constant circularization of the printed sections of Cisco and other placements of out-of-town merchants is a source of annoyance to citizens who seek to have their premises attractive and an injustice to home merchants who find the trade reaped by these tactics. Some means of curbing this practise should be adopted.

The citizen who sees his own interests in proper relation to those of the business man who contributes to Cisco's economic support, usually strives first of all to trade at home. It is a sound principle of community development that its resources be conserved, and the conservation of the all possible buying power by keeping it circulating at home is one of the essentials. The national policy of this country has always recognized this fact, and has sought to protect its interests in the home market by tariff and other forms of restrictive laws which will prevent the goods from invading domestic territory and, by selling their own manufactures and business men, thereby making the whole country dependent upon foreign industry. In a very definite way we must likewise protect our community market and resources against "dumping" from abroad if we expect our merchants to be able through prosperous business to serve our needs as we wish them served.

We need a new and practical solution of common sense in home and town building, such as we once had. The depression created an emergency and brought about some new tactics through force of circumstances, which would be fatal to our home interests if these tactics should be allowed to continue.

The welfare of our business and the general welfare of community is a matter of concern to every citizen. Let's protect and develop our own resources.

WHAT IT MEANS: The Excitement In Wall Street

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER AP Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—When as much as $25,000,000,000 is cut from the total quoted value of stocks and bonds traded in Wall Street, there must be plain reason for it—at least that seems simple common sense to the layman.

But the typical Wall Street expert, when the question of "why?" is blunted put to him, is likely to stammer, gulp, then launch into a long-winded dissertation on economics, international affairs, taxes and government regulation.

Those who have the readiest answers are inclined to lay it all, or most of it, on the doorstep of Washington, which to some Wall Streeters seems fair enough, inasmuch as Washington, for the most part, laid the 1929-32 slump at Wall Street's door.

The favorite theme in Wall Street has been that regulations of the SEC, restricting the trading activities of the oldtime professional market operators, as well as putting strings on executives of corporations, has made the market "thin," meaning that the volume of steady day-to-day trading has been curtailed; so that a selling order, which in the old days might have depressed a stock maybe a point, would depress it three or four points.

Production Slipped As against this, defenders of the SEC point out the market had quite a slump in 1929, without any SEC, and go on to say that regardless of "thin" markets, once stocks are cheap enough to attract wealthy investors as bargains, investors no doubt will hurry to buy them.

Business analysts say that the slump in the market can scarcely be said to have come out of a clear sky. Production in several lines such as steel, textiles, shoes, and activity in building, had been slipping, and finally went below where it was a year previously. This, they say, at least could be interpreted as showing a pause in the recovery trend. But why such an abrupt and drastic slump, in the space of a couple of months? The talk of a pause in business seemed to the anguished investor far too tame. Had not the volume of railway freight just reached a seven-year record? Why cancel all of the gain of the past two years in the stock market?

Sinister plots were suspected. One congressman charged a "Wall Street conspiracy." Bear raids were mentioned. (Bears are operators who sell stocks they do not have in the expectation of later buying them, for delivery, at a lower price. Despite efforts to keep tabs on bear selling, had not the bears found ways to cover their tracks, perhaps through operations by way of London and Amsterdam? The effects of "Wall Street" and foreign money in Wall Street also have received their share of conjecture.

Economists' Opinion The SEC and the Stock Exchange have undertaken investigations to show whether any sinister influences have been at work. Wall Street generally expresses confidence that the answer in the long run will be found to be "no."

Wall Street economists say there is some pretty important background to the recent market. They point out that prices rose with scarcely a notable interruption from March 1935 to March 1937—about the longest sustained rise in Wall Street history. During the latter part of 1936 and the early months of 1937, there was a good deal of the boom-time state of mind developing.

Financial and credit authorities, both in Washington and Wall Street warned against letting an excessive boom develop. Toward spring, heavy speculative purchases in London in connection with news of the British armament program developed with repercussions here. Copper touched 17 cents a pound, nearly doubling in price in a year. New warnings of excessive price increases came from Washington.

