SYNOPSIS: Abducted from Baltimore on Prescott Fanning's yacht, Janet gets word to Neill, a young federal agent who loves her. He dashes to Absalom's Harbor, boards the yacht and finds, in a locked cabin, Fanning shot dead and Janet in a faint, a gun beside her. Neill hides her nearby in a disused liner, then joins Mark Bonniger, keen local investigator, to keep tabs on developments. He thinks Janet shot Fanning until he learns a man was hiding in a closet on the yacht. Then he suspects and quizzes queer little Eyster, who hated Fanning. Also in the picture are Kettering, a Baltimore lawyer down to fish, and Ira Buckless, a tough who has been trailing Neill.

Chapter 26

Following Eyster's Clue

"Fanning used to go to a fine apartment house on Charles street avenue," Eyster said. "Sometimes I seen him go in. Sometimes I picked him up coming out. I don't know who he went to see there. I got thrown out when I went in to ask. I wasn't the kind of looking guy who could go in such a house. But you could."

This sounded like a valuable lead to Neill. "What's the number of the house?" he asked.

"3420 Charles Street Avenue." Neill made a mental note of the number. He took out his pipe and blew through it. "Stopped up. Got anything to clean it with?"

"I use a nail," Eyster said, grinning. "You'll find it on the bureau."

When he got his pipe going, Neill said: "Well, I must be moving on."

"Don't go!" pleaded Eyster. "Tell me more about Fanning. Did he see you coming? Did he say anything?"

Prudence warned Neill to string him along. "Don't like to talk about it," he muttered.

A look of doubt appeared in Eyster's face. "It was you smoking Fanning wasn't it?"

"You wouldn't expect me to admit it in so many words, would you?" Neill answered grinning.

Eyster's face cleared. "No! No! You don't have to admit anything to me, fellow! You're all right! You're a grand guy!"

Neill went downstairs rubbing his lip. The theory that he had so hopefully erected on the way up was already tottering. But it had not fallen. He was far from convinced that Eyster had not shot Fanning.

He found Bonniger in the little office back of the store, engulfed in the detail of his job. Messengers were continually coming and going, reports arriving from the local search parties and by phone from the state police in other counties. Bonniger was making arrangements to have the harbor dragged for a body.

Neill's whole attitude toward the case had changed now. Satisfied that Janet was in no way implicated, he was as keen to solve the mystery as Bonniger was. Also, now he could let his real liking for Bonniger come out.

"Look, Mark," he said. "If we could find out what Fanning was up to in Baltimore, it would be a long step forward. It would lead us direct to the solution."

"Well, I'm not sure I can go as far as that with you," Bonniger said, smiling at his enthusiasm. "But at that, it's important. I have a man on the job, but he hasn't got anywhere."

"Suppose I go up to town and look into it, outside of what anybody else is doing," said Neill. "Fanning had become a kind of public figure and I ought to be able to pick up something."

"Certainly is good of you to suggest it," said Bonniger. "I hate to cut in on your vacation."

"Not at all," said Neill. "I'm interested in this."

"All right, I'll give you a police car and a constable to drive you. Get something to eat first."

The Stoop-Shouldered Man
 Neill ordered an early lunch in the hotel, and sat down to eat it in such a position that he could watch all who came and went in the lobby adjoining. It was a curiously assorted crowd—villagers, county people, newspaper men and plain jays.

Finally his search was rewarded. Through the door from outside came a great hulking figure with a head disproportionately small, and repulsive flattened features. As soon as Neill laid eyes on him he guessed that this was his man. When the milling crowd opened sufficiently for him to get a look at his feet, he saw crumbs of loose earth clinging to the big heels. Then he was sure.

The man pushed through to the desk to ask a question and afterwards turned to enter the bar on the other side where beer and soft drinks were sold. When he presented his back Neill received another shock. He had seen that back before, with shoulders so heavy they were bowed under their own weight, letting the arms hang down in front like an ape's. The stoop-shouldered man! Here was the substance of the shadow that had dogged Neill from the start.

He had not yet spotted Neill. A solitary, sullen man. He spoke to nobody and when others good-naturedly joshed his size, he made believe not to hear. He drank his beer alone. Probably playing a lone hand, Neill figured. Eyster knows him, but he is in terror of him. Certainly it must have been one or another of these two who had shot Fanning.

When he had finished eating, Neill strolled out and paused at the desk. "Wickesy," he asked "who is the big fellow at the bar—the stoop-shouldered man?"

"That's the guy you was asking about this morning, Ira Buckless is the name."

"When did he come?"

"Late Tuesday night."

