Dear Mr. Firestone:

This is to inform you that the Army and Navy are conferring upon the Firestone Park Plant of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company the Army-Navy Production Award for high achievement in the production of war equipment.

Gems of Thought

HUMAN slavery is wrong, insecure, and demoralizing. On mechanical slavery, on the slavery of the machine, the future of the world depends.—Oscar Wilde.

Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.
—LONGFELLOW.

No one has had gods so favorable to him that he can promise himself a morrow.—Seneca.

No sadder proof can be given by a man of his own littleness than disbelief in great men.—Carlyle.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Escalloped corn is especially favorable if several chopped ripe olives are added to the dish before serving.

Make an oilcloth cover for your ironing board, to use when brushing and sponging garments.

In choosing an innerspring mattress, look for these: well-tempered steel wire coils, long-fibered cotton or curled hair padding top and bottom, sturdy borders, strong ticking that won't stretch and some provision for ventilation.

When making raisin breads, cookies, etc., cover the raisins with hot water and simmer them for about five minutes before using. They will be larger and softer.

Do not cut the skins from apples when making applesauce. Remove blossom end, stem and parts that are not good. When thoroughly cooked, put through a coarse sieve. Made in this way the skins give the sauce a pink coloring.

A good spice tip: Try putting cinnamon in lamb stew.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THESE curtains were made of the long pieces of good material from each side of a pair of sheets that were worn in the center. They were dyed a soft cream; then wide strips of gingham and narrow ones of prepared bias trimming were stitched in place to make stripes. The chart shows the colors used and also gives the widths and spacing of stripes. In case you should want to use short lengths of goods for the foundation part, stitch these together with seams on the right side; then place contrasting strips over joinings. Colors used should repeat the colors in rugs, pictures, books or bric-a-brac.

Serviceman Took Words Out of Burrough's Mouth

While Firestone, Edison, Ford, and Burroughs were touring, a light bulb and a tire on the car went wrong. Mr. Ford went into a store and said to the proprietor: "What kind of lights do you have?" "Edison," was the reply. "And tires?" "Firestone." "You may be interested to know that Mr. Edison and Mr. Firestone are in my car, and that I am Henry Ford." As the man was putting on the tire, Mr. Burroughs, with long white whiskers, leaned out of the car, and the man, looking at him, said: "Yeah, I know, you're Santa Claus."

Co-operation

What is known as World War No. 2 is growing larger every day no matter what your theory was in the beginning the stark reality is the fact that if we are to come out victorious something will have to be done, no matter if we do think our enemies are heathens we are discovering that they are really fighting powers and that we will have to put down all four feet and make time. The war has lengthened many years by dillitatory tactics and still we do not realize that we are in this war to win or lose. We furnished the Japs with waste material to make war with and still we do not realize that same material is most valuable to our nation now.

The 50-caliber Browning machine gun is one of the most efficient short range weapons used by U. S. Fighting forces. It is effective at ranges up to 2,000 yards and fires about 600 forty-five caliber bullets per minute.

One of these guns costs about $1,500, while a thirty-caliber machine gun costs approximately $600. Our fighting forces need thousands of these rapid-fire guns. Even a small town or community can buy many of them by uniting in the purchase of War Bonds. At least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day will do the trick.

AFTER VICTORY

The problem of changing from war work, after World War I to peacetime production, plunged us into a long and grim depression.

Rural America felt this depression five years ahead of industry and business. We tried to warn labor and capital but they would not believe the warning and insisted the rainbow and the pot of gold at the end would last forever.

Finally, the bubble broke and the storm came. We had 12 million unemployed, the domestic market for farm production was gone, and even the smaller export market survived only when we loaned Europe the money to buy our products. Farm income was reduced, mortgages increased and many farmers lost their farms while industry, big and little, was at its wits' end to survive.

To Prevent a Worse Depression. Our problem is to prevent even a worse depression at the end of this war. Every industry, big and little, has been retooled to produce airplanes, tanks, cannon and weapons of war. Millions and millions of dollars have been spent for this purpose.