Price Trend Changes Soon prices began to slip here and there. As summer came around bumper crops were indicated, sending prices of many farm staples lower, and before long the commodity price trend was sharply downward.

Now it is well known that business men and manufacturers hurry to lay in inventories of goods and materials when prices are rising, and stand back and wait for prices to hit bottom once they start to decline. So buyers held off during the summer.

The steel mills began to finish up a big accumulation of orders as summer drew to a close, and their production schedules slackened abruptly. Cotton mills had similar experiences as the price of the raw staple fell from around 15 cents a pound early in the year to close to 8 cents this fall.

Business began to hesitate at a time when the war scares emanated from the Mediterranean and the Far East and caused a good deal of uneasiness. Observers also point out a new session of congress loomed, involving the possibility of wage and hour legislation and new taxes, injecting new problems for business.

business men, both small and large, who lay a large share of the blame for present business conditions on the measure. Designed to encourage better economic conditions by forcing corporation profits out in form of dividends as well as to increase federal revenues, the measure is proving an ill-conceived and uneconomic product of the theoretical brain trust. Not only does it penalize good management by making the building up of necessary surpluses against unprofitable periods and retirement of debts difficult, but it places a ceiling on profits which nullifies initiative.

If the law is not repealed, it should at least be amended to allow for reasonable surpluses, for debt-retirement and for other necessary and sound financial policies which successful corporations must employ if their trust to the public, to labor and to their stockholders is properly discharged.

Police Radio

THE robbery of a Cisco service station by hi-jackers last night is the first instance of such daring crime that has occurred here in several months, a record for which Cisco should be thankful. The incident calls to mind again the need for a well-integrated system of radio alarm for which local officials have long pleaded. Cost of such a system would be small and its effectiveness in preventing crime and apprehending criminals has been adequately proved by the experience of communities where it has been in use. An area of Oklahoma, notably, has used a radio system to make criminal activities in that area extremely hazardous.

THE OIL BELT is strategically situated and formed for the use of a police radio net. If the cities in this area were equipped with such a system, the hi-jacker who dared perpetrate a hold-up or any other such crime would immediately find himself in the center of an aerial web of communication respecting his outrage, with his apprehension practically a certainty. The chief efficacy of the system, however, lies in the deterring influence which it would have upon criminals. Those with a knowledge of its existence would be moved to choose other areas for their depredations, while those foolish enough to disregard it would shortly discover their error.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

A Good Man in His Particular Line By IRVIN S. COBB

THE CANADIAN railroads, breaking into new country, frequently find it difficult to get workmen just when they need them. There is usually a chance for an ambitious person out of job to pick up a few weeks of hard work at good wages. Naturally he is expected to know something about the labor in hand.

An Alabama negro, finding himself stranded at a siding in Alberta went to the station and asked for a chance to show his stuff.

"What do you know about inspecting stock?" asked the yardmaster. "De which?" murmured the darky. "Well, when a train comes through it has to be looked over in order to see if everything is O. K."

"Boss, you'll make it much better fur me if some explainin' goes wid dat remark. I ain't never had no chance to 'zamine trains at mah leisure."

"For one thing, we have a man to go alongside the car trucks and tap the axle with a hammer to see if they sound right."

"I'm gwine to apply, den," spoke up the black man, beaming hopefully. "I don't know 'bout de tappin', but I see suddenly 'quipped to he; de gen'lman listen."

A Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—One thing that can happen to a law or a constitutional amendment is to have it used for something for which it never was intended.

That is one reason for labor leaders looking doubtfully at the wage-hour bill that is held up by its sponsors as labor's special bill of rights. The bill authorizes a federal board—after due hearings and all that, of course—to fix minimum hours and minimum wages for all industries engaged in interstate commerce—the source of most employment.

Officials of both the CIO and the A. F. of L. have expressed fear that such legislation might take away from them their power, through collective bargaining, to improve labor's conditions through their own efforts.

