STOCK IS CERTIFICATE OF DEATH OF FRIENDSHIP

Brownwood, Texas.—"Did you ever death certificate?" asked a salesman of the occupant of an adjoining chair in the Southern Hotel last Sunday. in the Southern Hotel last Sunday, "No?", he inquired, as his neighbor modded a non-committal answer. "Well, ere it is, look at it," he added, exhibiting a $100 stock certificate in an oil company.

"Did a well come in and somebody frop dead?" asked the neighbor.

"Not that you could notice it. You see a good customer of mine was organizing a company or something. Any way he wanted to sell the stock; I wanted to please him and bought it. Then the bottom fell out; no oil in a hundred miles of our lease. So this is the certificate of the death of our friendship. He hates to see me. I don't like to go in his store. Our friendship is dead and this is a certificate of its demise. I am out one hundred bucks and a customer—total loss and no salvage. My loss too, is not 'on the house'. Do you blame me for going into mourning?"

Then he lit his cigar and took a speculative draw or two; suddenly he asked, "Would you give me a War Savings Stamp for it?" His neighbor grinned, "Not on your life! But it certainly made a Christian of you. Yet why the War Savings Stamp? An oil speculator turning to War Savings Stamps is going some; what's the idea?" "Boy," said the salesman. "Got a boy at home. Got more sense than the old man. Gave him $100 on his birthday; he's got it yet, salted away, War Savings Stamps and such. I lost mine. But I'll be game and catch him yet. Wish I'd been taught 'safety first' in investments like he has. That's why I'm for the schools now good and strong, they are getting to be worth the money in this savings business slone even if they did not teach another thing in the world."

North Sea Squadron Ordered To Baltio-Germany Is Said To Aid Russians in their Onslaughter.

Paris.-A sharp ultimatum to the soviet government at Moscow has been prepared as a result of the conversations between the British and French governments.

It calls upon the bolsheviki to halt immediately their advance against Polard under penalty of breaking off all negotiations for the resumption of commercial realtions and for the establishment of a complete peace between Russia and the allied nations.

The note declares the allies will take the severest measures if the demands are unbeeded, but it does not specify whether this means military intervention or a blockade. This decision will presumably be made by the supreme council.

Italy is now being asked to subscribe to the draft of the note.

Bavaria to Block Troop Movements. London.-The Bavarian traffic council has decided to issue a proclamation to the postal and telegraph employes, calling on them to prevent the conveyance of entente troops or arms and munitions by all means, pasalyzing if necessary, the whole of the Bavarian transport system, says a wireless dispatch from Berlin.

North Sea Squadron Ordered to Baltio The Herald, the laborite organ, says that the British north sea squadron has been ordered to the Baltic sea and that instructions have been issued to reimpose the blockade against Russia.

MORS BURN AND SACK HOMES

TROOPS SENT BY LOWDEN TO QUELL RIOTERS.

Finding of Bodies of Slain Youths Lead to Outbreak of Citizens and Then Disorder.

St. Louis.-A mob of more than 3,000 is in control of West Frankfort. Ill., threatening to drive out the foreign population, following the discovery of the bodies of Amiel Calcaterera, 19 years old, and Tony Hemphel, 18 years old, who had been murdered, according to a long distance telephone message received from Cartersville, Ill. Forty persons have been injured, four seriously, in riots, it was said. The rioting started according to the message when two more suspects were arrested in connection with the murder.

Jail is Stormed.

The mob, hastily organised, stormed the jail demanding the prisoners. When this was refused, they demanded that a committee chosen from their members be allowed to talk to the prisoners. The authorities granted this demand and the prisoners, one of whom is a chauffeur, is said to have informed his questioners that he drove Calcaterera and Hempel to Royalton in company with Settino de Sensis, who is also held in connection with the murder.

The committee then withdrew from the jail and the two prisoners were hastily removed by the authorities.

Other Towns Searched. The mob is reported to have divided and started for nearby towns, where it is believed that Sensis and the other two suspects may have been

At the same time it was announced that the American railroads would ask the Canadian railway commission ers for permission to make the new rates effective on transportation from the United States to the dominion.

Decision to postpone the putting into effect of the advance in the charges, authorized by the interstate commerce commission from the dates announced, was reached after tariff experts of the carriers had informed Alfred P. Thom, general counsel for the Association of Railway Executives that it would be impossible to have the blanket schedules ready before Aug. 21. Under the orders of the commission, the new schedule must be filed five days before they become effective.

$100,000,000 a Year Accrues to U. 8 Increased revenues, officially estimated at $100,000,000 annually, will accrue to the treasury as result of the advance in transportation rates allowed the railroads. The added income for the government, officials said, would be derived from increased transportation taxes—which are paid by the public-as well as through operation of the income and excise provisions of the revenue laws.

Transportation taxes for the fiscal year ending June 30, aggregated approximately $231,000,000.