When this war is ended it will take the same millions of dollars to turn these industries back to peacetime production.

Lessons of World War I.

We learned after World War I that our country cannot prosper unless agriculture prospers. We know now that our country cannot prosper unless agriculture, business and industry, and labor are all prosperous. Whatever our personal feeling may be, the fact remains that all of these groups taken together make up our domestic market which consumes over 90 per cent of our total production.

Labor can purchase its maximum of farm products if each worker has a permanent job at good wages. The employer can pay good wages if he has something useful to manufacture and some one has the desire and the money to buy it. Jobs at good wages depend upon an employer who is making the money necessary to pay the wages.

Farm Prices Reflect Good Business. This makes it plain that with employers and business busy in useful undertakings, with all workers employed at good wages, farm prices will be good and consumption at its maximum.

The key to the situation is that employers shall have the cash money at hand to change from war manufacture to peace-time activity with the least possible delay when this war ends.

Our United States Senate is searching for a plan that will produce maximum revenue to the government to insure victory; provide a fund at the end of the war big enough and quickly enough to convert business and industry from war work to peacetime necessity, but without the government having to borrow and lend the money for this purpose after the war is over.

Here is a Simple, Practical Plan. For the solution of all these problems there is one simple plan of outstanding practical value, based on the idea that war profits from all companies, big and little, should be used for this purpose.

The tax rate on war profits is figured at about 90 per cent. Business and industry, big and little, would be permitted, however, to deduct from their taxable war profits 20 per cent of such profits, provided the deduction is used to purchase United States Recovery bonds.

Recovery bonds would be a special kind of bond for this purpose only. Recovery bonds could not be sold or borrowed upon during the war, and neither would they pay any interest. They must be held by the purchaser until the end of the war.

The day the war is over these bonds would automatically start to bear interest, could be bought and sold, and become the same as any other government bond. The purchaser could sell them or borrow upon them to obtain the money to change his business and plant from war production to peacetime production when and as he needed money to do this job.

Profits for Peace-Time Recovery. In other words, business, big or little, would be required to contribute 20 per cent of its own war profits to provide the money to change its own plants back to peacetime production.

The fairness and equity of such a plan is perfectly plain. Each company, by using 20 per cent of its own war profits to buy Recovery bonds, builds its own backlog to bridge from war production to normal peacetime activities. Big companies and small companies will buy in proportion to their size and needs until the war is over. In the meantime, our government receives the maximum in revenue to produce for victory, and we, the people, have established security against the worst depression of all time.

With such a plan adopted and in operation, we can all give our maximum to the war effort, secure in the fact that when the war is over we can quickly and safely go back to the paths of peace. FDR Moves to Stabilize Living Costs With Deadline Ultimatum to Congress; Labor 'Frozen' on Jobs in 12 States; New Pacific Action Takes High Jap Toll

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Granting labor a greater voice in the management of war production, Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, told AFL and CIO leaders that he would consider labor nominations for two vice chairmanships in WPB. Union labor leaders had told Nelson that WPB's approach to war conversion, curtailment and production policies was "unbalanced and one-sided" because top administrative posts were held by industrialists. Pictured here among the labor chiefs are (seated, second from left) William Green, AFL president; Donald Nelson and Phillip Murray, CIO president.

HALT LIVING COSTS: FDR Orders Congress

In a forthright speech to the nation, President Roosevelt carried his battle against rising prices to the people, demanding immediate anti-inflation action to avoid a "serious domestic economic crisis."

In a message to congress he demanded legislation by October 1 to bring farm prices under control. "In the event that the congress should fail to act, and act adequately, I shall accept the responsibility and I will act," he said.

With farm prices stabilized, he himself would act to stabilize wages, he promised. He stressed the point that the control of the inflationary threat could be obtained only by control of all the factors influencing it. Wages and farm prices remain to be stabilized. "I give you the solemn assurance that failure to solve this problem at home—and to solve it now—will make more difficult the winning of this war."

