Notice to Registrants And To The Public

The Selective Service Regulations Provide :

Mailing a Questionnaire (Form 40) by the Local Board to the registrants in notice that the process of "classification and selection" with regard to that registrants has begun. Each day this Local Board will post at its office a notice of the order numbers of the registrants to whom Questionnaires have been mailed that day.

This Local Board keeps in its office a Classification Record (Form 100). On this Classification Record will be entered the date each action is taken by this Board or the Board of Appeal concerning each registrant. The entry of this date in the Classification Record is notice of the action taken. Other notice will be mailed to each registrant at his address last known by the Local Board, and to any other person who files a claim for him.

Either the mailing of a notice or the entry in the Classification Record of the date the notice was mailed shall constitute notice to the registrant and all concerned. This is true whether or not the mailed notice is actually received by the person to whom it is addressed.

Any person required by law to register, or any registrant, who fails to perform a duty required by the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, within the time provided by the law (generally 5 days) has violated the law. A person violating the law is subject to trial in the United States District Court, which may impose a fine or imprisonment, or both.

The date when action was taken by the Local Board will be written in the Classification Record in each of the following instances:

Whenever a duty is to be performed by a registrant.

Whenever a period of time begins to run within which a registrant is to perform a duty.

Whenever a period of time begins to run within which a registrant may claim a privilege.

All registrants and other persons concerned should examine from time to time the notices posted by the Local Board and the Classification Record.

The Classification Record is open to inspection by the public during the Board's business hours.

Jess Craddock, Sr.
Member of Local Board.

Keep up the reputation we have lots of confidence in the Steers.

I had an idea what was coming, but I never batted an eye.

"I understand, Mr. Electric Light man," she said, "that you've been saying electric rates have been cut."

"Right," I said, "in fact, electric rates have been cut about 50% in the last ten years."

"Ha," she cried, "then maybe you can tell me why my electric bill runs higher now than it used to."

"Yes, madam," I said, "I can. Mine runs higher, too, and so, no doubt, does most everybody's in town. You see, all of us are using a whole lot more electricity now than we used to. Take your own case—I'll bet you've got a vacuum cleaner, a radio, an iron, maybe you're using those bigger and better light bulbs, and maybe you've got an electric ice box. The point is, you're probably using three or four times the electricity you did ten years ago!"

"Hmmm," she said, "I hadn't thought of that."

"Few people do think of that," I said, "and here's another thing—our customers not only get twice as much electricity for their money —they get better service. We've got two and three plants on the line that brings electricity to your very house, so in case something happens in one point your service won't be crippled."

"Dear me," she said, "I never knew that either."

"And what does it cost?" I went on. "About a dime a day for most of our customers. Think of that—the convenience of electricity for less than most men spend on cigarettes."

I could see she was beginning to wilt, so I signed off with—"You not only get twice as much for your money, but you cut your own rate every time you use more. With our modern electric rates it's automatic—the more you use the lower the price."

She fished in her bag for her handkerchief and I thought maybe my oratory had moved her to tears! But she grinned and waved the handkerchief—

"Flag of truce," she cried. "I give up—electricity is a bargain, all right."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

Greeks Stall Italian War Machine As British Occupy Island of Crete; Nazi Air Raids on England Slacken; U. S. Calls First Draftees This Month

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

In National Limelight . . .

Lindsay C. Warren, former Representative from North Carolina, is pictured as he was sworn in as Comptroller General of the U. S. He replaces Fred Brown, former New Hampshire Senator, who retired due to illness. Warren was sworn in by Judge Vinson, U. S. Court of Appeals.

Senator Hattie Caraway (above), of Arkansas, acted as Senate Majority Leader in the absence of Senator Alben W. Barkley, regular Senate Majority Leader, thereby becoming the first woman to assume those duties in Capitol history.

GREECE:

A 'Dark Horse'

The stand that the Greeks were making against the Italian modern and mechanized army supported by considerable air strength was distinctly a surprise in the war news of the week.

Ioannina (Janina), far from falling a quick victim to the invaders, proved no easy nut to crack and instead of the Fascist troops falling over themselves on the road to Salonika, there were reports that Greeks had bayonet-charged their way into Albanian territory, capturing Biglista.

Whether or not the Italian invasion was bogging down, Count Galeazzo Ciano was rushed from Italy into Albania with instructions to speed up the Italian advance.

At last reports the Turks were sharpening their tools of warfare, all army leaves were cancelled, and it looked very much as though Ankara was getting ready for immediate action in case any of the other Axis spectators "piled on."

British aid was of a concrete nature, as forecast at the outset of the Rome-Athens difficulty. Islands of strategic import have been occupied by land forces, rushed from Egyptian bases.

R. A. F. planes are aiding the Greeks in force, and the battle seems joined on a more equal footing. Where the Albanians stand is still a mystery. Rome has asserted that Albanian units are fighting with the Fascist legions. Greece simply refers to these troops as "irregulars."

British occupation of Crete is variously interpreted. Some observers saw in this move the bottling up by the British Mediterranean fleet not only the Adriatic, but also the approach to the Dardanelles.

ORDERS:

Moving Manpower

The big lottery party in Washington put some 17,000,000 young men where the breeze of conscription could blow about 10 per cent of them into Uncle Sam's uniform for a year of military training.

Those who were carrying serial and order numbers around in their pocketbooks on little white cards were putting red rings around four dates on their calendars.

Late this month the first 30,000 will move toward "$21 a month and room and board for a year."

Another group will have a date with their local boards early in December, and the third and fourth allotments will start for camp, according to present schedules, in January and February.

