POPULAR BARRED ROCK

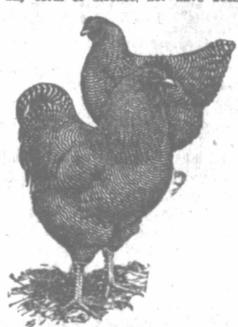

Shows Outnumber Others.

Breeding of This Variety Has Engaged Minds of More Poultry Raisers Than All Others Combined-Essential Points.

(By C. E. DIBBLE.) The breeding of good Barred Plymouth Rocks is a subject that has engaged the minds of probamly more poultry breeders who strive to produce high-class birds than the breeders of all other varieties of poultry combined. Not that the Barred Plymouth Rock is the only good variety bred, but that they are the most popular breed, as is shown each year at the American Poultry shows, where each secretary reports to the American Poultry association the number of entries in each breed class. The grand old Plymouth Rock outnumbers them all.

In the selection of breeding birds it is of the utmost importance to select perfectly healthy birds.

And what is meant here by healthy birds, are birds that have never been troubled with either roup, colds or any form of disease, nor have been

No bird that has ever been affected with any of the above troubles will ever be the equal, as a show bird or breeding specimen, that it would have been if given nearer perfect conditions, and of course they should inherit their vigor from healthy parents.

SCOURING ON RYE PASTURES Difficulty May Be Treated by Use of Blood Meal, Giving Teaspoonful Dally in Feed.

(By JOHN M. EVVARD, Iowa Experiment Station.)

For the difficulty experienced with the scouring of young pigs upon fresh green rye pasture, I would advise the use of blood meal at the rate of a teaspoonful twice daily in the feed. With older hogs weighing 150 to 200 pounds we have had no trouble with this intestinal disturbance, but with the very young pigs weighing from 25 to 60 pounds we have been annoyed considerably by scours. We are somewhat dubious as to the advisability of placing much emphasis upon rye pasture as a forage for pigs, simply because of the extremely loosening tendencies of the green and succulent rye. In 1911 we pastured thirty pigs upon rye for a period of sixty days, and were compelled during that time to remove four of the pigs and three others were replaced because of unthriftiness. It was quite remarkable, however, that those pigs that remained, not showing signs of the difficulty, returned excellent profits from the rye.

The present spring we pastured forty head of pigs, weighing on the average about 30 pounds, on .9 of an acre of green rye. Four of these were taken out of the experiment within three weeks because of excessive purging. The profit on the others is seriously impaired by the setback which these four necessarily caused. As the rye begins to joint the difficulty disappears and the pigs do well upon the pasture. At this time, however, they should be removed so as to allow the rye crop to mature.

At the recent swine breeders' meeting I took the matter up with four or five men who had in past years relied somewhat upon rye as an early or late pasture, and they told me they were compelled to give up rye because of scouring. I submit this inasmuch as a short time ago I told of the profits upon green rye pasture while discussing the hogging down of ripe rye. I think at that time I neglected to mention the difficulties we have had with

SYNOPSIS.

The scene at the opening of the story is faid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barphy. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by sonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy. Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal. Captain Murrell, a triend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony. Trouble at Scratch Hill, when Hannibal is kidnaped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy. Yancy appears before Squire Balaam, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff. Betty Mairoy, a friend of the Ferrisce, has an encounter with Captain Murrell, who forces his attentions on her, and is rescued by Bruce Carrington. Betty sets out for her Tennessee home. Carrington takes the same stage. Yancy and Hannibal disappear, with Murrell on their trail. Hannibal arrives at the home of Judge Slocum Price. The Judge recognizes in the boy, the grandson of an old time friend. Murrell arrives at Judge's home. Cavendish fairfuly on raft rescue Yancy, who is apparently dead. Price breaks jail.

The crowd was like most southwestern crowds of the period, and no sooner did the judge appear than there were clamorous demands for a speech. He cast a glance of triumph at Mahaffy, and nimbly mounted a convenient stump. He extolled the climate of middle Tennessee, the unsurpassed fertility of the soil; he touched on the future that awaited Pleasantville; he apostrophized the jail.

Presently the crowd drifted away in the direction of the tavern. Hannibal meantime had gone down to the though he expected to see his Uncle landlady. "Well, if I was in your boots i couldn't sleep like you!" remarked that official admiringly. "But I reckon, sir, this ain't the first time the penitentiary has stared you in the face."

It was nearing the noon hour when the judge's solitude was again invaded. He first heard the distant murmur of voices on the road and passed an uneasy and restless ten minutes, with his eye to a crack in the door. He was soothed and reassured, however, when at last he caught sight of the sheriff.

"Well, judge, I got company for you," cried the sheriff cheerfully, as he threw open the door. "A hossthief!"

