"Some Are Quiet Spirits, Some Are Impetuous Like Myself." Say Victim of Titanic Disaster-Communication Is Not Easy.

London .- "Those are together who think together. Some are quiet spirits, some are impetuous like myself." This was one of the messages" from the late W. T. Stead, which his daughter, Miss Estelle W Stead, delivered to a crowded gathering of the London Spiritualistic alliance in the salon of the Royal Society of British America.

Miss Stead, who explained that she was neither, a lecturer nor a public speaker, made a very promising debut in both capacities. In proclaiming what spiritualism means to me she said the one fact that stood out clearly was individual responsibility and the unlimited power of self-development in this life, while away ahead lay a long road of development for the soul. As to the possibility of communion with those who had passed over she was as certain of it as she was of anything.

For some the weil between was very thin, and she herself had had some of the most splendid proofs of authentic messages

It was sometimes very difficult, how ever, to get into communication with those beyond Her father, in a recent to her credit. She is entitled to draw message, said

Her father said Miss Stead, found it difficult to communicate through her, because her mind was apt to jump to conclusions, but many messages had come through others In one of them he spoke of the horrors of the battlefield and "of all those hurried over here unfitted for the spiritual life. They come in great bands and even the archangels are powerless to raise the spirit -it must grow of itself."

The hawk stands behind the big girl. and the dove in front of her. She theows the dove away as she might toos a bird in the air, and as the child runs she waves her arms as though they were wings. The hawk is then thrown in the same way, and it fol lows the dove. The big girl then claps her hands as the Chinese do to bring their pet birds to them, and the dove. if not caught, returns to the cage. Seek for Gold -- This is a variation of our popular "Jacks." Several girls gather up some pebbles, squat down in a group, and scatter all the pebbles. Then one draws her finger between two of the stones and snaps one against the other. If she hits it, the two stones are taken up and put aside her finger again between two more and snaps them. When she misses anleft, scatters them, snaps them, takes them up, and so on until one or another child gets the most of the pebbles and the game is won. Kick the Marbles "-Two boys and two marbles are required. The first boy says to the second: "Kick this marble north (south, east, west), pointing to one of the marbles. Only one kick is allowed. If he succeeds, he wins; if he fails, the other wins. If he puts it north as ordered, he may kick again to hit the other marble in which case he wins again. If he hits the marble and goves north, as ordered, at one kick, he wins double.

Each boy tries to leave the marbles in as difficult a position as possible for his successor, and here comes in gravitated to the prison houses and a peculiarity which makes this game unique among all games. Rising quickly from the stone or cushion requires considerable agility on the part of the players.

Two captains are chosen, and each captain then chooses alternately the remaining company until two long lines are formed. They face each other, holding hands tightly. One captain calls the name of one of his strongest boys, and this boy runs and huris himself between two boys of the opposing side If he succeeds in breaking through, he takes back with him to his own side all the boys on the line below the place where he broke through. If he is unsuccessful, he must join the enemy's side. This is kept up, each side taking a turn unil all the boys are on one side, the captain included. The strongest boys should be stationed near the top of the line, near the captain, and strategem is shown in trying to catch the strong boys off their guard, by pretending to tackle the weak boys at the bottom of the line

GOOD TREES FOR THE CITY

Suitable Shade Producers Are of Four General Classes-How to Plant Correctly.

Shade trees suitable for street planting come under four general classes: The columnar, such as the Lombardy popular, Irish juniper and red cedar; the cone-shaped such as the sugar maple, sweet gum, white pine; the vase-formed, or spreading head, as the American elm and silver maple; the round-headed form, such as the Carolina popular and horse chestnut,

The redbud or Judas tree, the magnolias and similar varieties are excellent for use on lawns or city squares, but not suitable for street planting on account of their small size and habit of growth. It is best to select trees from nurseries in the fall, so that their form can be fully determined; and this is also a good season for transplanting, for the roots can then become established in new quarters before frost The trees should be well pruned, and after the ground is frozen a mulch of leaves about six inches deep (held in place by brances; but which allow aeration of ground) should be put on. This will furnish heat, and, by putting it on after the first frosts, will prevent the mice from building nests in, or nibbling the

The vase formed trees, which arch gracefully over the street, and of which the elm is so perfect a type, are quite generally conceded to give the best effect. The news spread quickly that Hirschorn had turned philanthropist and it was all over in a minute. Before "Ike" could get to the scene the elaborate birthday dinner had vanished.