It is taking higher mathematics to determine the ratio on which the various local boards will select their quotas. But the effort is to make it "even Stephen", according to number of registrants, each board permitted to subtract the numbers of volunteers, also those now serving in the army, navy, marine corps and the National Guard.

Of the 890,000 to be taken, 117,000-odd will come from New York state, but even the most sparsely populated sections of the nation will do their share.

How many will come back to civil life—how many will embrace the army as a permanent career—that is a big question. But the regular officers will do their best, when they find lads with a flair for the military life, to do a job of salesmanship.

The officers' training schools will do their part. When a $20-a-week clerk finds he can bark commands, and gets a yellow bar on his shoulder and a company to order around, what kind of a bet is it that he will want to go back to his desk?

FIFTY-FIFTY:

U. S. Aids British

Reports from London indicated that the pace of German air raids over that city and most of England had shown a decrease in numbers and intensity. Whether this slackening of pace was only temporary these reports could not predict. One thing was sure however: America's aid to Britain is not likely to soon slacken.

Just before the election dust settled down, President Roosevelt, in one of his final campaign addresses, brought the war right into the battle as an issue, and there it stayed for the rest of the race.

Americans were treated to the odd picture of campaign boosts for one side or the other coming, not from our own sidelines, but from across the big pond via short-wave radio.

When the Nazis issued a criticism of Roosevelt defense policies, that was translated by the candidates' supporters, from Flynn on down, as a message that the Nazis were rooting for the election of Wilkie. And vice versa.

The war and peace issue, the question of taking sides with one or the other of the European combatants became a real issue.

In the closing days Roosevelt startled the nation by announcing that Britain was getting, would continue to get, one of every two planes coming off American assembly lines.

The U. S. bomb-sight turned out to be two bomb-sights, both better than any now in Europe, one belonging to the navy, one to the army. The latter, not quite so good as the former, was to be released to England, our nation hanging onto the latter, exclusively.

The army bomb-sight was to be put on all planes delivered to Britain and the navy sight was to go on all our own army and navy ships.

AVIATION:

Mishap

Ten persons were killed as an east-bound airliner crashed in a blinding snowstorm in the Wasatch mountains, ten miles north of Salt Lake City, Utah. Bound to Salt Lake from San Francisco, the huge transport was carrying seven passengers and a crew of three. Air officials stated after their first investigation that the crash probably was due to the "failure of the range or radio beam." Last word from the plane came as the pilot radioed he was approaching the Salt Lake airport following the radio beam.

Inspection

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Prime Minister Winston Churchill and his rarely photographed wife are shown as they watched firefighters during a tour of London docks after a German bombing raid. A special target for German raiders, the docks are important military objectives for their destruction would hamper or eliminate shipping facilities.

HISTORY:

Still Repetitious

During the World war, the nation's fledgling airplane industry was unable to cope with the need for Liberty motors to drive American fighters and bombers.

The work was "farmed out" to auto factories, geared to mass production.

Today the airplane industry is a giant—but the orders for planes and parts for their manufacture have come on such a gigantic scale that history has repeated itself, and once more the industry has proven inadequate to meet the situation.

The industry had geared itself up to better than 1,000 planes a month, but when orders began coming in for 20,000 bombers of one type alone, it bogged down again.

Now Washington is giving orders for plane parts to auto makers, and they are hard at work, tooling up for this process. Even as in 1918.

TRAVELER:

With Umbrella

Sir Neville Chamberlain, umbrella man of appeasement, who saw the Nazi dogs of war howl him out of his post of power in Britain and send him down into the limbo of nonentity in his native land, may end his days in sunny California.

Traveling in utmost secrecy and unheralded, he is said to be on his way to the land of climate and peace, accompanied only by his wife.

Chamberlain's departure from his home shores had its paradoxical side. At Munich he had signed a pledge with Hitler that would mean, as he put it later, "peace in our time"—a phrase that was hurled back in his teeth later when bombs dropped on London.

TWO MEN:

Saga of the Sea

Fishermen, wandering among the dunes on Eleuthera island in the Bahamas, saw a boat with tattered sail grounded on shore, and two spectral forms crawling painfully across the sand.

They were Robert George Trapscott, 19, and Wilbert Roy Widdicombe, 24, able seamen of the late British steamer Anglo-Saxon, shelled and sunk by a Nazi raider 500 miles off the Azores August 21.

Seventy days later, the sole survivors of seven who had cut their way loose from the sinking freighter, they had landed safely on British soil.

Later, somewhat recovered, they were flown to Nassau and told their story, a tale that recalled Charles Reade's novel "Foul Play," and brought reality to the visions of the Ancient Mariner, Robinson Crusoe, Treasure Island and other yarns of sailor men.

NAMES

. . . in the news

KING CAROL, desperate of improvement in his affairs, went out and bought 1,000 sheets of white paper, started to write his memoirs.

AMBASSADOR JOSEPH KENNEDY, who returned from Britain just in time to give support to President Roosevelt by declaring the English needed his re-election.

Washington Digest

Rising Farm Prices to Follow Defense Program Expenditures

Agricultural Department Predicts Record Farm Increase; Government Faces Grave Responsibilities as First Draftees Are Called.

By BAUKHAGE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
WASHINGTON, D. C.—

Boom!
That sound you hear is not a bomb going off under the Capitol, or even the military music of the big bass drum. It's a cheerful sound heard along the city streets all over the country and its echo will soon be reverberating in the rural districts, too.