This sum was made up from the three per cent tax on freight charges amounting to $125,000,000, the eight per cent tax on passenger tickets supplying $100,000,0000 and the eight per cent tax on Pullman charges produc-

CANAL DAMAGE IS FEARED

Americans Appeal to Government For Protection from Mexicans.

Washington. - American property owners along the border between California and Mexico have appealed to the state department for protection against possible damage to the great irrigation canal which serves the Imperial valley. The canal passes through a portion of Mexico and it is feared that it may be damaged in the threatened conflict between Mexican federal forces and those of Governor Cantu of Lower California.

The situation has been laid before the Mexican government by the American embassy and Miguel Covarrubias, in charge of the Mexican foreign office has replied that the Mexico City authorrties will take all precautions to guard the canal and also to protect the lives and property of Americans along the international border.

FIVE DESTROYERS SENT TO MIAMI HARBOR TO EN-FORCE LAW

ARE GIVEN ORDERS TO ACT

Western Union Insist on Laying Cable Without the Consent of the State Depart-

Washington. - Five destroyers are patrolling the entrance to the Miami, Fla., harbor, under orders from President Wilson, to prevent, by force, if necessary, the landing of a cable the Western Union Telegraph company is having laid from Barbardos, a British possession in the West Indies.

A British cable ship, the Colonial, has been chartered by the Western Union company to land the American end of the cable which would connect with a British cable line from Barbados to South America. At the state department it was stated that the tity of wheat sold. British embassy had been asked to inform the master of the ship that such a landing would be in violation of American law. Officials explained that the vessel was British; that she when she was chartered.

Action Has Been Delayed. Work on the cable line from Barbados was begun last summer. Some time ago the Western Union company applied to the state department for an eexcutive permit to land the wire at Miami, but officials said action on it had been delayed pending the holding of the international munications congress, called to meet in Washington September 15.

Change To Be Discussed.

A British cable company, it was explained, now has a monopoly of cable rights in Brazilian waters. An American concern desires to construct a direct cable line from the United States to Brazil and it was stated that the American government desired to know before issuing the permit to the Western Union company, whether the arrangement entered into by the company with the British concern, the Western Cable company, controlling the line from Barbados to Brazil

While there is a direct cable line between the United States and the Pacific coast of South America, cable communication between this country and Brazil is possible now only by way of London, unless the messages are sent to the west coast and relayed over the land. A direct cable line to Brazil, officials said, is much to be preferred as it would afford a means of faster and probably cheaper communications.

Company Was Deflant.

There were reports that after the Western Union company filed its application for a permit the state department requested that a copy of information as to this was obtained at the department.

Full Power to Act.

The orders from the president which resulted in the destroyers being assigned to patrol the three-mile limit off Miami were issued, it was said, after reports had reached the government that the company planned to complete connection of the line. Secretary Daniels was advised of the orders upon his return from Alaska.

It was announced that the five destroyers had instructions from the president to use any means necessary to prevent the landing of the cable. Rear Admiral Decker, commandant at Key West, is in command of the destroyer force, but Secretary Daniels said he would be replaced by his senior, Rear Admiral Anderson, commandant at Charleston, S. C.

The Mackay companies had refused ords for inspection, but after a conference with the government officials a stipulation was signed admitting the jurisdiction of the commission.

It will be of interest to many Rach ers to learn that their farmer friends in Canada will do so well out of the wheat they grew on western Canada's prairies last year.

Not knowing the price at which it would be possible to market the crop, the Canadian grain board, which organization handled the whole of the crop last summer, fixed $2.15 as a minimum price for No. 1 wheat, and arranged that each farmer should be given certificates for the quantity of wheat he delivered. The amount received over and above the fixed price which was paid to the farmers when selling their wheat was to be divided pro rate at the end of the season, and the holders of these certificates will, therefore, participate in the extra price received according to the quan-

Canadian Wheat in Demand. A declaration that Canadian wheat would in all probability sell this year at between $3 and $5 per bushel, was. made recently before a conference of western supporters of the government by Dr. Robert Magill, who was one of a deputation from the Winnipeg grain exchange. Dr. Magill argued in favor of open trading from the asp. tt of world conditions. He stated that no wheat could be exported from Russia owing to internal troubles. Roumania would have absolutely none to export, India was prohibiting export, while Australia's acreage would fall from 12,000,000 to 7,000,000. The result would be that Austrada would scarcely have enough to fees herself, and there would be absolutely no wheat for Europe, except from the Argentine and North America. Dr. Magill, according to formal announcement, though it would be impossible to secure as good a price for the producer by control as by the open market. The United States masket was now open, and, according to present prospects, there would be mighty little to spare from that quarter. The net result would be that Canadian wheat would undoubtedly go to a record figure,-Advertisement.

CHAPTER XIIL The Island.