"I cannot tell what power may have to be exercised in order to win this war. The American people can be sure that I will use my power with a full sense of my responsibility to the Constitution and to my country. . . . When the war is won, the powers under which I act automatically revert to the people—to whom they belong," he said.

EGYPT:

The Tide of War

Although his Africa corps was stopped cold in its second major bid for the valley of the Nile, Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was reported to have retained certain territorial gains at the southern end of the El Alamein line.

Reports from Cairo indicated that Rommel's chief gain was the El Hemeimat ridge, a 700-foot observation post from which the Nazis can watch British movements.

However, the position of the then retreating German and Italian troops was given officially as west of the British mine fields which they entered the previous week. This indicates that Rommel had been forced to retreat beyond his starting point.

A blow to Axis strength was revealed with the information that Maj. Gen. George von Bismarck, first cousin of Chancellor Otto von Bismarck, founder of the modern German empire, was killed in action. Von Bismarck was one of Hitler's most able generals.

MANPOWER

'Freeze'

Labor in essential war industries in 12 western states was "frozen" under terms of a far-reaching order of the U. S. War Manpower commission. Announced by Paul McNutt, head of the commission, the order specified that no worker in the 12-state area engaged in non-ferrous metal mining, milling, smelting and refining, or in logging or lumbering, could seek other employment without first obtaining a certificate of separation from a designated representative of the U. S. employment service.

States included in the "critical" area were: Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, New Mexico and Texas.

SOUTH PACIFIC:

Back for More

The Jap evidently had not learned his lesson. He knew that the marines had taken important bases in the Solomons. He knew, too, that these marines had been backed up by regular army and navy detachments and that important air bases had been taken away from him and put to use for the United Nations. All this did not discourage him.

For despite these facts the Jap came back and after heavy losses succeeded in establishing small landing parties on Guadalcanal in the Solomon group. According to U. S. navy communiques this was but one of several minor Jap operations in the Solomons. These communiques attached importance to large loss of life by the landing parties and the implication seemed to be that those Japs unlucky enough to get ashore would be dealt with in typical marine fashion.

From New Guinea the news was different. Official reports from Melbourne, Australia, reported that Jap ground forces penetrated a gap in the Owen Stanley mountain range and advanced down the southern slope toward Port Moresby. About this same time a heavy Jap bombing attack on Port Moresby broke a three-week lull in this type operation.

A series of frontal attacks made it possible for the Jap to reach this objective. As he approached Port Moresby the fighting grew more terrific and his losses grew higher.

RUSSIAN FRONT:

'Greatest Weight'

Russian reports that the spearhead of the Nazi drive through the Grozny oil-fields in the Caucasus had been checked tended to offset the more ominous news from Stalingrad. There, 1,500 German dive bombers led the final attack on that city. It was at Stalingrad that the Russians had admitted that they battled the greatest weight of armament ever hurled against a single objective.

Before the final assault came this was typical of the Moscow communiques on the fighting in this sector: "West of Stalingrad our troops engaged in heavy fighting. One Soviet unit repulsed four attacks, one after another, but then was forced to retreat to new positions." How the Russians stood up under the pounding was baffling to many military experts.

Nazi assault forces had aimed their heaviest blows at Soviet artillery and anti-tank batteries, thus striving to level these anchors of the centers of resistance. East of the Volga, said German reports, their fliers had raided important Russian airfields.

Russian attacks on the northwest front, near Leningrad, rolled on, stalled, rolled on again. Conflicting reports from Moscow and Berlin dimmed the picture of this front.

Germany claimed the fall of Novorossisk, strategic Black sea naval base, and military sources saw its capture as a terrific blow to Russian naval action. Since the Soviet navy had been driven from its strongest base at Sevastopol fleet operations had been badly curtailed and the loss of Novorossisk would even more hamper these operations.

DOUBLE OFFENSIVE:

In China

Strong Chinese offensives in central and southern China have succeeded in recapturing a number of important points, the Chinese high command has announced.

