NUMBER 7

F. S. A. News

Returning Tuesday from San Angelo where he attended a district meeting of the Farm Security Administration, Mr. Samuel F. Malone said the FSA's program has been placed on a war time footing.

Every activity of the FSA will be considered on the basis of its contribution to the nation's war needs. This means that food production comes first and that we will do nothing which does not contribute directly to the Food for Freedom program.

Of special interest to Coke county farmers was Mr. Malone's announcement that loan funds are immediately available for food and feed preservation needs this fall and for food and feed production operations next spring.

This county may obtain complete details about the FSA's war time lending program by contacting Mr. Malone at his office in Robert Lee.

Wild Cat School

The Wild Cat school will open Oct. 5. Mr. Leslie Woulard is principal. Miss Louise Oakes has resigned to accept a position in Fort Worth, and Miss Myrtle Hurley was elected to take her place. Mrs. J. S. Gardner will take Miss Hurley's place in the Post Office and Mrs. Clifton Calder Mrs. Gardner's place.

Military Service

The Army Air Forces can use men who cannot pass the physical examinations for general military service. Age limits are 18 to 50 and the applicants should have some mechanical or radio experience. Those who have been placed in the 1-B classification by their Local Boards are eligible for enlistment now.

Army Recruiting Stations are located at the following cities: Odessa, Big Spring, Sweetwater, Pampa, Amarillo, Plainview, El Paso, Fort Bliss, and Lubbock.

New Pastor on the Field

Rev. James H. Hunt, who was called as pastor of the First Baptist Church Sunday Sept. 6, and wife, moved in the pastor's home which has been newly papered and redecorated on the inside.

We wish to welcome them to our city and may their stay in our midst be pleasant memories in their pathway of life, and may this town and community be made better by their coming this way. Rev. Hunt is a Texas product and has held many leading pastorates in the state, but had resided in Oklahoma for the past year and was pastor at Sentinel Baptist Church, but says he is glad to get back to Texas.

Mrs. Hunt is well known in the W.M.U. work in different parts of the state.

REV. JAMES H. HUNT

We are happy to say we are moved on our new field of labor and we greatly appreciate the fine spirit with which the church and entire city has received us.

We promise you our best and in return we covet the full cooperation of each member of the church.

We extend a cordial invitation to every person to all of our services, and you will always find a cordial welcome.

Yours for service,
James H. Hunt, Pastor.

Governor's Proclamation

Governor Coke Stevenson has proclaimed Oct. 4 to 10 as "Fire Prevention Week" in Texas. We will have more fire hazards this winter than usual on account of the late rains and late grass and weed crops. It would be wise to begin now to guard against fires by cutting and cleaning up our premises.

Notice

Bro. W. E. Chandler from San Angelo will preach the 11 o'clock service at Wild Cat Sunday morning, Sept. 27. Sunday school will be at 10:15.

Everyone cordially invited.

Army Strives for Right Man on Right Spot

Fighting, Efficient Yanks First Aim of Personnel Officers

Sorting out and analyzing the occupational skills, hobbies, education and aptitudes of every man who enters the army and fitting him into an assignment where he can make his greatest contribution to the war effort is the job of more than 6,000 skilled personnel officers and men who were carefully selected and trained by the adjutant general's office of the war department and who are engaged in this most important of all personnel work in nearly every corner of the globe.

Unlike materiel, personnel is never static—it is always changing. A man entering the service today and classified as a mechanic or a potential machine gunner may next month or several months later display aptitudes which may make him a potential anti-aircraft gunner, a Diesel engine mechanic, a tank commander or an officer candidate.

Because some men fail to measure up to the first estimate of their abilities, and others demonstrate abilities far beyond anything that their civilian experience would indicate, the work of the classification and assignment officer has only begun when at the reception center the first duty or training assignment is recommended.

Various Test 'Sieves.'

Actual requirements of the various arms and services to provide filler and loss replacements for existing and new units are known and set up in requirement and replacement rate tables by the many civilian occupational categories that are required to make up our army and are furnished service command commanders in accordance with the selective service procurement allotment quota of each service command and also in accordance with the occurrence rate of procurement of each type of civilian occupation in each service command which experience has indicated. This provides the first sieve through which men are put when they enter the service.

A second is given them when they arrive at replacement training centers of the various arms and services. Here, their records of the interview and test grades attained are reviewed and they are placed in the type of training within their arm or service of assignment where it is believed they will do their best work.

It will be seen from this that while the objective of initial classification is to recommend a man for duty or training in an army job for which his civilian experience indicates he is best fitted, there are several contributing factors which may result in his being assigned to a duty entirely foreign, to his mind, to any experience he may have had. They include: a surplus of civilian occupations above army requirements; many civilian jobs having no army counterpart; a personnel history indicating leadership potentialities which the man himself possibly did not realize.

At the Reception Center.

Here classification and assignment begin. Here all men are interviewed and initially classified. Here their basic classification form is filled out. This card accompanies every man throughout his army career, and will be used in helping to find a job for him when he returns to civilian life. It summarizes his personal history, schooling, work experience, leadership ability, interests, hobbies, foreign languages, and previous military, ROTC or CCC experience. Additions and changes are made when necessary, insuring an up-to-date record of information throughout the man's service.

The right man in the right place—that's the idea. But the important purpose of the army's training program is to develop fighting soldiers such as this one: Lieut. James A. Harden, "Bayonet Expert of the 31st Division."