Sponsors of the legislation scoff at such doubts. But the labor leaders and others have in mind past experiences to prove that acts of congress, like the plans of mice and men, gang aft aglee.

Take the 14th amendment. It was intended wholly to give freedom and equal rights to negroes by providing that no state should enact laws depriving any person of life, liberty or property "without due process of law."

It was under that phraseology that corporations blossomed to their present fullness, although the debate in congress indicated that no thought was given to this possibility. It was devised to protect the ex-slave. It became instead the defense of industry against restraining laws which they contended might deprive their corporate "persons" of property without "due process of law."

Here's another one. Years ago a wave of national feeling arose against the "white slave" traffic. It brought the Mann act, making it a punishable offense to transport women across state lines "for immoral purposes."

It is still successfully used for that purpose and only recently was the agency through which J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men conducted a series of raids on vice houses in eastern cities.

But it has other uses. More than one good and honest man, with nothing but high-minded sympathy in his heart, has been inveigled into helping a presumably innocent lady from say, Des Moines, Iowa, to Omaha, Neb., "where she had a home and a job." And the outcome was that the "innocent lady" set out to blackmail her victim with threat of prosecution under the Mann act.

Uses of the '21st' Some, to save their good names, have paid and paid. Others have endured the torment of a public prosecution. Trickster politicians, supported by nefarious ladies, have used it to trumpet up charges on opponents.

Still another example is found in a wording of the 21st or "repeal" amendment. In order to protect states wishing to remain dry, the amendment prohibited transportation of liquor into any state "in violation of the laws thereof."

California, certainly no advocate of dry laws because of its tremendous wine industry, was the first to find use for that section of the amendment. It enacted a law placing a high tax on beer transported there from other states, a plan to protect the home beer market for California brewers.

The supreme court held it to be a valid application of the amendment. The result, however, is to make the law as useful for protecting local liquor interests as in protecting dry states.

New Well Proves Quarter-Mile Rotan Extension

ROTAN, Oct. 27.—Quarter mile extension of the Rotan field by the first test drilled north of the discovery well in the new Fisher county area was proved Tuesday with drilling in the Snowden & McSweeney No. 1 Sybil Howard.

First free oil in the outpost was encountered with running of bailer when the test had been drilled to 3,507 feet, slightly lower on structure that at first had been checked.

An increase was found in deepening another foot, and at a depth of 3,513 feet, the hole filled 2,600 feet with oil. Further increase, the hole filling with oil, was encountered in drilling to a total depth of 3,517 feet. It did not flow.

Operators still had about ten feet of casing, with open hole from the bottom of the pipe set and cemented at 3,495 feet, and were cleaning out. Tubing was to be run sometime Wednesday and a test probably the latter part of the week. It was indicated there would be no acid treatment if commercial production is found on natural gauge.

Located in the center of a ten-acre tract in the southwest quarter of section 185-2-H&TC survey, it is one quarter mile north of the Sunray (was Southern Oil) No. 1 Robinson. First reports of the test having cored ten feet of saturated lime from 3,488 feet did not jibe with drillers' log.

On the east side of the field, the Magnolia No. 2 Ella Smith, having missed Noodle Creek production, was drilling ahead again past 3,625 feet in shale with cable tools. It will seek Howard pay zone. Location is in the north-east quarter of section 172-2-H&TC.

Next completion in the field will probably be the Sunray Oil company No. 3 Robinson, which had bottomed at 3,526 feet.

In Saturday's game at Aggie-land, Patterson again was the four-star headliner of the offensive attack. His bullet passes to Sam Boyd and Frank Huessner proved the winning tosses as the Aggies were unable to penetrate past the 50 yard stripe more than two times. Boyd again played all-American ball, but his work on the wing did not completely overshadow that of Huessner.

Admittedly in the battle to show up the great all-American star, Joe Routt, Emmett Kriel of Taylor, played an almost superhuman brand of football, although there was some question as to whether he showed up the great Routt. Routt was not to be routed. At times Kriel no doubt looked greater.