The drive in the central province of Anhwei liberated 25 villages in 20 days, while the thrust in the south resulted in the recapture of a number of places near Samsui, terminus of the Canton-Samsui railway 25 miles west of Canton.

The Chinese have recaptured the three most important air bases taken by the Japanese in their summer offensive. They are Chuhsien and Lishui in the coastal Chekiang province, and Yushan in Kiangsi. In addition, they have recaptured approximately 350 miles of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway and more than 10,000 square miles of territory.

Chinese sources acknowledge that advances have been due in part to voluntary Japanese withdrawals. These withdrawals are looked upon as the prelude to a major attack against either India or Siberia.

The successful Chinese advances have largely nullified the effects of the Jap drive, which has been described as the greatest since the beginning of the "China incident."

JAPS ON KISKA:

'Must Be Thrown Out'

A stern warning that the Japanese must be thrown off the Aleutian island of Kiska was delivered by Sen. A. B. Chandler (Ky.), chairman of a senate military affairs subcommittee which recently investigated Alaskan and West coast defenses.

"The continued presence of the Japanese in the island of Kiska constitutes a continued menace and threat to the safety of the people of the United States, and they must be removed at the earliest possible moment," Chandler declared. He expressed the hope that the "high command" has been "awakened to the necessity of holding Alaska at all costs."

Chandler and his committee, upon its return from the 8,000-mile investigation trip, recommended immediate improvement of the Alaskan military establishments, including airplane ferry routes to Asia. He pointed out that a Jap offensive would be much more likely to succeed "if we failed to recognize the possibility of their coming up through the Aleutians to the American mainland."

SPAIN:

Complications

Many reliable foreign sources viewed the shake-up in Spain's political set-up as pretty much a domestic matter and forecast no general change in the pro-Axis leanings of Gen. Francisco Franco's government. Though one of Hitler's best friends in Spain, Foreign Minister Serrano Suner, had been ousted, it appeared that the main point of difficulty was discord between the Spanish army and the Falange political organization.

However, there was an international complication as well as the domestic dissension which had some effect on the change. Suner was reported to have lost diplomatic "face" because of the swing to the side of United Nations by many of the Latin-American countries.

He was replaced by Count Gen. Francisco Gomez de Jordana and it was expected that both this new official and Franco would now be less inclined to issue anti-United Nations declarations even though their sympathies must continue to lean toward the Axis.

This point of view appeared to be rather well based on logic for Franco's power in great part is dependent upon help given him by Hitler and Mussolini. Yet as Latin-America tended to draw away from the Axis, he would be forced to take account of this attitude for the tie between his country and Central and South America is close.

Nazi Break With Russia Foiled Sabotage in U. S.

Hitler Held Responsible for Wrecking Germany's Elaborate Plans to Blow Up Vital Points in U. S.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

A mystery that has perplexed many laymen and some officials in Washington with respect to the manner in which the government has forestalled a mammoth Nazi plan for sabotaging American industry can now be explained. There will be no official confirmation of the explanation but it comes to me from what are frequently described as "informed sources"—which really means "a man who has never lied to me so far."

In a sentence: The man who wrecked elaborate Nazi plans for blowing up munitions plants, railway terminals, bridges, electric light and power plants in the United States was none other than Adolf Schikelgruber, Hitler himself.

He did it when he tossed the Ribbentrop-Molotov pact out of the window just after Nazi armies had launched their surprise drive on Russia.

To understand what a job the fuhrer did for himself we must remember that for years, with the methodical care of the German mind, a detailed plan had been worked out for the sabotage of American industry. Even during the last war there were some terrible and effective pieces of sabotage accomplished by a comparatively untrained and unregimented crowd of German spies. The famous Black Tom explosion which wrecked the huge New Jersey plant not far from New York city, was an example. An international mixed claims commission finally awarded huge damages to the United States for that act.

But the Nazis began where the kaiser left off. They had schools for the training of saboteurs especially selected from Germans who had lived in the United States and were lured back to Germany and either bribed or intimidated into undertaking the work of destruction in territory with which they had become familiar.

