he has won over Budget Director Harold S. Smith.

If the program is launched there will be no limit to the amount of financing that could be provided. The plan calls for the issuance of government-guaranteed debentures as needed and the setting up of a revolving fund. As money returns to the Treasury it could be loaned.

As described by the President, the plan calls for the establishment of a number of lending agencies which would finance self-liquidating projects. The transactions would be carried in separate accounts and would not figure in the budget, since the money would be loaned in expectation that it would be repaid.

Each agency would handle only one type of project. For example, one authority would set up to finance the purchase of new equipment and improvements for the railroads. It is estimated that in this field alone $500,000,000 could be expended to the vast benefit of the country and the carriers.

Other suggested projects are toll bridges and highways, housing, rural electrification and public buildings of many kinds, including urgently needed hospitals.--Labor Journal.

Toward a Greater America

As long ago as June, 1916, there was born in the editorial offices of A Good Housekeeping Magazine an idea which, recurring at different times and in different places since then, has finally emerged into what may well be the beginning of an American renaissance of patriotism.

In an editorial appearing twenty-three years ago in that month's issue of Good Housekeeping, William Frederick Bigelow, editor of the magazine, wrote:

"The stability of a democracy rests upon the honest participation in its forms of government of a majority of the enfranchised citizens. So long, however, as a mere majority support certain ideals, those ideals will merely live, not flourish. Only through the driving power of a public opinion so general as to merit the usual term 'united' can worthwhile advances be made. Now any man buttonholed on the street will tell you that we need a great increase of both intelligence and honesty in our electorate. Charges--and proofs--of fraud are the commonplace of every election season. . . .

"At the present time--and we have never heard that it was ever otherwise--it is the custom for a young man who has come of age during the year to join the ranks of the voters without any attention being paid to him. Yesterday he was a child legally; today he is a citizen with as much influence at the ballot-box as the most learned and experienced man. He makes his way to the polls, casts his ballot, and goes out to swell the ranks of those who look upon voting as a matter of slight importance and never once think of the significance attached to the casting of a ballot. It does not occur to him that voting constitutes the chief difference between being a citizen and being a subject. . . .

"Our proposal is that hereafter on the Fourth of July--which we at-present don't know what to do with--there be suitable services in convenient places for the men and women who will vote for the first time at the following November election. Certificates of citizenship, bearing the state seal and appropriate wording, and signed by some designated official, should be given to each new voter, who should take an oath of citizenship, the duties and privileges of which should be explained in a public address by some well-known man of unquestioned probity. The occasion could be made very impressive, and in a few years would doubtless be looked upon as the public event of the year."

In Good Housekeeping for June, 1921, for July, 1933, and for July, 1935, Bigelow repeated his advocacy of a national Citizenship Day. The General Federation of Women's Clubs took up the banner and through its Department of American Citizenship launched a campaign for recognition of such a day.

Now, in elaborate ceremonies which recently took place at Manitowoc, Wisconsin, sponsored by the State Board of Vocational and Adult Education in cooperation with the University of Wisconsin Extension Service, when 350 native Americans were inducted impressively into the privileges of citizenship, and in scheduled observances in New York and elsewhere, there has come recognition of the wisdom of beginning the voting careers of the country's young people with fitting solemnity. This movement inaugurated by Good Housekeeping is expected to reach greater and greater proportions.

SOLOMON: A RULER WHO BEGAN WELL

LESSON TEXT—1 Kings 3:5-15. GOLDEN TEXT—Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart . . . that I may discern between good and bad.—1 Kings 3:9.

Success or failure in life is determined by the measure of a man's devotion to God and obedience to the will of God. We speak now of real success, not according to the ideas of the world. We are concerned with what a man is and what he does for God, not with what he may happen to possess.

An excellent outline taken from Points for Emphasis, by Dr. Hight C. Moore, most effectively presents the lesson.

I. Wisdom Offered (v. 5).

Solomon had properly opened his reign by going to Gibeon to offer a thousand burnt offerings because he "loved the Lord" (v. 3). Having returned from his day of worship, he had fallen into a deep sleep when God spoke to him saying, "Ask what I shall give thee." It was an unusual offer, a kind of blank check that God gives only to those whom He can trust to fill it out right, as MacLaren suggests.

Sometimes we wish God would give us such an opportunity. "That is just what He has done. He has appeared to you not in dreams, but in broad daylight and by His Son Jesus Christ has said as plainly as He could, Ask and it shall be given you." He has repeated it three times, saying, ask, seek, find. And then He has returned to say, "Everyone that asketh receiveth, and he that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." We have no right "to say that Solomon was more favored than we. We are more favored than he. If we have not, it is because we ask not. If we lose peace and joy, happiness and heaven, it is all for want of asking" (Joseph Hammond).