"We have a tough one this week, boys," Coach Jennings told his Golden Bruins Monday, "and we have a full week of work ahead. T. C. U. is tough—plenty tough—and you will have to scrap to beat them."

The Baylor mentor praised them for their work against the Farmers, but told them that the game in College Station must be forgotten. And forgotten it was because Saturday they think they must please ex-students with a victory over the Texas Christians and make them forget the Homecoming here two years ago when Sam Baugh twirled the Frogs to a 28-0 win.

30-Minute Radio Program to Feature Cisco Here Thursday

A 30-minute radio program over station KRBC Thursday afternoon at 1:15 o'clock will be devoted to telling West Texas about Cisco, it was announced yesterday by J. E. Spencer, secretary of the chamber of commerce who will sponsor the program.

Local speakers and talent will go on the air from Cisco's downtown section. The broadcast, made possible through the courtesy of the West Texas Utilities company, will originate in a 27-foot trailer to be on exhibit here Thursday. The trailer contains a complete broadcasting studio, modern kitchen and lounge, according to H. H. Monk, WTU district manager who arranged to turn the 30-minute period over to the chamber of commerce.

The Rev. M. H. Applewhite will be in charge of the program. There will be music by Mrs. Ben Krauskopf and Mrs. Troy Powell, followed by a 15-minute talk by Secretary Spencer on Cisco. The program probably will be concluded with musical numbers.

The trailer will arrive here Thursday morning and will be located in front of the WTU office for power and telephone connections. It is completely equipped with a model kitchen 8 by 10 feet in size. The studio is 8 by 8 feet. Approximately 100,000 persons have inspected the trailer since its introduction at the West Texas Fair in Abilene early this month.

A public address system, located on the trailer, will broadcast the radio program from the WTU office here. Large windows in the studio permit spectators to see the broadcast.

"Our company is anxious to tell the world about Cisco and all West Texas," Monk said. "This broadcasting period is being turned over to the chamber of commerce in hopes it will attract new industries and new home-builders. At the same time, the all-electric kitchen in the trailer is designed to show modern facilities now accepted as standard equipment in thousands of West Texas homes."

Mustangs Hope to Change Luck Against Steers

DALLAS, Oct. 27. (Spc)—Dropping three out of the last five games does not agree with Coach Matty Bell and his gridsters from Southern Methodist. Out of the five, only one—Arkansas—is a Southwest conference member.

Next week-end the Ponies tangle with the University of Texas Longhorns in Dallas. Coach Dana X. Bible and Coach Matty Bell have something kindred in that neither is getting his share of victories. However, the Mustang coach realizes that sentiment has no place in football and warns all concerned that the S. M. U. warriors are "out for blood."

A scrimmage between the Varsity subs and the frosh squad Monday revealed strength for the backfield. Kenneth Goodson and Dan Patterson, both on the injured list during the last few weeks, performed impressively.

Keith Ransport, 6 feet 3 inches end from Meatherford, Tex., will captain the Mustangs Saturday for the second time this season. The lone major victory garnered by the Ponies was in St. Louis, Oct. 9, against the Washington Bears. "Spot" directed the team's activities that day.

Mentor Bell sincerely hopes that Saturday's tilt will be unlike that of a week ago. The Mustangs outplayed the Hogs statistically in every respect but one: "Touchdowns Scored—." However, this latter statistic appears to be

IT'S ODD But It's Science

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor
MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 27.—Statistics proved that left-handedness has nothing to do with stuttering, and now Professor Bryng Bryngleson shows it was all just another case of figures being able to prove anything.

He substituted case histories for statistics, in a three-year study at the University of Minnesota. He found (1) three times as much two-handedness in stutterers as in non. (2) Eight times as much shifting of handedness, that is, learning to use the other hand. (3) Fifty-five per cent of non-stutterers are strictly "one-sided" in sight and hand, against 12 per cent of stutterers.

