SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Graham Norcross, rail-road manager, and his secretary, Immie Dodds, are marconed at Sand Creek sid-ag with a young lady, shella Macrae, and her small cousin. Unseen, they wit-less a peculiar train holdup, in which a special car is carried off.

HAPTER II.—Norcross recognizes the stolen as John Chadwick's, financial mate, whom he was to meet at Portal. He and Dodds rescue Chadwick. Fatter offers Norcross the manager of the Pioneer Short Line, which is the hands of eastern speculators, led by Breckenridge Dunton, presiof the line. Norcross, learning that is Macrae is stopping at Portal City, pts.

CHAPTER III.—Dodds overhears conversation between Rufus Hatch and Gustave Henckel, Portal City financiers, in which they admit complicity in Chadwick kidnaping, their object being to keep. CHAPTER IV

"Heads Off, Gentlemen!"

Gosh all Friday-say! but the next few days did see a tear-up to beat the band on the old Short Line! With the printing of his appointment circular, Mr. Norcross took the offices in the headquarters building lately vacated by Mr. Shaffer, and it was something awful to see the way the heads went into the basket. One by one he called the Duntonites in; the traffic manager, the general superintendent, the roadmaster, the mastermechanic-clear on down to the roundhouse foreman and the division heads.

Some few of them were allowed to take the oath of allegiance and stay, but the place-fillers and pay-roll parasites, the cousins and the nephews and the brothers-in-law, every last man of them had to walk under the ax.

Three days later, when the whole town was talking about the new "Jack the Ripper," as they called him, Kirgan, who had been our head machinery man on the Midland construction, tumbled in in answer to a wire. Mr. Norcross slammed him into place ten minutes after he hit the town.

"Your office is across the tracks, Kirgan," he told him, "I've begun the house-cleaning over there by firing your predecessor and three or four of his pet foremen. Get in the hole and dig to the bottom. I'll give you six months in which to make good as a model superintendent of motive power.

Get busy." "That's me," said Kirgan, who knew the boss up one side and down the other. "You give me the engines, and I'll keep 'em out of the shop." And with that he went across the yard and took hold, before he had even hunted up a place to sleep in,

Mr. Van Britt, our general superintendent, was the next man to show up. He was fine; a square-built, stocky little gentleman who looked as if he'd always had the world by the ear and never meant to let go.

"Well, I'm here," he said dropping into a chair and sitting with his legs wide apart. And then, ignoring me as if I hadn't been there, "Graham, what the devil have you got against me, that you should drag me out here on the edge of nowhere and make me go to work for a living?"

The boss just grinned at him and said: "It's for the good of your soul, Upton. You've too much money. Your office is up at the end of the corridor and your chair is empty and waiting for you. Your appointment circular has already been mailed out."

Mr. Hornack was the last of the new office staff to fall in, though he didn't have nearly as far to come assome of the others. He was redheaded and wore glasses. They used to say of him on the Overland Central that he could make business grow where none ever grew before, and that's what a traffic man lives for.

Naturally, the big turn-over brought all sorts of disturbances at the sendoff. Some of the relieved cousins and aephews stayed in town and jumped in to stir up trouble for the new management. The Herald, which was the other morning paper, took up for the down-and-outs, and there wasn't anything too mean for it to say about the boss and his new appointees. Then the employees got busy and the grievance committees began to pour in. Mr. Norcross never denied himself to anybody. The office-door stood wide open and the kickers were welcomed, as you might say, with open arms. . "You men are going to get the squarest deal you have ever had, and still squarer one a little farther along, if you will only stay on the job and keep your clothes on," was the way the boss went at the trainnen's committee. "We are out to make the P. S. L. the best line for rice, and the best company to work this side of the Missouri river. at your loyalty; the loyalty of man in the service. I'll go further and say that the new management will stand if you and the other pay-roll men stand by it in good faith, or it will fall if you don't."

"You'll meet the grievance committees and talk things over with them when there's a kick coming?" said old Tom McClure, the passenger conductor who was acting as spokesman

"You Men Are Going to Get the Squarest Deal You Ever Had."

