· PHILATUEA-BARAGAS HAVE FUN.

Last Thursday evening a committee on entertainment for the month of June entertained with a seven o'clock lunch the Philathea Baraca class of the Methedist Sunday school on the beautiful lawn at the C. M. Martin home, commonly called "the Woodcock place." The evening. the trees, the grass, the people, everything was beautiful and in a state and frame of mind for having fun and no wonder echoes of laughter may yet, almost, be heard among the tall poplars.

The lunch was on the picnic order, the cloths being spread on the grass among the trees, the sandwiches, salads, boiled ner. Jefferson Davis, his life and eggs, pickles, ham, cakes, iced his work were discussed, and intea, cream, etc., placed thereon structive papers on the subject disappearing with incredible rapidity before the healthy, hearty appetites of the youths and maidens, twenty-one in all, comfortably seated around.

The after-dinner speech by Mr. Martin was splendid and for its beautiful forest, as a place for excellent mirth provoking qualities cannot be surpassed. The remainder of the lunch being hastily cleared away, the whole party accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Martin went to the commercial club reception, returning to the original rendezvous, the Martin lawn, after the moon had risen, where the festivities were closed near the midnight

The band furnished some of its excellent music, and ice lemonade, cream and wafers refreshed the guests all of whom expressed themselves as having been highly entertained.

THE B. A. E. CLUB

Held its regular meeting last Friday afternoon with Miss Mattie Doss Hightower. The cool shady yard proved irresistible, so the girls proceeded to convert the lawn into a sewing room, and another pleasant and profitable afternoon was spent. When the young ladies were about to depart, Miss Mattie Doss and nounced that it was her treat and took the crowd down to the Portales Drug store where icecream, nuts and candy were enjoyed to the fullest.

Having laid a solid foundation for the future greatness of the concern, along came a devastating fire, which wiped out the accumulation of several years at one fell stroke. Herein was made manifest the man's undaunted belief in himself and his associates, and in his town and country; he might have considered the charred remains of what was once a stock of merchandise which represented an outlay of some twenty-five thousand hard earned dollars. He might have viewed the future through glasses smoked by the embers of the smouldering ruins, heat anathemas to lay upon those and right feelings, have cho the better course. They resolved to accept their reverses as merely a circumstance in the day's, or the life's work, and have gone ahead and kept sweet. All of which is herein set forth as a preliminary to the prophecy which was then set forth by this paper: That two years from that date the Warren-Fooshee house would have a better appointed mercantile establishment larger asset in the way of public esteem and confidence. And the prophecy has been fulfilled to theirs' and the public's entire satisfaction. Today, the name of the Warren-Fooshee house, and its popular manager, is a household word and is synonymous with the terms of service and quality in the mercantile activities of the town. So much for the man's contact with the public in the capacity of manager of a great and growing enterprise.

While there is naturally the human interest side to all the callings which engage the mind of men, there is no phase of a man's nt brick building, together with life which attracts the interest of his fellows like the personality which he displays in the everyday walks of life, in the business office, in the social activities of his community and in all that makes for the betterment and the upbuilding of his town. While Mr. Priddy takes an active interest in everything for the advancement of his town, community and state, he is of an unassuming disposition, yet staunch in what he believes to be right, a characteristic so common among these real, substantial men, whose sterling worth is known and appretrue that a ship at sea can make clated only by close acquaintance better headway with a stiff breeze The man is singularly free from in its face, so it seems that, at all forms of "flap-doodle."