It's the business boom, already in evidence as a result of the defense program which has started the wheels of industry turning. That it is really on its way is agreed upon even by the economists who usually manage to disagree successfully about almost everything else. In fact the majority of the men whose job it is to look through the long-distance telescope at the country's economic future are beginning to worry a little for fear the upswing will go too far and they've already figured out ways to check the rise before it becomes a runaway.

However, the farmers don't need to worry about that phase of the question yet. Prosperity, like most good things, including a rural delivery package in a blizzard, usually arrives at the farm a little late. But it's coming.

Already fatter pay envelopes in the communities where armament factories are warming up are spilling a little into the farmer's hat. The dairy farmer gets it first. Figures which the department of agriculture has compiled only go through September but you can see the trend in this category:

September 1939—$218,000,000.
September 1940—$222,000,000.

The meat and animal products show a drop over this same period in the late figures, but the estimators here make confidential predictions. This is what they say:

"The rise in prices of farm products is likely to be most pronounced for commodities which are normally consumed almost entirely in the United States. This applies especially to some fruits and vegetables, and most live stock and live-stock products."

Milk, eggs and cheese seem to be the things the city people want "seconds" on, first. Then come the meat products and vegetables of course. September figures on vegetables still don't show the increase predicted partly, experts say, because the income from these products was cut down by the earlier drop in potato prices.

Experts Predict Outlook

Appears Promising

Of course we have to look at wheat and cotton and the many other export products in a different light because long payrolls at home don't stop short rations abroad and American export trade today is still flourishing like a school of fishes in the middle of the Sahara, but they always benefit from a good home market, too. England right now isn't hungry for anything but war supplies and they are willing to throw a ton of wheat overboard any day for a ton of airplanes. It's the same story with cotton and we already have a reserve of that big enough to provide dresses for most of the world and have enough left over to make a Ziegfeld chorus respectable.

As for tobacco, there is a hopeful sign in the sky even if the British did drop out of the market and leave us flat when she bought up the Turkish crop as a good-will move and called on such flue-cured as she could use from her own dominions.

But the Surplus Commodities corporation is now buying up and storing tobacco equivalent to the usual British orders which we expect will come in again when the battle smoke gets out of Europe's eyes and the Englishmen come back to the kind of smoke that Sir Walter Raleigh taught them to enjoy back in the time of Good Queen Bess. They will probably have had just enough Turkish by that time.

As to the general outlook, the people down in the department of agriculture, without going too far out on the limb, are pretty optimistic. Here is what they say:

"Nineteen forty-one outlook is for improved domestic demand for farm products, smaller exports, higher general average of prices, larger total cash income from marketings. Farm income—including government payments—the total exceeding $9,000,000,000—may be the largest since 1929."

Then comes a warning. "But increased costs of commodities and services used in farm production will cancel part of the gain in farm income—1941 over 1940."

The net of the situation seems to be that the farmer, like most everybody else, is going to have more money next year—if he can hang on to it.

First Draftees Called to Service

In a very few days now the boys who held the first numbers in the draft drawing will be on their way to the army camps. And today, as a gloomy rain fell over the capital I took out from my desk drawer a handful of little blue objects. As I looked at them I wondered how Aladdin felt when he rubbed his magic lamp and out of it sprang the powerful genie to do his bidding for good or ill.

I am not wondering so much about the good or ill which the genie of these little blue capsules will do. For they will be the boys who, in a few days, will be going off to serve their country as Aladdin's spirit served his lamp. I have faith that America will see that the mission its servants perform will be an honorable one. They won't be sent off on any of the bizarre adventures the slave of the lamp undertook.

What I am concerned about is what will happen to those boys themselves—the boys whose numbers were in the little blue capsules. I'm not worried about their health or wealth or happiness but I feel sort of responsible for them. You see I drew 25 of those capsules from the big bowl myself. At the time it was more of a lark—I was one of many legionnaires who, later on that historic day of October 29 was permitted for a few minutes to play the part of blind destiny.

Draft Lottery Was Solemn Ceremony

You have read a good deal about the historic drawing of the draft numbers in Washington. Perhaps you listened to the ceremony over the air. But there was one thing you couldn't know. And that is that you people back home were represented there—you fathers and mothers of the boys whose numbers were chosen and the rest of the folks who will depend on those boys to bulwark their liberties if war should ever come to America.

Most of us who were there, I mean the newsmen, the photographers, the broadcasters and the officials who took part, including President Roosevelt, were just workmen. We were building something for you. We knew that all that was happening was going past us out over the nation.

But there were two people present who, by their spontaneous acts, represented you. One was a man and one was a woman.

The man was Clarence Dykstra, director of the selective service system. His face told a story to me as expressive as any word spoken or anything done in the whole impressive ceremony. He stood there just back of Mr. Roosevelt and when the President addressed the boys over the country whose numbers were about to be drawn I watched Dykstra's face—the bronzed cheeks, uncrinkled except for two furrows that drop from the kindly brown eyes to the strong and kindly mouth. Those eyes were filled with tears.

I knew he was thinking of the people over the country and the sacrifice it would mean to them when in a few days from now home ties are broken.

And those people of whom Dr. Dykstra must have been thinking were suddenly personalized by a woman's voice in that solemn gathering. The woman you probably read about who uttered that exclamation, clearly audible to everyone present and to the listeners to the radio, when the first number, her own son's number, was read out by the President.

