Test Wells Made Ready

The wells for testing water supply for irrigation have been located and are being dug and drilled as fast as work can proceed. The Coppage well, dug 103 feet, stands 75 feet in water. The test is now being made on this well. The machinery is not working well, but no discount on water supply. The pump ran a half hour and lifted 1,200 gallons per minute without diminishing supply. Engineer satisfied and moves test pump to W. E. Lindsey's farm, a mile and a half west.

The well on D. Hardy's place, four miles west, is going down and will be ready for the test by the middle of the coming week. Some new machinery is ordered, which will arrive Monday or Tuesday. The Lindsey well, Hardy well, and Elliott well (in Bethel community) will all be tested fully by the end of the coming week. Watch the Bulletin Board on the Court House Lawn.

Man-Slaughter the Verdict.

After being out all night Saturday night, the jury in the case of the Territory of New Mexico vs. Arthur Adams, charged with killing Guy H. Porter on the night of December 25th, 1908, near Melrose, New Mexico, brought in a verdict of manslaughter, and asked the clemency of the court. The fact is, not a more difficult case has ever come under our observation. On the one hand, apart from what Adams himself told Thompson—who was the territory's main witness—there was absolutely nothing to connect Adams with the crime. Not only so; but Adams according to Thompson's and one other witness' testimony, related that he had killed Porter in a personal encounter; whereas all the evidence showed that Porter died by a gun shot, the lead taking effect in his left side while he was sitting in his own shack reading a newspaper and therefore without any struggle. A still deeper complication lay in the fact that, granting that Adams killed Porter, absolutely no reason was ever developed that would even tend to show why he killed him. Adams, moreover, did not at any time previous to the killing of Porter, nor has he since, behaved in any

Rainy Days

May yet come to us. Life has more UPS than DOWNS. Some say this drouth has knocked 'em to their knees, but wait until we get irrigation. If you cannot see brighter prospects ahead, come to us for further information.

this young man, moreover, giving absolutely no evidence beyond his alleged story to Thompson that he was guilty of this or any other crime.

On the other side the dead body of Guy Porter was found in his shack some days after his death; found with a death wound in his side and with a newspaper in his hands which he was evidently reading. Somebody had killed him and murdered him without giving him even a chance to defend himself, murdered him—as the evidence showed—with his (Porter's) own gun. Thompson and another witness swear that Adams told them that he and Guy Porter had fallen out and fought and that he (Adams) had beat Porter to his gun and killed him with it. Either one of three things is true: (1) Adams killed Porter and lied about beating him to his own gun; (2) Thompson killed Porter and fixed the witnesses to lay it on Adams; or (3) some unknown highwayman slipped into Porter's house, hid himself until Porter took his seat by the stove and began reading his paper and fired the contents of Porter's own shot gun into his heart. If Adams did not kill Porter, what could have prompted him to talk it? And if Thompson lied in saying that Adams told him that he had killed Porter, what could have prompted such a lie, except he himself was guilty? If Adams did kill Porter, he killed him in cold blood, without giving him any chance whatever—assassinated him outright; and yet what could have been his reason for committing such a cold blooded deed? These questions will perhaps never be answered, but taking the case as it was presented to the jury, Thompson's testimony being unimpeached, we see no way the jury could reach the verdict they brought in; and they are to be congratulated. Yet the jury and all who witnessed the trial believe that a great injustice was wrought some where and that the Territory should have waited and looked for additional evidence. For if Adams killed Porter, under the circumstances, he deserved the sentence of a cold blooded and cowardly murderer; if he did not kill him, he should of right be set free of the charge. Yet with the evidence submitted we see no way the jury could have done otherwise. Let us hope that the laws of territory will be so amended that a case can not come to a jury without a fuller evidence than this one.

New Mexico's Democratic Daily.

On September 1st, the democracy of New Mexico asserted the banner and raised the standard of her exalted principles in the initial issue of the first territorial Democratic paper, the Albuquerque Daily Tribune.

As fulfilling the most vital and serious need in the civic life of the territory, as presenting to the public the most fundamental and abiding conceptions of true government, as representing the largest and of right the controlling political sentiment of our undeveloped commonwealth, and as possessing an unmatched editorship, management, stock company and mechanical equipment, the paper is without superior in the realm of journalism in New Mexico.