Many of the soldiers in the army today are highly trained technicians. Many of them, their technical "talents" being discovered by various tests after induction, are receiving such training as these young men who are learning the detail assembly of teletype machines, and how to remedy any defects found in them.

The first phase of classification is testing. Every man receives the army general classification test, which provides an index of his general ability to learn his duties. The score on this test and the corresponding army grade are recorded on the qualification card before the man is interviewed. The mechanical aptitude test is given to all recruits who can read and write English. The test has questions on pattern-picture matching, shop mechanics, and mechanical movements, comprehension, and information.

The second phase of initial classification is the interview. The interviewer is skilled in questioning, in drawing out desired information, and in recording it accurately.

After the Interview.

When the interview is over, the qualification card is checked for completeness, accuracy, and legibility. It is then referred to the classifier, who checks the man's civilian occupations and on the basis of the information on the card recommends his initial duty or training assignment either to a replacement training center or to a unit. This recommended assignment is not necessarily the man's main or even second-best civilian occupation, but is determined on the basis of a complete analysis of each individual which includes his occupation, education, hobbies, previous military training, intelligence, leadership, and other pertinent factors.

It is the practice to distribute men of various levels of educational and mental ability equally among the different arms and services so that the average level is equalized in all arms and services.

At Replacement Training Center.

Here, incoming trainees are assigned to the type of training which they may most readily absorb. The particular needs of the service, however, may make it impossible to assign every man to the specific type of training for which he was first recommended.

The first task is to make certain that each man's training will be in accord with his aptitudes, interests and experience. Various means are employed to insure training only qualified personnel. When the experience data on the soldier's qualification card are questionable, the soldier is re-interviewed; and if his particular ability is still uncertain, he receives a trade test for that field.

In the final matching of men and jobs, other factors beside the test scores and work experience are carefully considered. Full utilization is made of leadership, age, previous military experience, and any other experience with predictive value.

If Progress Isn't Satisfactory.

While the men are receiving these varied types of training at the Replacement Training center, the classification and assignment officer is continually informed about their progress so that any who are not progressing satisfactorily may be reclassified and reassigned to a different type of training.

This is especially important in connection with the training of specialists, since these schools have limited space facilities and can be used to train only those men best qualified for the instruction. The classification officer is also kept informed when men in the Special Training units are ready to return to regular training, so that they may be transferred promptly.

Near the completion of their training, all enlisted men are reported to the adjutant general by the specification serial number of the military occupational specialty in which they will be qualified for assignment to a unit. The adjutant general then issues transfer orders for these men to report to various units and installations for which requisitions exist.

At units, replacements are assigned to duties on the basis of the information on their qualification cards.

For various reasons, men may often be reclassified. A specialist gains new skills in the process of training, a soldier of long service can no longer compete physically with younger men, a conscientious objector requests in writing to be assigned to a combat unit, or an enlisted man finds it difficult, because of physical deficiency or emotional instability, to adjust himself to an assignment.

Reassignments are also made to balance the available skills and mental abilities within the units and through the service. Unit commanders report shortages and any oversupply of military specialists so that transfers may be made to balance skills throughout the parent unit and the army.

Personnel Specialists.

The personnel technician is a classification officer charged with the administration of classification procedures and policies in the unit or installation to which he may be assigned. He must have had technical training and experience in personnel administration and must demonstrate organizing ability. With him rests responsibility for the administration of Classification Tests given to all enlisted men and for giving aptitude and individual tests when necessary.

He has on his staff the Personnel Consultant and enlisted men, also classified as Personnel Technicians, who help to maintain the smooth and efficient functioning of the classification program.

Through such classification and assignment, the army of the United States is endeavoring to use available manpower with one and only one object in view—the placement of each man in a job or duty where his strength, vigor, skill, aptitudes and intelligence may be utilized to strike the most telling blow against the enemies of our country.

Wrap cheese in a clean cloth dampened in vinegar and keep in a cool dry place.

Suede garments should be kept dry if possible. If rain does catch them, let them dry away from heat, then brush in a circular motion with a wire brush. A rubber sponge or art gum will help to keep a suede jacket clean.

A rug shifted every six months so that all sections have a turn at the more traveled parts of the floor will give more years of wear.

Add a small onion, a pinch of ginger, a few cloves and a bay leaf as a gourmet trick when boiling corned beef.

Remove tea from old tea balls, wash material and use the bags for spices where it is undesirable to have the spices in a mixture after their flavor has been extracted.

To prevent mold from growing on stored fat be sure the container is dry, cook until the moisture is all out when cooking down the fat for storing, keep in a dry place.

Feast for Fall Days—Baked Beans
(See Recipes Below.)

Pulling Purse Strings

Today, let's talk about budgets. Food budgets in particular, because they will be a major item in your life the next few months as prices slowly edge upwards, as the days slip into fall and winter and the summer bargains in foods become fewer and you have to do more juggling with figures to give your family the right food, at the best possible prices.

If you are Mrs. Average America, you will be more nutrition conscious this year than last, too. This will be not only because nutrition news has sprouted into the limelight, but because the demands of wartime living upon energy have become so great that you will have to have right foods to do your most and your best.

But, how can budgeting help you to serve "right" meals, you ask. That's simple. Buy the right foods with your dollars and you can't help serving meals that are correctly balanced.

First, divide the food dollar into fifths. One-fifth, or 20 cents, should go for vegetables and fruits. Use the next fifth for milk and cheese. The third of the fifths goes for the basis of your important meals—meats, eggs and fish.