Lafe and Hilary started for the is-

Hilary, seated opposite his friend, hold him of the conversation with Louis, who, manipulating the tiller, heard nothing.

"If Louis will swear to what he informed me," he said, "it means that we can clap Brousseau into jail. Otherwise he'll never give up his schemes against me, because he has a personal grievance."

"Mr. Askew," said Lafe, "might I put a question to you without giving

"You may, Connell," "I'm only saying what everybody's maying in St. Boniface, and that is about your cutting Brousseau out with Mademoiselle Rosny."

"I guess it's true, Lafe," said Hilary. "Lafe, she's-well, you understand." "I guess I do," said Lafe. He stretched out a sinewy hand and gripped Hilary's warmly. "I wish

But now about Brousseau."

"I asked you that," said Lafe, "because there's a lot hangs on it. Now as to Louis-he wouldn't swear. If crushed rock. he did swear, he'd swear that he'd been lying as soon as Brousseau Lafe. "I thought maybe it might be alipped him a ten-dollar bill. No, sir, gold. But it ain't gold. Alluvial's gight into the trap before we spring has to be got with cyanide."

"I'm afraid I am no hand at springing traps, Lafe."

"No. But we've got to give him rope enough to hang himself. We don't want to go off at half-cock. That's plainer, ain't it? My advice is as before; lie low. You see, sir, when a man schemes and schemes and plans his crooked work, all that he's doing is to twist the rope tighter round his own neck. We've got him now, but we must get the noose tight, so that he won't wriggle out of it. And he'll twist it tight next time he wriggles. That's my idea, Mr. Askew.

"I guess you're right as usual Lafe," answered Hilary. "But I've been lying lew a thundering long time."

*No more was said upon the subject. Out in the Gulf the choppiness of the waves had changed to a steady sweep wward the island, which, lying in midetream, received and broke the full force of the daily tides. The wind aided them, and they swept through he water. Hilary watched the nearing land with interest that deepened as he began to make out the luxurious growth of conifers that covered it almost to the sea's verge.

In the center he could now make out a ridge of low hills, which seemed to ascend to a terminal cliff, having on one side a gentle slope and, on the other, a precipitous descent toward the water.

"There ought to be some fine cutting there for us some day," said Hilary. "Hello! What's that?"

"Somebody has got there before us," said Connell. A boat came into view, a little fishing sloop, much like Duval's, beached on the shore, the sails down, the bow high above high water. "That boat belongs to Jacques

Brousseau," said Louis, pointing toward it. "What's he doing on my limits, I wonder," mused Hilary.

"I guess he's making this his winter quarters. He's trapped the seigniory so long that he thinks it's his territory."

They grounded. Duval, leaping ashore, brought the bow round above the water level. Lafe and Hilary stepped out and stretched their cramped limbs.

The wind blew keenly, but, once under the shelter of the island, they found it warm autumn weather. Leaving Louis stretched out in the boat, under a tarpaulin, Lafe and Hilary started up the sloping beach toward the interior. The first thing that they noticed as peculiar, when they had passed the outer fringe of trees, was the existence of a well-defined trail.

They stopped and looked at it. "Do you suppose old Jacques made all that?" asked Lafe.

"Too wide." "And too hard, Mr. Askew. This has been stamped out this summer. And Jacques has only been here s week, at most."

"Then-?" asked Hilary. "Somebody else has been on the island all summer, or at least most of the summer. Maybe two or three of them. It looks like it." The trail had disappeared. They were now scrambling up a gulley between great rocks that towered on either side of them. At the top of the elevation appeared the point of too happy to say any more about it." the island, and the face of the great cliff, cleft into numerous fissures, some Jacques saw them at the same time and stood motionless. As Lafe and fand at one o'clock. They planned to Hilary advanced he seemed to be galspend three hours there and return on vanized into life. He rushed toward them, screaming, his face convulsed with fury.

Hilary cast his eyes about to ascer tain the cause of the old man's fury. He saw, near the cave's mouth, a large slab of granite, and a heavy hammer lying beside it.

"Let's see what he's got there," he said. "It doesn't look like traps to

The sun, now very low, shone full into the interior. It revealed a cavernous depth, whose recesses were lost in gloom, a high arch, and the remnants of many fires on the granite slabs that paved it almost as regularly as those of a city sidewalk. Somebody had camped here for a long time-possibly Jacques, though he must have burned a whole cord of wood, to judge from the charred remnants that were scattered everywhere.

"Look!" shouted Lafe, pointing. The ground was covered with fragments of some sort of ore, and a trail Clarice my wife could meet you," he of chips and dust led out of the mouth of the cave into another recess among "I hope she will, Lafe, some day, the rocks. Suddenly Lafe uttered an exclamation and, stooping down, picked up a matted handful of some fibrous, woollike material that had been stuffed into a cleft. He pulled out yet another handful, and more and more stiff wool, yet of a stony consistency—spun stone, if such a thing were possible. "Rock flax!" he exclaimed. "I seen it down Thetford way years ago, Mr. Askew. Look there! The cliff's alive with it!"

