15 REPUBLICANS AND 17 DEMOCRATS BEFORE VOTERS

PEACE TREATY WILL BE ISSUE

Fifteen Republican Members and Seventeen Democrate Will Go Before the People for Judgment This Fall.

Washington.-Every phase of the treaty fight is expected to be brought before the people of the thirty-two states which will elect senators next November.

Of the states that are called upon to elect fifteen have republican senators and seventeen democratic.

The republican states are: Connecticut, Iowa, Kansas, Vermont, Ohio, North Dakota, Washington, Wisconsin, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Utah, Missouri, New York and Indiana.

The democratic states are: Kentucky, Oregon, Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Nevada, Arkansas, Idaho, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Maryland, Arizona, Colorado, Alabama, South Dakota and California.

All of the senators from the thirtytwo states, with the exception of Senator Sherman of Illinois and possibly Senator Johnson of South Dakota, are candidates for re-election. The issue on the treaty in some of the states will be clearer than in some of the others. For instance, in five of the fifteen republican states the senators whose terms expire were members of the irreconcilables. This is expected to make the fight in these states practically one of against or for the treaty. These five irreconcilables and their states are Senators Brandegee of Connecticut, Gronna of North Dakota, Moses of New Hampshire, Sherman of Illinois and Penrose of Pennsylvania. Senator Thomas Up, Too.

Only one democrat who voted against ratification of the treaty on the one ground that he was against it and not because he was supporting President Wilson, comes up for re-election this fall. He is Senator Thomas of Colorado. Senator Thomas was against the treaty at all times because he objected to the labor clause it contained.

Eight republican senators will have to face their constituents and ask for a re-election on the ground that they favored the treaty and so voted only after reservations had been made to it. In addition to these eight, two more should be added to this class, Senators Harding of Ohio and Cummings of Iowa. Both of these senators were paired in favor of the treaty with reservations. The eight who were present and voted for ratification are:

Senators Curtis of Kansas, Dillingham of Vermont, Jones of Washington. Lenroot of Winconsin, Smooth of Utah, Wadsworth of New York, Watson of Indiana and Spencer of Missouri.

In the seventeen democratic states called upon to elect senators next fall. we find nine of their present representatives, and probable candidates for re-election, voting with the Lodge republicans for the ratification of the greaty with reservations; six voting against ratification because they desired to stand with the president, and one paired against ratification, with Senator Thomas of Colorado making the seventeenth.

The nine who voted with the reservation republicans were Senators Beckham of Kentucky, Henderson of Nevada, Nugent of Idaho, Phelan of California, Chamberlain of Oregon, Smith of Georgia, Smith of Maryland. Fletcher of Florida, and Gore of Okla-

The six who favored the treaty, but roted against it because of the Lodge reservations, and who must give an account of their stewardship to their constituents this year, are Senators Gay of Louisiana, Johnson of South Dakota, Smith of South Carolina, Overman of North Carolina, Underwood of Alabama, and Kirby of Arkansas. Senator Mark Smith of Arizona was absent, but paired against the treaty, being an administration democrat.

elections with regard to the treaty ral, London. also brings to light the fact that the republicans, on paper, stand a better chance of increasing their majority in the senate than the democrats have of reducing the present republican majority of two and thereby gaining control of the senate. In the first place, two more democrats have to seek reelection than do republicans. Further. Russia. more, the republicans who come up, to a large extent, represent fairly safe reblican states, while on the other hand, who seek to maintain their present membership from such states as Kentucky, Oregon, Nevada, Idaho, Colorado and South Dakota.

No Special Election.

Governor Robertson will not call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Morgan, according to word from him received here. The present term will expire next March. It is expected congrss will be in session several months next winter, during which time one of Oklahoma's districts will not be represented.

Representative Morgan had expected to visit relatives at Covington, Ind., on the Fourth of July, it was said, and had just returned with Mrs. Morgan from a short vacation in Can-It was not known here day if he reached Covington before becoming ill.

Representative Morgan was the only republican member of the Oklahoma delegation in the present congress until last fall when J. W. Harreld was elected in a special election to succeed the late Joe B. Washington.-Freight rates must be increased 55 1/2 per cent if the roads' demands for increased freight tariffs and the men's demands for increased pay are granted and the whole burden placed on the freight traffic, the interstate commerce commission was told by Clifford Thorne, of Chicago, representing shippers.