"Sure I will" every time. More than than, I'll take a leaf out of Colonel Goethal's book and keep open house here in this office every Sunday morning. Any man in the service who thinks he has a grievance may come here and state it, and if he has a case, he'll get justice."

Naturally, a few little talks like this, face to face with the men themselves, soon began to put new life into the rank and file. Mr. Norcross' old pet name of "Hell-and-repeat" had followed him down from Oregon, as it was bound to but now it be used in the sense that most raffroad men use the phrase, "The Old Man," in speaking of a big boss that they like,

There was so much crowded into these first few weeks that I've forgotten half of it. The work we did, pulling and hauling things into shape, was a fright, and my end of the job got so big that the boss had to give me help. Following out his own policy, he let me pick my man, and after I'd had a little talk with Mr. Van Britt. I picked Fred May, a young fellow who had been under Van Burgh. He was all right; a little too tonguey, perhaps, but a worker from away back, and that was what we were tooking for.

Out of this frantic hustle to get things started and moving right, anybody could have pulled a couple of conclusions that stuck up higher than any of the rest. The boss and Mr. Van Britt were steadily winning the rank and file over to something like loyalty on the one hand, and on the other, wherever we went, we found the people who were paying the freight a solid unit against us, hating us like blazes and entirely unwilling to believe that any good thing could come out of the Nazareth of the Pioneer Short Line.

As soon as we returned from our first inspection trip, the boss pulled off his coat-figuratively speaking-and rolled up his sleeves. It wasn't his way to talk much about what he was going to do: he'd jump in and do it first, and then talk about it afterward-if anybody insisted on knowing the reason why.

There were long private conferences with Mr. Ripley, the bright young lawyer Mr. Chadwick had sent us from Chicago, and with a young fellow named Juneman, an ex-newspaper man who was on the pay-rolls as "Advertising Manager," but whose real business seemed to be to keep the Short Line public fully and accurately informed of everything that most railroad companies try to keep to them-

The next innovation that came along was another young Chicago man named Billoughby, and his title on the payroll was "Special Agent." I, who was as close to the boss as anybody in our outfit, never once suspected the trie nature of Billoughby's job until the day he came in to make his final report-and Mr. Norcross let him make it without sending me out on an errand.

"Well, I think I'm ready to talk Johnson, now," was the way Billoughby began, "Red Tower is the one outfit we'll have to kill off and put out of business. Under one name or another, it is engineering every graft in this country; it is even backing the fake mining boom at Saw Horse which, by the way, this railroad com-pany is now building a branch line." Mr. Norcross turned to me:

"Jimmle, make a note to tell Mr. Van Britt to have the work stopped at once on the Saw Horse branch. and all the equipment brought in."
And then to Billoughby: "Go on.",

"The main graft, of course, is in the grain elevators, the fruit packeries, the coal and lumber yards and the stock yards and handling corrais. In these public, or quasi-public, utilities the railroad has given them in fee simple, it seems-all the yard room, switches, track facilities, and the like, Wherever local competition has tried to break in, the railroad company has given it the cold shoulder and it has been either ferced out or frozen out."

"Exactly," said the boss. "Now tell me how far you have gone in the other field."

"We are pretty well shaped up and are about ready to begin business. Juneman has done splendid work, and so has Ripley. We have succeeded, in a measure, though the opposition has been keeping up a steady bombard, ment. Hatch and his people haven't been idle. They swn or control a dozen or more prominent newspapers in the state, and, as you know, they are making an open fight on you and your management through these papers. The net result so far has been merely to keep the people stirred up and doubtful. They say that the railroad has never played fair-and I guess it hasn't, in the past."

"They Say That the Railroad Has Never Played Fair."

"Not within a thousand miles," was the boss' curt comment. "But go on with your story."

"We pulled the new deal off yesterprincipal towns along the line. Meetings of the bankers and local capitalists were held, and we had a man ateach one of them to explain our plan and to pledge the backing of the railroad. Notwithstanding all the doubt and dust that's been kicked up by the Hatch people, it went like wild-fire." "With money?" queried the boss.

