ERRORS ABOUT THE WHITE HOUSE.

I noticed somewhere recently-1 would not say positively that it was in your columns—an article on the White House which contained several misstatements.

In the first place it was stated the White House was first occupied in 1809 and that its first occupant was President Madison. The fact is, its first occupant was President Adams, who took up his residence there in 1800.

The original mansion was begun in 1792 In 1814 it was burned by the British and rebuilt in 1818.

Another of the errors in the article referred to was the statement that ready-prepared paint is used on the White House to make it beautifully white.

I noticed this especially because I have used considerable paint myself and wondered that "canned" paint should be used on such an important building when all painters know that pure white lead and linseed oil make the best paint. It so happened also that I knew white lead and linseed oil-not readymixed paint-were used on the White House, because I had just read a booklet published by a firm of ready-mixed paint manufacturers who also manufacture pure white lead. In that book ures are now to be tried against the the manufacturers admitted that for the White House nothing but "the best and purest of paint could be used." and said that their pure white lead had been selected.

Above all people, those who attempt to write on historical subjects should give us facts, even if it is only a date Gen. Min was at the railroad station More important still is the fact that or a statement about wood, or brick, Yours for truth.

GIANT RADISHES OF THE EAST

There the Vegetable Grows to an Enormous Size.

Radishes in North China and in Japan are as important and ubiquitous a part of every meal as is bread in America. In both countries many millions of bushels of this vegetable are grown every year, and they are to be had at all seasons. It is thus easy to understand why these parts of the world grow the strangest and biggest radishes known.

Will the bankers come to the rescue of the cotton warehouse? Such a silly question. Will a duck swim? is a question that there is more room to debate. What in the thunder is the bank going to do with it's money if it does not go into the cotton crop? But hat we fool enough to think that it will take any mare to handle a farmer's bale of cotton that it will take to handle a speculator's bale. It will take no more money to handle the crop on the warehouse plan than it will take on the old plan of farming it out to the speculators. Indeed, it will not take as much, because farmers will be their own capitalists, and will leave even more money in the banks for the cotton than usual. There will be no scarcity of money to handle the crop. There are oodles of money lying idle in the banks that would like to get remedy is permitted to remain unless itself wrapped up in nice new cotton graded about two or three grades below what it ought to be.

Schools Spreading In China. A few years ago the foreign missionary schools were practically the only institutions in Foochow offering facilities for the acquisition of western learning. There are now at least 30 native schools fashioned after the foreign model. Foochow is a city of 600,000 inhabitants, and these schools embrace about 2,000 students. Posters placarded all over the city advertise the opening of various modern schools, which are springing up in every nook and corner of the place. Scarcely a week passes without the announcement of the opening of new school.