There are, his studies indicate, 50 per cent more left-handed boys than girls. There are, too, above 50 per cent more male stutterers.

The statistics, Prof. Bryngleson thinks, slipped up because they were gathered by questionnaire. Case histories gave more exact information than the questionnaires.

Legislative Group Acts on Fruit Sales

AUSTIN, Oct. 27. (P)—Purchasers of fruit were exempted from the citrus license and bonding act, but required to buy from licensed and bonded dealers in a conference committee report adopted by the Texas senate and house yesterday.

The original act exempted from these requirements those who purchased 1,000 less boxes in any one season, but made larger buyers conform with the permit and bond provision.

Wife Draws the Line At Prof's Water Line

PASADENA, Cal., Oct. 27.—Mrs. Carolyn Cook Constant didn't mind so much about some of the habits of her husband, Dr. Frank W. She also charged, in the complaint on file here Tuesday, that he forced her to live in a cold house so she would have to warm herself by housework.

The Characters

Nina, a nice girl with flaxen hair.

Honey, Nina's gay, plump, youthful mother, has brought home a new husband.

Richard, Nina's stepfather, charming, poised, dark-haired, well-tailored and Honey's junior by 10 years.

David, a young auto salesman, met Nina at a party he crashed. He has copper hair and an engaging manner.

Cordelia, Nina's closest friend.

Chapter Seven
Chasing Button

Cordelia said: "We'll talk about my party at lunch, because that vulture, Bridget, will be hovering around for bits of gossip. But afterwards, you've got to give me the real low-down on Honey and her new sizzle."

So over their melon and their stuffed eggs and broccoli, they had discussed the "Evening on Montmartre." Nina had told her more about the funny young man with the copper-colored hair, and what he had turned out to be; but later, upstairs in the library, they had gone straight for the business of the day.

"Now then, Nina, tell me all about this Richard Challenger, the Man of the Hour."

"I don't know a thing Cordelia. Not a thing, except that he's not more than 35 or 6, and frightfully good-looking."

She described him, and was surprised to notice how well she remembered every little thing about him: the way his sleek dark hair grew in points over his temples; the nice way he used his hands—lighting a cigarette—pouring drinks; the way he carried himself with an almost military stiffness . . . turning from the waist. . .

Her friend made a significant whistling sound through her lips. "I should say you knew quite a lot about him," she remarked. "Oh, but not the important things. When they began to compose the notice for the papers, I thought: 'Here's where little Nina gets some data.' . . . but you saw all there was. Born in England. Member of several good clubs in different cities. Served with the Seaforth Highlanders during the war. There he is in a nutshell."

"And a hard nut to crack, if you ask me. . . Business?"

"None that I know of."

"Um-m. What is known as 'private means,' I guess. . . Married before?"

Nina shook her head. "I don't think so. . . but I don't really know, for sure."

Playing Dog Catcher

"And now tell me about Honey. Are you happy about this?"

"Well, I may be a bit premature, but I think I caught glimpses of an entirely different person yesterday. More . . . more down to fundamentals, if you get what I mean."

Cordelia was very understanding about things.

She said: "I think I know, darling."

A few days later, as Nina was coming out of the Colony restaurant, early in the afternoon, something large and spotted dashed round the corner of 63rd street, collided with her and very nearly knocked her over.

The girl with whom she had been lunching, Betty Halliday, steadied her, and then looked perfectly dumfounded as Nina cried: "Button!" and dashed after the hound puppy.

At the sound of his name, he stopped, abruptly, and glanced over his shoulder. A long rope—it looked like part of a wash line—dangled after him, rakishly, and his brown eyes said: "Catch me if you can!" as plainly as though he had spoken.

Nina advanced on him, but he stood perfectly still in a queer U-shape . . . his hind legs facing east, his front ones, west, where he had half-turned round.

"Come here, Button!" Nina tried to sound stern, but she was laughing.

Button proceeded to crouch, with his rump high up in the air. His tail wigwagged gaily, and his long salmon-colored tongue stuck out at her. . . Insolence personified.

