BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus Christ our Lord.—2 Peter, 1, 2.

Peace! Say thy prayers, and go to sleep
Till some time one my soul shall break,
And deep shall answer unto deep,
When He crieth, "Awake!"
—JEAN INGELOW.

"The angels," said St. Gregory the Great, "carry their paradise with them wherever they are sent by God, hence never cease to be united to Him.
This is the secret of lasting peace.—Madame Swetchine.

Mighty Long Odds for Texas People to Take

IT is an unfortunate fact that more public officials are elected on emotion than reason.
We are all guilty of the characteristic which makes this so. We are all jealous of our opinions. The result is that in the heat of the campaigns which develop the most of us are defending our opinions rather than seeking the truth. Opposition to the candidate upon whom we have placed our choice, particularly opposition of a vehement type,
draws fire and the resulting campaign is taken off the plane of an intelligent consideration of the respect merits of the candidates for the job they seek to do and acquires the complexion of a hotly contested football game. This is bad. The same people who allow their emotions to run away from them in a political campaign would never permit themselves to be taken off balance if they were hiring someone to manage a business or a farm they owned. They wouldn't think of allowing their sentiments to choose a person to buy a bill of groceries for them or trade a horse or even drive their automobile. They would want to know such a person pretty thoroughly and be convinced of his ability to do those things.

IN the field of politics, however, most of us throw away all the common sense we have and make it a pastime. We forget, or neglect, entirely the fact that the person elected to office will have placed in this trust, subject to his talents, his experience and his judgment, the most valuable property that we have—the property of our government.
It is a property whose wise and efficient administration determines to the largest extent the personal liberties, the safety and the prosperity of each of us.

THE other day we wrote an editorial setting out in rather vigorous terms our opposition to Mr. W. Lee O'Daniel. Perhaps we were guilty of some of that vehemence above criticized. We apologize for the vehement—not for the stand. We are still opposed to Mr. W. Lee O'Daniel. We are not opposed to him because he came from Ohio, or from any other state. We are not opposed to him because he is a flour salesman. That is a good and honorable business.
We are not opposed to him because he is a radio artist. That is also a good and honorable business.

WE are opposed to him for two reasons:

WE do not think that he is qualified by knowledge of government and experience in public affairs and dealings with those institutions and people who make up the complex and extremely serious business of Texas government to efficiently administer the duties of the office of governor. His platform, such as it is, reflects these facts. We believe he would be lost in the governor's office, not because he is not an intelligent, able business man and a likeable fellow. He is.

But because he has no training or experience in government. No matter how capable a man or woman may be that person cannot make a success of a business without training therein. No farmer would think of turning over the management of his farm to an airplane pilot simply because the airplane pilot can do thrilling stunts with his plane. He would want to know what the pilot knows about running a farm. Training in any business is a matter of years. It is not acquired in a few weeks. And our business of government is becoming such a vast and complex institution that it demands the very best of talent and experience. Mr. O'Daniel as good and able a man in his line as he is,
is not qualified for such an important job.

WE are opposed to him on a second count because by his own acknowledgement he started his campaign from a joke. We think that if he had been sincere in his desire to serve the people of Texas as their governor,
rather than an opportunist seeking publicity for himself and his business, he would have planned his campaign long ago, given long and serious study to the issues, constructed a solid platform of principles designed to meet these issues, and carried his campaign to the people on these issues and platform rather than on the appeal of his magnetic personality as an entertainer.

ADMITTEDLY, W. Lee O'Daniel may fool
us. He may fool us as badly as this lad Corrigan fooled the experts when he flew his rickety airplane across the Atlantic by "mistake." If he does we shall take back everything we said about him, and praise him to the skies. God knows, Texas needs a good governor, an able governor, a statesmanlike governor. But like the Corrigan flight, the chances with O'Daniel are a hundred to one.
And that is an awful long chance for the people of Texas to take.