Mr. Thorne recommended that the ther hearings to the costs upon which the roads now base their request for advanced freight rates; that a five per cent increase be made in passenger rates with the balance of freight tariffs to care for the present case and that any advance occasioned by the wage decision be spread out over the entire earnings of the railroads from

I. Saul in Pursuit of David (vv. 1-8).

Ever since David took his departure from Jonathan (ch. 20), when that crowning act of friendship was shown, Saul had been hunting him as a wild animal. He now pursues him with 3,000 chosen men. David flees from place to place, hiding as an outlaw. Sometimes he is in the enemies' country doing disreputable things. This is the period of his schooling which fitted him to be the eminent king that he was. It was a bitter period in his life, but God sent him to this school and adapted the instruction to his needs. David never lion a minute?" could have been the broad man that he was, had he not been prepared in this crucible of bitter experience. His wading deeply into trouble adapted him to write psalms suited to all men, in all ages, and under all conditions. His life swung through the arc of played a superior knowledge of the human experience, touching the high- game." est point of fame and dipping to the depths of sorrow and shame. Then, personally, he learned many lessons, among which may be mentioned:

1. His own weakness. It was necessary that he be humbled under the sense of his infirmities. Unless a man has learned this lesson, sudden elevation to power will utterly ruin him. 2. His dependence upon God.

David's many miraculous escapes caused him to realize that the Lord had redeemed him out of his adversity. His hiding places in the rocks gave him much of his imagery for the psalms. 3. He learned the country and peobefore he can be a true king. He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city (Prov. 16:32). II. Saul in David's Hands (vv. 4-20).

1. David sends out spies (v. 4). This he did to find out as to whether Saul was come in very deed.

2. David at Saul's camp (vv. 5-11). He took with him Abishi and went in the night to where Saul was sleeping. Abishi asked to be allowed to kill Saul, but David forbade him because Saul was the Lord's anointed.

3. David takes Saul's spear and cruse of water (vv. 12, 13). Once before at Engedi (ch. 24) David spared Saul's life. Now again he was at his mercy. This he did that he might show tangible evidence to the king that he had no evil intent.

4. David taunts Abner, the king's bodyguard (vv. 14-16). He calls to Abner and taunts him for his listlessness-his failure to watch over the Lord's anointed, the evidence of which is the cruse and the spear in his hands.

5. David reasons with Saul (vv. 17-When Saul recognized David's voice, David began to reason with him, showing that he had nothing but good intentions toward the king. He asked that he would show what wrong he had done or what evil intent was in his heart. David is very humble and begs Saul to relent, for surely if he had any wicked purpose he would not have saved his life twice when the Lord had placed Saul wholly at his mercy. David had peculiar regard for the Lord's anointed. He recognized the fact that the Lord had delivered Saul into his hands not to kill, but to

III. Saul's Confession (vv. 21-25). 1. He confessed that he had sinned. The sad feature about his confession is that it lacked conviction, for he went right on sinning. This is the great trouble with people. They are willing to confess that they are sinners, but still they go on sinning.

2. He confessed that he had played the fool and erred exceedingly. We peating their sins. David shows his magnanimity of spirit, however, in delivering the cruse and the spear to part never to meet again.

Consider Faults of Others.

No one thing does human life more need than a kind consideration of the faults of others. Every one sins: have used their friendship in getting every one needs forbearance. Our own imperfections should teach us to be merciful.

> Meditation. Meditation is the life of the soul; action is the soul of meditation; honor is the reward of action; so meditate, that thou mayst do; so do, that thou mayst purchase honor, for which purchase give God the glory.-Quaries.