Details of this training came out in the secret testimony in the recent trial of the Nazi saboteurs in Washington. But much of it was ancient history to the department of justice. And the way the advance information came into the hands of our intelligence officers was this:

While the Germans had their pact of friendship with Russia, Nazi agents were busy making friends with Communists all over the world in the hope that they could use them for subversive activities. The Communists naturally did not turn a deaf ear and Hitler's agents told all.

Then came the double cross, Germany attacked Russia, and Communist and Nazi who had always hated each other thoroughly gave vent to their real feelings. The plans which the Nazis had confided to the Communists were turned over to the governments of the United Nations.

The United States also had been picking up a little information about the German sabotage methods in other ways—such as by planting a man or two in the German Gestapo.

These men learned, from one source or another, that the Germans had hired safe crackers in this country to steal the blue prints of factories from insurance companies, which always demand a detailed description and plan of all buildings they insure. The plans were stolen, photographed and returned. That is one example. Many other little devious tricks and enterprises were revealed by dint of our own investigators, and with the help of the Communists who had complete and exhaustive data, the Federal Bureau of Investigation was able to take the necessary steps to break up the complicated plots and counter-plots to wreck American industry. So far there have been very few, if any, major cases which have been branded as sabotage in this country, thanks to Mr. Hitler.

On Pronunciation

You may not know it, but nobody thinks broadcasters know how to pronounce the names of foreign places. Some write in and tell us about it and even the news services try to help us. When an item comes over the news ticker about Rzhev or Chumbly they obligingly put the pronunciation in brackets.

The other day the news services had something to say about disturbances in Lyons, France. Now I've been hearing about Lyons all my life and I know perfectly well that Lyons is pronounced like two lions in the zoo. I also know that the same city is spelled by the French without the "s,"—Lyons—and I've visited that ancient and attractive city and I know how the French pronounce it.

So when the ticker said "Lyons (pronounced Lee-on)" I got the same feeling as when I once heard two Frenchmen disputing whether Washington was called "Vashington" or "Vassington."

Lyons, if you want to be pedantic, is not pronounced "Lee-on" or anything like it. If you want to pronounce it the French way, you'll have to study French. As for me, I'll go on saying Lyons, and I'll continue to say Paris—not "Pah-ree," and Rome, and Vienna and The Hague and Cologne and Athens, although I know that the natives don't call any of those cities by those names.

Notes From a Broadcaster's Diary

Is the government farm-conscious? It is. I am going to risk a gentle indiscretion and quote a suggestion from a high government source to broadcasters. It is part of an appeal to encourage enlistment in our merchant marine that must have one hundred thousand skilled workers for the shippards in 1942; must have 120,000 experienced seamen. Here is the suggestion:

"Take care to specify that the Merchant Marine does not want men engaged in farming or war production work. They do their share now. Any change would bring more harm than good. It does, however, want the young, the strong, the adventurous for seagoing jobs, and the skilled capable workers for the shippards . . ."

And the government wants the skilled farmer to stay on the farm where he is: Food will win the war and write the peace.

The Whole Truth

The Nazi regime is not usually credited with doing much to encourage truth. Hitler himself spends many paragraphs in "Mein Kampf" telling about the importance of being a good liar. But, strange as it may seem, according to a tale that is whispered behind the closed doors of state department offices, the Nazis have struck a blow for verity. Here is the tale which may never appear in the official communiques of our ministry of foreign relations.

When Germany declared war on the United States last December, after Pearl Harbor, there were still several hundred Americans, men and women, living in Paris. Many of them had lived there for 20 years, getting their American passports renewed periodically. Some of the ladies, it seems, took advantage of these periodical renewals to lop a couple of years off their age now and again.

And who would grudge the ladies a few years stolen from the calendar, especially in Paris? But the gentle prevarication bounced back with a vengeance. For when the Nazis announced that women under 60 would be interned in concentration camps, while older women would be allowed to remain at liberty, a certain number of American women suddenly discovered that the age shown on their passport was erroneous. They hurried to the Swiss consulate, which had charge of American interests, and swore out affidavits to the effect that they were not, say, 45, but 62.