"How did he get to Absalom's?"

"I couldn't tell you, mister. I just see him walk in the door."

The hotel keeper's face sharpened with curiosity. "Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothing. Thought I had seen him before somewhere."

As Neill made his way to the door, Buckless happened to turn and their eyes met. An ugly look came into the big man's face; hatred and defiance. That look said: Well you know me and I know you! What are you going to do about it? And Neill had to take it. He and Janet were in this man's power.

He paused on the porch to think things through. He was not so keen to go to Baltimore. Still, he thought, it's clear that Buckless isn't afraid of me. He's not going to run away. I'll only be gone a few hours and I may be able to bring back the proof I need. He went down the steps.

A Rich Old Lady
 At two o'clock Neill was deposited at the door of a handsome modern apartment house on Baltimore's finest street. The doorman and the elevator boy were negroes. Neill showed them the photographs of Fanning, but they shook their heads. Never had seen such a person, they said. After all, the photographs of a dead man do not convey much.

"I know he was a frequent visitor to somebody in this house," said Neill. "Picture a man six feet two in height, slim and broad shouldered, black hair and eyes, rosy skin, very fine looking. Always elegantly dressed, fond of unusual shirts and cravats."

The two negroes glanced at each other, grinning. "Miss Rayner's friend," they said.

"Who is Miss Rayner?"

"Don't you know Miss Emma Rayner, boss? Everybody know her. One of the richest women in Baltimore. She real old now, and never goes out no more." They looked at the photographs again. "That's the gentleman what come to see her all right, but he look different when he's dead."

"Well, most of us do," said Neill. "What name did he give when he came here?"

"Didn't give no name."

"Don't you have to send the names up?"

"Yes sir, boss. But the first time he come somebody brought him, and after that we was told to show him up whenever he come."

"What other gentlemen callers has Miss Rayner had recently?"

"Nobody but her lawyer, Mr. Osgood, and her agent, Mr. Barney."

Neill made a memo. "Well, show me up now," he said.

The negroes hesitated, but he faced them down. The door of Miss Rayner's apartment was opened by a neat colored maid. "Do Miss Rayner know you?" she asked.

"No."

"Taint no use then, Miss Rayner see no gentlemen callers she don't know."

"Tell her it is somebody from Mr. Prescott Fanning."

She presently returned saying: "Please to step this way, sir."

Neill was introduced to an immense living room crowded from end to end with the furnishings and gimcracks that old ladies like to gather around them. Though it was a fine June day, all the windows were closed and there was a little wood fire burning. At first he thought he was alone in the room, but presently he distinguished a tiny figure buried in a deep chair before the fire. She looked about 80, but her sunken cheeks were bravely painted and she wore an elaborately curled auburn wig.

"You come from Mr. Fanning?" she said eagerly. "I was expecting to hear from him."

Neill was considerably taken aback, because she spoke of Fanning in the present tense. "He was a friend of yours?" he stammered.

"I know him, certainly. What word have you brought me?"

This was uncanny. "How long have you known him?" asked Neill, sparring for time.

"Oh, several months," she said impatiently. "What's that got to do with it?"

"Who introduced you to him?"

Miss Rayner sat up. "Young man, I don't know you. I don't propose to be cross-examined by a stranger in my own house! Who are you and what do you want?"

IN AND ABOUT MORAN

(By Bob Taylor)

Mrs. Julia A. Anderson announces the opening of a new cafe, Moran's newest business, under her management in the Nellie T. Morrison building at Fisher and Grande streets. Workmen now are installing fixtures, and the business will commence operation Friday, October 1, Mrs. Anderson announced today.

Mrs. Anderson is experienced in this line of business, having assisted her mother, Mrs. Julia V. Brooks, in a cafe enterprise in Moran for years. The new eating place is to bear the title of "The Club Cafe," Mrs. Anderson said.

Rehearsal started Wednesday evening on "That Person from Paris," a home talent play to be presented soon under the sponsorship of the Ladies Missionary society of the First Methodist church. A competent cast reported for the first practice and promise an interesting performance of the three-act comedy to be presented early in October.

The play is to be directed by Mrs. Robt. Cannon, head of the speech department of Moran high school.

The entertainment-minded of Moran this week have gathered evenings around the platform of a traveling medicine show, occupying a lot in the business district. Remnant of a bygone day, the medicine show picturesquely carries on with its red wigged clown and banjo picking black-face. With nationally famous entertainers available at the turn of a dial, the travelling comedian must find the going rough, and audiences unenthusiastic. Only in small towns does he find a market for his wares. It is feared that soon even this slim market will go sour on the optimistic thespian, as a rising generation, grown sophisticated through daily contact with the highest of art and entertainment, turns a deaf ear to the raucous imitations of the old time travelling "doctor."