Every muscle in his body was taut for the leap away from her, but Button had forgotten one thing: his rope. Nine planted both her feet, firmly, on the end of it, and he was snared.

Betty Halliday caught up with them.

"Will you—kindly—tell—me what you think you are doing, Nina. Playing dog catcher?"

Nina said: "Meet Button, Betty. Button, the beagle. There's a young man that goes with this hound, and I want to see him."

But no copper head appeared. Instead, what must surely have been the smallest, blackest colored boy in the world, came dashing round the corner, with the peculiar, loose-limbed agility of his race.

"Lawsie, madam," he panted. "I sure am appreciative. I sure do express ma gratitude. I wouldn't a dast to go home without that there dawg, madam!"

Betty Halliday was trying hard not to laugh at Nina's boy friend.

"Oh, I see. You're taking him out for Mr. Day, are you?" asked Nina. She took an envelope out of her bag and scribbled a few words on it. "See that Button doesn't lose this, will you?" and she fastened it through the buckle on his collar.

She had written: "Call me up, won't you, you bum?" and signed her name.

David Is Terribly Busy

When David did call, he said that he was oh, so terribly, terribly busy, and that simply quadrillions of things had come up. . . in fact, were likely to keep cropping up for days.

"Now you're being mean," Nina chided him.

So he condescended to explain that he had been sent out west to the factory to attend a special week's class in salesmanship; and was leaving again, on a trip, the next day. When he was nice, Nina was nice too, and told him about Honey's marriage, and why she hadn't been able to see him.

David said: "Oh, did I call you before?" But he didn't fool her. "And by the way, Nina, when you were out playing girl scout to Button, why didn't you do another good deed, and buy him a decent leash?"

"I'm sorry, David, I'll send you one." Humbly. "If you'll give me your address. . ."

"I know. It's a ruse. You're pursuing me." But he gave it to her, all the same.

"N' how about coming over for that cocktail when you get back? I want to see you."

"Honestly, Nina?" He forgot his insouciance. "No foolin'?"

"No foolin', David."

"Oke, Nina. . .?"

"Yes?"

"You really couldn't see me the other day, could you? I mean, you wouldn't have married off your mother just to be rid of me, would you?"

"No, funny David. I couldn't help it."

"Oke, again, darling. Forgive a poor man for breaking down."

They said goodby, and Nina felt ever so much better about him.

Feeling there's-a-crowd, Nina decides to move away, tomorrow.

FSA Task Most Difficult of Any Farm Agency

DALLAS, Oct. 27. (Sp.)—After arranging a state-wide series of conferences between his organization and the Farm Security administration, H. H. Williamson, state director of the extension service, said that FSA has the most difficult task of any farm agency.

"The low-income farmers with whom FSA is dealing have bankrupted more Texas bankers and merchants than any other group," Williamson said. "The Extension Service realized the need for reaching this group, but had nothing to reach them with. We can give them advice and guidance, but they need first of all financial assistance."

The conferences which Williamson came here to arrange will bring farm security and extension service workers of Texas together at 12 district meetings, each meeting to cover 10 to 15 counties. "There are nine state or federal agencies serving Texas farmers," Williamson said. "We hope that FSA and extension service will be able to set a pattern of teamwork between these agencies."

C. M. Evans, regional director of the Farm Security administration, said that FSA will finance, among low-income farmers, "the sort of program which extension service has so successfully introduced among other farm groups."

Schedule of the meetings, which will be open to the public, is now being worked out. The meetings will be open to the public, and explanation will be made of the manner in which farm tenants

Legislators Adjourn Without Passing Tax Measure

Oct. 27 (AP) — Texas legislators concluded business of their session early today without providing for any new revenue.

James V. Allred, who presided over the session, asked for adjournment at 10:30 a. m. but it had been adjourned for days before the lawmakers met.

Before adjournment, the legislature passed a bill which provided for a $4,000,000 general tax increase for old age pensions.