Not all of these belated amendments were accepted by the Nazi officials—gallant for once. The consequence is that the rigors of the Nazi internment camps are now being suffered by women who, if they had been less coquettish about their years, would now be free.

SADDLE and RIDE

By ERNEST HAYCOX WNU-Release

THE STORY SO FAR: Clay Morgan, a solitary man who cannot forget the wife who died hating him, refuses to "play ball" with Ben Herendeen, a rancher who wants to run the cattle country his own way. Morgan is a big rancher and knows he must protect himself against rustlers and "nesters," but he doesn't like Herendeen's methods. Of his old friends, only Hack Breathitt has not gone over to Herendeen's side. The others—like Lige White, Charley Hillhouse and Gurd Grant—are supporting Herendeen more or less in self defense. Gurd Grant's sister, Catherine, is in love with Clay. She comes to see him and is forced to hide when riders are heard approaching. The first is Hack Breathitt, out of breath from hard riding.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER V

Hack Breathitt stepped to the porch. He said: "I guess I need a little help on this." He was a thin, agitated shape in the shadows; he was swearing softly to himself, full of anger. He listened to the strengthening rush of the yonder horses. "That will be Herendeen and Lige White and Gurd Grant. It has come to a hell of a pass when a man can't ride these hills as he pleases."

Clay Morgan said, rough and sudden: "If they're stepping on your feet, take a shot at them."

Hack let out a heavy, irritated sigh. "Not yet, Clay. I'm tryin' to be peaceable."

They said no more, for the three ranchers had reached the yard. The three left their saddles, slowly coming into the light. Morgan had his quick sight of their faces, of Gurd's worried expression and of Lige White's embarrassed dislike at what he was now doing, and of Ben Herendeen's bony, flat triumph. "It's what I expected," Herendeen said.

"You're lucky I didn't knock you out of that saddle," grumbled Hack Breathitt.

"If you had nothin' to worry about, why run?" asked Herendeen. Hack Breathitt was a shrewd man and he had no trust in Ben Herendeen. He said, halfway between outrage and amusement: "Wasn't runnin', Ben. I was just bein' careful. I just kept rememberin' Ollie Jacks."

Gurd Grant said: "We were coming along the trail down by Dell Lake and saw you and Pete Borders riding together. Pete hit off one way and you went another. All we wanted to know was why you camped with him last night. But you made a run of it."

"Clay," said Herendeen, "you propose to shelter every brush-jumper that comes along?"

"Hack's a friend of mine," stated Morgan, "and he's on my land. I'll stand behind him."

Herendeen said, to Breathitt, "If I ever see you around my country, Hack, I'll open up on you." He swung on his heels and left the porch.

From his place by the doorway, Morgan noticed Gurd Grant swing from the porch end with a strange jerk of his shoulders and cross at once to his horse. He mounted quickly, waiting for Lige White and Herendeen. Darkness covered this yard but Morgan saw Gurd's white and vague and staring face in the heavy shadows. A moment later all three of them trotted from the yard.

As they left, Lige White said something to Grant. Gurd Grant never heard it. In stepping to the end of the porch he had noticed his sister's horse in the farther darkness and at that moment all his long wonder at her relations with Morgan froze into solid certainty—and left him, in that one passing interval, no longer Morgan's friend.

Hack said: "Well, I'll drift along."

"Put up for the night, Hack."

"No," said Hack. "But I'm obliged for the help." He looked down at the floor, involved in his own uncertain thoughts. "It is the last time I'll run from those fellows, Clay. I wanted no shootin'. Now, I don't give a damn."

He was soon gone, galloping southward down the narrow valley. Morgan waited until the sound of all these travelers faded into the night before going to the living room. Catherine came from the hallway toward him.

"Clay—did he see my horse?"

"I took it back of the house."

Relief came to her, though there was a shading of worry that wouldn't leave. "Gurd's a little touchy about me. I wouldn't want . . ."