That he appealed to the people for the nomination for the presidency of the United States is un-contradicted, but, in so doing he placed himself on the level of a chronic office seeker and adopted methods so repugnant to the senses of the people and those who were formerly his staunchest advocates, that justice compelled them to dismiss the malicious contests instigated by him against delegates honestly selected by the people. Intelligent people frequently support dominant and insistant candidates of that calibre, because of a frenzy produced by a spectacular campaign. The people honored Mr. Roosevelt with two terms as the chief executive of this nation, and his administration was very satisfactory to most of the people, and had he retired satisfied with those honors there is no question but what he would have gone down in history as one of the greatest statesmen of this nation. mate's certificate. He took a turn in New York at the business of ship brokerage and marine rupplies. Thence he disappeared for several years and was heard of in Central America, where he had joined Walker, the filibuster, narrowly escaping the fate of that adventurer. Rumor also associated him with the ill-starred exploits of Wheat and Henningsen in the same region. He had been heard of also in the Crimea as enlisted in the French zouaves, from which he managed to escape by desertion to save himself from drum-head court martial after having slapped his captain in the face. These and other adventures loomed in his background.

Not disconcerted by Tah-ke's cold reception, he took things into his own hands. He had enough money to hire a small force of rapscallions, native and foreign, the kind that infest an Oriental seaport like rats, and among them a few deserters from the British military and naval forces, who knew something about drill. The most important of these acquisitions was James Burgevine, a North Carolinian adventurer, who had severed allegiance to the "Heavenly King." Tah-ke had sold to Ward for a bagatelle a batch of condemned muskets and bayonets which armed this ragged and unreliable battalion. Ward and Burgevine whipped them into shape not only by camp drill but by skirmishing with the Taipings at every opportunity. for from their cities of Sung Klang and Sing Poo, only two or three days' march from Shanghal, the rebels made constant irruptions.

Ward's primary object was to inspire his. men with confidence in him and in themselves. He lived on the country and when he captured Taipings he converted them into recruits instead of refusing quarter, as was the habit of the imperialists. Very soon the exploits of Ward's irregulars began to make a buzz in the foreign clubs and counting rooms. He had created his own standing and when he went again to Tah-ke that worthy received him with low salaams.

He went straight to his mark like a bullet, with the manner of one dictating, not accepting, terms. He proposed a formal contract, which Tah-ke was to negotiate with the Futai of Shanghal. Ward was to have $100,000 from the government for every city he captured, of which $25,000 was to go to the Chinese partners. He was to have the first day's looting, after which the captured place would be turned over to the imperialists.

Tah-ke was pledged to finance Ward for one year, furnishing him with arms, ammunition and stores, within a certain limit of cost which the other thought would suffice.

Within a month Ward led his first expedition against Sung Kiang, which was garrisoned by about 5,000 Talpings under the command of an Englishman named Gardiner, an ex-officer of the British army. The attack failed, with serious loss to Ward's 500 assailants. One thing had happened, however, which proved of vast import to him. He had taken a rebel prisoner of some rank, who confessed to him that one of the bastions had a choked-up subterranean sallyport. If he could make a secret entrance through this, it would save the necessity of a desperate and bloody assault. General Ward reoganized his little command and, with 5,000 imperialists to co-operate, made his second attempt. Sung Klang, with its fivemile circuit of wall twenty feet high, was captured; and to Ward's great credit he prevented anything like indiscriminate massacre.

Leaving Sung Kiang with an officer of his own in command, he returned to Shanghai, where his achievement had caused a tremendous sensation.

There comes now an interim in Ward's fighting toils, for half a score of unhealed wounds compelled him to go to Paris for treatment, but we find him back again in the early summer of 1861 where his presence was sorely needed. The foreign powers still pursued their handsoff policy and allowed the Taipings to sound their drums and tom-toms within earshot of the swarming treaty port. In a diplomatic way, indeed, formal recognition of the "Heavenly King" as the dominant power was in the air.

Ward's coming shattered that intention. which, if carried out, would have destroyed the empire. He grasped the situation and, through the Futai of the province of Cheh-Klang, obtained directly from the Peking authorities a commission to raise and command an imperial Chinese levy. His experience told him that, well drilled and daringly handled, the natives had plenty of good soldier-stuff and would fight and die in their tracks.

A singular thing happened at this time. At the principal temple of Confucius one day he discovered in one of the consecrated niches a scepter-like staff of ebony with a curiously carved head of jade minutely inscribed. The effect on his native valet was remarkable, and he learned that it was one of the great tallsmans of the empire. When he appeared with it before his troops the next day they fell to their untrained dog is like the unbroken colt knees in ranks. Thenceforward he carried no or the new hired man. Neither is sword, only this magic baton attached to his good as a real helper until taught to wrist with a thong. In the eyes of the Chinese, do as you wish him to do.-Farm andeven the Taipings, it made him an invincible leader. Shortly afterward, indeed, it saved his

A large detachment from the main force of Chung Wang camped too near his city of Sung Klang. Sallying forth with two regiments, he struck their camp like a thunderbolt at night, cutting the force to pleces.