Another fifth will be set aside for breads and cereals, while the very last 20 cents is allowed for accessory items such as butter, fats, sugar, tea, coffee and spices.

General Guide.

The 20-cent rule is not a hard and fast rule. It is only a general guide because prices of the different groups of food vary from season to season, from section to section. Use your judgment in spending.

Shopping Carefully.
Conservation's an important note in these times. And it's mighty important in this fascinating business of stocking up the pantry. If you plan meals for, say three days, or better still, a week in advance, you will not be trotting up to the store twice every day, or calling up your grocer whose time is at a premium and whose delivery facilities have been cut in the midst of cake baking to tell him you simply must have vanilla. Make out lists, and then shop . . . for everything you need at one time.

When the snap of autumn gets into the air, use pumpkin, squash and Concord grapes. When the drifts of snow pile lightly against your door or the weather gets at least uncomfortably cold, use root vegetables and those canned goods in the canning cupboard. In spring, strawberries, asparagus, and broilers should grace your menu. What I

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Best of bargains are found in American cheddar cheese at the present time. Production for the first five months of this year was over 50 per cent greater than for that corresponding period last year.

Apples, absent from the markets and fruit stalls during the summer, in greater quantities, are coming into their own now. Apples and honey are food affinities and will help you with sugar rationed.

Fall's bounty will also include squash, grapes, and pumpkins which add economy notes and flavorsome touches to menus.

mean, is, serve foods-in-season! It's more than economy, it's food at its best!

Easily digestible and easily blending with almost every kind of food, it makes even the simplest dish a distinctive one because of the flavor it imparts to it. And remember, you'll get not only protein when you use it, but those other essential diet necessities like phosphorus, calcium, iron, and vitamins B, D and G.

Cheese and Baked Beans.
(Serves 6)

- 1 large can baked beans
- 1 cup American cheese, grated
- 1 cup grated bread
- 1 tablespoon chopped green peppers
- 2 tablespoons chopped celery
- 1 teaspoon chopped onion

Place beans in baking dish. Then add all other ingredients and three slices lean bacon over top of dish. Bake 30 minutes at 250 degrees.

Tuna and Cheese Souffle.
(Serves 6)

- 1 cup scalded milk
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup grated American cheese
- 1 cup flaked tuna
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 egg yolks
- 3 egg whites
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine milk with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Flake tuna and add lemon juice, pimiento, salt and well-beaten yolks. Beat egg white stiff but not dry and fold into mixture. Turn into a buttered casserole, set in a pan of water and bake in a moderately slow (325-degree) oven 40 minutes or until golden brown.

Sugar-saving apple recipes do delightful things to fall menus, and help you get the mellow, autumn note in meals. This revives eating interest:

Honey Apple Crisp
(Serves 6)

- 4 cups sliced apples
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup butter
- 1/4 cup walnuts, if desired

Spread sliced apples in a shallow baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, lemon juice and pour honey over all. In a bowl mix flour, brown sugar and salt and work in butter to make crumbly mixture. Spread crumbs evenly over apples (and nuts) and bake in a moderate oven (370 degrees) for 30 to 40 minutes until apples are tender and crust crisply browned. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

Let's Talk About Money
... and WAR

When you hear that bombing planes cost $335,000, tanks $75,000, anti-aircraft guns $50,000—And when you hear, too, that America needs 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, and 20,000 anti-aircraft guns at once—

It doesn't take much figuring to see that winning this war calls for every dollar all of us can scrape together. With our freedom at stake—with our farms, families, even our very lives depending upon the outcome, we'd gladly give this money.

But we aren't asked to do that. Our Government asks us only to lend the money—to put our increased earnings into War Bonds—month after month—until this war is won. In doing so, we save for our own security as well. For we get back $4 for every $3 we invest, when the Bonds are held 10 years. And if we need the money, we can get it all back any time after 60 days from issue date. This is the American way—the volunteer way—to raise the billions needed for Victory. And the money can ... will ... must be raised.

So let's show them that the farmers of America are helping to win this war in two vitally important ways—by producing more Food for Freedom and by saving more in War Bonds. Make Every Market Day "Bond Day"—Invest At Least 10%.

A Plan to Protect Agriculture After This War

For years the tragic results of the expansion of food-producing acreage during World War I has haunted American agriculture. Every farmer, as a matter of patriotism, interrupted his rotation of crops to produce food and more food for our armies and our Allies. Now again in World War II, to feed our soldiers and our Allies and to serve the special demands of war industry, we are dislocating our normal production as a matter of patriotic service. It seems plain that by the end of this war American farms will have created a tremendous surplus production power which ordinary peacetime requirements will not absorb. By the end of 1942 our overall average increase production over the average for the last 10 years will be more than 21 per cent. How then can American agriculture side-step a post-war farm tragedy even worse than that following World War I?

Experiments in Rubber and Other Products.

Our Government is now experimenting with domestic sources for rubber. Some sixty thousand acres are devoted to the production of guayule and its possibilities as a source of domestic rubber. Emergency plants for the production of thousands of tons of synthetic rubber from oil and alcohol are now springing into production.

We have learned how to make paper from slash pine and starch from potatoes. We are learning how to raise medicinal herbs which we formerly imported.

Denied the use of kapok which we imported from the East Indies and used in life preservers, we have discovered that the floss from milkweed makes better life preservers than kapok ever did. Factories have been built and several thousand acres are now devoted to raising milkweed intensively.