Synopsis.—Hilary Askew, a young American, inherits from an uncle a hundred square miles of forest in Quebec. Upon taking possession, he dis-covers all sorts of queer things. Lamartine, his uncle's lawyer, tells him the property is comparatively worthless and tries to induce him to sell. Lafe Connell, the mill foreman, tells him his uncle has been systematically robbed. Morris, the manager, is associated with the Ste. Marie company, a rival concern owned by Brousseau, the "boss" of the region. Madeleine, the beautiful daughter of Seigneur Rosny, original owner of Askew's land, is pursued by Brousseau, who has her father in his power. The hero decides to stay and manage his property. He discharges Morris and makes Connell manager. He whips "Black" Pierre, foreman of a gang of Brousseau's men cutting on his land. He defies Brousseau. Leblanc, his boss jobber, deserts to the enemy. From Father Lucien, Askew learns the story of Marie Dupont, daughter of the captain of a lumber schooner. The girl's mother, now dead, had been betrayed, and she herself is looked on askance and has few friends. Marie knows the name of her mother's betrayer, but has never revealed it to her father. Askew finds Madeleine Rosny hostile to him. Askew and Connell visit Simeon Duval's dance hall in Ste. Marie. Revenue officers raid it and Askew is blamed for the raid. He and Connell rescue Marie Dupont. Askew saves Madeleine Rosny when her horse runs away. She gives the warning, "Look to your boom!" and then the mill boom breaks and Askew's logs are carried away to the St. Lawrence. Who sawed the boom?

Ö,

"Well, I guess that hundred dollars' fine didn't hurt him much. But he's mighty sore on you, Mr. Askew. I'd watch for mischief from that quarter."

But there had been another trouble, incomprehensible to Hilary, and Lafe, though he understood its origin, had not enlightened him. It concerned Baptiste.

A few days later Hilary and he met face to face. Baptiste stopped dead and thrust out his chin aggressively.

"Well, what is this that they are saying about the boom?" he demanded. "I have heard nothing, Baptiste," said Hilary. "You don' speak the truth. You think I saw the boom through because Brousseau pay me, eh? All right! I

But he had not gone a dozen paces when he heard the sound of a trotting horse, and presently, from among the trees, he perceived Madeleine Rosny upon the chestnut which had boited with her on the day of the dynamite blast. She put her horse to the gallop as she neared him, and reined up so suddenly that she almost threw the beast back upon his haunches. Hilary saw that she had a new and powerful bit, which gave her perfect control. He meant to fight, and he grew botter as he tramped steadily along the river road, reeling off the miles behind him, a lonely figure, his heart rancorous against the injustice meted out to him; bitter against Lafe, bitter against Madeleine, but furious in his resolution to show St. Boniface what taanner of man he was.

that three men at least in St. Boniface expected him and were prepared for his coming.

He strode past the dam and approached the outlying houses of the settlement, feeling an implacable resolve harden him as he heard the shouts and the tumult that came from Baptiste's old house. He turned into the little street on which it stood and saw if in front of him, with the higher bulk of the mill beyond.

The shades of Baptiste's cabin were drawn, and the lamplight from within threw the shadows of the lumbermen upon them in grotesque attitudes. Hilary could see through the open door that the place was packed to suffocation. There was no room to dance; but there was to be no dance that night.

A group of men, chattering upon the porch, ceased their conversation as Hilary ascended the three steps, and nudged one another. One of them broke into loud, drunken laughter. Hilary hardly heard them. He strode into the saloon and stood within the door-

CHAPTER IX.

The Trap.

The first man whom he saw was Louis Duval, uncorking a bottle of gin. Their eyes met across the heads ence was known.

He stood still for a moment, taking in the scene. He was faintly conscious that the door at the far end of the room had closed, but this perception made no impression on him. He felt, alone though he was, that he was absolute master of the situation.

He strode up to Louis, pushing the lumbermen who were in his way aside, seized the bottle from his hand, and dashed it to the floor. His movement and the ensuing action were so swift that it was only after their completion that all the company awakened to his presence.

He turned toward the plank table which had been nailed across a recess for a bar counter. On this were anumber of bottles, all of brandy or gin illicitly distilled and smuggled up the river. On the floor were two hogsheads. A quantity of glasses newly bought, and still containing fragments of the straw in which they had been packed, stood on a packing case near

Hilary swept his arm along the plank, knocking off the bottles, which crashed to the floor, strewing it with broken glass. A score of streams began to filter between the edges of the boards, uniting in the depressions. The stench of the spirits rose into the air. He kicked the hogsheads over, and they added their contents to the pool. With another sweep he struck down the glasses. Then the lumbermen rushed at him, cursing, infuriated. The foremost hesitated as they came within reach of his arm, however, remembering Pierre's discomfiture. The momentary delay was fatal to them. Hilary struck out with all his force, felling them, or sending them staggering backward against those behind, and clearing a passage in a twinkling toward Louis, with whom alone he had business at that moment.