"Asbestos!" cried Hilary. "A regular asbestos quarry!" said Lafe. "There's thousands of doflars' worth here. Look at it!"

Hilary could see now that the coarse fibers ran through the side of the cliff in every direction. They were so blended with the mottled stone that he had not even noticed them. "That accounts for everything," he knew you'd hit upon this mine sooner or later, though he'd left the island off the map of the seigniory. Lord, what a fool I was not to have known!" "There's more to it than that, Lafe. I guess it's and he has ruined your life, and he right, and that they're on their way home. We beat it for ours as hard as you go back to him?" we can go-see? You ain't fit to do no more fighting anyway," he pleaded. "And I won't, no matter what happens -that's straight to you. I'll fight any man with fists if I got to, but I'm darned if I'll stand up against that scum with camp knives."

"You're quite right, Lafe," answered Hilary. "Come, let's get to the boat as quick as we can."

But as they started there rang out a woman's cry. Again came the scream; and in an instant, forgetful of their resolution, they had turned and raced back along the trail.

Not many steps, and, breaking through the trees, they saw Marie Dupont struggling in Pierre's arms, while Leblanc and Nanette stood near them, laughing.

Lafe leaped at Pierre, and his bony fist caught the outlaw beneath the chin. Pierre went down in a heap. Hilary made for Leblanc, whose expression would, under other circumstances, have been comical in its sur-

They heard a sound of feet upon the shingle behind them, and turned quickly. It was Pierre, but he was bolting for the woods. Leblanc was now quite a distance from the island, and making for the north shore upon the incoming

She raised Hilary's hand to her lips and pressed it. Beside her Nanette, sobbing wildly and wiping her wounded lip. "Oul, monsieur, and then you go to Ste. Marie to meet her and take her home. And everybody say Monsieur Askew loves her, and no doubt he has a wife in his own country."

Hilary looked at her in amazement. He noticed that Lafe was staring over the side of the boat, as if he had not heard. "Nanette, if you went home, would your father receive you?" "Ah, monsieur, do not speak of it. Perhaps he is dead. Perhaps they are all dead from grief." "Would you like to go home, Nan-

He thought of Madeleine, and breathed a prayer that their lives might run together, and that they might strive together for the right all their days.

He turned back into the boat. "Now, Marie, no word of this night's doings shall ever pass my lips," he said. "But, Marie, your life is unhappy. There is a good man in St. Boniface who cares for you. Do you think that you could learn to care for him?"

Louis Duval let down the sails and guided the vessel's prow toward the mooring ring. Hilary Nanette. "Pierre told me that if I stepped out, but before he could turn to give his hand to Marie a woman stepped forward.

It was Madeleine. She ran to him with a little cry of gladness. She raised her lips to his.

"Dear, I have been waiting since dark," she said, pressing his arm. "I only got your letter this afternoon, telling me that you had gone to the island, and I was frightened, Hilary."

"There was never any danger. Lafe was with me, and we went and came

As he spoke he noticed that the crowd at the wharf-head had drawn nearer. He heard a man shouting; there seemed to be some disturbance which he fancied they were trying to quell. Lafe stepped upon the wharf with the two girls, walking past Hilary. Madeleine turned.

Her eyes, lighting upon Marie's face, and then Nanette's, sought Hilary's in astonishment. But she asked nothing, and waited. Her hand, which had rested upon his arm, remained there. But whereas it had been a living, warm part of her, it now felt cold and heavy, and lifeless.

Then out of the crowd burst Jean Baptiste, screaming. He ran toward Hilary. A knife was flashing in his hand. His onset was so swift that it took Hilary and Madeleine completely by surprise. As the little man closed with him Hilary just managed to grasp his arm.

"I'll kill you!" panted Baptiste, and the breath whistled through his throat as if the force of his passion had constricted it to a pipe's dimension. "It is she, and you took her from her home last night. I sought for her; I was waiting and watchful; I did not sleur Askew," she answered. sleep. I swore you should die-"

He fought for freedom of the stubbing arm like a man possessed of a free, and it went up and down, the utter a word.

She watched the struggle like a woman in a dream. Twice Hilary felt the point of the knife as it drove through the air and slashed to the end of Baptiste's reach. Then the crowd closed about them.

But Baptiste fought like a devil. He hurled the lumbermen aside; three times he fought out of their grasp and made for Hilary, who, horrified and still uncertain, made no attempt to escape or strike. Each time he caught the knife hand by a miracle of luck, and all the time he fought Baptiste never ceased shouting.