Already we are producing tung oil successfully. Thousands of acres will be needed before we can supply even our present domestic market. Luckily, we have at hand the National Farm Chemurgic Council, an organization of research chemists from our several industries who compare notes and gain new enthusiasm in the research for new uses of old crops and new crops which can be cultivated in America. Our government has established regional research laboratories.

More than fifteen thousand different kinds of plants grow in the natural state in the United States. We use less than three hundred of these plants. Farm chemurgy will not be complete, nor the post-war problem of agriculture solved until every plant is re-examined in the light of modern science and made to serve its part in contributing to the comfort, happiness and security of our America of the future.

A Plan That Deserves Support.
The United States Senate is considering a plan which will require the use of 20 per cent of war profits during the war for the purchase of Recovery Bonds by each company in order to have available the necessary cash to quickly change their business and industrial plants back to peace-time activities at the close of the war and to adjust the employment of their normal number of factory workers.

This percentage of war profits could also be used in a broad plan of research by industrial chemists to develop new uses for products of the farm by our domestic industry. If our industry has the knowledge and the money in hand to convert an all-out war effort to peacetime production, maintain employment and launch the new products discovered by science, we have a reasonable chance to absorb our farm surplus even in the post-war period.

Depression hit our rural areas longer and harder than our industrial areas. Our hope for the security, happiness and prosperity of Rural America is at stake. If we can develop this practical plan for taking care of our surplus in the after war period, we can go forward unafraid in an all-out production effort for the winning of this war and in providing the food necessary for starving people in the after war period. We will know that we have provided an ever-expanding America with new crops and new uses. Worth thinking about.

Agriculture and Labor
"Agriculture has excellent reasons to take concern for the welfare of labor," says Wheeler McMillen. "The situation after the war is over will be of particular importance to farmers. Men earning good wages full time are much better customers than men without jobs. Men steadily employed under satisfactory conditions are far less likely than men without work to become the prey of men who agitate for strange kinds of government. Agriculture ought

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

New Allied Air Blows Take Heavy Toll Of Jap-Held Airports in New Guinea; Nelson Warns of War Production Cut; U. S. to Control Truck, Taxi Operation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

The above picture appeared in the Japanese propaganda magazine, "Freedom," and was brought back to this country by an American repatriated in the recent diplomatic exchange of nationals. The Japs describe this picture as showing a part of the 1,300 Americans captured at Wake island on their way to a prison camp in Kagawa province. The black uniformed officer is identified as Commander Winfield Scott Cunningham, ex-garrison chief at Wake. The picture is being used by the enemy as propaganda.

RUSSIA: Nazi Advance

While Nazi troops besieging Stalingrad battled for a decision the German air force was reported to be concentrating its attack on Volga shipping, rail and highway communications as far southeast as Astrakhan, where the Volga flows into the Caspian sea.

The Russian high command announced that re-enforced German troops had made a further advance southwest of Stalingrad. German broadcasts told Nazi troops entering the southern part of the city after capturing additional fortifications. However, the Russians claimed they were holding firm to the west.

The Red communique reported a new enemy drive on the western bank of the Don river, south of Voronezh, employing an entire infantry division and 100 tanks. The Germans were said to have lost 2,000 officers and men. In the Volkov sector east of Leningrad the Germans were reported battling for a 12-mile stretch of the important Leningrad-Vologda railway.

Brighter reports came from the deep Caucasus. German troops in the mountainous region around Mzdok were said to be "withdrawing northward." Observers noted that recent snows in the Caucasus may have caused the withdrawal and said that the Axis may have relinquished hope of reaching the Caspian sea in that area before winter.

RAIDS ON BRITAIN: From the Stratosphere

Germany's third new weapon for daylight bombing raids against England was revealed in London with a disclosure that Nazi stratosphere bombers, equipped with super-charged Diesel motors, have made several daylight attacks on Great Britain.

The first of these bombing raids on Britain were made from altitudes of approximately 40,000 feet. The bombers were modified Junkers 86-P's equipped with experimental pressure cabins. Others used were four-motor Heinkel 177's, carrying eight tons of bombs, equalling the capacity of Britain's biggest bombers, and the bomb-carrying Focke-Wulf 190's. The latter planes are primarily fighters and they are able to speed low over coastal targets, getting away before the fast British Spitfires can get at them.

PRODUCTION CUT: Faced by Industry

In a straight-to-the-point speech, Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production board, warned the nation that we are not winning the war and that, although the nation's production is not what it should be, shifts must be made in material allotment that will enforce layoffs and production changes.

He pointed out that further cuts in materials for civilian use and shifts in materials from one war product to another would be made to balance war production, and said such cuts and assignments would result in enforced layoffs for men and women intent on production for victory.

PACIFIC FRONT: Action Continues

Allied bombing attacks against Japanese bases in New Guinea continued with smashing blows taking a heavy toll in the battle area. Lae and Salamaua were targets for the main attacks. Two bombers were destroyed on the ground at the Lae airdrome, where 17 tons of bombs were dropped on installations.

The communique stated that ground action in the Owen Stanley mountain range, where the Japs were halted about 40 miles north of the Port Moresby base, was confined to patrol activity.

Meanwhile, the battle of the Solomons seemed to have settled down to a battle of supply lines. The United States and Australia have poured planes and supplies in to the marines on Guadalcanal and Tulagi against Japanese sea and air opposition.

The Japs have not attacked in force since the major battle on August 24 and 25, when U. S. forces defeated an enemy invasion force of more than 40 ships. They have continued their occasional bombing forays and attacks with light naval craft. Recently the Japanese have bombed from high altitudes, using delayed action bombs.