The methods of the transient master salesman are a classic in public psychology, and his typical "Sold out Doctor" deserves a prominent place in our hall of memory of the growing years. With the pitch man, and the side show barker of the checked vest, he was a master at his profession. For an enlightening discourse on his life and habits read O. Henry's "The Gentle Grafter."

Fresh north winds and the opening of school in Moran, yearly mark the close of a long summer and the rejuvenation of business and social activities in this smallish city. Three motor buses daily bring from their rural homes more than 75 students who for nine months, patronize town merchants with their generous purchases of school and stomach supplies, the latter in the form of lunches and the many sweet face smearers so dear to the palates of the school child with a few pennies to spend.

School morns, fresh from college, add pulchritude to public life, and shekels to the purses of landladies and boarding house proprietors. Lively discussions of the pig-skin sport warm the conversations of the barber shop and drug store groups, as the local team sets itself for its yearly push and pull with schoolboy elevens from neighboring towns.

Practical words for your vocabulary, from the drug store dictionary; Celibate: An unmarried person; Celibacy, single life; Sciolist (si'olist) a pretender to scholarship and great knowledge (your correspondent); Spinous, covered with sharp pointed thorns of quills.

Judges' 'Sweetheart' Uses I-E-S Student Lamp

A charming little lady is Carmen Allen, sweetheart of the West Texas County Judges' Association, who began her school studies this fall with an I-E-S student lamp to help her make a straight "A" card. Carmen's eyes are good—so good, in fact, she was surprised to learn that 20 per cent of grade school children have defective vision. "I want good sight all my life," she declared. By using proper light NOW, she has an excellent chance of retaining good sight throughout her lifetime. However, statistics show that 40 per cent of college graduates and 95 per cent of people over 60 years of age have defective vision.

Since it has been proven that the I-E-S lamp does help preserve good eyesight, the West Texas Utilities Company is urging parents to invest a few dollars in the student model as insurance against future costly treatment.

87 SPEED RECORDS BROKEN TO MAKE TIRES SAFER FOR YOU

Never Before Have Tires Been Put to Such Gruelling Torture

AT SPEEDS as high as 180 miles an hour — with the hot, coarse, abrasive salt grinding, tearing, scorching his tires — Ab Jenkins' special racer, weighing nearly three tons, pounded over the Bonneville Salt Beds last week at such terrific speed that it caused the surface to break up. Before the end of the run the track was so pitted and rough that it was almost impossible to hold the car on its course. Yet Jenkins set 87 new World, International and American speed records on Firestone Tires.

Building tires capable of establishing such records is made possible only because of patented Firestone manufacturing processes. These exclusive features enable Firestone to provide car owners with tires that are extra safe.

For the greatest protection of yourself and your family equip your car with Firestone TRIPLE-SAFE Tires. By TRIPLE-SAFE we mean —

- 1 PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING — The scientific tread design gives longer non-skid mileage and stops your car up to 25% quicker.
- 2 PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS — Firestone Tires run up to 28 degrees cooler because every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. This counteracts the internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.
- 3 PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES — Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread add strength to the tire and give extra protection against punctures.

Now is the time to make your car tire-safe for fall and winter driving. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new FIRESTONE TRIPLE-SAFE Tires—the safest tires that money can buy!

Modern Safety Deposit Service

First National Bank

IN CISCO, TEXAS
MEMBER FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

This bank has never discontinued the business of loaning money to its customers on any banking day in its history.

The only requirements that ever prevented a customer from getting a loan at this bank was the customer's inability to furnish a bankable note.

From time to time we have stressed the bank's desire to make loans, but the fact that the bank is still here and no depositors ever had to go without their money on demand on any banking day is all the justification necessary for the bank's insistence upon having a good note before making a loan.

Bring your account here and we will render you a cordial, satisfactory banking service.

Mrs. McArdle Honors Bride at Shower

Mrs. H. J. McArdle complimented Mrs. C. E. Slocum, the former Miss Eloise Rae, with a miscellaneous shower Wednesday afternoon. was presided over by Mrs. G. P. Rainbolt. The game of happiness furnished the afternoon's entertainment. Mrs. N. A. Brown winning the prize. The gifts were brought in in a little wagon decorated in pink and drawn by Gloria Jean Dixon and was presented to the honoree's mother, Mrs. Leola Rae. Mrs. Slocum has not returned from Tucson, Ariz. Refreshments were served to about 50 guests.