In Setting Out Trees.

Describing the results of horticultural investigations at the Woburn erperimental fruit farm, Spencer M. Pickering controverted some old notions as to the transplanting of trees from the nursery to the fruit ground. It made little or no difference, be said, to the future welfare of the tree whether the ends of the old roots were trimmed or left jagged and torn; not did it matter whether they were care fully spread out instead of being hud died into the hole prepared for them Experiments had shown that it was the new rootlets which were to formed and not the old ones on which the future life of the tree depended-London Mail.

DRY FARMING IS EXPLAINED

Means Conservation of Moisture In Sell Throughout Year-Harrow-Ing Will Retain Water.

Eastern people have no adequate idea of what is meant by dry farming. They think some sort of magic lurks. in arid soil which makes the seed germinate and grow into marvelous yields of grain without the aid of any moisture. Dry farming does not mean farming with no water, but means the conservation of the water in the soil throughout the year. Despite the hot winds of summer, deep plowing and constant harrowing after every rain will retain the moisture in the soil. I heard an apple grower at a dry farming congress in Cheyenne tell of an experiment he made. He plowed a unit of ground, keeping the mulch secure. The following year he again plowed this ground and also plowed another unit. He continued this for ten years so at the end of that time he had ten units plowed and harrowed, one having been plowed for the full length of time and one but for one year. He then bored with an earth auger to find the depth of moisture in the various units of ground, with the result that in the first year unit there was only a trace of moisture under the mulch, not enough for farming. In the second unit there was a little moisure, but hardly enough to maintain a crop. The third year unit had guite a ittle moisture and the ten-year unit had ten feet of moisture. Thereiore can be seen that dry farming is metimes uncertain for the first few ears and this should be understood anyone contemplating using that ethod. It requires some capital, ut the well-to-do farmer has an oportunity to make a lot of money. y farming grain ripens earlier than igated land and the dry farmer as an opportunity to make a lot of oney. Dry farming grain ripens rlier than irrigated land and the farmer has not the trouble or ex-ase of irrigating. Some people claim that the summer lowing of land is done to hold ough of the summer's moisture to t the crop that fall. This is true, the summer fallowing does more that. It has been proven time again that moisture is carried over n one year to another by summer wing. OF WESTERN CANADA.

The close ties of friendship existing between the United States and Canada were dwelt upon in addresses by Premier Robert L. Borden, of Canada, and Governor Sulzer, at the annual dinner of the University Club of Albany.

"Canada and the United States," said Premier Borden, "have a common heritage in the language the literature, the laws, the institutions and the traditions which have come down to them from the men of bygone days.

"Perhaps no more instructive object lesson ever has been given to the world than the four thousand miles of undefended boundary line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which bears silent but eloquent testimony to the mutual confidence and respect of the two nations. Time will shortly place upon the brow of each nation the laurel of one hundred years of peace. It matters not so much as to the form of the outward celebration, but let us hope that its full significance may sink deep into the hearts of both nations, and that, whether north or south of the boundary, we may stand with bowed and reverent heads, offering grateful thanks for the Divine blessing of peace; and earnest prayers that in the century to come, mutual confidence, good-will and respect may truly animate the ideals and aspirations of both

"Many of our best citizens, I regret to say," said the governor, "are leaving the States of the west and going Mass. into the Canadian northwest, because of the fertility of its soil, the liberality of the Canadian government and the ability of those people to better their conditions here.

"We should extend to them a helping hand in their onward march of progress. Instead of closing our doors by tariff barriers against these countries and their products, in my opinion, we should open them wider and do everything in our power to facilitate closer commercial relations. We want their products and they want our products, and all restrictions to prevent a fairer and freer exchange of goods, wares and merchandise should, in so necessary to write his impressions of far as possible, be eliminated."-Advertisement.

Odd People Who Live in Caves Built in Sides of Mountains.

They Neither Work Nor Pay Rent, but Part of the Year They Wander a Bit-Sell Antiques to Tourists.

Granada, Spain .--- They are too wise to pay rent. These Spanish gipsies I speak of live in caves in the sides of mountains that tower above Granada, in Andalusia, where the sun shines as it really ought to shine. They have been there a long time, says a correspondent. They were there before the Moors. They were there in the time of the Romans. Their ancestors saw the gleam from the swords of Roman soldiers as they marched along the valley beneath them.