She didn't finish that sentence. He said: "Do what you can to keep Gurd out of it. Ben's going to play hell with a lot of people. If it comes to a showdown I'll have to go against him."

She murmured, "I know," and the color of her eyes turned darker, turned softer. She saw the length of his jaw and the tension around his lips and the smoky excitement rising in his eyes. She said in a small, hurried voice, "Good night, Clay," and went by him. He walked to the porch and waited until she rode around the house. She paused a moment and held out her hand. She said, at once cool and near laughter: "Will I see you in town, Clay? There's a dance Friday. I think Ben will be taking me."

"I'll be there," he said.

On Thursday evening just beyond sunset, Ben Herendeen reached the ridge behind the Gale homestead and came over it so suddenly that he caught the Gale family eating supper under a lone juniper tree in the yard. He might have taken the route straight across Fanolango Desert, but this would have given Gale notice from afar. Liard Connor and Bones McGeen, both being men who liked this kind of business, were with him.

It amused Herendeen to see the complete shock his arrival produced. Gale rose, gaunt and gray-headed and old-faced in the twilight. Mrs. Gale suddenly reached for the smallest child, wrapping her apron around him.

There were three other children in the family, a girl near twenty and two younger boys. All of them remained still and for a moment he could see something pretty close to terror in the eyes of Gale's wife. "I gave you time," pointed out Herendeen.

Mrs. Gale suddenly reached for the smallest child, wrapping her apron around him—

"Time for what?" asked Gale. "To kick a man around like a dog? I ain't hurting you. This ain't near your range. It should be Mr. White's say—and he ain't complained."

"That's enough," said Herendeen. "All you nesters are alike. I give you twenty minutes to clear your junk out of the shack."

Mrs. Gale at once turned and ran for the house, calling over her shoulders, "Gale, help me. Daisy—come help me."

Gale didn't move. He had his head down and he stared at the ground, hard-caught by indecision and futility. The girl, Herendeen observed, was pretty.

The women were carrying their possessions out of the house—their kitchen implements, their clothes, their few sticks of furniture. Herendeen said, almost laughing, "Old man, if you expect to save your wagon you better get it out of the shed."

Gale stirred himself. He walked across the yard with his knees never quite straightening. He called to the oldest boy, "Give me a hand, sonny," and both of them seized the tongue of the wagon and backed it from the shed. Afterwards Gale went into the corral for his horses. Herendeen watched the family move around the yard. He looked at his watch, and was a little disappointed that it was so easy. He said: "That's twenty minutes. Set 'em afire."

Bones McGeen rode to the shed. Liard Connor got down and went into the house. Herendeen heard him tramping around the place; the stove crashed down and in a little while smoke began to puff through the door. Connor came back. McGeen had piled some sage wood against the corner of the shed, and now this fire began to burn. Gale stopped harnessing the horses. He put his back against the wagon, watching the fire catch hold.

One side of the shed turned into a yellow sheet of flame; the doorway of the shanty showed a solid roll of smoke and fire inside—and there was no way now for the Gales to save anything. Herendeen said, to his men: "I guess that's all." But he looked at the girl, speculating on her. He said: "I'm not as bad as you'd figure. You want a job? It's one way of keeping your family alive, anyhow."

Gale left the horses and walked to Herendeen. He said: "Mr. Herendeen, my daughter would drop dead before she took anything from you. And if she did take anything I'd kill her. I guess you've done us all the hurt you can. Go on and leave us alone. Someday, maybe I can pay you back."

"Hold on there," said Herendeen. He got off his horse and walked up to Gale, catching the front of Gale's shirt in his fingers. He shook Gale a little but there wasn't any resistance in the older man at all; his body swayed to the pressure of Herendeen's arm. Mrs. Gale's eyes showed a sudden terror. One of the boys reached down to seize a rock; he would have thrown it at Herendeen if the girl hadn't caught his arm.

Herendeen said: "You had better keep your damned mouth shut. Hitch up that team and get out of the country."