MORGENTHAU: Lauds Bond Sales

Flatly denying that he regards the voluntary war bond sales program as a "failure," Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau declared in a statement to the war savings staff that the treasury "will continue to rely upon voluntary lending for a large part of our financing."

The secretary's statement was made following a recent press conference. He said: "The impression seems to have spread that I regard the voluntary war bond program as a 'failure.' This is not only a distortion of anything I have said on the subject, but it is also an injustice to the hundreds of thousands of devoted volunteers in all parts of the country."

TRANSPORTATION: U. S. Control

Before the operators of 5,000,000 trucks, 154,000 busses and 50,000 taxicabs can obtain gasoline, tires or parts after November 15, they will be forced to show "certificates of war necessity."

Government control of these vehicles as a conservation measure was announced by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation. Eastman said the certificates for commercial vehicles would require a tire check every 5,000 miles, or every 60 days—whichever occurs first. Certificates, he indicated, would be issued to all types of trucks and vehicles built primarily for transporting property and passengers and others available for public usage, such as ambulances and hearses.

The control measure was inaugurated to limit the use of vehicles to operations necessary to the war effort, or to the essential domestic economy.

WPB Seeks Greater Unity With Invitation to Labor

AFL and CIO Representatives Will Work With Management Members to Help Further Production Demands.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

When it was first announced that Donald Nelson had invited the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations to submit a list of names from which he might choose two new vice chairmen of the War Production board some eyebrows were lifted in discreet doubt.

"Politics," said the cynical. "Nelson is in a tough fight to keep the army and the navy from running away with the WPB. If he makes a generous gesture toward labor it will help him with the administration."

Later on, however, some of the labor people, neutral as between CIO and AFL began to pass the word around that Nelson was becoming sold on a greater participation of labor in councils where war production policies are being settled.

His agreement to have "a frank talk," they said, was not merely a matter of clever politics. Meanwhile, the military men have by no means given up their struggle to get control of war production and, for that matter, control of ships and shipping, the Maritime commission's domain, but that is another story.

There are many indications that labor is being brought into the fold, not merely because the union officials would naturally join forces with Nelson in any struggle between mufti and khaki, but because many people are beginning to feel that it will be a healthy thing for the much-assailed capitalistic system and the institution vaguely described as free enterprise.

In other words, it is better to try to get co-operation between capital and labor by forcing each to share the other's troubles around a table than it is to depend on fighting it out on the picket line. Especially when there are a lot of New Deal planners whose plans usually tend to give labor the break.

Two things probably have done more to bring about a growing faith in the idea of co-operation at the top instead of strikes and lockouts at the bottom than anything else.

One is a phenomenon which has set some of the old-timers in the labor department rubbing their eyes. It is the way representatives of industry and labor on the War Labor board have palled around. A real, mutual respect and admiration has developed among some of the members of these two camps who have been trained to believe that all on the other side wore horns. As one veteran conciliator put it to me, "We have witnessed a miracle."

The other thing that has helped has been the way in some instances (not all, by any means), that the labor-management committees have been able to work together. In many places this attempt to have the management of war industries sit down and talk over the problems of how to increase production has been an utter failure. In many of these cases I am told personalities are to blame. The word "personalities" covers a multitude of sins—and sinners.

Seeing Other Fellows' View

In this particular case really more than personal characteristics have been the snag. It is a case of finding men on both sides who not only have the mental and spiritual breadth to see the other fellows' view. But just plain every day experience and training have a lot to do with it, too.

When labor first spoke up and said: "We want to lend a hand," many people sympathetic with the labor viewpoint were exceedingly skeptical. They said: "Who will do the lending since labor has not yet developed in its ranks enough 'hands,' sufficiently trained in the upper-bracket category of complicated administration." That may be true.

There are outstanding exceptions in both the AFL and the CIO, but these exceptions, these men who have revealed their ability to deal with problems above the routine of union administration, politics and negotiation are so loaded down with responsibilities now that they simply cannot take on new burdens.

That is one of the difficulties that Donald Nelson knew he would have to face if he had to select two men from labor for his board. He has found it hard to find sufficient men whose breadth of viewpoint equalled their business experience in the field of industry. For that matter, it is hard to find men in any field, or in any country, who measure up to the colossal tasks the war has imposed upon them—in business, in government, in the army and navy.

If Mr. Green and Mr. Murray choose a man apiece who can live up to the requirements they will make a real contribution to the war effort. One government agency which, of its own accord, asked for such a co-worker from the ranks of labor, received one whose record proved to be so unsavory that it took some maneuvering to cloak the incident from what might have been some very unipitying publicity. We have witnessed several similar "mistakes" in the dismissals from the WPB.

However, there is considerable optimism expressed in some circles to the effect that labor will be able to contribute its share. The optimists point to examples of high caliber men representing opposite sides of America's work bench getting their heads together without clenching their fists. They cite the War Labor board as an example.

And these hopeful observers contend that this "miracle" which they have seen performed can be repeated. They even say that it will have to be repeated, for if labor and capital continue to fight after the war while innocent bystanders suffer in the melee, there is no escape for America from what they call the "hoosegow of State socialism."

Notes From a Broadcaster's Diary

Two men who had served in the Midway battle were interviewed on the air recently. The broadcaster, as is the custom, talked with them beforehand, wrote out the script and then submitted it to the two men. In the description of the engagement in which the men took part one man turned every "we" the interviewer had written in the script to an "I." The other turned every "I" into a "we."