The Glamor Girls Don't Need to Worry Any More

EVERYBODY ought to feel a lot better now.
Things are all cleared up about glamor girls and gray matter. It seems people have been drawing the wrong conclusions. You have it now on the word of two men of science that being beautiful hasn't anything at all to do with the liveliness of the processes that go on inside the think-tank.

The two daring investigators interviewed 600 plain and fancy girl students at the University of California, and came up with the following findings: that the beautiful ones weren't as apt to cop good grades as their less fetching sisters, BUT that the reason wasn't dumbness, but popularity. The plain girls had plenty of time to concentrate on their studies; the beautiful girls were forced to do their studying on the fly, between sessions of attending to more important matters, such as dates, dances, drives in the country.

So, all you beautiful girls, you can take a new lease on life now. No more of that anguished worry about the quality of your mental processes; no more of those long nights of crying into your pillow.

And, fellows, you won't have to duck behind a pillar when you see a beautiful girl coming now. You can go right ahead and date her and it'll be all right. You won't have to feel embarrassed at all.

DID you read about it? The exchange of speeches when Russia's new ambassador to Germany presented his credentials to Hitler was utterly devoid of the customary expressions of burning affection and mutual devotion. There was almost a touch of chill in the air. The whole thing was completely lacking in sentimentality. The two didn't even kiss.

Things are coming to a pretty pass. Before you know it these modern diplomats won't even be bothering with touching gloves
first; they won't even be waiting for the bell.

The two psychologists who lived together in a cave for 33 days to make tests came out with the announcement they couldn't agree on their findings. It doesn't take that much living together for a lot of people to find they can't agree on anything.

Firebricks are now being made out of old newspapers. The left-wing sheets aren't any good; too inflammatory.

A ball player who spent most of his career moving from club to club recently went into the theater business. He probably felt he knew all about moving pitchers.

According to late reports, gunny-sack stock is going up. Get your new suit now before it's too late.

BRUCE BARTON URGES REPUBLICANS TO COPY ROOSEVELT "MAGIC"

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

OLD LYME, Conn., July 20.—
This little town of 1200 people belongs in a novel, but I am not the man to put it there. To do that properly your grandfather would have had to come from here. For it is an old town, with old trees,
"trees that remember your grandfather's name." It has a manner and a way of thinking all its own,
and while one might really come to know it from constant association after a long time, you would never get it from asking hurried questions or from reading books,
not if you read them a hundred years.

From where I am writing this,
which is on the patio of Garden-side, part of Boxwood Manor, you see people strolling the quiet paths. Others are on their way to the golf course, a mile or so away.
Still others are hurrying off to the beach, where they are sure of a fine swim and where they hope for one of those healthy suntans. It's a funny thing about tans. Some people brown like Aztecs, but I only succeed in becoming red as a parboiled lobster.
And then I peel.

This Boxwood Manor is an old resort that sprawls and rambles over acres of ground. Its vast flower gardens and vegetable gardens are famous, and Sam, its chef, has become an important personage to those who prefer their steaks just so, and their lobster dinners with just the right amount of "ump!"

A block or so down the street
is a two story house, painted white with green shutters, which is owned by Mrs. Bertha Dougherty.
It was built in 1710. One hundred and four years later, that is, in 1814, its owners gave it away,
"because it is so old it isn't any good anymore." Now, 124 years later, it is one of the loveliest examples of early Connecticut architecture found anywhere. There is a secret hideaway in it used as one of the stations along the "underground" railway for escaping slaves during the Civil war. Its beams are hand-hewn from the trunks of oaks. It is built with home-made nails, and its rafters
are pegged together with stout wooden pins.

Years ago they moved this house
from its original site, and to accomplish this they had to wait until winter, and put it on log-rollers, and have oxen drag it over the ice. They dragged it for miles, and then the ice went out, and the oxen had to hury away to drag the felled lumber out of the forests. So the house was just there in the center of the road for a year, until the ice came again, with the family living in it. And when the winter grew so severe that the oxen couldn't work in the forest any longer they came back and completed the task of transporting the house.

