Our New Methodist Pastor.

The annual conference of the Methodist Church South closed Mr. Fuller, agent of the government reclamation service, stopped of Sunday till Monday to see how we were getting along on our test wells. He made an examination of the work done so far and reports the showing is even better than he expected.

Methodist Church South closed at El Paso last Sunday. Rev. Carleton, who has been pastor at Portales, resigned from the ministry for the present. Rev. E. L. Young, whose staitionhas been at Clovis, has been assigned as pastor at Portales and will preach here next Sunday at 11 a. m. He thinks we have more water here than they have at Garden City.

THIS Hudson-Fulton celebration is a big affair for all of us. It's a good thing to commemorate the daring courage of Hendrick Hudson, who sailed across the Atlantic in his queer little ship, the "Half Moon," to add to the knowledge about the new world. It is fitting to pay honor to Robert Fulton, whose crazy little steamboat, the "Clermont," which took two days and nights to go from New York to Albany and back, was the forerunner of our great fleets which cover the distance from Liverpool to Sandy Hook in about four days. The thunders of the fleet which will salute these two historic craft will be a tribute to courage and to progress. And if you'd like to see evidences of progress in other lines, compare Jes, we're just a little proud of of our new store, and you won't blame us, either, after you have been through and carefully inspected it in detail, which we cordially invite you to do the first time you come to town. We want you to realize another thing, too, that is, that we will, in this case, concede the fact that we have the finest and most elaborate store room in Eastern New Mexico, it is also true that we carry the biggest, the best and, quality considered, the cheapest lines of Hardware, Implements, Cutlery, Stoves, Ranges and everything else usually carried by First-Class Hardware Houses, to be found in the "Sunshine Territory." We believe that the best is none too good for our trade and, so long as we stay in business, "By Gatlins," we are going to see that you do get the best and that, too, at no greater price than you pay others for inferior goods. Our guarantee is good and it goes, free, with every article we sell you.

Gliding under cover of huge rocks up the dry the floods had scooped a long, hollow curve out of a soft ledge in the bank, leaving a stretch of smooth sand on the bed of the stream. At the upper point great bowlders pushed out of the river. He could not inspect the curve from the spot he had gained without reckless exposure, but he must force the little daylight left to him. Climbing completely over the lower point, he advanced cautiously, and from behind a sheltering spur stepped out upon an overhanging table of rock and looked across the riversand within the curve. Two lay on paces from Whispering Smith. The third man, Seagrue, less than 50 yards away, had got off his horse and was laying down his rifle, when the hootowl screeched again and he looked uneasily back. They had chosen for their halt a spot easily defended, and needed only darkness to make them safe, when Smith, stepping out into plain sight, threw forward his hand.

They heard his sharp call to pitch up, and the men under the point jumped. Seagrue had not yet taken his hand from his rifle. He threw it to him shoulder. As closely together as two fingers of the right hand can be struck twice in the palm of the left, two rifleshots cracked across the wash. Two bullets passed so close in flight they might have struck. One cut the dusty hair from Smith's temple and slit the brim of his hat above his ear: the other struck Seagrue under the left eye, plowed through the roof of his mouth, and, coming out below his ear, splintered the rock at his back.

The shock alone would have staggered a bullock, but Seagrue, laughing, came forward pumping his gun. Sinclair, at 120 yards, cut instantly into the fight, and the ball from his rifle creased the alkali that crusted Whispering Smith's unshaven cheek. As he fired he sprang to cover.

For Seagrue and Smith there was no cover: for one or both it was death Taking for a moment the fire of the moments, he forced his horse at the sky. They whipped the dust from his coat, tore the sleeve from his wrist and ripped the blouse collar from his from rock to rock, gained the water's | Seagrue's belt 40 paces away, and sent bullet after bullet at the gleam of brass between the sights. ing his way down the stream, had uncovered Sinclair and young Rebstock from behind. A yell between the shots rang across the wash, and the cringing figure of a man ran out toward Whispering Smith with his hands high in the air, and pitched headlong on the ground. It was the skulker, Barney Rebstock, driven out by Wickwire's fire.