Colonel Lord, a brilliant army officer who has been the right hand of Vice President Wallace in his important behind the scenes job in the Board of Economic Warfare, was recently ordered to shift to the War Production board to take charge of inventions. I ran into him in the club the other day and asked him if he had taken up his new work. He had not, he said, and never might, because he thought he was going to be assigned (as all of his ilk would like to be) to active duty in the thick of things.

He made no comment but a brother officer sitting beside him and also chained to a desk against his will, remarked: "It's got so now that they tell us we are cowards if we try to desert Washington to get to the front."

I was crossing the park late one night. A full moon spread a coat of silver over silent lawn and sleeping trees. Suddenly I noticed ahead of me on a bench, an officer and a girl. He was a tall, attractive fellow, the ideal fighting man, square-shouldered, handsome. The girl was beautiful in the moonlight. They sat close together, talking earnestly. I stopped in the shadow. I felt embarrassed. It was as if I were walking into a room, an intruder, shattering the romance and beauty of that scene. They had not noticed me, so instead of walking past them I turned off and cut across the grass that carpeted my footfall.

It was quiet and as I passed behind them I could not help hearing: "Dearest," he was saying, "you know perfectly well that you can get those extra gasoline ration tickets from your office."

SADDLE and RIDE

By ERNEST HAYCOX WNU-Release

THE STORY SO FAR: Although he is also a rancher, Clay Morgan decides to play a lone hand against Ben Herendeen, another rancher, who is trying to run the cattle country his own way. Of his old friends, only Hack Breathitt is still on his side. The others—like Gurd Grant, Lige White and Charley Hillhouse—are supporting Herendeen, more or less in self defense. Gurd Grant's sister, Catherine, is in love with Clay and is at his ranch when Hack Breathitt rides up followed by Herendeen, Lige White and Gurd. Catherine hides, but Gurd recognizes her horse. Herendeen continues his war on "nesters" and squatters by warning the Gales to get off the range.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VI

Morgan entered War Pass in first darkness, putting up at Gentry's. There would be supper for him at Ann McGarrah's but for some reason that wasn't very clear to him, he went to the Long Grade saloon, found Hack Breathitt, and took him to the hotel for a meal.

When he got to Ann McGarrah's he found her kneeling before Janet, adjusting the pleats of Janet's dress.

Ann McGarrah said: "I'll get you a meal, Clay."

"No," he said, "I didn't want to bother. I ate at the hotel."

She showed him a quick, faintly hurt surprise, but covered it up at once. "We should be starting for the school in a little while."

"Am I taking you to the dance?" She said: "You hadn't asked."

"So now I'll ask." Morgan and Janet passed through the store and sat on the porch steps, watching the crowd roll along the street.

Ann McGarrah presently came out, dressed in a pearl-white gown; it made her eyes darker, it made her black hair shine by contrast. Standing before her, marveling at the change, he reflected that she was different from the women of this town.

The gentle flow of the crowd carried them up the hill to the school. At the door Janet left them and Morgan found two seats near the front of a newly made platform. Breathitt stood in the rear of the room, crowded between other townsmen. He caught Breathitt's eye but Hack only shook his head, unsmiling and clearly ruffled by something.

It went by grades, some singing, some dancing, some reciting. He was nervous, not realizing it. When Janet came forward to the edge of the stage a fine sweat broke across his forehead and he pushed his legs against the floor, trying to remember what the first line of her poem was. Afterwards she made a quick curtsy and her voice came over the room, precise as it always was, and quite sure. When she was through he sat still, not looking around at the other people. Ann said something to him, turning him. She was smiling with that brightness which comes so close to tears. He murmured "Yes," and was thinking of Lila who would have been happy to have seen this. This was about all he heard of the program, for it was soon over.

Hack Breathitt went directly into the Long Grade and saw a solid line at the bar. Nearest him were a group of Grant Crowfoot riders, all of them his friends. Billy McQuire said, "Step in here, Hack," but Breathitt shook his head and balanced on his heels, his face cool and smooth and tough. Herendeen's men had gathered at the far end of the bar, and these he watched solemnly. Liard Connor and Bones McGeen were side-by-side at the bar, turned from him, but he knew they had him spotted in the back bar mirror. He pushed up his hat and walked on, making a turn behind these two. There wasn't any space between them, but he came against them and shoved them aside.

He stared straight ahead, into the mirror. Their faces came around to him, with the reserve he had seen many times before in moments of trouble. He knew what the expression meant. The barkeep came down his way, waiting for his choice; Breathitt said gently: "Not now, Sam. When I drink, it'll be in better company."

It was a sound that traveled around him. The talk in the saloon faded a little and he saw, still watching the mirror, men's hats and heads swing. Liard Connor pulled his arm aside. Bones McGeen suddenly grinned over his whisky glass.

In Hack's voice was the flat melody of a man on edge. "Maybe it was just an accident when you boys bumped into me down by the hotel. Maybe. If there's something in your craw, you don't have to go to that trouble. I can hear English, if you bullheads can talk it. I don't like my feet stepped on. I'll be out on that street all evenin'. Try it again."