II. Wisdom Chosen (vv. 6-9).

The noble and intelligent choice of Solomon has been much admired and rightly so, for he chose the greatest gift that could come to any man, "an understanding heart." He might have asked for money or power, but with the lack of wisdom to use them properly they would have been a curse to him and to others. Long life is but a continued blight to a foolish man because it only extends the time of his folly. All things in the way of possessions must be outside of a man, therefore they may be lost or misused. But what he is and what he has in his heart, these are what make a man worth while. Solomon showed the beginning of wisdom when he chose, above all things, an understanding heart.

III. Wisdom Granted (vv. 10-14).

There can be no higher word of commendation than to say that a man's choice "pleased the Lord" (v. 10). To have that attitude of mind and heart which expresses itself in words and actions so exactly in conformity to the will of God that the Almighty Himself is pleased, is to be ready for God's unlimited blessing. Solomon asked for wisdom, and because he received that gift from God, he was ready to receive riches, honor, and power. We may by God's grace go the same way and take from His blessed hand numberless gifts.

Note the qualifying word "if" in verse 14. Solomon failed God in his later years as king. The tragic results are written for all to read.

IV. Wisdom Exercised (v. 15).

When Solomon awoke from his dream he showed his faith in God's promise and in fact demonstrated the wisdom which was now his possession, by returning to his capital city, Jerusalem, to stand before the ark of the covenant in reverent worship, then to lead his people in a public service of confession and consecration, which was followed by a great religious feast which drew the king and "all his servants," the people of Israel, into a blessed unity before the Lord.

One could wish and pray that all the rulers of the earth whether in democracies or under dictatorships might have the wisdom and humility of Solomon. The world is in utter confusion and really confesses that it does not know the way out of its difficulty. It has not yet turned to God. If rulers and people would fall upon their faces before Him in contrition and supplication, it would not be long before we would see both spiritual and material peace and prosperity.

And the Mistress Grew Red With Indignation

The housemaid was under notice to leave, and her mistress summoned her to tell her a few truths. "So I'm a flirt, am I?" demanded the maid, after a few preliminaries. "Well, I know them as flirts more than I do. And another thing, I'm better-looking than you. Your husband told me." "That's enough!" snapped her mistress. "Oh, no, it ain't," the girl went on. "I can kiss better than you can, too. Do you know who told me that?" "Don't you dare to suggest that my husband—" "Oh, no," interrupted the maid, "it was the butler."

Queer Duels

Sometimes the queerest weapons are selected by duelers. In Munich two butchers smacked each other with sausages till honor was satisfied. Recently two Louisiana Tech coeds fought a duel with pies, one young woman successfully defending her literary honor. The late Sir Donald Mann, a pioneer of Canadian railway expansion, used to tell of one he fought in a lumberjack camp with axes! The antagonists had their right legs strapped together below the knee. At this point he would pause and someone would invariably ask, "what happened?" "Well," Sir Donald would say modestly, "I am still here, ain't I?"

Primitive Head Hunters of New Guinea Particular About Training of Children

HEADHUNTERS of New Guinea, going without clothing, yet very particular about training their children in habits of cleanliness and modesty, were the subject of study by Dr. John Whiting and S. W. Reed, graduate students of Yale university, who lived for seven months among a small primitive tribe of less than 400 persons in a mountain range far up the Sepik river.

Spankings and rewards are the basis of child discipline among these primitives, the Yale investigators discovered, but early in life the child learns to recognize a word of praise or a scolding as an effective substitute for physical punishment or caress.

Food taboos and cleanliness are taught early in childhood and these "morals" are almost never neglected in after life, they found. Sexual and aggressive activities are controlled primarily at adolescence and later, and the restrictions in these matters are never so binding—they are quite often violated.

The tribe still hunt human heads and Doctor Whiting participated in a spear dance which the natives performed before setting out on a raid against a neighboring tribe. No male is accepted as being fully adult and manly unless he has accomplished the feat of spearing an enemy and bringing back his head as a trophy, Doctor Whiting said.

The tribe live on the produce of their yam gardens, the boiled pith of the sago palm, and the roasted meat of the wild pig. Snakes and

By Number

Several American towns are named with numbers, such as Six, W. Va.; Seventy Six, Ky., and Ninety Six, S. C., according to Collier's. A species of fish in South Africa is named Seventy-four after the 74 guns on Nelson's flagship, the Victory; and a toilet water is named 4711 after the street address in Cologne, Germany, where it was first compounded.

lizards also form part of their diet, and roasted white grubs are considered a delicacy. Doctor Whiting and Mr. Reed found it difficult to overcome their own food prejudices when the grubs were served them, but were surprised to find that they were "indeed excellent."—Science Service.

Here is something that looks ambitious but is really simple. Anyone that can make three wooden boxes and then screw or bolt them together, can make this davenport frame. The center box is made to fit an inner spring mattress of any size desired. All the other dimensions are given here.

One way to make the cushions is to bind flat sheets of newspapers together and then pad this base with cotton. Covering material in a rather heavy, rough textured cotton goods in a plain color or a conventional design will harmonize best with the modern lines of this piece of furniture.