"Yes; with real money. Citizens' Storage & Warehouse was launched, as you might say, on the spot, and enough capital was subscribed to make it a going concern. Of course, there were some doubters, and some few greedy ones. The greedy ones protested against the fixed dividend scheme; they didn't see why the new company shouldn't be allowed to cut a melon now and then if it should be fortunate enough to grow one."

Mr. Norcross smiled, "That is precisely what the Hatch people have been doing, all along, and it is the chief grievance of these same people neighbors. The lease condition was at that. fully explained to them, wasn't it?"

"Oh, yes; Ripley saw to that, and conles of the lease were in the exhibits. The new company is to have railroad ground to build on, and ample track facilities in perpetuity, conditioned strictly upon the limited dividend. If the dividend is increased, the leases terminate automatically." The bess drew a long breath.

"You've done well, and better than well. Billoughby," he said. "Now we are ready to fire the blast. How was the proposal to take ever the Red Tower properties at a fair valuation received?"

"There was some opposition. Lesterburg, and three of the other larger towns, want to build their own plants. But they agreed to abide by a majority vote of the stock on that point. and my wire reports this morning say that a lump-sum offer will be made for the Red Tower plants today."

Mr. Norcross sat back in his chair and blew a cloud of cigar smoke toward the ceiling.

"Hatch won't sell," he predicted. "He'll be up here before night with sure-enough knock-out. blood in his eye. I'm rather glad it has come down to the actual give and take. I don't play the waiting game very successfully, Billoughby, Keep in touch, and keep me in touch. And sooner it will be over." cross came at me on a little matter pretty face and then with all of her; that had been allowed to sleep ever and that the one big reason why he since the day, now some time back, had let Mr. Chadwick persuade him when I had given him Mrs. Shella's to stay in Portal City was the fact hint about the identity of the two that he had wanted to be near her and auto that Sunday night at Sand Creek siding, and about the talk between same two that I had overheard the following morning.

"We are going to have sharp trouble with a gentleman by the name of Hatch before very long, Jimmie," was the way he began, "You remember what you told me about that Monday morning talk between Hatch and Henckel in the Bullard lobby. Would you be willing to go into court as a witness and swear to what you heard?"

"Sure I would," I said, "All right, I may have to pull that little incident on Mr. Hatch before I get through with him. The train holdup was a criminal act, and you are the witness who can convict the pair of them. Of course, we'll leave Mrs. Macrae and the little girl entirely out of it. Nobody knows that they were there with us, and nobody need know."

I agreed to that, and this mention of Mrs. Sheila and Maisie Ann makes me remember that I've been leaving them out pretty severely for a good long while. They weren't left out in reality-not by a jugful. In spite of all the rush and hustle, the boss had found time to get acquainted with Major Basil Kendrick and had been made at home in the transplanted Kentucky mansion in the northern sub-

But to get back on the firing line. I wasn't around when Mr. Norcross had his "declaration of war" talk with Hatch. Mr. Norcross, being pretty sure be wasn't going to have that evening off, had sent me out to "Kenwood" with a note and a box of roses, and when I got back to the office about eight o'clock, Hatch was just going away. I met him on the stair.

The boss was sitting back in his big swing chair, smoking, when I broke in. He looked as if he'd been mixing it up good and plenty with Mr. Rufus Hatch-and enjoying it.

"We've got 'em going, Jimmie," he chuckled; and he said it without asking me how I had found Mrs. Shella, or how she was looking, or anything. I told him I had met Mr. Hatch on the stair going down.

"He didn't say anything to you, did he?" he asked.

"Not a word." "I had to pull that Sand Creek business on him, and I'm rather sorry," he went on. "He and his people are going to fight the new company to a finish, and he merely came up here to tell me so—and to add that I might as well resign first as last, because, in the end, he'd get my goat. When I laughed at him he got abusive. He's an ugly beggar, Jimmie."

"That's what everybody says of

"It's true. He and his crowd have plenty of money-stolen money a good deal of it—and they stand in with every political boss and gangster in the state. There is only one way to handle such a man, and that is without gloves. I told him we had the goods on him in the matter of Mr. Chadwick's kidnaping adventure. At first he said I couldn't prove it. Then he broke out cursing and let your name slip. I hadn't mentioned you at all, and so he gave himself away. He knows who you are, and he remembered that you had overheard his talk with Henckel in the hotel lobby."