How they did this no one really quite knows, for moving a house with a chimney intact is still a problem for modern en-

Coffin 5 Ft. Wide For 747-Pound Man

WASHINGTON, July 20 (AP)— Johnny Webb, 747-pound professional fat man, died Tuesday in his quarters at a carnival here.

Physicians said death was due to disorders arising from his excessive weight.

Webb, who was 32, had traveled with circuses and carnivals since the age of 3, when he weighed 150 pounds. He was a native of Altoona, Pa.

His great girth necessitated construction of a special coffin, five feet wide.

Brooks to Bring Pictorial Float Here Thursday

Pierce Brooks, candidate for lieutenant governor, traveling in his specially equipped sound truck,
to which is attached an elaborate float depicting "A business man Lieutenant Governor driving driving the politicians" from the capitol building, will make a brief address here Thursday, July 21 at 2
p. m.

Brooks' panoramic float is a beautiful piece of artistry by one of the most famous scenic artists in the state. "After speaking to the people from every part of our state, I decided to portray their thoughts on to this beautiful float.
I want the people to know that I am glad they have decided that now is the time to rid the state of the professional politicians, and place businessmen in office who,
through years of experience, know the needs of the people." This display has attracted wide attention in every locality where he has spoken.

Brooks is supporting the full payment of the state's social security obligations, and in his platform informs the voters that this can be done without the levying of additional taxes. He offers a plan to save $10,000,000 in operation of the state government without impairing the usefulness of any department. He further favors the abolition of the liquor board, visiting control in local authorities and saving a million dollars. He would abolish the Old Age Assistance commission, save another million, and place this power in the county judges, with warrants coming from the state comptroller.

Another outstanding feature he advocates is the abolishment of the auto license law. In its stead
he would substitute a registration fee and retain a driver's license law. He points out that the highway department is well ahead with its building program, has a large reservoir, and this step would not hamper the proper construction and maintenance of highways. At the same time, he asserts it would relieve the farmers and laborers and small business men of a useless tax burden. He opposes tampering with the constitution, creating a unicameral legislature. He fears this would more easily fall under the control of special interests.

Corrigan Won Far Early---in Baby Show

GALVESTON, July 20 (AP)— Douglas G. Corrigan, who from New York to Ireland plane that had to be tied to in places with bailing wire tinguished himself at a very age, it was discovered here
day.

In 1908, when he was more than a year old, he prize in a Galveston baby
as the handsomest boy in group. The prize, according to a newspaper report of the a silver bib holder.

He was born here Jan. 22,
and the name given on his registration was Clyde G. Corrigan.

The charming

Mrs. Maitland seemed to have a... number of friends who were pa-... tients these days.

Something intimately possessive... in the way she rested a hand on... Bob's sleeve and laughed up into... his face surprised Tran into a sud-... den unreasonable fury of resent-... ment.

She reminded herself with a... shrug, "Well, I could have had him... if I'd liked, couldn't I? I've got... what I did want, haven't I?"

But just then Mrs. Maitland... turned and called over her shoul-... der with the exaggerated gracious-... ness of one who makes a rite of... being always kind to inferiors,

"Oh, nurse—won't you have them... call my car as you pass the office?... I'm in rather a hurry."

"So sorry, but I'm not going... that way," Tran answered with... touch of tolerant amusement to... point the difference between a... busy professional woman and a... mere social butterfly, "and I'm in... rather a hurry, myself. Nurses, you... know, are slaves to the clock."

Young Dr. Benchley glanced... swiftly from one to the other with... a manner at first startled; then, as... his eyes came to rest on Tran, faintly amused.

Congratulating himself on his... happy escape, Tran thought, Well, he's not the only one.

The catastrophe came shortly... after the operation was over. Tow-... ward the end, a violent wind and... electrical storm had blown up.

Even the serenely beautiful Miss... Miller, who was handling the... sutures, glanced up apprehensivel-... y once or twice when small ob-... jects hurtled by the windows or... static crackled in the hushed room... with each blinding flash of light-... ning.