Louis was a coward, unlike his brother and Pierre, perhaps pardonably, on account of his physical weakness. As Hilary grasped him by the shoulders the liquor seller, who made up in adroitness for what he lacked in strength, twisted like an eel, dived under the arms of those about him. and rushed toward the rear entrance, shouting something as he ran.

What it was Hilary did not know He perceived dimly that the mob fell back, except for a few who, unable to restrain themselves, surged about him leather belt sheaths. Hilary, fighting blow from the side or rear. So long worst is yet to con

He grasped at him, but Louis was just a second too quick. He darted through, and the door, thrown back violently, struck Hilary upon the forehead. The next instant Hilary passed through the doorway in pursuit.

The shanty which Baptiste had once occupied had formerly been a part of a large structure used by the mill for storing machinery. At the back, and contiguous with it, had been the old mill stables. The door connecting the two places had been nailed up, but Duval had opened it that morning in the course of his preparations for Hilary's advent.

As Hilary entered the stable the door closed behind him, and he heard the bolt shot. The yells of the lumbermen grew faint. It was only then Hilary realized that he had run into a trap.

The stable contained Louis, who hac posted himself within the stall imme diately opposite the entrance, and grinned at Hilary defiantly. Between the two stood Simeon Duval, a grotesque grin upon his scholaritke features. The man who had bolted the door was Leblanc, and Black Pierre stood beside him.

The four, executing a flanking movement simultaneously, advanced and and the door. Nobody spoke, but Simeon Duval took off his spectacles quite methodically, folded them in their case, and placed it back in his pocket. Standing with his back close enough to the wall of one of the horseboxes to be able to prevent an attack he wanted more, even against the lot drawn his cartridges, but he was conscious of no sense of fear whatever. He kept his right hand lightly against even for self-defense.

"Well, we got you, Mee sneered Simeon, "Now you listen here. ble. We don't want to hurt you if you fight his quarrel out. He turned. go away from St. Beniface. Go back where you come from. He did not want to parley, but in spite of his eagerness his judgment told him that he was in a perilous situation. He must taunt them till they lost their heads; that would give him an advantage.

"You, Leblanc, want your lease again, I suppose, you thief," he said. 'You, Pierre, didn't get enough of a hiding that day I caught you cutting down my trees. There's another coming to you in a minute or two. Simeon, if I'd been you I'd have picked some men who could help me fight if I was afraid, instead-"

He got no further, for at that moment, taking the initiative, he sprang. His fists dashed full into Simeon's face, right and left, almost together. Simeon toppled backward; his head struck the edge of the stall behind him, and he thropped moaning to the floor and lay there. Passing him, Hilary leaped for Louis, but the agile little man eluded him and darted down the middle of the stable. Before he could quite recover himself Leblanc and Pierre sprang from behind. As Hilary swung sidewise he saw the knife in Pierre's hand. He thrust his arm up, and the blow, diverted, glanced, the knife ripping his sleeve open. Leblanc, also with a knife, was springing from the other side. Hilary sized up the situation with judgment for which he could never afterward account. Dashing his fists upward, he caught Pierre under the chin, forcing his head back; at the same time he grasped the wrist which held the knife and swung so as to interpose the outlaw's body between himself and Leblanc's blow. As Leblanc struck again Hilary turned, sheltering himself behind Pierre, one hand under his chin, the other holding back the wrist, so that Leblanc's short, stabbing strokes always fell short, being aimed around Pierre's body.

Backing into the stall adjacent to the one in which Simeon had fallen, Hilary in this manner continued to ward off Leblanc's attack. The stall like a pack of wolves, snarling, and was narrow, and the jobber was un- have the callione wagon at the end of trying to thrust at him with the knives able to get past Pierre, struggling in the parade?" Patrice-"Oh, res; that which they had drawn from their Hilary's grasp, in order to strike a is to let everybody know which to think out his next was all a question of durance. He could not hope to retain his clutch on Pierre's throat with one hand for many seconds, against the force behind the outlaw's sho and his strong, thick-set body. Sud-denly he made up his mind. He released Pierre, flinging him backward with all his might. Pierre fell agninst Leblanc, sending him staggering; the two clawed at each other and fell to the floor.