I heard what he was saying, but I didn't really sense it because my head was ram jam full of a thing that was so pitiful that it had kept me swallowing hard all the way back, from Major Kendrick's. It was this way. When I had jiggled the bell out at the house it was Maisie Ann who let me in and took the box of flowers and the boss' note. We sat in the dimly lighted hall and talked for a few minutes.

One thing she told me was that Mrs. Shella had company and the name of it was Mr. Van Britt. That wasn't strictly news because I had known that Mr. Van Britt was dividing time pretty evenly with the boss in the Major Kendrick house visits. That wasn't anything to be scared up about. who now want a chance to outbid their But my chunky little girl didn't stop

"I think we can let Mr. Van Britt take care of himself," she said. "He has known Cousin Sheila for a long time, and I guess they are only just good friends. But there is something you ought to know, Jimmie-for Mr. Norcross' sake. He has been sending lots of flowers and things, and Cousin Shella has been taking them becausewell, I guess it's just because she doesn't know how not to take them."

"Go on," I said, but my mouth had suddenly grown dry.

"Such things-flowers, you knowdon't mean anything in New York, where we've been living. Men send them to their women friends just as they pass their cigar-cases around among their men friends. But I'm afraid it's different with Mr. Norcross."

"It is different," I said. Then she told me the thing that made me swell up and want to burst. "It mustn't be different, Jimmie. Cousin Sheila's married, you know." "I know she has been married," I corrected; and then she gave me the office. And this was why I couldn't get very deep into the Hatch business with Mr. Norcross when he told me what he had been obliged to do about the Sand Creek hold-up.

There wasn't much more to be said, and pretty soon I had staggered off with my load and gone back to the A. Fairly, J. B. Sledge, G. A.

If he had been like other men it wouldn't have been so hard. But I had a feeling that he had gone into this love business just as he did into vices at Mt. Zion. everything-neck or nothing-burning his bridges behind him, and having no notion of ever turning back. The boss had never been beaten. What was it going to do to him when he learned the truth about Mrs. Shella?

On top of this came the still harder knock when I saw that it was up to me to tell him. I remembered all the stories I'd ever heard about how the most cold-blooded surgeon that ever lived wouldn't trust himself to stick a knife into a member of his own famfly, and I knew now just how the surgeon felt about it.

While I was still sweating under the big load Maisie Ann had dumped upon me, the night dispatcher's boy came in with a message. It was from Mr. Chadwick, and eyes bulging out. This is what it said: "To G. Norcross, G. M.,

Right on the heels of this, and before I could get my breath, in came the boy again with another telegram. It was a hot wire from President Dunton, one of a series that he had been shooting in ever since Mr. Norcross had taken hold and begun firing the cousins and nephews.

"To G. Norcross, G. M.,

"Portal City. RUSH. "See stock quotations for today. Your policy is a failure. Am advised you are now fighting Red Tower. I had just reached for my hat and off when I heard footsteps in the outer office. When I looked up, a stocky, hard-faced man in a derby hat and a short overcoat was standing in the FOR SALE-Locust trees. Phone doorway and scowling across at me.

It was Mr. Rufus Hatch, and I had a notion that the hot end of his black eye when he came in and sat down.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Much interest is manifested in the Sunday school work. Miss Letha Anderson furnished the special music last Sunday. In the afternoon Rev. Posten preached the third of a series of sermons on "The Church We Need." These sermons are very practical as well as inspiring. He will de-liver the fourth and last of the series Sunday, April 17th, at 3:00 o'clock.

Next time, paint your barn with a paint that's made for painting barns Your barn is too valuable an investment to be insulted with a coat of cheap paint. It is an investment that should be protected with paint made especially for barns; a paint that will make your investment an asset instead of a liability.

We have never heard of a paint for barns that's anywhere near as good as Lowe Brothers Standard Barn Paint. It's made for painting barns and nothing else. That's why it has made so many friends among barn owners. Come in tomorrow and ask us about it.