When it was over, and the pa-... tient had been wheeled away, only... Dr. Sargent, Miss Miller, and Tran... remained—Miss Miller because... Dr. Sargent had detained her;... Tran, because there were still... things she had to do.

Moving about between the in-... strument table and the service... room, Tran heard Miss Miller say, "Congratulations, Doctor. No one... but you could have done that. He'll live, don't you think?"

She heard Top Sarge reply a... little wearily, "And what, in God's... name, has the poor devil to live... for? This is the kind of case... that makes a surgeon feel like a... criminal."

"But the operation was success-... ful."

"The operation? . . . Is that all... you ever think of, Katherine? After all, patients are human be-... ings, you know."

Tran didn't mean to listen, but... they seemed to have forgotten her. They were standing together... by a window, against a stormy... background of wind-swayed trees... and dashing rain—standing with... the look of two who instinctively... drew together, yet in the final... resolution were left always apart.

Miss Miller's low, even voice... said something else that Tran did... not catch, and Dr. Sargent an-... swered almost bitterly, "Yes, and... even surgeons are sometimes hu-... man beings, Katherine. . . . You... wouldn't like that, would you? You... like flesh and blood machines, always... tuned to the highest effi-... ciency. I often wonder—"

It was then that the rending... crash came. A splintered bulk of... tree trunk and wet leaves hurtled... through the heavy window pane, and... shattered glass fell in every... direction.

Miss Miller cried out in a voice... not her own, "Stephen—your arm!"

Dr. Sargent just stood, his left... hand clasped above his right el-... bow, while blood spurted from a... deep cut below.

After that first shocked outcry, Miss... Miller went into action with her usual swift, sure poise, her... voice low and even in command, her... face a smooth mask of quiet, self-... assured competence, her slim... hands working faultlessly as she... applied a tourniquet and dis-... patched Tran to summon a doctor.

Meantime, Stephen Sargent sat... with a face like granite, his eyes... on the fingers of that right hand... which had performed so many... daring miracles—fingers that now... hung lax and helpless, and would... not move, no matter how hard he... tried to flex them.

When Miss Miller said in her... clear, even voice, "As soon as the... shock wears off, the nerve will... come to life," he only lifted bleak... eyes and said with bitter amuse-... ment, "Your bedside technique is... as perfect as ever, Miss Miller."

Just then Dr. Benchley hurried... in with a fresh nurse; and Miss... Miller turned and walked with her... erect, light step out of the room. It... was a moment before Tran fol-... lowed.

When she did go into the serv-... ice room beyond, Katherine Mil-... ler, "the icicle," stood, leaning... against a cupboard door, her face... buried against her bent arm, her... body writhed with sobs.

"His arm!" she was moaning.

"Oh, no! I couldn't bear that!... In another year he would... have been famous. People would... have been coming to Saint Vin-... cent's from all over the country—"

"Famous! Saint Vincent's! . . . You... can't bear it?" Tran snapped... before she could remember to bite... her cheeks, "And what about... him? If he can't operate any more, it... will kill him—or worse. . . . Why... don't you try thinking about... him for a change?"

Ernest Thompson makes no claim to being anything other than what he is—a rugged, red-headed West Texan who has served his state and country with honor in time of war and in time of peace. Ernest Thompson does not pretend to be an entertainer, a magician, a story-teller or a musician. He springs from a school of Texas Democrats who believed that a public office is a sacred trust and that there is no place for levity and horseplay in the governor's chair.

Ernest Thompson is running for governor on a sane, common-sense platform backed by nine years of exceptional public service as mayor of Amarillo and state railroad commissioner. Those who have watched his career say of him:

Most of Relief Cash Supplied By Uncle Sam

EDITOR'S NOTE: Congress has just voted another billion odd dollars for unemployment relief. Since it costs most, relief is America's most pressing problem of government. This article, the second of three, tells what the costs are and what kind of a cut the taxpayers and the unemployed are getting for the money.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON, July 20.—To a destitute family, a relief check may be manna from heaven—or it may represent a life without hope.