As Hilary released Pierre he caught sight of Louis' face peering across Pierre's shoulder. The fall of the two men left Louis Hilary's only immediate opponent. Hilary hesitated; in spite of his threat, spoken to Simeon, he hesitated to attack a man much his inferior in size and strength. But at that moment he saw Louis' right arm drawn back, and the gleam of the knife he held. Before the upward thrust came he stepped back, pulled the revolver from his pocket, and brought the butt crashing down on Louis' head.

"That's what I promised you!" he shouted.

The little man, instantly drenched with blood from the jagged scalp wound, staggered, let the knife fall, screamed, and fled, stumbling from side to side, with hands upraised above his head, toward the door. Louis had had enough; he had been meant to be the bait of the trap, and now he had been caught in it. Blinded by the blood that poured over his face, he blundered into one of the window embrasures, and his upraised heads brought down the lamp, which fell crashing upon the wooden floor, and fortunately went out.

Still screaming, Louis found the door and tried to push back the bolt. But before he could do so Hilary was on the spot. He pushed it back himtook up their position between Hilary self and, taking Louis by the shoulders, he pushed him with all his strength into Baptiste's shanty.

The room was empty. The word had evidently been passed about that it would be advisable for one to make oneself scarce in view of what was going on in the stable." But a group from behind. Hilary watched the four of men were gathered about the door contemptuously. They had got him at the entrance, peering in; and the there to fight and there was nothing sudden apparition of Louis, covered with blood, and Hilary behind him, of them. He half regretted having proved too strong for their discretion.

They came running forward, yelling. Hilary could have broken through them and gained the safety of his the pocket in which the revolver lay; rooms, a short distance away. Even it might be useful for intimidation, or the hazard in such a cover was less than what he had faced in the stable. He was fighting mad; he had come to We're peaceful men an' we hate trou- St. Boniface to fight, and he meant to

He heard Leblanc and Pierre running across the stable floor. All his you tonight. What you say? You are calculations, which were subconscious, were made in fractional seconds that night. So, now, he calculated that the pair would reach the door a half-second before the men in the shanty. They would emerge confident, imagin-"I haven't come here to say, but to ing him to be in flight. Hilary, waiting for that, jabbed upward viciously with his right. Leblanc howled and fell backward. knocking Pierre off his balance in turn; and before they had recovered from the surprise Hilary had stepped back into the stable and bolted the door behind him.

He saw their wonder and the dawning fear in Leblanc's face, covered with blood, and Pierre's infuriated scowi: but they came on at him again, craftily now, crouching, their knives drawn back for the stab. A revolver, even when loaded, is of little use against a knife, wielded by an expert at close quarters. The men were attacking from opposite sides, too. They were watching each movement that Hilary made. He estimated that they would spring after a very brief delay. He hazarded a second and, stooping, picked up a fragment of rotten harness which had fallen to the floor beside one of the horse-boxes. He wheeled toward Lebianc, who twisted his body to meet him; and then, as Pierre rushed in from behind, wheeled again and brought down the harness strap upon his head.

A knife stab—and what comes of it.

They are important and controlling factors in the peace plans of the American Red Cross. Each chapter being a local activity, all chapters are aware of existing conditions in their communities and are acquainted with what steps are necessary to improve the general welfare. Upon them rests the duty of offering some specialized service which may be adapted to home-town needs, toward the solution of the perplexing problems which daily confront the home folks. War. Now history is repeating itself after the great European struggie,

Returned soldiers and those with whom they come in contact will find a recognized remedy for the Itch in Hunt's Salve, commonly known as "Hunt's Itch Cure."

Many, a veteran of the late '90's will testify to its merita.

If directions are followed HUNT'S SALVE will prove a never failing cure for all forms of the Itch, and your druggist will tell you so. He sells HUNT'S SALVE under a strict guarantee to refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied user.

A Medford, Oklahoma man, among thousands who praise HUNT'S SALVE, says:

"Some people dislike to call it the Itch, but candor compels me to admit I had it badly. Your Hunt's Salve, however, cured me after many other remedies had totally failed. One box completed the cure—the first application afforded wonderful relief. My advice to those who have to scratch, is to use Hunt's Salve."

