Gets Their Deer

J. F. Deets, 73, of Orient, T. J. Holden, 68, and Dr. J. K. Griffith, 74, left Tuesday, the 14th, to hunt deer on a ranch 30 miles west of Valentine.

They pitched camp Wednesday then sat around for two days and watched the rain which chose to fall at this inconvenient time. On Friday Holden bagged a 10 point buck which weighed around 175 pounds, dressed. Sunday Dr. Griffith killed a 375 pound 8 point buck on top of the highest mountain in that part of the country. The mountain was too steep and rocky for a horse to carry the buck, so the hunters had to roll the deer down to the foot of the mountain, where they loaded it on a horse for a 2-mile trip to camp. Old timers around those parts said that that was practically the largest kill they had ever seen.

Misses Zela Ruth Adkins and Jessie Fay Burgess spent the week end at Abilene with Miss Elmo McKiver.

The Baptist Brotherhood will hold a meeting at the church Tuesday evening at 7:00. The subject will be "Religious Political Parties of Jesus' Day."

P. T. A. Meets

One of the most interesting meetings ever held by the Robert Lee P. T. A. was attended Thursday afternoon November 16, by 53 members and visitors.

The third grade with Miss Lois Vowell in charge, presented a health play.

During the business session a treasurer's report was given. Mr. Teague who had charge of the plans for the Halloween Carnival reported $82.17 obtained from that project by the P. T. A. A bass drum and play ground equipment were considered as possible investments by the P. T. A.

Members of the association were urged to co-operate with the Boy Scouts in collecting toys no longer used, to be repaired as gifts for children who otherwise would have no Christmas gifts.

Books which can be used in the school library are to be collected from homes which wish to donate them, thus enlarging the library through a friendly service and without cost.

Mrs. Mary Russel was asked to take charge of all literature pertaining to the history and work of the local P. T. A.

A very inspiring message on "Lighting Lamps" was presented by Mrs. Drue Seoggins, followed by an interesting discussion on "Ability to get along with others" by Mrs. Bruce Clift.

Grade 3-A was awarded the dollar for having the largest representation of members present.

The Baptist W. M. S. met with Mrs. J. C. Snead Monday afternoon. Mrs. Fred DeLashaw gave the devotional. Mrs. B. M. Gramling reviewed the book "The Constraining Love", based on the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering. Arrangements were made to send a box to the Buckner's Orphan Home before Thanksgiving. Twelve members were present. Mrs. Elizabeth Scott was a guest.

Steers Tromp Bulldogs 40 to 0 here Saturday

The Miles squad did not seem to feel so very badly about being swept under by the Steers even though they did not expect the score against them to be so big. Miles has a team to appreciate. They have about two and a half teams that will certainly deal the conference misery the next two years since there is only one senior on the squad this season.

The Bulldogs weakened very little under the power of the Steers and some of the local boys knew they had played a football game when it was over.

Miles received the kick off but did not advance enough to make a first down. The Steers made two or three downs by plunging, then lost the ball on a fumble. No score was made in the first quarter, but Robert Lee started scoring heavily in the second quarter, winning with a score of 40-0.

Sleuth Hadn't Gone Far Before Solution Came

The great detective crawled about the scene of the crime, sharply peering here and there. But he could find nothing to help him to a solution of the mystery.

And then, after the third time he had been over the room, his patience was rewarded. He came upon a button. Carefully he picked it up, put it into an envelope, tucked the envelope into an inside pocket, and as he slowly rose to his feet, remarked: "I have the key to the solution!"

But even before he was fully erect, the truth dawned on him—his trousers began to sag.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Netherlands Invasion Foolish, Say Critics of Nazi Strategy; Churchill Blasts Peace Hopes

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union

EUROPE: Dutch Episode

"Glueck muss der Mensch haben." "A fellow has to have luck," commented Adolf Hitler when he escaped the Munich beer hall explosion by 20 minutes. But the allies wondered if it was luck. So hysterical were the Nazi cries of British conspiracy that many an observer on the opposite side of the fence called it a cunning plan—like the 1933 Reichstag fire—to weld German opinion. In Britain, where anti-Communist Nazis were blamed for the incident, Hitler's yells served only to unite the empire in its vow to "free Europe."