It wasn't a scream she uttered. It was just the vocalization of an emotion that any mother would feel, that many mothers did feel, when that number and the others were drawn. When she came to the microphone later on she was calm and quiet, said she was glad. Like everything else that happened that day there was nothing theatrical about her conduct. Just an average under-middle-aged mother talking about her boy. But the moment she spoke, to me she became the most important person in the room because she represented all the mothers of the nation.

THE STORY THUS FAR

When Virgie Morgan, widow, and owner of the Morgan paper mill in the Carolina mountain district, turns down a marriage proposal from Wallace Withers, he leaves her house in a rage. Virgie turns him down because she believes he is more interested in possession of her mill than in obtaining a wife. After he has gone, Branford Wills, a young stranger, who has been lost on the mountain-side for three days, finds his way to the Morgan home. Taken in, he is fed and warmed and allowed to remain overnight. Next morning it is learned that Wills, a government employee who has been working with surveyors in the district, has developed pneumonia, due to his exposure. He is forced to remain in the household and Marian Morgan, Virgie's daughter, expresses her dislike with the arrangement for she dislikes Wills.

CHAPTER II

Meanwhile in her kitchen Virgie Morgan held a hot-water bottle over the sink, filled it gingerly, ducking her head as the kettle steamed.

Lossie spooned coffee into a percolator. Her brassy waves were cushioned in a heavy net.

"Think it's pneumonia?" she asked, taking the kettle from her mistress' hand.

"A chill doesn't have to be pneumonia," Virgie said, "but his voice sounds funny and I heard him coughing a lot in the night. That bed was damp probably. Nobody has slept up there in a time. He should have had a fire—worn out the way he was."

"If this house just had a furnace in it—"

"Now, don't go harping on that, Lossie Wilson," Virgie snapped. "Carry up some coal before the doctor comes."

Lossie picked up the coal bucket, stepped into the back hall to remove her hairnet and dab some grayish-lavender powder on her nose. The young man coughing in the bed upstairs had romantic dark eyes and a mouth cut wide for laughter.

But all these devoted pains were wasted after all. Branford Wills was asleep. Red-hot coals of color burned in his cheeks, his hair was disordered and dry looking, his hands twitched, thrusting out of the blue sleeves of a pair of David Morgan's old pajamas.

"He's sure enough got something," Lossie decided, as she laid coal softly on the fire.

Virgie came up presently, tucked the hot-water bottle under the young stranger's feet, looked at him with troubled eyes.

"He's sick, all right," she said. "And I feel responsible. Putting him in this cold tomb of a room—after two nights out on that mountain."

"Well, you took him in," Lossie comforted her in a whisper. "A lot of people would have set the dog on a trampy looking thing like him."

"I can let his people know—and we can take good care of him, anyway," Virgie said.

Something appealing about this dark young head on the pillow. She had wanted three sons of her own—three boys, tall, dark, and audacious. And Heaven had given her only Marian who was small and slim and peppery—but audacious enough, goodness knew!

Wills stirred as the hot bottle warmed him, lifted his head, looked startled.

"Oh, sorry—I'm getting up right away," he licked his dry lips. "Someone should have called me—"

"You're not getting up just yet," Virgie interposed. "You've got a temperature."

"That's odd." He groped confusedly with his long, facile hands. "I'm never sick. I'll be all right in an hour or two. I was pretty tired—and wet, too."

"Lie down," ordered Virgie, tersely, "and don't talk too much. I'll let your outfit know where you are. But for the present you stay here."

"Please, Mrs. Morgan—I can't be a nuisance to you—" He broke off with a racking cough and pain snatched at him. He looked perplexed and in anguish. He wiped his lips with a corner of the sheet.

"I—guess—I am sick!" he muttered, lying back again.

Virgie shifted the counterpane, straightened the shades, poked the fire, went downstairs again. In the breakfast-room Marian was sugaring her fruit. Her hair was brushed and the sleeves of her orange pa-jamias flapped, she looked reproachful.

"Lossie says that hobo is sick," she said. "Have we got him on our hands?"

Virgie sat down, poured her coffee, fingered the toast, raised her voice. "Lossie! I can't eat this cold stuff. Make some hot. Yes, he's sick—it looks like pneumonia. And he's no hobo. I've telephoned for the doctor and you'll have to stay here till he comes. I've got to get down to the mill."

"But I don't know a thing about pneumonia!"

"You aren't expected to know. That's what we have the doctor for. You see that Lossie keeps the fire up. I'll send Ada Clark out if I can get hold of her."

"Oh, my heavens, Mother! She snuffles and her nose is always red, and she thinks that she's going to be kidnaped or something every time she sticks her silly head outside."

"Well, you don't have to look at her. She can take care of this boy till he's well enough to be moved somewhere—home, if he has any home."

"I wouldn't call him a boy. He's over twenty-five, if he's a minute!"

"Well, I'm over fifty and that entitles me to call most any man a boy!"

Virgie went out through the kitchen, collecting a hot kettle on the way. Every year winter came to the mountains with a wretched, freezing storm like this. Her little car would be hard to start.

She drove slowly down the icy road, gripping the steering-wheel, hating the treacherous going. Her hat felt insecure on her head. Her gray hair was thick and strong and these cocky little hats had no crowns anyway.

As Virgie went through the gate her swift eye measured every sign and sound, every spouting feather of steam, every odor. The mill was roaring on—roaring on without her.

Tom was anxious. Virgie felt better when she saw his gaunt face. At least Tom had missed her.

She spent a half-hour telephoning, then was properly indignant.