The legislature had considered the bill for several days. Governor Allred immediately there was no possibility of another session.

"I see no reason for anything being done," he said. "I certainly will call another session until a guarantee it will do something more than the best it could."

The governor thanked a delegation from the house which told him they finished their labors and were ready to go home.

He said, "but I think the legislature did the best it could."

The conference committee sought differences on a $4,000,000 tax proposal was unable to reach an agreement because of a house instruction an old age pension liberalization amendment be included and the senate conferees' objection to any liberalization.

Many legislators had remained confident the deadlock would be broken and something salvaged from the session, which Governor James V. Allred had hoped would yield an extra $15,000,000 a year in new revenue.

Except for the old age pension issue, conferees agreed on a proposal calling for moderate increases in taxes on natural resources and public utilities, a 50 per cent boost in the corporation franchise levy and substantial raises in rates on coin-operated marble and music machines.

"As it is now," said Rep. Ross Hardin of Prairie Hill, "boys and girls have to drink liquor in order that the old folks may receive a little assistance. With the passage of this bill, school children would have to play the marble machines to support Grandma and Grandpa. Why can't we give the folks a decent dollar?"

The compromise bill called for slight raises in taxes on natural resources and public utilities, a substantial increase in the levy on coin-operated marble and vending machines and a new levy of three-fourths of one per cent on gross commissions of stock brokers, commodity exchanges and commission merchants.

The bill was much more similar to the senate proposal than to the one favored by the house. However, it did not contain the controversial senate amendment substantially clashing state department expenditures.

The bill called for the following tax increases: oil from 2 3-4 to 3 per cent of value; sulphur from $1.03 to $1.10 per long ton; natural gas, from 3 to 3 1-4 per cent of value; telephone companies, from 2 to 2 1-4 per cent of gross receipts in cities of more than 10,000 population.

Gas, light and water companies, new rates graduated from 3 to 1 1-2 per cent compared with present graduation of 7 to 1 3-8; cement, from 1 1-2 to 1 3-8 cents per hundred pounds.

The bill would have transferred from the general to the old age pension fund $1,926,000, of which $1,626,000 is needed to repay a loan it also would give the pension fund revenue from the marble and vending machine levy.

The general fund deficit would have been permitted to increase the remainder of this fiscal year, after which that fund would profit through reallocation of approximately $5,000,000 annually from the available school fund.

Of the new money, $750,000 a year would be used to match teachers' contributions from pensions, $300,000 for aid to the adult needy blind and $750,000 for helping dependent children.

The bill provided a 50 per cent raise in the tax on corporation franchises.

EL PASO, Oct. 27.—El Paso will be the host city to the several thousand representatives from the women's organizations in 3,025 Baptist churches of Texas in their 57th annual meeting to be held in Liberty Hall Nov. 8-9.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

His Version of the Case

By IRVIN S. COBB

NO MAN'S opinion is entirely worthless. Even a clock that won't run is right twice a day. Lawyers are paid to give opinions, and this story seems to indicate that some clocks are more reliable than some lawyers, even if the clock won't run.

The district leader called up a lawyer who was a party man and therefore one who could be called upon to use influence in a court where the going was tough. He was told that one Marty O'Brien was in a sad scrape and must be liberated at once to keep peace in the district. To his surprise when he arrived at the court he found that O'Brien had been indicted, convicted and sentenced, in fact he had been in jail for two days of a ninety day sentence.

Of he rushed to the jail and got in touch with O'Brien at once. "What was the offense?" asked the lawyer. "That's what puzzles me," said O'Brien, "all I did was to call a man a name on the street." "And that's what you were sentenced for?" "Sure thing, that's what they got me for." "Aw hell," said the lawyer, "they can't put you in jail for that."