He withdrew from the bar and stepped to the door with the solid silence of the crowd following him. He batted the doors aside with his shoulders. On the walk, he turned quickly toward his horse, which was near Gentry's. He seized his gunbelt from the saddle horn and buckled it around him and pulled the bottom of his coat over it. One hand resting on the horse, he watched the street, knowing that the town was no longer safe for him. None of the Herendeen bunch showed up at the Long Grade door, though he realized they would be moving his way soon enough. Sheriff Nickum came into the light of the hotel. People kept crossing to the Odd Fellows' Hall and the music and the scrape of feet made quite a racket, and—

Suddenly Jesse Rusey slid from the shadows and was before him.

He had the soft-footedness of a cat, this marshal, and eyes that could burn through a brick wall. It gave Hack Breathitt a moment's self-affront to think Rusey had come on him thus unawares, but he stood fast, not saying anything. The marshal's hand reached out and hit Hack Breathitt's flank, where the gun was. Afterwards Rusey, no man to ask questions, made a turning circle on his heels, looking the whole street through. He said then, "Be careful, Hack," and stepped back into the shadows.

Parr Gentry called for a scotch-tische. Lige White came over to claim Ann McGarrah, leaving his wife with Clay. They went wheeling and dipping around the floor, Mrs. White very graceful in his arms, and very pretty; but her glance kept following her husband with that calm indrawn attention Morgan had noticed so often.

Herendeen had kept Catherine Grant to himself. After the scotch-tische Morgan returned Mrs. White to Lige and stood awhile, idly talking. The stag line thickened. Gurd Grant was over there and Gurd's glance was directly on him, and stayed on him without recognition.

Parr Gentry said, "Pick your partners for a waltz," and the fiddles began tuning-up again. Clay remained in his tracks, head-down, puzzled by Gurd Grant's cut. Something was in the wind. He couldn't catch it with his mind, but he knew Herendeen had somehow gotten at Gurd. He debated it coolly, trying to make up his mind, until he heard Ann say, "What is it, Clay?"

"Nothing," he said. "Nothing at all." Herendeen and Catherine were only a few feet away. Catherine's glance touched him, brief and interested, and then he forgot Gurd and put his hand to Ann McGarrah's elbow and moved her toward Herendeen. It amused him to see Herendeen's ruddy face show instant intolerance. He said to Catherine, "Should be ours, I think," and moved away with her as the waltz began.

Catherine said: "I wondered if you would."

"One more week — one more dance. War Pass, the Burnt Ranch school, the old hall at Chickman Creek. This goes back a long way."

They were all around the hall before she spoke. "It isn't the good times you want to remember, Clay. It is one person you never want to forget. I know. I watched you tonight when Janet spoke. I knew what you were thinking. Not of Janet, not of anything or anybody in the hall. It was Lila, wasn't it?"

"Why, yes," he said, in some surprise. "How would you know that?" Slowly turning with the swing of the waltz, he saw Harry Jump come up the stairs and move through the loitering stags at the edge of the floor. Harry Jump was here when he should have been forty miles out in the Moguls. Morgan wheeled Catherine around, losing Harry Jump, and catching him again. Jump saw him and showed no expression of any kind.

Morgan said: "Maybe you'd like a drink of water."

She had been too long in the country not to know. She slipped her arm through his elbow and they left the floor, passing Harry Jump without giving him notice. They went down the stairs into the soft dark shadows. Harry Jump's boots scuffed the stairs, following. He passed them, saying from the side of his mouth, "Not here, Clay."

They followed him as far as Gentry's and stopped before him.

"All right," said Morgan.

"You sure?" said Harry Jump, staring at Catherine.

"I'll go," she said.

"Never mind," answered Morgan. "You know better, Harry."

"Well, then. I rode through Government Valley before dark tonight. There's a notice posted on the building. The land office is selling the valley at auction tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock, in Sage City."

He waited for Morgan to speak and when Morgan kept silent, he added: "That notice should have been posted a month before the sale. Somebody's got at somebody to hold off until it was too late for you. It's nine o'clock now. Eighteen hours until four tomorrow. Hundred and ninety miles to go."

Morgan said: "I talked to Fred Rich at the post office a few days ago, and he knew nothing." He drove his hands in his pockets; he had his head up, he was watching the mouth of the Odd Fellows' doorway. But he wasn't seeing it, Catherine realized. He was a long, still shape in the shadows, quietly considering this little treachery. He had a way of absorbing trouble and punishment without showing emotion; he had a way of storing these things in his mind. He said: "All right, Harry."

He turned back with Catherine. She said: "Speculators, Clay. Or Ben." She knew how he felt about Government Valley.

The music had stopped. Coming up the stairs they saw Herendeen and Ann standing at the edge of the hall, neither one liking the other enough to keep up conversation. Herendeen never bothered to conceal his feelings. He displayed resentment now as they came forward. He ducked his head at Catherine. "My dance," he said, and led her away. Out on the floor he looked toward Morgan, a thoughtfulness on his cheeks.

Ann said: "Don't make me dance with him again."

He said: "I guess I've got to take you home. I'll have to ride."

She got her wrap at once and they went down the stairs. The sense of wasting time pushed Morgan along, making Ann McGarrah walk quite fast. On the store porch he thought to lift his hat. "Tell Janet I'll be back to take her home on Wednesday," he said, and swung away.