"Those government men went along back to Washington. Bridges says they said something about waiting for this young Wills, then they decided that probably he'd caught a ride down the mountain. This is a crazy country! If you catch a six-inch fish out of a creek up there in the forest a ranger will chase you a mile—but a man with brains and potentialities can go to waste anywhere and nobody bothers about it!"

But Tom was not worrying about young Mr. Wills. A government man more or less could be lost in the laurel hells indefinitely without loss to the Morgan mill. Tom had other things on his mind.

"Old man Perry Bennett come in." Tom pushed off his wide hat, worried his forelock. "He says he reckons he won't sell you that piece up Tuckaseegee. He says he got a better offer on it."

Virgie's mind stiffened to attention. "Who'd buy that cutover piece—and what for?"

"Champion maybe."

"Champion have got all they want. And even with the Government taking their best acreage, they wouldn't bother with a little thickety piece like old Bennett's. Tom, I think I see a few things you don't know about. You let me handle this."

"I ain't itchin' to handle Perry Bennett."

Virgie remembered presently to pull off her hat and spike it on the hook on the door. The telephone purred. Marian's voice came, thin, with an edge of fright on it.

"Mother, it is pneumonia!"

"Keep your head on," counseled her mother, dryly. "Open the window and keep the fire going. I'll get Ada Clark out there in a little."

She hung up. "Where's Lucy?" she demanded.

The chair, the little desk, the covered typewriter on the other side of the office were vacant. So was the prim little wooden costumer in the corner where every morning Lucy Fields, Virgie's secretary, hung up her green wool coat, her small black hat.

Tom pulled out his ponderous watch. "It ain't but four minutes after eight."

"My lord," muttered Virgie wearily, "I thought it was most noon." Lucy came in, on time to the minute, taking off her overshoes, setting them neatly in the corner.

Lucy Fields was another of those who comforted Virgie Morgan. Lucy's quiet hazel eyes, her husky voice and smooth hair, gave an air of calm to the cluttered bedlam of the office. Lucy had gone to high school with Marian, but when Marian was setting out for college with two trunks full of clothes, and a little roadster of her own, Lucy was learning Gregg and swift, assured ways of working exactly which way a lost car of potash might be routed.

Lucy's mother made watermelon-rind pickles and tufted counterpanes for tourists. In good weather the counterpanes hung on clothes-lines on the porch of the Fields' cottage, facing the highway.

Marian was sorry occasionally for Lucy, inviting her out to supper, suavely overlooking Lucy's made-over frocks, her half-soled shoes. But when there were young men at the house on the mountain, with dancing and gaiety, Lucy was not invited.

"She blushes so. She squirms, actually!" Marian justified this omission. "For a girl with the poise she has around the plant, to let the boys rattle her so and make her tongue-tied, is silly—but that's the way Lucy is!"

There were things about Lucy that Virgie was sure she knew. Prim little secrets that Lucy's quiet eyes hid. Still maids who fed on dreams, with no satin or moonlight or rose petals with which to wrap the timid bones of dreams, suffered. Virgie knew. She had been a tongue-tied, tormented girl in hand-me-downs, herself.

She sent Lucy out into the mill for the chemical report.

"She'll have a good day and every word will be spelled right if she sees Stanley Daniels first," she told Tom Pruitt.

There is something sudden, something intrepid and challenging about a mountain town.

A settlement gathered together on the plain marks the place where men paused, where they delayed and rested. But a town under a scarp, with foothold on the iron, hostile knees of the ranges, with quarrel streams gashing a roadway past the heart-straining rise of a ridge for a barbican, has something valorous about it; cocky, self-contained, a little defiant.

Stanley Daniels, chemist for the Morgan mill, lean and thirty, out of the University of Missouri, with young intolerance and the unbearable sting and surge of young ambition in his blood, felt and resented this cool remoteness of the mountain town clustered about the mill.

He was in it and of it, he was of hill stock from the Ozark country, yet this little town had never let him in. He lived at a rambling green house facing the main highway and the railroad; a house needing paint, with a vast asparagus fern on the porch and a row of stiff, indifferent chairs around the wall of the parlor, with five kinds of meat set out in the long dining-room and the linen not always clean.

The landlady, a Mrs. Gill, mothered him, washed his socks for him, her face screwed up at the terrible chemical odors he brought in with him. Her other boarders, widowers torn up by the roots, judges and lawyers in court week, odds and ends of detached humanity, were pleasant enough to him.

He was a young man in the quiet backwater of old lives drifted together. He let the elders admire his youth and take the winds of life, as they blow for youth, vicariously in their faces through him, but he never felt that he belonged.

He was a bird afloat, he was a hawk in the wind, something alive briefly, caught in the slow motion of a mountain mill village; sooner or later he would be caught up in a stronger current. But while this hiatus in his life lasted he would ease it by such gracious means as came to his hand. And the most gracious of these gifts was Lucy Fields.

Lucy was tuned deep. She had quiet splendors. She read a great deal and thought a great deal and she was as foreign to her thin, leather-skinned little mother, who wore asafetida around her neck all winter, as the moon is foreign to a barnyard lantern.

Lucy still ached a little because she had not been able to go to college. She winced when her mother said "over yan," or cleaned her dry fingernails with the scissors. She worked hard and believed that Virgie Morgan was the finest woman in the world.

Stanley Daniels was pleased by Lucy, warmed by her admiration, sensed the fine gold under the quiet shyness, generously let her go on incubating little dreams about him while he waited, cannily, committing himself to nothing, waiting for whatever more splendid offering life might be saving for him.

When the whistle moaned at five o'clock he waited for her. She was always conscientiously a little late. She dabbed about, dozed, licked stamps, hated hurrying out.