Hunt's Salve is especially compounded for the treatment of Itch, Ecsema, Ringworm, Tetter and other itching skin diseases and is sold on our guarantee by all reliable drug stores, or it will be sent direct by mail if your local druggist cannot supply. Price 75c per box.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE MASTER OF BALLANTRAE

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

born of cultured parents, Nov. 13, 1850, in Edin-burgh. From in-fancy his health was delicate. His schooling was therefore desul-tory, but he early and poems read to him by his de-voted nurse, Alison Cunningham, and so began the passion for literature which dominated his 1 'c. His father, Thomas sired Louis to follow his profession but after more than three years' study he abandoned it. He next read law to please his father, but he genuinely cared only for writing.

Perhaps no figure in literature is more loved for sheer valiance of spirit than Robert Louis Stevenson. He contended all his life against disease with high courage and dnuntless gayety. In France and California, in the Adirondacks and the South Sea Islands, he pursued the will o' the wisp, health, which always eluded him. From 1880 to his death in 1884, his wife was a source of strength and inspiration; yet exiled from friends he suffered physical his first child, Katherine. He would pain and weary disappointment. Much of his best work was written in bed. Nevertheless in 17 years he produced four volumes of essays, seven romances, ave collections of fantastic tales, two of South Sea yarns, three of poetry, ave volumes of travel and topography, one of political history, and left material for several posthumous works.
"Treasure Island" is perhaps the best loved of his romances. Stevenson said:
"If this don't fetch the kids, why, they have gone rotten since my time," again, as he wrote it: "It's awful fun, beyn' stories; you just indulge the pleasure of your heart, that's all."

THE Duries of Ballantrae were a strong family in Scotland from the days of David I. Their ups year 1745 when the foundations of this tragedy were laid.

was the master (James in baptism) with his father's love of study; but what was tact in the father changed to black dissimulation in him. Though upon he also sailed for New York, and ever in broils, invariably he left his I on the same ship, praying that she partners in mischief to pay the piper. The second son, Mr. Henry, was neither able nor bad; an out-of-doors, solid sort, who had had an active hand from a boy in the management of the estate. In the house also was Miss Alison Graeme, an orphan, comely and self-willed, heiress to a fortune and. because of my lord's necessities, pledged in marriage to the master.

Then came the uprising for Prince Charlie. Against the wishes of the other three the master elected to ride with the prince; which left Mr. Henry to take King George's side, this being a common policy of great houses in that day. So the master rode to the years before. North. Then came the word of Culloden and the master's death. After a decent time Mr. Henry to preserve the estate, married Miss Alison, although and took to drink. There has been he no more than any other doubted her love for the master's memory.

But the master was not dead. He had escaped to sea, his escape being not to his credit. At sea he was captured by a pirate ship. By the most ingenious deviltry he secured the treasure of the pirate ship as she was about to fall into the hands of a king's cruiser, and escaped with it to the swamps on the American shore. One man he took to guide him out of the swamp, and dirked him to death after they were safely clear of it. Thence ne continued his march to French Canada, although forced on the way to hide his treasure in the wilderness. This we learned from a Colonel Burke, an Irish soldier of fortune, who came in the night to plead money for the support of the master, who was then in France.

There was a letter from the master which threw Mr. Henry in a passion. "He calls me a niggardly dog!" he cried. "But if I ruin the estate I shall stuff him, the blood-sucker! And all this I foresaw when he elected himself and not me to go with Prince Charlie,"

The gap made in our accounts by the master's demands became a sore embarrassment. As steward of the estate I must needs ride to Edinburgh hat was found in Black pond, indicatand there raise new loans on hard terms to keep old ones afloat; and this held for seven years, Mr. Henry shave ing everything to the last farthing to raise more money, and yet more money; winning for himself thereby no better title than miser with the countryside as well as at home; for never a word of this business did he even tell to the old lord or Mrs. Henry, it being the devilish malice of the master to require this secrecy and the Bulletin.

loyal nature of his brother to comply. The odium attaching to Mr. Henry and the knowledge, which came to me, that the master all this time had also a pension from the Scotch fund in | glee fer? further moneys were sent abroad, and the telling did much to check a widen-ing restraint between Mr. Henry and my lady, a great joy to me.

This action sesulted in the master's return to us, a great curse to the household; for in all matters of contention, though Mr. Henry might be right, the master had the trick of setting him in the wrong. He still de-manded money, and, to satisfy him, the entail was broken and a great piece of land sold; and all the while he ceased not to lay slege to the heart of Mrs. Henry, carrying it on so deftly that I scarce knew if she was aware of it herself, she whom I doubt not still loved him.