Any hope for peace went dwindling when Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, made the most vitriolic attack on record: "I will not attempt to prophesy whether the frenzy of a cornered maniac will drive Herr Hitler into the worst of all his crimes but I will say without doubt that the fate of Holland and Belgium, like that of Poland, Czechoslovakia and Austria, will be decided by a victory of the British . . . and the French . . ."

DUTCH-BELGIAN FRONTIER Blacked-in areas of the Netherlands could be flooded; arrows show probable routes of invasion. Netherlands would be used for aerial operations bases against Britain; Belgium would furnish new path to France.

Only an hour earlier all hopes for the Dutch-Belgian mediation offer (made a week before) went glimmering when Britain's King George sent a long and polite message acknowledging the peace move but pointing out that any further proposals must come from Germany.

CHURCHILL "... maniac."

Despite a German-Dutch border incident and Nazi flights over Belgium which were repulsed by anti-aircraft guns, the little nations remained cool.

Military experts meanwhile pointed out that a Nazi invasion of the Dutch lowlands would be foolish. Only possible advantage, and that a minor one, would be to bring German air bases 50 miles nearer Britain. But by the same token Britain could also violate defunct

Dutch neutrality, flying straight over the lowlands to German industrial strongholds instead of taking a round-about route to avoid Dutch soil.

Western Front

Twenty-one years to the day after Armistice was signed in the last war, German planes swarmed over northern French territory from the channel to Switzerland. That night they made raids along the frontier. A week-end of intensified activity was climaxed when air raid signals began screaming in Paris. When it was over, the French admitted Nazi reconnaissance planes had reached within 28 miles of the city before anti-aircraft guns sent them scurrying for home out of formation.

RUSSIA: Finnish Sandy Hook

Said Finland's Foreign Minister Eljas Erko to a U. S. newspaper man: "I believe there is a place called Sandy Hook outside New York harbor. How would you like to hand that over to some foreign country?" This, he indicated, was the reason Finland refused Russia's demand for a naval base on Finnish territory at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. There were also reports that Finnish-Russian conferees meeting in Moscow were having trouble revising the southern border between the two countries on the Karelian isthmus. After several days of this, during which the Soviet press warned that Russia would "find ways and means of obtaining whatever we need," Foreign Minister Erko suddenly announced the negotiations had definitely ended. Europe wondered what would come next for the Russian bear was obviously out of sorts.

DEFENSE: Army & Navy

From Director John C. Gebhart of the National Economy league, the U. S. got as good a reason as any why it should stay out of war. Whereas our participation in the World war cost 24 billion dollars at the time, Gebhart figured the cost to date was 57 billions. Moreover, any future war would cost at least 30 billions a year and would probably bring "inflation and ruinous taxation (which would) probably mean a lower standard of living for generations to come."

One good way to avoid war is to arm against it, which will be No. 1 on the congressional agenda January 3. Defense is making news these days on both army and navy fronts:

Army. Having become an expert by traveling 26,000 miles visiting army establishments, Alabama's

ALABAMA'S STARNES A 26,000-mile expert.

Rep. Joe Starnes returned to Washington and reported an acute need for coast and anti-aircraft defenses "all along the Atlantic and gulf seaboard." Meanwhile it was announced the war department would ask $1,300,000,000 next congress, the first "overall" appropriation request in departmental history. Planned reorganization: Creation of four armies made up of nine corps, each army under a lieutenant general.

Navy. Before asking any appropriation for sea forces, Illinois Rep. Ralph E. Church suggested that the navy department should be reorganized: "Our committee (house naval affairs) has been unable to find out, at times, who's responsible for what. We had a secretary of the navy (Swanson) who was unable to be at his office . . . and then we had an acting but not duly confirmed secretary (Edison)."