The shooting ceased, Silence fell upon the gloom of the dusk. Then came a calling between Smith and Wickwire, and a signaling of pistol- like an hour when you're in love, shots for their companions. Kennedy and Bob Scott dashed down toward the river bed on their horses. Seagrue lay on his face. Young Rebstock sat with his hands around his I should grow to like the railroad knees on the sand. Above him at business—and now it is a year and some distance, Wickwire and Smith stood before a man who leaned against the sharp cheek of the bowlder at the point. In his hands his rifle was held across his lap just as he had dropped on his knee to fire. He had never moved after he was struck. His head, drooping a little, rested against the rock, and his hat lay on the sand; his heavy beard had sunk into his chest and be kneeled in the shadow, asleep. Scott and Kennedy knew him. In the mountains there was no double for Murray Sinclair.

bent her eyes upon the fire. "It is so strange. I wonder where he is tonight. How he loves you, Marion! He told me everything when he said good-by. He made me promise not to tell then; but I didn't promise to keep Marion smiled. "A year isn't forever, Dicksie." "Well, it's pretty near forever when you are in love," declared Dicksie, energetically. "I know just how he felt," she went on in a quieter tone. "He felt that all the disagreeable excitement and talk we had here then hore heaviest on you. He said if he stayed in Medicine Bend the newspapers never would cease talking and people never would stop annoying you -and you know George did say they were asking to have passenger trains held here just so people could see Whispering Smith. And, Marion, think of it, he actually doesn't know yet that George and I are married! How could we notify him without knowing where he was? And he doesn't know that trains are running up the Crawling Stone valley. Mercy! a year goes doesn't it? George said he knew we should hear from him within six months-and George has never yet been mistaken excepting when he said no news from him." Dicksie sprang from her chair. "I am going to call up Mr. Rooney Lee and just demand my husband! I think Mr. Lee handles trains shockingly every time George tries to get home like this on Saturday nights-now don't you? And passenger trains ought to get out of the way, make George a vice-president. anyway, when a division superintendent is trying to get home. What difference does it make to a passenger, I'd like to know, whether he is a few hours less or longer in getting to California or Japan or Manila or Hong-table, and after the greetings, Bucks

The door opened and it was George. "Oh, honey!" cried Dicksie, softly, waving her arms as she stood an instant before she ran to him. "But haven't I been a-waitin' for you!" Too bad! and, Marion," he 'claimed, turning without releasing his wife from his arms, "how can I ever make good for all this delay? Oh, yes, I've had dinner. Never, for heaven's sake, wait dinner for me! But wait, both of you, till you hear the news!" Dicksie kept her hands on his shoulders. "You have heard from Whisper-

"I have."

"I knew it!"

"Walt till I get it straight. Mr. Bucks is here-I came in with him in his car. He has news of Whispering Smith. One of our freight traffic men in the Puget sound country, who has been in a hospital in Victoria, learned by the merest accident that Gordon Smith was lying in the same hospital with typhoid fever."

Marion rose swiftly. "Then the time has come, thank God, when I can do something for him; and I am going to him to-night!"

"Fine!" cried McCloud. "So am L and that is why I'm late." "Then I am going, too," exclaimed Dicksie, solemnly. "Do you mean it?" asked her husband. "Shall we let her, Marion? Mr. Bucks says I am to take his car and take Barnhardt, and keep the car there till I can bring Gordon back. Mr. Bucks and his secretary will ride to night as far as Bear Dance with us, and in the morning they join Mr. Glover there." McCloud looked at his watch. "If you are both going, can you be ready by 12 o'clock for the China mail?" "We can be ready in an hour," de clared Dicksie, throwing her arm half around Marion's neck, "can't wa Marion?"

"I can be ready in 30 minutes." "Then, by heaven-" McCloud studied his watch. "What is it, George?"

"We won't wait for the midnight train. We will take an engine, rus special to Green River, overhaul the Coast Limited, and save a whole day." George, pack your suit-case quick, dear; and you, too, Marion; suit-cases are all we can take," cried Dicksie, pushing her husband toward the bedroom. "I'll telephone Rooney Lee for an engine myself right away. Dear me, it is kind of nice, to be able to order up a train when you want one in a hurry, isn't it, Marion? Perhaps shall come to like it if they ever

In half an hour they had joined Bucks in his car, and Bill Dancing was piling the baggage into the vertibule. Bucks was sitting down to colfee. Chairs had been provided at the Kong or Buzzard's Gulch, provided he seating Marion Sinclair at his right is safe—and you know there has not and Barnbardt and McCloud at his been an accident on the division for left, asked Dicksie to sit opposite and first shot of the cowboy at 200 yards a year, Marion. McCloud looked apprehensive. "I am afraid she will be assuming the whole division if you encourage her too much, Mr. Bucks."