"Let me get at him!" he panted. "I watched them. I waited, I did not sleep. He took her last night to the island. I swore to kill him. Let me go! Let me go!" His voice rang high above the shricks of the frightened girls and the shouts of the men. They had closed about him now, but for the fourth time he broke through and made for Hilary, the knife held low now, ready for the ripping upward stroke. Hilary grasped at his arm again and missed. The knife flashed back-and then in an instant Madeleine stood where Baptiste had been, and the blood dripped from her sleeve. And still she had not uttered a sound. They had got Baptiste down now still fighting like a wild beast. They were holding him, one man to each limb, and his body writhed and curses broke from his lips. And Madeleine stood before Hilary, quiet and calm and silent. He sprang toward her. "Madeleine!" He seized her arm and tore the sleeve away. There was a gash, long, but not deep, from which the blood was welling. He felt beside himself with mingled fury and fear. He began to bind it with his handkerchief, the icily cold arm that had been warm against his shoulder. But Madeleine drew herself away. "It is nothing," she said, and began to walk toward the head of the wharf. Her rig was waiting there, the horse held by a boy. Hilary walked by her side, speaking -he never remembered what it was he said-imploring; Madeleine said nothing. Nothing until she reached the carriage step. Drops of blood marked her progress. There she paused and looked at him. He could see her face now in the light of the boy's lantern, and it was neither scornful nor proud, but very hard-like the Seigneur's, Hilary thought afterward.

But all his thoughts were on the wound. "Madeleine, your arm!" he cried, catching at it. "It is nothing," she said once more, turning to mount the step. Then Hilary knew what he had not let himself know he knew. He caught her hand and pressed it to his lips. "Mareleine!" he cried. "You do notdo not-surely you are not going to condemn me when I-" She placed her foot on the step. "I told you nothing but your faithlessness could kill my love," she said in a whisper. And, in a lower whisper, "Good-by!" The wheels were moving before Hilary could graso the scene, bring it home to his consciousness. And afterward he remembered that he ran beside the carriage, senselessly calling to her to let him bind her arm. He must have been half way through the destroy my father's mortgage, and you village before his reason came back to him.

Hilary had sent Nanette home to St. oseph. She had promised to write to him, but, as he had expected, he had not heard from her. Baptiste had thrown up his position with Day and gone into the Ste, Marie limits to trap. Marie Dupont avoided Hilary: he had not seen her since the day of

As for/Dupont, whatever he knew, he showed no signs. And things seemed to settle into equilibrium, though Hilary was sure that a denouement was to follow. He could only wait pa-tiently for that. No action could come from him. He could not violate his pledge to Marie in order to secure himself with Madeleine.

Then came the news which stunned Hilary out of his mental apathy. Madeleine was to marry Brousseau. It was to be in three weeks at Christmas, and the banns had been read in church that Sunday morning for the first time.

What had happened was this: The Seigneur had not given his daughter any sign of remembrance of the events that had transpired immediately before his stroke, though he was in other respects normal, save for the paralysis of the left side. But as the weeks went by he grew more and more nervous and depressed, until one night he blurted out:

"Where will you take me after the estate changes hands? I cannot remain in St. Boniface, nor can I remain with you and the American. I am too old to go anywhere but to the grave." So he had remembered all the time! Madeleine put her arms about his neck. "I am not going to marry Mon-Then, without warning, the old Seigneur fell to crying and laughing, as if a tremendous load of care had thousand devils. He worked the hand been lifted from his shoulders. The land, which had meant so much to him long knife flashing and slicing into all his life, now seemed to be every-Hilary's coat. And Madeleine did not thing, and he interpreted Madeleine's answer to indicate her willingness to marry Brousseau. "Well, why not?" she thought with intense bitterness, as she listened. "Have I any other duty now, save to my father?"

She never doubted her judgment of Hilary. The story had been dinned into her ears by Brousseau since Hilary's first visit to Ste. Marie. She had heard it from tradesmen's wives, the postmistress, until their attachment was known; then had come slience and furtiveness. And she had scorned to think of its possibility until that night.

And she had given him his chance and he had said nothing She accepted the situation and sat down and penned a short, formal letter to Brousseau. He came the next day, driving furiously up to the Chateau. He thrust Robitaille out of his way and pushed into the living room, where he found Madeleine, deathly white, seated alone, waiting for him. He opened his arms to embrace her.

"Sit down, Edouard," she said with chilling apathy. "I am going to talk frankly to you. You wish to marry

"I want you for my wife," said Brousseau. "You know that. You know I don't think anything of that affair"-Madeleine winced at the word, but he did not notice it-"with Monsieur Askew. The man's a scoundrel a thief, and a libertine-"

"I do not wish to hear that, monsleur," said Madeleine peremptorily. "Diable, that's natural enough! And afford to be magnanimous, "Twe heard for a week past that you'd quarreled, but I'm not the sort of man to push in where he isn't wanted." "Edouard." said the girl quietly.