- 1. Less than two weeks before this famous criminal was to be released from prison, his cohorts on the outside made bloody preparations. Who is the criminal and what were the preparations? Hint: They took place in Chicago. 2. True or False: Treasury Secretary Morgenthau will ask congress to raise the statutory debt limit above the $45,000,000,000 mark, which it will reach next year. 3. Official U. S. corn production estimate for 1939 is 2,591,063,000 bushels. If domestic and export requirements will take 2,575,000,000 of these bushels, why must 1940 corn acreage allotments be reduced about 10 per cent next year? In other words, why is there a corn problem? 4. Choice: Eire's Prime Minister Eamon de Valera made news because: (A) he refused to let Irish soldiers fight with Britain in the war; (B) he refused to release hunger-striking members of the outlawed Irish Republican army; (C) he started a campaign to discredit the Blarney stone. 5. True or False: In his encyclical to the U. S., Pope Pius XII praised American education. (Answers at bottom of column.)

DOMESTIC: Neutrality

Disappointing to would-be U. S. profiteers was the reaction to removal of embargo restrictions against belligerents. As expected, orders for motors and aircraft increased, but purchase of war supplies was not large in terms of aggregate export volume. Some quarters expected orders to pick up later, but any hopes for a boom were nipped in the bud. Spectacular trade gains of September and October were no longer apparent. At New York, Federal Works Administrator John Carmody warned that only 500,000 of the 9,000,000 unemployed could expect jobs from the wartime business pickup. A more serious problem was the depression facing at least one branch of commerce—the merchant marine. Since U. S. boats cannot sail in combat areas, New York ports soon became jammed with jobless sailors and idle boats. Among the first to cry out was C. I. O.'s Joseph Curran, president of the national maritime union.

CURRAN Jobs wanted.

Within a few days the President began ironing out this mess. Following conferences with Joe Curran, Maritime Commission's Emory Land, and A. F. of L.'s Joseph Ryan and Matthew Dushane, the White House hoped to find ways of helping beached seamen.

MISCELLANY: Phantom Radio

In Mexico City the government played hide-and-seek with a mysterious German radio station which reportedly sent information on ship movements from a mountain stronghold, probably located in Chiapas state.

THE GIFT WIFE...

By RUPERT HUGHES

SYNOPSIS

board the Nord-Express, with Ostend as immediate destination. Dr. David is bound for America. With him is a young Cynthia Thatcher, his temporary companion. On the train they meet Bill, a former classmate of David's. David's former desire to drink. He feels a heavy veil over him again, and wants to guard the child, who is returning to America with him. During a stop, Gaines is injured in a minor accident. A passenger revives him with a drink. At the next stop David and Cynthia leave the train. David begins drinking. The next thing he is conscious of is a sort of chanting. He looks around and a door opens and in walks a range Negro, dressed in a white robe. She tells him that he is in Uskub, her name is Miruma, and that she is "gift wife" of the Pasha, who has an ailment, and who is husband in name to Miruma. She knows nothing of the child. Learning that David is a surgeon, Miruma tells him of a powerful man, Akref Bey, whose son is slowly dying. Jebb calls to examine the youth he Bey led them up a broad way to a large hall with a cushioned divan along three sides, with carved tables, mirrors, and Turkish hangings.

Could I have some hot water?" Jebb knelt at the bedside and examined the glowing body. He noted the right leg drawn up close. The boy told, and Hellwald translated, the history of the case.

Jebb glanced toward Hellwald in one word:

"Appendicitis."

By this time someone was kneeling at his side with a ewer of steam-water and a basin. He filled the member of the hypodermic needle, paused for the tablet to dissolve. Then he looked about for the first time.

the background hovered a young man in a shabby European tunic. Jebb decided he was a technician.

When the opiate was dissolved, Jebb made ready for the injection. The terrified boy fought him away. Jebb overcame the boy's feeble resistance and thrust the needle in shivering flesh. Gani Bey screamed as if he had a death-rattle, and the women echoed him shrilly. Even the father closed his eyes and toppled against the Jebb alone was calm. He was smiling at his success in injecting the opiate so near the center vein. He took under his thumb the boy's wrist and mechanically for his watch. It was not there. He turned to Hellwald:

"Bitte, wie viel Uhr ist's?"