"Get along home, Lucy—your beau won't wait out there all night in this raw weather."

The wind dragged at Lucy's skirt and made her thin silk hose feel like coatings of ice on her legs as she went down the cinder road to the gate. But at the sight of Stanley Daniels, hunched in a sheltered spot, warmth flooded her body, sang in her blood, made her cheeks burn and her eyes grow bright.

"Oh, hello!" The wind caught at her voice but could not chill the shine of her eyes. "Were you waiting for me? You must be absolutely stiff. Let's walk fast."

Daniels fell briskly into step. "Is this the best you can do in Carolina—this kind of weather? What about all those songs—moonlight and fields of white, trees in bloom, sweet perfume—all that stuff?"

"Oh, that's for summer. Fall isn't very nice, anywhere—not late fall anyway."

They were at the gate of Daniels' shabby boarding-house. Lucy's home was at the end of a little street farther on. A scrap of a street that ran headlong into the mountain and stopped. They stood for a moment and Lucy's wrists tingled. Would he walk home with her? He never had yet—

Obviously he was not going on. He tipped his hat, set it more firmly on his head, said with a smile, "Better hurry in out of this wind."

Lucy struggled with her disappointment, walked home rapidly, certain what she would find there. A stuffy, too-warm room, littered with threads and snips of cotton, dull lamplight, a smell of frying or the blatant offense of cabbage.

But in her own bleak, frigid bedroom with the few dance programs and wistful souvenirs pinned to the window curtains, she let rebellion tear at her. Life was so unfair. Up there, high on the mountain where lights winked briefly, was Marian Morgan, who had everything, held it all casually as though it were her due!

Stanley Daniels scrubbed the yellowish stains from his fingers, brushed his hair flat, buttoned his coat, and went down to Mrs. Gill's dining-room. There was a caramel fragrance, sharp and tangy. Her pies had run over in the oven again.

"Mock cherry," she bragged, complacently, "and if you can tell the difference, you're the first! Looks like winter was here, don't it? And ain't it awful about that young feller up at Morgans'?"

"Is he worse?" Daniels inquired, indifferently.

"I ain't heard if he is. But it's terrible to think what might 'a happened to him out there in them mountains. I put you a place here, Mr. Daniels, because one of my neighbors has decided to come in and eat with us. This is Mr. Wallace Withers, Mr. Daniels. Mr. Daniels works at the mill."

"How do you do, Mr. Withers?" Stanley Daniels regarded the stranger on his left, saw only a well-knit, aging man with a weather-tinted face, narrow nostrils, and eyes that revealed nothing.

"Lived here long, Mr. Withers?" Daniels asked, again, after a little interval of gustatory silence.

"Born here." Withers was terse. "Born in the house where I live now. My father was born there."

"They built it of good heart timber then. No wood like that available any more, at any price," Daniels said.

"The men that built it were heart timber, too." Withers spooned sugar. "No scamp work on that building, like you see nowadays. Say you work for Virgie Morgan?"

"I'm a chemist over there—yes, sir."

MANY a heated argument ends in warm friends passing each other with icy stares. Never beg for a kiss. Most girls can't stand a lazy beggar. "If you refuse me," he swore, "I shall die." She did; and he died—30 years later.

If adjusted for a shorter distance, however, the same torpedo will travel for one, two or three miles at a speed of 40 miles or better an hour.—Pathfinder.

AN UP-TO-DATE THANKSGIVING DAY!
See Recipes Below.

Household News
By Eleanor Howe

It will soon be time for keeping open house, for the children will be home for the holidays, and friends will be dropping in at various and sundry hours. Great demands will be made upon your time, and even greater demands will be made upon your larder. Yet, you should be able to enjoy Thanksgiving dinner with your family without becoming tired out.

A well-planned Thanksgiving dinner will insure an enjoyable and untiring day. Here is a menu you may like to use for your Thanksgiving dinner this year:

- Fruit Cocktail
- Olives Celery Pickled Onions
- Roast Turkey with Dressing
- Giblet Gravy
- Mashed Potatoes Baked Squash
- Cranberry Salad
- Hot Rolls Butter
- Hot Mincemeat Pie
- Coffee

In the days of the Pilgrim Fathers, and indeed not so many years ago, Thanksgiving was one day of the year devoted not only to giving of thanks, but also to feasting. Not long ago I read of a menu that was served at a Thanksgiving feast. It contained not only roast turkey, but wild duck and several dishes of wild game. The vegetable dishes were innumerable, and even the desserts did not take a back seat when it came to quantity. With a menu such as this a good many hours were required for dining.

The simplified, modern version of the Thanksgiving feast is now just as thoroughly enjoyed. For it now leaves time for conversation and enjoyment; and the modern housewife enjoys this extra period of time for relaxation and visiting with friends and relatives.

- Cranberry Salad. (Serves 10)
- 1 quart cranberries
  - 2 cups water (boiling)
  - 2 cups sugar
  - 2 1/2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
  - 1/2 cup cold water
  - 1/2 cup nut meats (cut fine)
  - 2/3 cup celery (cut fine)
  - 1/2 cup tart apple (cut fine)

Wash cranberries. Place in saucepan, add boiling water and cook 10 minutes, or until cranberries are soft. Rub through sieve. Add sugar, to the cranberry pulp. Return to saucepan and cook gently for 5 minutes longer, stirring frequently. Remove from range and add the gelatin, which has been softened in the cold water. Stir until dissolved and then chill until mixture just begins to thicken. Add nut meats, celery, and apple, and place in individual gelatin molds. Chill thoroughly, and serve in crisp lettuce cups.