"how much are you willing to pay for Brousseau stared, "Eh? Ah, mon

Dieu, why do you talk about money? Haven't I enough?" "I am going to have an agreement in place of an indefinite understanding. If I marry you at Christmas you will, on the morning of the ceremony, will wait until his death to own the seignlory. It won't take long," she ended, with a flicker of scorn. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

THRIFT IS CHRISTIAN VIRTUE, SAYS PROMINENT DALLAS BAPTIST PASTOR

"The individual who has cultivated the habit of thrift and saving secures freedom from financial worries, the effort gives a vision of higher and better things that makes his heart receptive to the Gospel," writes Dr. George W. Truett, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas. Dr. Truett, who is now in Europe for a conference of church workers on post-war religious efforts, specifically recommends the purchase of Thrift and War Savings Stamps and Registered Treasury Savings Certificates.

Paging Herself.

While a member of a college society, was called upon one evening to act as recording secretary in the absence of the one elected to that office. After a short prayer, with which all programs were opened, I began to call the roll. When I came to my own name, which I called several times, I waited so long for the "here" or "present" response that a smile and titter ran around the hall. I then became conscious of what I was doing, and proceeded to finish the roll call in a hurry.-Chicago Tribune.

BEN HUR: A TALE OF THE CHRIST

By LEW WALLACE

Condensation by Prof. William Fernatch Harsts

Lewis Wallace, born in 1827 at ana, and perhaps that state is lecated the literary center of this country. He died dents of today in the great strug-Mexican war. He served again in the Civil War and erose to be major-again to the law; he was Governor of to Turkey from 1881 to 1885, when as a good diplomat he won the esteem of the late unlamented Abdul-Hamid and that scientifically dilutory tyrant.

He is known by his three books

"The Fair God" (1873), "Ben-Hur" (1880), and "The Prince of India" (1885). The first is a very clever reconstruction of the story of the conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards. The render feels a great sympathy with the highly developed natives who fell helpless before the superior arms of the invaders. The story, however, is by no means to be put in the nume class with "Ben-Hur." The skill, the knowledge, the reverence with which the story of Christ is told (largely through the lives of others) have made "Recthe lives of others) have made "Ben-Hur" one of the books to take a secure hold on the public, both as book and on the stage, where the famous charlot race has wen a classic place.

66 THE workmen put their hands to the cross and carried it, burden and all, to the place of planting. At a word, they dropped. the tree into the hole; and the body of the Nazarene also dropped heavily, in the world; the discovery that Mesand hung by the bleeding hands. Still no cry of pain-only the exchamation divinest of all recorded exclamations:

other objects, and standing singly out burst of delight; and all who could see to decipher it. Soon as read, the legend from side to side, and repeating it with laughter and groens:

"King of the Jews! Hail king of the Jews!'

"The sun was rising rapidly to noon; the hills bared their brown breasts lovingly to it; the more distant mountains rejoiced in the purple with which it so regally dressed them. In the city the temples, palaces, towers, pinnacles, and all points of beauty and prominence seemed to lift themselves into the unrivaled brilliance, as if they knew the pride they were giving the many who from time to time turned to look at them. Suddenly a dimness began to fill the sky and cover the earth -at first no more than a scarce perceptible fading of the day, a twilight out of time; an evening gliding in upon the splendors of noon. But it deepened, and directly drew attention; whereat the noise of the shouting and laughter fell off, and men, doubting their senses, gazed at each other curiously; then they looked to the sun again; then at the mountains, getting farther away; at the sky and the near landscape, sinking in shadow; at the hill upon which the tragedy was enacting; and from all these they gazed at each other again, and turned pale and held their peace.

"'It is only a mist or passing cloud." Simonides said soothingly to Esther, who was alarmed. 'It will brighten presently,' "Ben-Hur did not think so,

"'It is not a mist or a cloud,' he said. The spirits who live in the air-the prophets and saints—are at work in mercy to themselves and nature. I say to you, oh, Simonides, truly as God lives, he who hangs yonder is the Son of God.'

"And leaving Simonides lost in wonder at such a speech from him he went where Balthazar was kneeling nearby. and laid his hand upon the good man's shoulder.

"'Oh, wise Egyptian, hearken! Thou alone wert right-the Nazarene is indeed the Son of God.'

"Balthazar drew him down to him and replied, feebly, I saw him a child in the manger where he was first laid: it is not strange that I knew him sooner than thou; but oh that I should live to see this day! Would that I had died with my brethren! Happy Melchior! Happy Gaspar!

"'Comfort thee!' said Ben-Hur.