And the Daily Tribune has a mission. To strike down and drive out the grafters and grand rascals, to help up and help on every worthy and aspiring man and every worthy and helpful institution, to help New Mexico to statehood and from statehood to an honorable and useful place in the nation; to call attention to and secure the development of the unbounded, and as yet, untapped resources of "the sunshine territory," to stand as a watchman upon the wall and warn the people of approaching danger, to lead, encourage, enable and inspire toward whatever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report.

More than this, the Daily Tribune has a message. The managing editor will speak not in behalf of partisan politics, but for true and unselfish American patriotism, not for the ascendancy of his political party as such, but for the triumph of the principles of a pure democracy; not for the success of every candidate who may be robbed in the ivory of democracy, but for cleanliness, and conscience, as well as character and efficiency in every office holder.

And its news service will be the best. It will reach our people the same day it is published, so that we will get the news, while it is news. It will cover every phase of the life and endeavor of the people of New Mexico. It will secure the service of the best correspondent in each community and faithfully depict every forward movement of every section of country. It will present illustrated features in portrayal of news events of the various industrial developments of the territory.

ITS MODEST COST. For the meagre sum of fifty cents per month you can have this splendid daily mailed to your business address anywhere in the territory. For $5.50 we will send you the Daily Tribune for one year and The Herald for one year, regular price of both papers $1.50. For $1.50 we will send you the Daily Tribune for three months and The Herald for three months; regular price for both papers $1.75. For $1.50 we will send you the Daily Tribune for six months and The Herald for six months, regular price of both papers $1.50.

Reducing the Hazards of Farming.

The odds against the farmer who stakes his labor against all of the weather's whims are greater than those in any game of chance man has devised with which to gamble. It is an axiom among gamblers that the percentage will eventually break the man who stags with the game. Whether still will be the impoverishment of the farmer who relies implicitly on the weather and swells himself of some of those measures which reduce the hazard.

These measures are numerous, and when utilized fully will convert farming from one of the greatest hazards to one of the greatest certainties. Diversification is one of them—a policy of insurance against total failure. The dry farming method is another, one which, indispensable in semi-arid regions, is worth the trouble even in sections of ordinary humidity. So does means of supplemental irrigation appreciably reduce the odds even in those sections where ordinarily there is an abundance of rainfall. For farmers living in bottom lands contiguous to streams, levees or other means of flood prevention, as well as a system of drainage, are indispensable if they are not to farm on the hill and miss part. The farmers living in the bottom lands of the larger streams in Texas cannot hope to escape destructive floods more than four years in five. Indisputable records show that in several sections they have a "big run of luck" when they escape three years in five. Yet, at best, the odds against them are five to four.

These are a small part of the many measures that reduce the hazards of farming, but if only these were adopted where they are possible and there is occasion, the farmers could contemplate the whims of the weather in a spirit of amused tolerance rather than in a spirit of petulant anxiety.—Dallas News

What is the Church's Sphere and the Minister's Work?

Two week since we submitted the view of a Methodist minister of Chicago touching this problem. And now we are presenting the view of a statesman and author, Mr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton, as his views are outlined in a recent issue of the Literary Digest.

"I believe that we erroneously conceive the field of the Christian Church in our age. If my observation does not mislead me, the Christian Church now days is tempted to think of itself as chiefly a philanthropic institution, chiefly an institution which shall supply the spiritual impulse which is necessary for carrying on those great enterprises which relieve the distress of body and distress of mind, which so disturbs the world and so excites our pity, among those men particularly who have not had the advantages of fortune or of economic opportunity. And yet I believe that this is only a very small part of the business of the church. The business of the church is not to pity men. The business of the church is not to rescue them from their suffering by the mere means of material relief, or even by the means of spiritual reassurance. The church cannot afford to pity men, because it knows that men, if they would but take it, have the richest and most complete inheritance that it is possible to conceive, and that, rather than being dependent of pity, they are to be challenged to assert in themselves those things which will make them independent of pity. No man who has recovered the integrity of his soul is any longer the object of pity, and it is to enable him to recover that lost integrity that the Christian Church is organized. To my thinking, the Christian church stands at the center not only of philanthropy but at the center of education, at the center of science, at the center of philosophy at the center of politics, in short at the center of sentiment and thinking life. And the business of the Christian church, of the Christian minister, is to show the spiritual reasons of men to the great world processes, whether they be physical or spiritual. It is nothing less than to show the part of life and men's relation to the part of life.