For Ann McGarrah the evening went flat as she watched him go; he had not thanked her, he had not even thought of her these last moments, he had not taken her into his confidence and mentioned the trouble that now made him disappear at the head of the street. Still and dark and hurt, she looked down at the smooth front of her dress, knowing that she was pretty and knowing she had, for a moment, warmed his heart. And then this had gone. She thought of Catherine, coolly and critically, and turned into the store. Janet was asleep. Standing over the bed in the dark room, Ann McGarrah watched Janet's small sweetly mature face, seeing there so much of her mother. This was the secure grip Lila held on Clay Morgan—this was Lila's power, this was her way of forever reminding Clay of the past, and this was her way of holding him to an unreal, unjust obligation. Thinking of all this, Ann McGarrah hated Lila with a secret, passionate fullness. She turned back the extra covers from the child and left the room.

Going up Stage Street, Clay Morgan reached Harley Stewart's house at the top of the hill. When Stewart came to the door, Morgan said: "Come down to the bank, Harley. I've got to have some money inside of fifteen minutes."

JOSEPH: AN EXAMPLE OF FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 45:1-15; 47:11, 12. GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:32.

Forgiveness, opening the way for the restoration of fellowship and the showing of kindness, brought the story of Joseph and his brethren to a happy ending. Under the good hand of God the story which began with tragedy is brought to a conclusion of blessing.

Following the earnest plea of Judah, the heart of Joseph could no longer withhold itself from the full expression of affection and devotion to his family.

I. Love Overcomes Fear (vv. 1-4).

Joseph tenderly shielded the family troubles from the eyes and ears of strangers by sending out the Egyptians. It was the first step of consideration which paved the way for reconciliation. How often just the opposite is done—airing family affairs before the world, and humiliating those who may be in the wrong, thus making it difficult for them to admit their guilt.

Then, too, this was a moment too tender and delicate to be seen by outsiders. The tears of a strong man like Joseph mean a deep movement of spirit—a solemn and often a sacred moment.

It should also be noted that the brothers were afraid, and well they might be, because of their sin against Joseph. After almost 50 years these unrepentant men found themselves face to face with the one whom they had supposed they had disposed of, and they knew their sin had found them out. It always does, sooner or later, but inevitably.

II. Grace Overrules Sin (vv. 5-8).

The guilt of these men was none the less and Joseph could not remove it, but he encouraged them by showing how God had used their evil devices to work out His own good pleasure. He can make the wrath of man to praise Him (Ps. 76:10).

It is worth stressing again that in the very hour when the prospects for Joseph's future usefulness seemed ruined, God was opening the door to the greatest experiences of his life and was preparing him to serve the thousands whose lives were saved by his wisdom and ability in the years of famine.

Nothing is more important in the life of a child of God than to be yielded to His will, unmoved by circumstances, abiding His time, responding to His guidance whether it be by the opening or closing of doors, prosperity or adversity. And herein is the marvel of it all—even sin may be overruled by God's grace for His own glory. That does not invite anyone to sin that grace may abound (Rom. 6:1, 2), but it does offer encouragement to the one who has fallen, that God can redeem the years that the locust have eaten (Joel 2:25).

III. Kindness Provides the Best (vv. 9-15; 47:11, 12).

It might have been enough to send food and a kind greeting with the brothers to their own land, but love does not seek the minimum expression of its feeling. It asks not how little, but how much can I give or do.

Bringing his aged father and brothers into the land of plenty was not enough, Joseph also gave to them the "best of the land" (47:11). His thoughtful consideration in sending for his father (Gen. 46:5-7) was part of the same piece of kindness.

Joseph puts to shame the modern "hard-boiled" attitude toward needy and aged members of the family. In their eager and relentless pursuit of fame or riches, many ignore or trample upon the members of their own families. Often they are ashamed of the broken bodies, the humble apparel, the broken or uneducated speech of their parents. They fear lest their new-found friends in the circle of wealth and supposed "position" will think them strange or ridiculous. God pity the man or woman who is ashamed of a humble or aged father and mother!

Joseph, who really had an exalted position gained by merit and by the blessing of God, never forgot his place before God as a son in the family and as a brother. Let us consider him and do likewise.

JUST AS YOU ARE

That Kind
Bill—What kind of a chap would you say John is?
Bob—If you see two men talking and one is trying to get away, the other one is John.

"Marry in haste, repent at leisure," is all wrong, a woman tells me. After you marry you have no leisure.

The Reason
Mrs. Jones (reproving maid)—This hair is just covered with dust.
Maid—And why shouldn't it be, ma'am? It's so uncomfortable nobody ever sits on it.

THAT'S SURE!

Peck—When I get married I intend to be the boss or know why.
George—Don't worry. You won't be long finding out why.

Second Look
"We met one day and got married the next."
"Oh, love at first sight?"
"I suppose so; but I've often wished since that I had taken another look!"

Are You Needlessly Suffering Constipation?

Many people think that constipation is "one of those things" you must put up with. That the only thing you can do is take a purge or cathartic—and hope it doesn't come soon again. How foolish that is if you, like millions of others, have the ordinary kind of constipation that's due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. Kellogg's All-Bran is probably just what you need! This crisp, delicious cereal has the "bulk"-forming properties your intestines need to function "regularly"! It gets at the cause of your trouble and corrects it — helps you get back to normal, easy elimination. Eat All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and help free yourself from constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

Notice to Farmers

The two gins of Robert Lee will use the same hours as in the past which are beginning at 9 a. m., stop at noon, quit weighing in at 7:00 P. M. (old-time) but will gin all the cotton on the yard at that time.

We want to kindly ask the farmers not to bring us bales that will weigh above 550 lbs because if we break our press we have to go through Washington to get priorities for repairs, which takes from 30 to 60 days.

We thank the farmers for their past favors and hope to render you the best of service that we possibly can this coming year.