Doubtless they too are here.' Within the frame of the story of Christ is told the tale of Ben-Hur, beginning with the appearance of the three wise men, Balthazar, Melchior tablishment is a very estimable perand Gaspar, and ending with the son." sublime tragedy on Golgotha. From the days of the scenes at the manger until the culmination of the great story, the figure of Christ appears but once, and then for a moment, but over all that happens in the intervening years hovers the gentle spirit; thrilling as the episodes are in themselves, strongly as the characters are portrayed, they are but a preparation for what is to follow, a mere worldy setting for him who was too great for all save a few to understand at that time.

Some twenty-one years after the scenes at the manger, a young Jew. Ben-Hur, a prince of Jerusalem, rich, happy, ambitious, was standing by a parapet of his palace, watching the progress of Valerius Gratus, imperial governor of Judea, As the Roman passed beneath the wall amid the jeers and insults of the Jews the young prince leaned far out to see the new governor; a tile was displaced and, as bitter fate would have it, fell full upon the governor. The accident was not fatal; but it was an opportunity for exemplary justice, especially as the estates of the Jew were very desirable to the governor and his friend Messala, hitherto almost brother to Ben-Hur though the latter had been. The unhappy Jew was sent as a rower to the galleys, where the limit of life was at most but a year. His mother and sister were immured in a secret cell in the Tower of Antonia, where they were doomed to the fate of the lepers. The only act of kindness Ben-Hur could remember during the years that followed was on the day he was dragged to the galleys. "The hand laid kindly upon his shoulder awoke the unfortunate man, and looking up, he saw a face he never forgot-the face of a boy about his own age. shaded by locks of yellowish bright chestnut hair; a face lighted by dark blue eyes, at the time so soft, so appealing, so full of love and holy purpose, that they had all the power of command and will." That was in Nazareth. How Ben-Hur in time became a rower on the flagship of Airrus, duumvir and admiral, how the flagship was destroyed in a great sea fight, how Ben-Hur rescued the admiral, became his adopted son and heir, learned at Rome the manner of Roman war and Roman sports, returned to the East a Roman officer in the train of a consul setting forth on a great campaign against the Parthians; how he discovered that his father's old steward Simonides had succeeded in saving from confiscation the vast intangible wealth of the Hurs and had multiplied it many times, till the young Roman-Jew was the richest private citizen sala was entered for the highest stake in the great sporting event of the orient; how Ben-Hur won the affection "Father, forgive them, for they of Ilderim, the Arab shelk, who had entered his steeds of the desert for "The cross, reared now above all the great event-all this leads up to the dramatic encounter of the famous against the sky, was greeted with a charlot race. It was adopted by them and communicat- that the great scene, through the pages ed, and presently the whole mighty of Lew Wallace's novel, has become concourse was ringing the salutation as famous on our stage as it was so long ago on that of Greece. By his victory in the arena Ben-Hur exacted ancient Jewish justice on his hated adversary, who was crushed in body and impoverished in fortune, he had wagered on his success all the wealth he had stolen from his former friend. The victor almost fell prey, however, to the vampire daughter of Egypt who was rival for his love with the gentle Jewish Esther. But henceforth his thoughts were concentrated on him who was attracting all eyes. Was he Messiah or king? Ben-Hur, in his hatred of Rome, in his pride of race, dreamed only of a king of this world, who should right ancient wrongs and exalt his chosen peo-And so he threw himself with all his force, with all his wealth, with all the knowledge gained at Rome, into making secure and strong the way of the king whom he would follow. But it was for one supreme in things spiritual rather than material that the way was being made ready. And Ben-Hur's mother, rescued with her daughter from her long imprisonment by a chance change of jailers, but hopeless lepers both, saw the truth sooner than her son.

"'Oh Master, Master!" she cried as he passed upon the road, "Thou seest our need; thou canst make us clean. Have mercy upon us-mercy!"

"'Believest thou I am able to do this? he asked.

"Thou art he of whom the prophets spake-thou art the Messiah!' she replied. His eyes grew radiant, his manner confident.

"'Woman,' he said. 'great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou

And so, in the end, Ben-Hur recognized what Balthazar had known from the beginning. "Oh wise Egyptian, hearken! Thou alone were right-the Nazarene is indeed the son of God!" Dear Old Lady Had a Good Deal to Learn About the Latest Idea in Silk Stockings.

Styles may come and styles may go, but an old-fashioned mother like Bab's can't be expected to keep abreast with the latest creations. She is always looking after the welfare of the family, whether it is preparing father's choice dish or skimping her own needs so that Johnny or Bab may keep up appearances with the twentieth century younger set.

Mother recently was going over the week's washing, putting a patch here, catching a button there and seeing to it that the stockings were carefully mended. She came across a pair of stockings that Bab had purchased the week before. They were the latest thing dictated by fashion, the lisie stocking with lace designs on the sides, which very much resembles the lowly "run."

"And bless you, mother sewed up every one of them," giggled Bab to a friend, a few days later, "and they eost me $8 a pair, too."

LESSON FOR AUGUST 15

THE SINS AND SORROWS OF DAVID.