"Marrying a railroad man," continued Bucks, pursuing his own thought. "is as bad as marrying into the army; if you have your husband half the time you are lucky. Then, too, in the railroad business your husband may have to be set back when the traffic falls off. It's a little light at this moment too. How should you take it if we had to put him on a freight train for a while, Mrs. McCloud?"

"Oh, Mr. Bucks!" "Or suppose he should be promoted and should have to go to headquarters some of us are getting old, you "Really," Dicksie looked more demure as she filled the president's cup. "really, I often say to Mr. McCloud that I cannot believe Mr. Bucks is president of this great road. He al- ginning of the second month, ways looks to me to be the youngest man on the whole executive staff. Two lumps of sugar, Mr. Bucks?"

The backelor president rolled his eyes as he reached for his cup, "Thank you, Mrs. McCloud, only one after that." He looked toward Marion. "All delivered in the morning by Bro. to leave for the winter. I can say is that if Mrs. McCloud's husband had married her two years earlier he might have been general manager by this time. Nothing could hold a man back, even a man of his modesty, whose wife can say as nice things as that. By the way, Mrs. Sinclair, does this man keep you supplied with transportation?"

"Oh, I have my annual, Mr. Bucks!" Marion opened her bag to find it. Bucks held out his hand. "Let me see it a moment." He adjusted his eye-glasses, looked at the pass, and called for a pen; Bucks had never lost his gracious way of doing very little things. He laid the card on the table list. and wrote across the back of it over his name: "Good on all passenger When he handed the card back to Marion he turned to Dicksie. In the development and upbuilding of a community, we believe a newspaper is a very important factor. The Times believes there are great possibilities for us in the future and is willing to strike out and do its share of the boosting, which we have always endeavored to do in the past. The Times shall always try to be of service for the good of the community by being a newspaper creditable to the country. We believe our equipment and the character of work the Times has turned out will compare favorably with that produced from any other town the size of Portales and be ahead of that of many towns of like size. The Times force consists regularly of three men and supports three families and seventy-five per cent of its earnings are spent here in town for the necessities of life. We intend to keep abreast of the development in the future and print the best paper the circumstances will warrant. We will report in detail all avenues of advancement and bring to public notice as much as possible the opportunities and give notice of matters that need pushing by our people. We have enjoyed a liberal patronage and believe we have the good will of the people of this community and we hope to continue as in the past. Let us all work to make Portales Valley one of the best and most harmonious communities in New Mexico.

The proposition to establish a western capital of the United States is not altogether visonary. There is good sense in back of the idea. Climatically, of course summer residence in the Rocky Mountains, would be for more agreeable than along the crowded Atlantic Coast. At Denver or at Santa Fe, the President would be nearer to the center of the country than at Washington or Beverly. The west has its own problems and it is growing to be the most important part of the Union. For the President to be in near touch with it during the summer months whuld lead to a much better understanding of its needs. - New Mexican.

The Portales Valley has made a truly wonderful development in a short time under the dry farming system. Now what will it do under irrigation? The examination of our test wells by Mr. Fuller, agent of the government reclamation service, and his report that we certainly have an ample supply of water, one of the best in the United States, as-days "Auto Race Event" to take place on October 12th and 13th. A fine programe is being arranged and a general invitation is extended to people of all towns tiate loans on farm lands. in this part of the country.

The new Catholic church of Portales was dedicated Tuesday by Archbishop Pitaval of Santa Fe, assisted by the Rev. Arbogast of Carlsbad and the Rev. Herbert and Turibius of Roswell. After the dedication, the archbishop, in a few well chosen words, congraulate the Catholics on their success in erecting a neat little chapel and felt confident that Goud woll further bless their efforts. Then the Archbishop administered the sacramant of confirmation to a class of six. The services closed with a prayer, and an announcement of Mass on each third Sunday of the month, at nine o'clock to which all are welcome.