Before Hellwald could answer, he heard someone say:

"Fourteen minutes to eleven, Herr."

and a watch was placed in his hand, by a hand that lingered to his, as the donor spoke:

"I am glad to see a real doctor here, doctor. You are an Amayri, I presume. My name is Murison. Donald Murison. I am a Presbyterian missionary, not a physician. I have done my best, but it is not much."

"Had you thought an operation indicated?"

"Yes, I supposed so, but I didn't trust myself to make one. There is no decent surgeon here than Salonica. I have a set of instruments, but—"

"Thanks, I may need them," said he.

Under the spell of the drug the permitted Jebb to make a careful examination and confirm the diagnosis suggested by the other symptoms. He turned to Murison:

"Tell them the relief is only temporary. The boy is very sick, and pain will come back on him with renewed violence. The cyst will burst and flood his body with poison. He will die, unless—unless the cyst is removed at once and for good."

"By an—operation?"

"That is the hope. It would be murder to neglect it. I should be a criminal unless I urged it."

With much circumlocution Murison broached the subject to the parents and they were affrighted at the thought. Jebb explained it to Hellwald and he joined forces with Murison and Akref Bey was converted at last, and gave his consent. Akref Bey put all the servants of his household at Jebb's command and Hellwald forgot the affairs of Austria to act as interpreter, while Murison hastened to fetch the instruments.

Hellwald could not forget the lost child whose name he could not pronounce, and he brought up the subject of the fee that Jebb should demand.

The upshot of it was that Hellwald settled upon one hundred pounds Turkish as the fee for the operation, whether successful or not. He accepted Akref Bey's word of honor as equivalent to a deposit in gold.

By this time he was ready with the ether and, smiling courage into the brave eyes of the little stoic, he hid them under the hood and watched the deep breathing of the obedient youth till the drugged soul had ceased to murmur.

Then he lifted the body, limp with mimic death, and carried it across the hall to the room prepared for the operation. Hellwald sat outside on the divan trying to divert Akref Bey with conversation. As Murison went in with Jebb he looked back with doleful eyes at the shivering ing father. Then he let the curtain at the door fall.

"You have found the evil, Jebb Effendim?"

It seemed many hours, but it was hardly the half of one when Murison lifted the curtain again for Jebb, who reappeared carrying in his arm the burden still peacefully unaware of its new wounds and bandages.

The surgeon's face wore a look of quiet triumph and Murison as he lifted the curtain at the door of the boy's room turned back to murmur:

"Ajayibi!" which is to say, "Wonderful!"

The father, the mother, and the sister crowded at once to the room to find their idol still alive, breathing raucously, and beginning to mutter sleepy nonsense as he came back to the world.

All the afternoon Jebb ministered to the boy and eased his pain as much as he dared. That night he had a couch spread for himself on the floor alongside, but sleep did not visit him, nor anyone else under that roof. For nature, the seamstress, was stitching the wounds with needles of pain. But by the hour when the few swallows of the early spring woke, peace fell on the racked body and the frightened spirit of the boy. And all the household was blessed with sleep.

CHAPTER V

When Jebb had carried the young Bey sufficiently past the shoals to intrust him to the care of his mother, he went back to the Hotel Turati to wait until it was safe for him to leave town. He was immediately besieged with patients of every sort, from the poor Serb who begged him to prescribe for the cough of his sick buffalo, to the British consul who sent for him on his own account.

Meanwhile Hellwald had received a telegram from the Austrian Consulate at Salonica saying that the police had heard nothing of the lost child.

And now Jebb began to wonder if he might not have lost the child in some other city. Salonica was a long journey from his last definite memory of Cologne, and there were various ways of arriving there.

On the third day of Gani Bey's convalescence—a servant brought to his room a request that he grant an audience to Fehmi Pasha, Miruma's husband.

The name set Jebb's nerves atingle, and he stammered as he told the servant to bring the Pasha up.

He determined to make a brave front and, taking a hasty glance at his Turkish grammar, found the phrase for "Come in, sir, and sit down."

This delighted the Pasha and he launched forth into a stream of Turkish. The flood carried away all of Jebb's little phrases and he could not even remember how to say that he did not speak Turkish.