LESSON TEXT-II Sam. 12:9-10; 18:1-33. GOLDEN TEXT—Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.—Gal. 6:7. ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—II Sam

PRIMARY TOPIC-David's Grief Over JUNIOR TOPIC-David and Absalom INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC -Absalom's Selfish Life and How It

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC

1. David's Sins (12:9, 10).

1. Adultery (v. 9; cf. 11:1-4). David instead of going forth at the head of the army as was the duty of the king (11:1), sent Joab and his servants, and he himself lounged around at home in idleness, It was while in idleness that he fell a victim to his lust and committed adultery with Bathsheba, "An idle brain is the Devil's workshop." The crimes of the world are committed for the most part by idle men and women.

2. Murder (12:9; cf. 11:15-21). Uriah's wife, David tried to cover up his sin by killing Uriah. He ordered Joab to place Uriah at the forefront of the battle where he would surely be killed. When men sin they endeavor to cover up their sin by committing other sins, and usually it requires the doing of greater wickedness to cover up wrong that has been done. II. David's Sorrow (18:1-33).

1. The battle between Absalom and David (vv. 1-18). Following Absalom's revolt, David fled from Jerusalem. After counsel with Ahlthophel and Hushai, Absalom with his men went in pursuit. Absalom planned well, but made one great mistake-he left God out of the question.

Being dissuaded by the people, David foregoes his purpose of going His one special request as they went to battle was that they deal gently with Absalom. The victory of David's army was overwhelming. The interference of Providence is marked in that more died in the entanglement of the woods than by the sword. In the flight, Absalom was caught in the bough of a tree by the head, and was At a meeting of the Curry County left hanging as the mule went forth the instrument of his destruction. While thus hanging, Joab thrust him through the heart with three darts. SAYS PILES ALL GONE This awful end was deservedly met (Deut. 27:16, 20; 21:23). They disgracefully disposed of his body (vv. 17, 18). They cast it into a pit and piled stones upon it as a fitting monument of his villainy. How different from what he planned (v. 18). His one ambition was to be remembered. A heap of stones piled upon him in contempt is quite different from a tomb in the king's vale.

2. The victorious tidings announced to David (vv. 19-32). He was anxiously waiting for news from the battle-field. So anxious was he that he stationed a watchman when the walls to the stationed as wall as the stationed as watchman when the wall to the The Eighth Annual Northern Ari- | (Deut. 27:16, 20; 21:23). field. So anxious was he that he stationed a watchman upon the walls to look for some messenger to appear. His first question to the messenger shows what was uppermost in his heart. It was the welfare of his boy. 3. David mourns for Absalom (v. 33). He received the news of his rebellious son's death with much regret. The good news of the victory was entirely lost sight of through excessive grief. The sobs of his poor heart must have been awful. Perhaps it is impossible to analyze his sorrow, but most likely the following elements were present:

(f) The loss of a son. The ties of nature bind together the hearts of parents and children in such a way that separation by death is very trying; (2) the death of a son in re-Could he but have had the assurance that this course was regretted, or could he have heard a cry of forgiveness, his grief, no doubt, would have been greatly lessened; (3) he knew that his rebellious son had now gone he knew that this was but the bitter fruit of his own sin. In a sense he was the destroyer of his own child. May this example deeply impress all parents as to their responsibility! Away from this dark picture we turn to contemplate the depths of a father's love. Death effaces all faults; all wrongs are forgotten and only the memory of happy days is kept. The father is willing to die, even for a rebellious son. This illustrates God's love to us in Christ which made him willing to die for his children.

The Greatest.

The greatest man is he who chooses the right with invincible resolution; who resists the sorest temptations from within and without; who bears the beaviest burdens cheerfully; who is the calmest in storms, and whose reliance on truth, on virtue, on God. is the most unfaltering.-Channing.

"I have gained some eight or ten pounds since I commenced taking Tanlac and feel perfectly plendid in every way," said Miss Annie Peck, living at 1421 Charlotte St., Kansas City, Mo. "I just can't think of enough good things to say about Tanlac." she continued.

"My troubles began about a year ago with nervous indigestion and my stomach finally got in such bad condition that everything I ate disagreed with me. After every meal I would be perfectly miserable from gas form-ing and this gas would press up against my lungs and heart until I could hardly get my breath, I also suffered from severe headaches and became so nervous I rarely ever got a good night's sleep. Finally I became so weak and run down that I had to give up trying to do any work at all.

"My brother had gotten fine results from taking Tanlac, so I began taking it, too, and right fro mthe first I could just feel my strength coming back. I continued to improve and now am as well and hearty as anyone could wish to be and never have a sign of stomach trouble or nervousness any more. I am looking so much etter that my friends who have not seen me since I began taking Tanke hardly know me at first sight, and I am feeling so perfectly fine I just want to tell everybody about Tanlac."