- Honey Almond Sweet Potatoes. (Serves 6)
- 6 small sweet potatoes
  - 1/2 cup honey
  - 1/4 cup hot water
  - 2/3 cup almonds (ground)
  - 1 tablespoon butter (melted)

Cook unpared sweet potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Cool, peel, and cut into halves lengthwise. Then place, cut side up, in buttered baking dish. Combine honey and water; add two tablespoons of this mixture and the melted butter to the ground almonds. Pour remainder of honey mixture over sweet potatoes and then top with the honey almond mixture. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees) and bake 35 to 40 minutes, or until brown.

Roast Turkey.
Allow 3/4 to 1 pound of turkey per person served. Dress and clean. Rub the inside cavity thoroughly with salt. Fill body and neck cavities loosely with stuffing. Truss. Brush well with unsalted fat and place on rack in large open roasting pan. (It can be stored overnight in the refrigerator if desired.)

The following time and temperature chart may be followed:

Weight of Bird	Oven Temperature	Approximate Cooking Time
Under 15 lbs.	325°—300°	2 1/2—4 hrs.
16—18 lbs.	300°—275°	4—5 hrs.
20—22 lbs.	275°—250°	5—8 hrs.

Dressing for Turkey.
10 cups soft bread crumbs
1 cup butter (melted)
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup parsley (chopped)
2 tablespoons poultry seasoning
Mix all ingredients thoroughly and use for stuffing the turkey. Note: This amount of dressing is sufficient for a 10-pound turkey. If a larger turkey is to be stuffed, the recipe should be increased proportionately.

Giblet Gravy.
Pour off liquid in pan in which turkey has been roasted. From liquid skim off 6 tablespoons fat; return fat to roasting pan and brown with 6 tablespoons flour. Add 3 cups stock in which giblets, neck, and tip of wings have been cooked; or if preferred, 3 cups milk may be substituted instead of the stock. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick; then season to taste with salt and pepper. Add giblets (cut in small pieces), heat well, and serve hot.

Zucchini Squash With Tomatoes. (Serves 6)

- 3 medium-sized Zucchini squashes
  - 3 slices bacon
  - 1 medium-sized onion (cut in small pieces)
  - 1 No. 2 can tomatoes
  - 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - Pepper to taste
- Wash squashes and cut into 1/2-inch slices. Cook in boiling, salted water 8 to 10 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Cut bacon into small pieces and heat until fat is rendered. Add onion and saute until brown. Add tomatoes and simmer for 5 minutes. Add squash and simmer 5 minutes longer. Add salt and pepper, and serve.

How Much Food You Should Eat During the Day

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

MOST calorie charts give the amount of food that equals 100 calories so that if the overweight (or the underweight) wishes to know how much food equals 2,000, 3,000, or 4,000 calories, he tries to estimate it from this 100 calorie chart.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

The following shows how much of, or the size of, some common foods which equal 100 calories:

One slice of bread; four soda crackers; three-fourths cup oatmeal, cracked wheat, corn meal; lean meat—one piece three inches long, two inches wide, one-half inch thick; the meat part of one thick lamb chop; one egg is 75 calories; five-eighths cup milk; cheese—one piece one inch square and one inch thick; butter—one level tablespoonful; four dates; two figs; one banana; one orange; one-half grapefruit; two apples; two pears; one potato; one-third cup cooked corn or beans; one cup beets, carrots, onions, parsnips, turnips, squash; two raw tomatoes; two cups canned tomatoes; five cups shredded raw cabbage; one small head cauliflower; four cups bouillon; one cup vegetable soup; one-half cup cream soup.

It will be noticed that only two meat items are mentioned on the list of foods containing 100 calories—one broiled lamb chop (the meat part) and one slice of lean meat three inches by two inches by one-half inch.

Calories of Meat.
With meats, the average serving of round steak is 150 calories; one slice of lean roast beef is 150 calories, one thick slice of juicy roast beef is 300 calories; one lean mutton chop is 150 calories; whereas one slice roast lamb leg is 230 calories.
Dairy products: one cube butter one inch by one inch by one inch is 100 calories; one glass of whole milk is 158 calories; one glass skim milk is 80 calories, or just about half.

With calorie charts at hand you can figure out how many calories you should eat daily. This depends upon your height and the kind of work you do. You simply multiply your ideal weight by 15 if you have an easy job indoors or by 20 if work is hard. Ideal weight for a man five feet seven inches is 147 pounds, with an increase of eight pounds for each inch over, or eight pounds less for each inch under. He thus requires 147 times 15=2,205 calories. A woman five feet four inches should weigh 130 pounds with six pounds more or less for each inch more or less than this height.

Overweights Tend Towards Diabetes

I MET a friend recently whom I had not seen for about two years. I had to look at him twice as he had lost considerable weight which greatly improved his appearance. His eyes were bright and I told him his loss of excess weight had given him a more youthful appearance. He then told me that a routine examination by his physician had discovered some sugar in his urine. His physician had told him that if he were willing to reduce his weight, he would likely prevent diabetes and the necessity of taking insulin.

By reducing his starch foods by half and his fat foods by one quarter, in a period of less than a year he had reduced his weight from 185 pounds to 135 pounds, the proper weight for his height and build. When he reached 135 pounds he increased his food intake slightly and during the two months previous to our meeting, his weight had remained at exactly 135 pounds.