The Pasha showed his disappointment at the check, thought a while, then ventured in bad French:

"Dje parle francais non peu. Est-ce que moosoo le parie?"

And Jebb answered in worse:

"Ung poo."

Proceeding then with much caution yet with far more mangling of French grammar than Jebb realized, the Pasha explained that he had heard of Jebb's great success. His friend, Akref Bey, had told him what marvels the jerrah Jebb Effendi had wrought upon his son; and Gani Bey's mother had visited the Pasha's wife in her sick room to advise her to call him in at once; for the Pasha's wife was very ill—if Jebb Effendi would pardon a gentleman for mentioning his wife to another gentleman! She was wasting away and no one seemed to know just what or where or whence her ailment was. Perhaps—undoubtedly—Jebb Effendi would know at a glance.

Jebb was so relieved at the nature of the Pasha's visit that he consented to go at once.

Nahir Hanim was plainly suffering a mortal illness. Jebb's eyes told him that.

He found her temperature high, and her breathing fast and weak, her general condition alarming. It was important that he should know everything and have his wits about him. The struggle to torture his own thoughts into French; then to translate back into English what the sick woman whispered was too baffling and irritating to be endured.

He gave up and went back to the hall where the Pasha waited anxiously. His French was almost too lame to express its own lameness, but he managed to make clear his need of an interpreter. The Pasha exclaimed:

"If only my other wife were here. She understands English."

"Your other wife!" Jebb echoed.

"Yes," said the Pasha, apologetically. "It is my misfortune to have two wives, Moosoo Jebb. I will send for the other at once. Perhaps she can repay me now in part for the enormous expense she has put me to."

He clapped his hands. A servant appeared, whom he dispatched for his coachman. When this man arrived he was dispatched post haste to request Miruma Hanim to come at once.

"The possession of two wives, moosoo," said the Pasha, "was not my wish but my misfortune. Few Turks except the rich and dissolute have endeavored to keep more than one wife. The law permits us four, but the law does not furnish us with funds, and the prophet did not advise it. And it were easier to keep five tigresses in a cage, Moosoo Jebb, than four wives in a house. For Turkish women are tyrannical, moosoo, and very exacting."

"I was content with one wife. Nahir Hanim is a good woman, she has borne me many children—why should I have desired another wife? I did not. But his Imperial Majesty, the Padishah, our benefactor and enlightened master—whom Allah preserve!—in those beautiful days when I enjoyed his favor, felt graciously inclined to present me with another. My own wife—she is a noble woman, moosoo, but jealous—she threatened to destroy herself if I made the other woman, this Miruma, my real wife. I went through the ceremony, but only the ceremony. Miruma Hanim is beautiful, I am told, but I have never seen her without her veil."

"If you should grant your second wife a release she would no longer be an—expense to you."

"The release is itself a great expense," said the Pasha, thinking hard, "I could not dismiss her without providing for her future or repaying the—the money I received from the Padishah as her dowry."

"Why not repay it?"

"You surgeons speak easily of amputations."

Though he could not understand the elaborate Turkish of the Pasha's greeting to Miruma, Jebb could see the mingled constraint and curiosity of his manner. There was something of the aged bridegroom in his cordiality as he seemed to try to peer through the yashmak of the woman who had been his Yes-and-No wife for years. There was something of the faithful husband, too, in his formal courtesy, for Nahir Hanim was lying in the next room and weeping weakly, a sick woman in great dismay.

The Pasha received Miruma's homage with a poor attempt at lofty majesty. Then he remembered Jebb, and spoke of him in Turkish with an evident flourish in his praise. Miruma, thus licensed, turned her eyes full upon him and the Pasha made the presentation in his best French.

Jebb bowed, Miruma lifted imaginary dust and placed it on her breast, her lips, and her brows.

Then the Pasha raised the portiere to his wife's room and Miruma went in, trembling with fear and bowing with all the deference required of a second wife before the Bash-Kadin.