Cisco

The three Scout troops of Cisco, who have decided to battle it out in the way of football contests to see who will rule the football roost among the scouts of the city, were well on their way to a decision Oct. 23 when the scouts of troop No. 49 showed the boys from No. 101 how the man's game of football is played. Troop No. 101 had ascended to supremacy the week before by edging out the troop No. 4 gridders by 20-19 count. This gave the forty-niners the right to challenge the winners and as a result of the win Saturday, they were far ahead of their two rivals, for the time being at least. Another game is planned to be staged next week.

Patrol leaders of troop No. 36 met Monday night, October 25, to make plans for the fall and winter program. Tuesday night, a Halloween program was carried out at regular troop meeting.

A handicraft project is being worked on by these scouts. They are making silhouettes depicting camp life, Indian Lore and other phases of scouting activity. These are to be used in decorating the new T. room.

A nautical party was given sea scouts of the SSS Texan, Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell B. Jones. Those present entered the living room over the ship's gangway, and were piped over the side in truly seaman like manner. The room was festooned with signal and other flags of the ship as well as a portion of the mainmast with the ship's bell and red and green running lights. Moving pictures of the Ft. Worth regatta and the national jamboree at Washington were shown by Bor'n J. R. Nix. A short bridge of honor was held during which Sea Scout Nix, Harold Wohlford, and Tony Kelly re-

Stamford Gives Its Side of WTCC Removal Issue

ABILENE, Oct. 27 (Spc)—Directors of the West Texas chamber of commerce yesterday received their ballots in the referendum being conducted to divulge the directorate's stand on removal of chamber of commerce headquarters from Stamford to Abilene. In the same mail came a memorandum closely typed three page letter setting forth the "true status of the situation" to directors and local chambers of commerce from the Stamford C. of C.

The voting will end Oct. 30. District directors conducting the canvass are to report to President Milburn McCarty of Eastland on or before Nov. 2.

Two of Abilene's directors indicated yesterday that they would vote "yes" in approval of the WTCC board's action to locate the headquarters here. J. C. Hunter and Malcom Meek said that they believed it would be for the good of the organization to locate in Abilene.

Price Campbell, the third director, said that since "the West Texas chamber of commerce will mean so much less to Abilene than Abilene will mean to the West Texas chamber of commerce, I believe the decision should be left to those on the outside."

In their letter to the directors, received advancement in rank. Charles Miller and Jack Robertson were welcomed as new members of the organization.

Brownwood

Sea scouts of troop No. 2 had an unexpected pleasure at the last meeting when one of the scouts brought as a visitor Louis B. Sink on furlough from the USS Mississippi, stationed at San Pedro, Cal. C. B. McCoullough, skipper of the patrol, was formerly a United States sailor and scouts enjoyed hearing the two men talk of "old times."

This week sees the close of the contest between the Ram and Mustang patrols of troop No. 2. The winners will eat chili Friday night at the expense of the losers. —Troop reporter.

Let's Talk About Pictures

PICTURES "tell the story" in a manner unapproached by any other methods. But, first, let us ask you: How do you like the photo engraved pictures and other illustrations presented daily in the columns of the Cisco Daily Press? Don't you think they are just dandy? Oh, yes; The Daily Press operates its own photo engraving plant. This department was installed a few weeks ago and affords Cisco a regular metropolitan service in modern journalism. The Daily Press is one of the few small city daily papers, in towns of Cisco's size in America that maintains an engraving department of its own.

Now, what was the incentive prompting the management of the Daily Press to establish this splendid new feature? That incentive was the same aspiring urge that has prompted the promoters and builders of the Daily Press to give its patrons the best and newest home-owned and home operated, small city daily paper in America. Cisco has a glorious past, Cisco has a brilliant present. Cisco has promise of a wonderful future.

THE DAILY PRESS is proud to be a part of this master work shop. With every resource at command, every facility it may control, it comes to the great tasks with clean hands and warm heart, to take its place in the scheme of things, and "carry on" in achieving the highest ideals in its chosen field.

THE DAILY PRESS Engraving Department is improving day by day. It will continue to improve and expand. The management and every department of the Daily Press organization are ever keenly alert and eager to do anything that will enhance its service.