He released Gale and returned to his horse. Connor and McGeen joined him, the three of them circling the snapping, twisted rush of fire; flames broke through the shanty's roof and the sky above this area began to glow. Looking back as a matter of caution, Herendeen saw the family still standing by the juniper tree. The girl had taken the youngest child in her arms. Gale had moved over to his wife. His arm was around her; she had thrown her apron across her face and was crying.

Late Friday afternoon, just as Clay Morgan was ready to leave the ranch for War Pass, Vance Ketchell came into the Long Seven yard and dropped off a tired horse. Vance was a steady-going young man who once had been a puncher for Herendeen's Three Pines and now owned a few cows of his own up on the slope of the Cache Mountains. He didn't say anything for a moment but Morgan saw that he was under considerable strain—and waited for Vance to make his talk. Vance fashioned a cigarette, lighted it and stood with his feet apart, staring across the narrow valley flats. He said, "Pretty country," but really didn't see it. When he pushed his hat back a mop of hair, black as crow, dropped down on his forehead.

"Clay," he said at last, "you hear about the Gales?"

"Yes."

"I saw them over in Freeport yesterday. Pretty tough—pretty tough." He smoked on and Morgan knew he had not yet come to his point. Something on the summit of the Mogul Hills seemed to interest Vance Ketchell as he added casually: "I like the family—I like the girl."

"Sure," said Morgan, and understood part of Vance's trouble then.

"Clay, if that can happen to a nester, it can happen to me. I'm pretty small potatoes and it looks like something's afoot to push us out." He stared at Morgan, then said in an idle voice, "I heard the big outfits held a meetin' the other day."

"Wasn't present," said Clay.

He knew what lay in Ketchell's mind. Ketchell was a cow hand at heart but he had his own interests to worry about now, and the affair at the Gale homestead hit pretty close. Ketchell was figuring out the politics of the country, wondering where his, Morgan's, weight would be. Ketchell was too old a hand to ask the direct question, but nevertheless he kept circling around, hunting an answer.

Ketchell said: "I don't think it was right of Herendeen. Can't blame a big outfit for watchin' its own fences, but I ain't so ignorant as I used to be. Small folks have got rights, Clay. There's a hell of a lot of them in this world—and they got rights."

"If I were Gale," said Morgan, "I'd cut the price of that homestead out of Herendeen's hide."

He saw relief change Ketchell's face completely. Vance tossed away the cigarette; he was grinning beneath the shadow of his hat brim. "Yeah," he said. "Well, see you in church." He was on the horse and soon away and somewhere in his mind was a decision formed in that little space of time.

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.—1 John 3:16.

The family is still the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is set for the destruction of society itself.

Men have too often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But marriage is just as sacred as ever in His sight; the home is to be kept for Him; and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of real men.

Today's lesson is a continuation of the story of Joseph's life. As we study it we must bear in mind Joseph's dealings with his brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to the point of real repentance.

To do so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their father Jacob, stood condemned by their own words, to death.

In that crisis the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen. 37:26, 27) and who had apparently come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life. That plea presented a truly sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested

I. Courage (v. 18).

Easy rests the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligence (vv. 19-29).

Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

Judah's plea is a masterpiece of argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that he was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

III. Self-Denial (vv. 30-33).

One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother, who says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondman."

IV. Love (v. 34).

Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had failed in that respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.

That affection was a real, powerful, and beautiful thing, and yet it is but a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18: 24; II Cor. 8:9).

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood streams free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—its itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Notice to Farmers

The two gins of Robert Lee will use the same hours as in the past which are beginning at 9 a. m., stop at noon, quit weighing in at 7:00 P. M. (old-time) but will gin all the cotton on the yard at that time.

We want to kindly ask the farmers not to bring us bales that will weigh above 550 lbs because if we break our press we have to go through Washington to get priorities for repairs, which takes from 30 to 60 days.

We thank the farmers for their past favors and hope to render you the best of service that we possibly can this coming year.