A little later Jebb was summoned. The Pasha spoke again to Miruma, evidently counseling her to talk freely to the American surgeon. Then he bowed himself out of the haremlik, leaving the foreign wife and the foreign doctor with their helpless victim.

Tortured with her own impossible position, Miruma turned to Jebb with a halting:

"What, please, am I to say or do, Jebb Effendim?"

"If you will ask her my questions, and tell me her answers—please—hanim effendim—madame. Ask her where her pain is greatest."

Miruma put the question in Turkish of evident circumlocution. For answer Nahir's pale hand crept up and rested over her heart.

"Ask her how long she has been ill."

"She say she is seek for very, very long times. She have great fever in the night. In the morning she is better, but not well; in the morning she can eat some little, but later nothing at all."

Jebb had noted that Nahir was breathing very rapidly, or rather panting than breathing, for her respiration was exaggerated and shallow. He placed his hands at her sides, squeezed the chest walls. Nahir gave a little cry of pain.

And now with keener scrutiny he described below her left breast a slight distension of the flesh, not in outline but faintly in perspective.

His first gasp of delight at his discovery was quenched in a realization of its vital import.

"You have found the evil, Jebb Effendim?" said Miruma eagerly.

"I think so, madame, but I must make sure. If I only had an aspiratory needle! I don't suppose I could get one in Uskub." He thought hard, then he said, "This hypodermic needle is large; it will have to do."

He darted from the room and ran downstairs, followed by the astounded Pasha. The old coffee-maker, as he expected, had a vessel of boiling water on the coals. Without further ado, Jebb dropped the hypodermic needle in and stirred the charcoal. When the instrument had boiled long enough to suit him, he fished it out and hurried upstairs again.

When Jebb approached Nahir Hanim again and poised the needle over her heart, she thrust his hand aside with feeble haste and a little wail of fright. Even Miruma was afraid and interceded:

"Please not to hurt the poor lady!"

Truth in Mirrors
In medieval times mirrors were made in dark colors because glass could not be made water-clear, and for centuries all people knew about their own beauty or ugliness as to skin coloring was what their friends told them. Now colored glass mirrors are returning to popularity in shades of peach and gold for their value in decoration—and flattery!

There is a section of country around Smiley, Texas about half way between San Antonio and Houston that has the world beat for deep shifting sand. It was considered poor land and every one who tried to make a living on it felt himself more or less handicapped.

Then somebody came along with an idea; he had a strong opinion that poultry would prosper on that land. So about ten years ago, a little more, the people around Smiley began raising poultry. Of course, it took a little more than sandy ground to do it. The people themselves had to have some sand, too. But now Smiley is a prosperous community snipping out a half million broilers a year. On the day this is written you will find Smiley broilers on the San Angelo market, and the money that was spent to buy those broilers in the pockets of the Smiley farmers.

We can not see any reason to keep Robert Lee from becoming one of the show places of West Texas. It has a climate that makes West Texas famous.

The soil is adapted to most all kinds of farm crops. It is easily cultivated, rich and fertile.

Judging by the looks of the yards here in town where there are flowers and shrubbery, the people of Robert Lee can make yards as lovely as any in the state.

OIL-PLATED engine

5 to 8 minutes "isn't much" unless your cold engine is straining to start up without prompt lubrication. And less than a dozen cold starts a day can threaten an hour's lubrication delay. In the course of the Winter that could exceed 90 hours!

Let's not just hope that 90 hours or even half that won't hurt. Avoid the worst chance of this harm... change today to OIL-PLATING. Your engine becomes OIL-PLATED as you drive from Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station with a fill of his Conoco Germ Processed oil—patented. The rare man-made substance in this Germ Processed oil effects a close bond between oil and engine parts. OIL-PLATING can't all drain down every time the car stands, and therefore OIL-PLATING isn't waiting to be restored "from scratch" every time you start up. In advance of any oil-flow, OIL-PLATING is there! ... Lets the starter turn easy, the engine turn fast, and you're safely away. The only wait is a good long one before you add another quart of Germ Processed oil. OIL-PLATE today. Continental Oil Co.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for November 26

THE WORKS OF THE MESSIAH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 8:14-27. GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus of Nazareth... went about doing good.—Acts 10:38.