Had this man not reduced his weight his chances of becoming a diabetic were great, because sugar was present in the urine and the amount of sugar in the blood was at the extreme limit of the amount present in normal urine.
There was no history of diabetes in his family but his physician's warning that overweight was a forerunner of diabetes so impressed him that he went immediately on the low-starch diet with the above excellent results.

'Sailors' Prayer-Books'

Back in the days before ships had steel decks, sailors used to spend much of every Sunday cleaning the decks with holy-stones. Because of this, and because the stones were used while the sailors were on their knees, the stones were called "sailors' prayer-books."

There was also a humorous couplet which was known as the sailors' eleventh commandment.

It ran:
"Six days shalt thou labour and do all that thou art able, And on the seventh holy-stone the decks and scrape the cable."
"Holy-stone" is probably a corruption of "holey" stone, as the soft sandstone used was porous and full of little holes.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

JESUS' CONCERN FOR LIFE AND HEALTH

LESSON TEXT—Luke 7:2-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10:10.

Physical life and bodily vigor are secondary in importance to spiritual life and health. Most people do not believe that, but it is true. Nevertheless our physical well-being is of great importance, for it is evident that the spiritual and mental side of man can function in a physical world only through a physical body. That makes it a primary concern of man to keep his body alive and, what is more, keep it as well and strong as possible, an effective instrument for the service of God and man.

With his emphasis on the physical, man tends, when sickness comes, to seek the help of man in overcoming the difficulty. Soon they find that only God is sufficient for their need, and He whom they have hitherto ignored is appealed to in prayer. Men and organizations quick to grasp an opportunity to set themselves forward appear as so-called faith healers. We need to stress the fact that men may come direct to Christ who is concerned about their bodies and their health and that they may come without intermediary, simply by faith in Him.

I. The Outreach of Faith (vv. 2-8).
1. Action (vv. 2-5). The centurion was a good man and so kind toward the Jews that he had built them a synagogue. (One wonders whether a Roman soldier of today would show such a spirit.) He was compassionate, stirred by the illness of a slave. He had a need which no man could meet. Where should he turn? Someone told him about Jesus. Blessed and fruitful testimony! He acted in faith and sent word to the Master.

2. Humility (vv. 6, 7). Socially and officially the centurion was far above Jesus, but he recognized His Lordship and knew himself to be unworthy that Christ should enter his house. True faith is humble. It has nothing to do with the brazen commanding of God which some seem to regard as such a magnificent evidence of faith. Watch for the mark of genuine and courteous humility if you would find men and women of faith.

3. Confidence (vv. 7, 8). There is nothing like this assurance of faith anywhere; in fact, Jesus said He had not seen it in all Israel. Knowing the manner in which his commands were carried out within the realm of his authority and recognizing Jesus as the Son of God, the centurion without hesitation accepted His absolute power over sickness. "Thank God! the centurion was right about that. Sickness is absolutely subject to the word of Jesus and so also are demons, sea and wind, and death itself (Luke 4:35, 36, 39; Mark 4:39; John 11:43, 44)" (Bradbury).

II. The Reward of Faith (vv. 9-15).
First of all we note that faith in God brings not only the individual but those round about him a real

1. Blessing (v. 9). The faith of this man delighted the heart of Jesus with a great joy. He commented on it and commended it to those round about. The story of it has come down through the centuries to stir us and stimulate us to belief in Christ. Faith in Him brings blessing, not only to the immediate beneficiary and at the moment, but lives on in blessing to others. Do we have that kind of faith? We also note that it resulted in

2. Healing (v. 10). Faith gets results because it releases the omnipotence of God. The young man was healed at the word of Jesus, in response to the centurion's faith.

3. Raising of the Dead (vv. 11-15). The mighty and compassionate Son of man met a poor widow from whom death had taken her only stay and comfort—a young man. She was apparently too deeply stricken to even call on Jesus for help, but one can almost feel her faith leap to His words, "Weep not." His divine voice then reached into the next world and called the young man back to life. The day that had started as the saddest and darkest in her life closed as the most blessed and joyful in her experience, because she had met Jesus.

Reader, have you met the tender, loving, omnipotent Jesus? He wants to be your Saviour, Lord, and ever-present friend. Will you let Him into your heart? Now?

Beyond Shadow of Doubt It WAS the END!

A certain actor was fond of telling his friends what he would accomplish when he had a speaking part. He would show them some real acting.

Eventually he was booked for a coming production. He was to appear in a scene and say: "It is."

For three weeks he rehearsed nightly before his mirror, trying all sorts of gestures, expressions, tones, until he felt perfect.

The eventful night arrived. The actor impatiently waited his cue. It came. "And so this is the end?"

With his best tragedian air he stalked to the center of the stage, and in a voice of thunder cried: "Is it?"

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ANTIQUE hooked rag rugs have a special charm because their designs show so much individuality. The women who made them, marked out their own designs on burlap, planned their own color schemes and dyed the rags. To draw a floral design, first make a circle and then a spiral line inside which becomes a rose. Two ovals with a triangle at the base become morning glories. Real leaves from plants and trees become tracing patterns for leaf designs. An oval cut from paper makes a pattern for a center medallion.

When making your own hook rug designs, always leave a hem allowance at least two inches wide

England Invaded in 1066

England's day of destiny in 1066 was September 28. On that day William, duke of Normandy, put in at Bulverhithe on the Sussex coast with his fleet of 3,000 boats which had been waiting for more than a month on the shores of Normandy (France) for a good wind across the English channel. The invasion then proceeded in the leisurely tempo of the times (it took three days to unload the boats).—Pathfinder.