The clock now struck twelve for Frederick Ward. A courier arrived post haste from the Futai of Shanghai, ordering him to report there for co-operation with the Anglo-French contingent. He obeyed with two picked regiments, leaving Sung Kiang strongly garrisoned under Colonel Forester. Admiral Sir James Hope had arrived and had insisted that General Ward should be fully recognized as the most efficient factor of salvation.

The first move was against Kaschiaou, which threatened the supplies of Shanghal. Ward and his Celestials carried the defenses in the most gallant fashion, leaving Sir James Hope's contingent but little to do except gather in two thousand prisoners.

All the English officers were delighted with the spiendid dash and confidence marking Ward's attack, and when Sir James Michel, the British commander-in-chief, arrived from Hong Kong with Sepoy reinforcements he agreed cordially with Admiral Hope when these two reviewed Ward's forces at Sung Klang.

It was advised that Ward be commissioned by the Chinese government to raise from 6,000 to 10,000 men and be invested with a large range of authority.

· The result was an extravagantly phrased rescript from Peking that commissioned General Ward to raise and command 6,000 men, named him admiral-general, and made him a mandarin of the "peacock feather." With it came the famous "Yellow Jacket," equivalent in China to the Golden Fleece or the Order of the Garter. The new force was designated Chun Chen Chun, "The Ever Victorious Army,"

It was in April, 1862, that a council of war was held at Sung Klang. Sir James Hope, General Staveley, the French Admiral Potret, General Ward and Viceroy Lich being present. It was here that Ward's general plan was fully sanctioned. This showed great grasp of military strategy. The proposition was to capture the cities of Kahding, Sing Poo, Najaor, Tsaolin and lesser fortified places within a radius of forty miles from Shanghai.

Needless to linger on the details of the on Kahding, Sing Poo, Najaor and Tsaolin. General Ward in each case, magic baton in hand, headed the asaulting column through the breach made by artillery, and his men charged to the very gates of Tophet, resistless in their ardor mad with the joy of battle. In the Tsaolin affair the gallant French admiral Protet was shot dead at his side.

Tz-ki fell before his assault like a house of cardboard, but one of the last hostile bullets fired plerced Ward's chest with a fatal wound. He was taken aboard a British gunboat commanded by Lieutenant Roderick Dew and was brought down to Ningpo.

Splendid funeral obsequies at the temple of Confucius in Sung Klang were held, at which all the foremost personages of that part of China, native and fopeign, attested their grief and paid their homage to the deeds of the man who had practically arrested the disintegration of the empire.

DOGS FOR FARM WORK

AS VALUABLE AS TRUSTY HIRED MEN, SAYS WRITER.

American Agriculturists Have Not Sufficiently Appreciated Their Wide Usefulness, Though It Is Recognized in Europe.

In England and Scotland farmers learned long ago the value of dogs to farm work. There the universal custom is to have dogs daily do their part the same as trusty hired men.

Here in America, however, few farmers know the value of a well-trained dog. We are the losers because of this fact. We will learn, of course, in years to come; and working dogs that are a daily help will realace the countless farm help "misfits" now imposing on the farmer's generosity.

It once happened that the owner of some sheep dogs worked them back and forth among flocks of sheep at the same place where many farmers were assembled in convention. The farmers witnessed the work the dogs were doing as the sheep were moved from barns to pasture, through pens, gates and lanes. They were amazed to find them so helpful and wondered at their intelligence. They saw them go quietly around the edges of a pasture and gather in the sheep from far away, while the owner waited at the gate. They saw them herd the sheep along the lanes, doing work two men could not have done. And they profited by what they saw.

They began to believe that the useful dog will eventually be on most American farms, when we get to studying more carefully for ways and means to save work and expense. It may be on some large estates many different men are employed, thereby leaving little opportunity for anyone to train a dog. But on the average farm this is not the case.

Any farmer tired from a hard day's toll would praise the faithful deg that would go the mile or two into the pasture to bring in the cows while he prepared the feed for them.

No reference is made to the dog we find on many farms that knows only enough to run and snap at stock, driving them in whatever direction they care to go. Such a dog is of little value, for he drives the stock away as often as he brings them back to the pen they have left. Such a dog might have developed into a good one. It was the fault of the master that he was never trained. Let no man forget how important it is to have his dog well trained and carefully educated to do his bidding. The green Fireside.