"Does it work?" In general, the question is a good one, and especially is that true as it is applied to religious systems and philosophies of life. These claim to have power to deliver man from his sin and give him peace and rest. What we want to know is, do they actually do it, not only in the day of health and prosperity, but in the hour of death and devastation? The answer is that every one of them has failed and does fail, with the exception of Christianity, which comes "not in word but in power" (1 Cor. 4:20). In Christianity is found the only real dynamic for daily living.

I. Personal Needs Satisfied (vv. 14-17).

This entire section of the Gospel of Matthew is concerned with miracles. It is interesting to note how many of these events concern personal needs. There is scant comfort to the needy one to speak to him in generalities about a great God who is ready to help people. When I am in need I want to know whether there is any help for me. Jesus healed Peter's mother in the home, and then He went out and healed multitudes in the throng, but in each case it was a personal interest which He took and a personal healing that was received.

Observe also that He met the need of all whether they were sick in body, mind or spirit. Someone may say, "That is all very well, but that took place when He was here on earth." Well, He is here now, working in and through the power of the Holy Spirit and in and through His children. The Lord Jesus Christ daily satisfies every need of His disciples, and often does so in ways which are miraculous in their sight.

II. Sacrificial Service Exemplified (vv. 18-22).

Following Jesus in discipleship is more than speaking sweet words of devotion or of taking part in the carrying out of some public worship ministry. To really follow Him is to "follow one whose vocation is such that there are incessant demands compelling the renunciation of home and the comforts of a settled life. Only the call of God can make one equal to the demands of such a hazardous life" (Edward E. Anderson).

Observe that even the demands which love may present on behalf of an aged father must not be permitted to stand between the disciple and his Lord. There is no thought of unkindness or lack of consideration here, for as our Lord points out, those who are spiritually dead, although still physically alive, may well be called on to care for the physical needs of an aged parent, even in the hour of death, if the Lord Jesus has work for His disciple to do elsewhere.

There is no thought of neglect of the duties of life, but rather of a placing of the Lord first, whatever else may take the second place. The blight upon many a Christian experience is that almost anything else which is of interest is allowed to take first place and the Lord must take second place if He is given any place at all.

III. Divine Power Demonstrated (vv. 23-27).

There are those in the world who are unable to see the workings of God's power in the spiritual realm because they themselves have not been spiritually born again (1 Cor. 2:14). For these the Lord here presented the working of His mighty power in the realm of nature.

Satan, who is "the prince of this world" (John 14:30), had evidently whipped the waves of the sea into a mighty storm, possibly thus hoping to drown Jesus and get rid of his divine adversary, but the Lord Himself speaks in the majesty of His eternal power and we read that "there was a great calm" (v. 26). Even His disciples were strangely astonished that the very "winds and the sea obey Him." Yes, the forces of nature respond to His slightest word. The winds and the sea obey Him. But what is even more wonderful is that the turmoil of a man's soul becomes a great and blessed calm when this holy Lord Jesus speaks the word of peace.

Volcanoes in Harness

Men may never be able to "harness" earthquakes, but they have made use of volcanoes. In Iceland they use them to obtain hot water. Private houses have boiling water laid in, as it were, from the boiling springs, which are volcanic in origin. At Reykjavik, the capital, there are communal wash-houses where washerwomen can be seen busy with hot water from Nature's own boilers. Gratings are fixed over the springs to prevent the women from falling in.

Whether man will ever be able really to use the power pent up inside a volcano it is hard to say. Already science has harnessed the tides, and such mighty forces of Nature as Niagara, to provide us with light and power.

TEEN-AGE GIRLS ENJOY MAKING HOMEMADE BREADS (Recipes Below.)

Homemade Breads—Hot and Cold

Yes, even girls in the 'teen age or younger enjoy making homemade breads of various types and who in all the world does not enjoy eating them? Bread after all is still very much the staff of life and fortunately our modern up-to-date experimental food kitchens are constantly developing for all of us a large number of brand new—good-to-eat, hot or cold, bread recipes of the broadest possible variety.