This brings me to the night when he laid the most unbearable of insults Robert Louis on Mr. Henry. "I never knew a woman," said the master, "who did not prefer me, nor-I think-who did not continue to prefer me to you." At which Mr. Henry coldly struck him on the mouth.

> "A blow!" cried the master. "I will not take a blow from God Almighty! I must have blood for this!"

They fought beyond the shrubbery, bringing the candles for them. From the first Mr. Henry showed himself the stronger, which so surprised and confused the master that he tried foul play, but got only the length of Mr. Henry's sword through the body. He fell, apparently lifeless. Stevenson, an able

Mr. Henry shook with sobs. I led him into the house, and told the old lord and my lady; but going back to bring in the body, I found it gone. A good riddance, I thought, whether dead or alive, but the night's work threw Mr, Henry into a fever, and his mind was never again the same clear mind as of old.

The old lord died, and to my lady and Mr. Henry, now my lord, was born a boy, and to that boy my lord became a slave, which had not been so with pass by his wife as though she were a dog before the hearth to come at the boy. Without doubt this was in the nature of a judgment on my lady, she who had been so cold so many years to every mark of his tenderness; but to me it was monstrous, and I was emboldened much as I loved him, to say so; but my saying so only served to send my lord sick to bed and to earn for me from my lord the word that I was no better than an old maid.

This brings me to that morning in April 1764, that the master returned to us again, this time with an Indian servant. With his return my lord and and downs I pass over, to come to that | lady, I urging them on, took ship for New York, where my lady had property through her father. I looked forward with woe to the day he should set foot in New York; but our ship was a slow sailer, and other ships which sailed later arrived before us; so it happened that my lord had word of the master's coming and prepared for him. There was suspicion of more than one murder, it seems, to the master's hand during the earlier stay he made in America, and so now he found it a better business to leave New York and hunt in the wilderness for that treasure which he had buried so many

Every effort to find the body by dragging failed, so Scout Executive John D. Roberts made a water telescope from a keg, with a glass bottom. Holding this over the side of a boat and peering into the depths of the pond, the body of the missing nurse was finally seen and brought ashore.-Boy Scout False Claims.

WE hope there is no Mother who thinks she can treat her sick baby without calling in a Physician, or with remedies that she uses for herself.

Most Mothers know that Baby requires remedies especially prepared for babies, yet there are some who think that what is good enough for them is good enough for Baby, and it is to these Mothers we appeal to give nothing to their babies that is not specially prepared for babies or recommended by their Physician.

False claims may kill, but false claims can never restore your child.

For over thirty years Fletcher's Castoria has been aiding in the reduction of the deaths among infants as Mothers have become more and more acquainted with it. Always keep it in the house.

Children Cry For Mothers Must Use Care.

Why do we so often call your attention to imitations of Fletcher's Castoria? Because it is a baby's medicine and imitations are always dangerous, particularly imitations of a remedy for infants.

Your druggist may not keep an imitation but they are to be found on drug-store shelves. Reliable druggists think only of the welfare of their customers. The other kind only of the greater profit to be made on imitations.

Your own judgment tells you that Fletcher's Castoria having for over thirty years at great expense held up its reputation, must jealously guard it. Then, it follows that this company must use the very best of material. Must employ experts in the selection of the herba. Must retain skilled chemists in its manufacture.

Your same good judgment must tell you that these irresponsible imitators are trading on your credulity and the reputation built up by Mr. Fletcher, during all these years, for his Castoria.

To the business man, retail or wholesale; to the manufacturer; to the commission man; to the trucking company, the Ford Model T One Ton Truck makes an irresistible appeal because it has in its chassis all the merits of the original Ford car; the wonderful Ford Model T Motor, the dependable Vanadium steel chassis, and the manganese bronze worm-drive. A strongly built truck that serves satisfactorily and lasts in service. If these statements were not true, the demand for Ford Trucks wouldn't be so constantly on the increase. We will be pleased to take your order for one or more Ford Trucks, will see that you get reasonably prompt delivery, and will give you an after service that insures the constant service of the Truck. But don't wait too long. Get your order in promptly.