Why He Was a "Sucker." William E. Mason of Chicago, at & banquet given to lawyers and politicians, was called upon for a story and told the following:

"A well-known Illinois politician was speaking at the same banquet with a governor of New Jersey some years ago. The Jersey governor went into exhaustive figures as to the wealth, agricultural and manufacturing resources of his own state. In fact, he seemed to lack terminal facilities, for he talked about forty minutes.

"Before he sat down he said: 'I am to be followed by a silver-tongued orator from Illinois, and I hope before he sits down he will tell us why they are called "Suckers."

"Our friend from Illinois said: Mr. Toastmaster, when I heard the description of the agricultural products of New Jersey I was almost ashamed to come from the corn belt of Illinois, and when he told us of his state's manufactures, it made Illinois look small, but I noticed, Mr. Toastmaster, that you and the gentlemen about you seemed incredulous-in fact, I could tell by your expression that you did not believe a word he said. I want to say to the governor of New Jersey that I believe every word he said, and that is the reason I am called a sucker."

Blasting at the Canal. In the last five years the operations on the Panama canal have required 40,082,850 pounds of dynamite for blasting, or an average of 8,016,570 pounds per year. The estimates for the year ending June 30, 1912, are 8,-533,000 and for the 12 months following only 3,986,500. The comparatively small amount for the latter is due to the approaching completion of the excavation work, which will make the total of dynamite used over 52,000,000 pounds. Reckoned by tons, that will be 26,000 tons, which sounds bigger or smaller according to the mind of the person reading it.

For the coming fiscal year the estimated need of other materials for blasting is 328,000 blasting caps, 1,840 pounds of insulated tape, 10,000 feet of connecting wire, 555,300 feet of lead wire, 627,700 feet of electric suses, 36,000 feet of triple tape fuse.

Overfeeding, A lot of people eat too much and a lot more don't eat enough. Some stuff till there isn't room for another swallow and then eat some more in between and then kick that they haven't enough. There are those whose earnings Just spill over in a thimble, but who expect results as if their weekly check covered all Manhattan. A good rule is to leave off eating while there's still room for more, and fill it up the next time.-New York Press.

"I am glad to hear it," he replied. "I hope you are as happy with him as you will be with the next one."

Our Feathered Friends. Rose Pastor Phelps-Stokes, during a recent visit to Philadelphia, told at a charity society a country-week story.

"Under an old apple tree," she said, I gathered a half-dozen little countryweekers about me one August afternoon, and, holding up a book, I said: "'Now, children, I'm going to read to you. This is the book. It is called "Our Feathered Friends." Who are our feathered friends, does any one know?"

"The urchins on the grass regarded one another doubtfully; then a little chap piped in a shrill key: "'Angels?""

there is no continuity of title of this land from the time the Washingtons bought it. There is a proposition that this farm be taken over by one of the ancestral patriotic societies. It was not long after Washington's birth, on the Pope's Creek farm on the Potomac river in Westmoreland county. Virginia, that Washington's parents, his elder half-brother Lawrence, and perhaps his eldest half-brother Augustine, also removed to the farm across from Fredericksburg, a city named for Prince Frederick, the father of George VII. The date of the removal of the Washingtons from the Potomac to the Rappahannock farm is uncertain, but was between 1735 and 1740. The Rappahannock farm had for several years been owned by Augustine Washington (the father) and being close to a city. while his other holdings were distant from one, it is judged that the Washingtons wished a taste of urban life. This farm has been called variously "Pine Grove" and the "Ferry Farm," the latter name being due to the farm being opposite the lower Fredericksburg ferry. Whether George Washington knew this place as Pine Grove is questionable. In this connection it is worth recalling that George Washington never knew his birthplace as Wakefield, yet all the books set it the land records of Stafford county, The sufferers "talk out one side of their mouths, and all their efforts to rid themselves of this nervous affection are fruitless." Their only remedy, one imagines, is to give up acting. The lecturer quoted also gives "twitching of the eye and feverish palsy of the hands" as being among the results of stage fright.

At the dress rehearsal of a play by Sardou an actress "violently scratched the hands of the actor with whom she was playing, saying, 'How nervous I feel."

She must have got over her nervousness since then, for the actress was Mlle. Blanche Dufresne, who for many years has acted with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. Two tenors are cited who have

SCURF ON BABY'S HEAD

Campbell, Va.-"I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for scurf on my baby's head and they made a complete cure. It came on her head soon after birth. It broke out in pimples and itched and she would scratch it and cause sores to form. Her head was very sore and her hair fell out in bunches. She was very cross and fretful and could not sleep at night. I tried many remedies, all failed, then I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they commenced to heal at once. I put the Cuticura Ointment on, and a half hour after washed her head with the Cuticura Soap. I used them a month and she was cured entirely." (Signed) Mrs. W. B. McMullen, Mar.