The making of yeast breads the modern simplified way is certainly a far cry from some of the difficulties that our grandmothers or even our mothers may have experienced when they made it regularly—years ago.

In the first place, yeast is now readily obtainable both in moist or dry form. Furthermore we now know that we can help to regulate the rapidity with which the whole bread-making process can proceed by adding more or less yeast—more if we want to hurry the rising—less if there is no particular reason for speed.

Then too, we have learned to watch the temperature of the dough a little more carefully and we know that if kept at the just right temperature, neither too hot nor too cold, the bread can be trusted to rise as it should and to develop, while rising, the best possible homemade bread flavor.

Then we have learned some modern recipe adaptations of those never-to-be-forgotten butterscotch rolls, parker house rolls and coffee kuchen that our mothers used to make. All of which brings me to sharing with you now some of my favorite yeast and baking powder, hot and cold bread recipes. Here they are:

Bishop's Bread. (Makes 1 loaf)

1/2 cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 1/2 cups bread flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 egg
3/4 cup sour milk

Cream shortening and slowly add the sugar, flour, and salt, mixing very thoroughly. Reserve 1/2 cup of this mixture for top crumbs to be used on bread while baking. To the remainder, add the soda, baking powder, egg and sour milk and beat until batter is smooth. Pour into well-greased loaf pan, sprinkle sugar and flour mixture on top and bake 25 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees). Raisins and nuts may be added if desired.

Yeast Bread. (Makes 3 medium loaves)

2 cups milk
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
2 cakes compressed yeast
1/2 cup lukewarm water
3/4 cup bread flour

Scald milk and to it add the salt, sugar, and shortening. Cool until lukewarm. Soften yeast in warm water and add to the scalded milk mixture. Add just enough flour to make a stiff batter and beat well. Then add enough more flour to make a firm but soft dough. Mix well, turn out on a floured board, and knead until the dough is smooth and elastic and until small blisters form on the dough itself. Place in a well-greased bowl and brush with melted fat. Cover and place in a warm (not hot) place to rise. When dough has a little more than doubled in bulk, knead it down lightly and let it rise again. When light again, shape into loaves and place in well-greased bread tins. Grease top of loaves with melted fat. Let rise until bread has again doubled in volume. Bake 40-45 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Hot Cinnamon Rolls. (Makes 18 rolls)

1 cup milk (scalded)
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup fat
1 yeast cake
1/4 cup warm water
3 to 4 cups general purpose flour
Melted butter
Granulated sugar
Cinnamon

Scald milk and add to it the sugar, salt, and fat. Cool until luke-warm and add yeast which has been softened in the warm water. Add a sufficient amount of flour to enable handling as a dough. Knead thoroughly, and allow dough to rise until it doubles in volume. Knead lightly, and allow the dough to double in bulk a second time. Then knead lightly and roll dough into a sheet—1/2-inch thick. Spread with melted butter and sprinkle with cinnamon and granulated sugar. Roll like a jelly roll and cut in slices one inch thick. Place on a well-greased baking sheet and allow to rise until light. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) approximately 20 minutes. This basic recipe may be used to make any kind of coffee cake or sweet roll.

Pecan Muffins. (Makes 12 medium-sized muffins)

1/2 cup light brown sugar
1 cup graham flour
1 cup general purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
2 eggs
1/2 cup shortening (melted)
1/2 cup pecan nut meats (chopped)

Place brown sugar and graham flour in a mixing bowl and mix thoroughly. Mix and sift general purpose flour, salt, and baking powder and add to the brown sugar mixture. Beat milk and eggs together and to them add the melted shortening. Pour this liquid mixture into the dry ingredients and mix as gently as possible with a fork. Do not stir or beat. Add nut meats. Place in well-greased muffin tins and bake in a very hot oven (475 degrees) for approximately 15 minutes.

Check these symptoms—and if you suspect excess stomach acids, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. If trouble persists, See Your Doctor.

Today it's so easy to "alkalize" excess acids anywhere you are. Now when distress comes at home, all you do is take 2 tablespoonfuls of liquid Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

 Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!