They are delightful people, who neither work nor pay rent. At a certain season of the year they wander a bit-just to feel that they really are gipsies-and then they come back again to their caves to tell the fortunes of visiting innocent tourists and to sell the mobjects of immense antiquity that have been made in Granada but a few days or weeks before

These caves where they live form, in a rough kind of way, a village. It is called the Albiacin. It practically adjoins Granada, but it is as distant from Granada as the gipsies are from the Spaniards themselves, and when you are in it you leel that you are in a place that is really old-as old, in a way, as the Sierra Nevada itself

As a rule, the caves do not go deep into the side of the mountain. They are fitted up inside as houses would be fitted up.

I said that a cave was fitted up as a house would be fitted up. But perhaps that is not a good way to put it. When you enter from the bright light outside you can at first see nothing. But when your eyes get used to the gloom the first thing that will doubtless strike you is what looks like a long black body, hanging either from the roof or along the side of the wall. It is only a pigskin, more or less filled with wine. But there are other things and shapes that you cannot

A prominent lawyer, famous alike for his wit and his bald head, strolled iato the barber shop and took his ac customed chair.

"I think I'll have a haircut, Joe," he remarked.

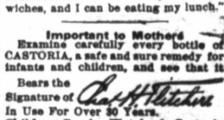

The barber looked at him, slapped the beautiful pink and shiny dome of his customer's skull with mock tenderness and gave a loud laugh.

Each hour brings intelligence of fresh barbarities, and more extensive robberies." This same month Governor Crawford, of Kansas, telegraphed: "Have just received a dispatch from Hays, stating that Indians attacked, captured, and burned a train at Pawnee Fork; killed, scalped, and burned sixteen men; also attacked another train at Cimarron Crossing. which was defended until ammunition was exhausted, when the men abandoned the train, saving what stock they could. Similar attacks are of almost daily occurrence."

> South of the Cimarron all was desolation, and war raged unchecked from the Platte to the Pecos. Sheridan determined upon a winter campaign, although he understood well the sufferings entailed upon the troops by exposure on the open plains at that season. Yet he knew the habits of Indians; that they would expect immunity from attack and would gather in villages, subject to surprise. He. therefore, decided that the result would justify the necessary hardships involved. To this end smaller posts parade ground at Fort Dodge. The lights of the guard-house revealed the troopers' faces, while all about them gleamed the yellow lamps, as the garrison came forth to welcome their arrival. Guided by a corporal of the guard the men led their horses to the stables, and, as they passed the row of officers' houses Hamlin caught a furtive glimpse in a radius of light that gave his pulses a sudden throb. She was here then-here! He had hardly dared hope for this. They would meet again; that could scarcely be avoided in such narrow quarters. But how? On what terms? He ventured the one swift glimpse at her-a slender, white-robed figure, one among group of both men and women before an open door, through which the light streamed-heard her ask: "Who are they? What cavalry troop is that?" caught the response in a man's voice. 'M' of the Seventh, from Fort Union.' and then passed by, his eyes looking straight ahead, his hand gripping his horse's bit.

for 1 never saw a good looking gipsy woman in the Albiacin; and I was there several times.

The men, however, were fine, villainous looking fellows. They gener ally wore the air of retired or quiescent cutthroats and highway robbers. They looked at once lazy and agile and powerful. Their faces were hard and destructive, and their eyes were fierce. They seemed to have very much the physical and mental make-up of the Spanish gentlemen who, in more interesting times, used to send the ears of captives to their friends, so as to stimulate them in the matter of ransom.

To show that some of them now and then went in for fathering grist in the time-honored manner, I must relate an incident that was told to me by the English consul in Granada. It seems that' a year or so before a gipsy of a particularly engaging personality persuaded an Englishman to hire him as a guide. This gipsy could speak bad English with fluency, and he went with the Englishman in the capacity of monitor and general guide, philosopher and friend. He explained to him the wonders of the Alhambra, and he told things that had hap pened there, together with things that had never happened there.

But one day there came a rift within the lute. They were in a lonesome place outside Granada, and the gipsy made a polite request to the effect that the Englishman should lend him all the money had on him, and his watch and chain. But the obtuse Englishman impolitely refused the gipsy's polite request. The gipsy made a quick move for his knife, but the Englishman was guicker. He whipped out a revolver and shot the gipsy dead. Then he gave himself up to the police in Granada. But the police did nothing, save to express their regreta