To a politician, the relief check may be a perplexing problem in government—or it may provide visions of votes.

Those things are debatable. But there is no question that to the treasuries of the United States and its subdivisions, the relief check is a pain in the neck.

For the relief check is more than the public budgets can chew. It is red ink on the public books—red ink that's going to stay on the books for a long time to come. Costs $4,000 A Minute

In seven years, relief of the unemployed has cost at least thirteen and one-half billion dollars. First cities, counties, and states started spending. Then in 1932 Uncle Sam jumped in. Since then the federal government has far out-distanced the states and cities—forking over ten billions, while the states have chipped in three and a half billions.

Thirteen and a half billions is a lot of money. In the kind of money anybody can count, relief is costing nearly $4,000 a minute. And the rate of spending is going up.

That $4,000 a minute includes some forms of so-called permanent relief—such as CCC, farm security payments, old age pensions and unemployment insurance.

"On Relief," With Variations
It does NOT count federal pump priming. Throw that in, and the cost of relief since 1931 approaches the astronomical sum of 20 billions of dollars.

Relief, as such, costs big money because each one of the millions requiring relief cannot be dismissed with a handout of a dollar or two a month. At the minimum, he's got to have enough, or what passes for enough to eat.

Relief people do not receive equal treatment. They receive checks, cash, or groceries and rent in varying amounts, depending on the type of relief they live in, and the county and state they live in, and the standard of living on which a given kind of relief is based.

First, let's look at federal relief pay—the aristocratic pay in relief society. It is wages received for work especially designed for a destitute citizen can feel he has a job, and say he is "working for the government." Just now there are about 2,600,000 of these people in the United States, or about half the registered relief cases. These are the ones the WPA has chosen as "employables," that is, persons who can do a regular day's work at their trade or profession.

Its Uncle Sam Who Pays
These federal relief workers receive an average of $33 a month. It costs the taxpayers $82 a month to give each one of these workers a job. Here's where the money goes:

Wages of WPA workers	$53.00
Material and equipment	22.20
Special labor hired locally	3.70
Administrative cost	2.20
Supervision of work	.80
Total	$82.00

The administrative cost is the money it costs to see that everybody gets his check, that projects are approved, etc., including generally the cost of managing the business. The special labor item is the labor cost of a WPA project assumed by the city or state sponsoring the project.

To show for this, the taxpayer has according to WPA director Harry Hopkins, "a vast increment of wealth and well-being." He lists page after page of road work, school buildings, swimming pools, and lighter work, such as sewing, tourist guide books, plays by unemployed actors, and the like.

While the federal government has carried out aggressively its vast work program, the cities, counties, and states throughout the country have NOT spread their dollars so freely. Local governments are the ones that count and sort out the unemployed, and offer the lists to the federal government.

Uncle Sam takes the so-called "employables" and leaves the rest to local "direct relief" or general

HELSINGFORS, July 20 (AP)—The 1940 Olympic games, relinquished by Japan last week, were awarded officially to Finland Tuesday. Helsingfors was named host city.

The invitation was issued by Count Henri de Baillet-Latour of Belgium, president of the international committee, after he received an official notification from the Japanese ambassador at Brussels of Japan's decision not to stage the games.

The Finnish government has agreed to finance the games. Work has started on plans for a stadium while the deputy of Helsingfors has suggested ocean liners be brought into port and used as floating hotels as a solution of the housing problem.

Kuopio, in the middle of Finland, has offered to arrange for the winter games.

RE-ELECT C. V. TERRELL RAILROAD COMMISSIONER

ABLE HONEST EXPERIENCED

C. V. Terrell's 14 years on the railroad commission have brought a new importance to that office. Writer of the first proration law, Terrell's conservation policies on oil have saved the state schools millions of dollars, have ended wild "boom" days and brought instead beneficial, settled prosperity. Judge Terrell as chairman runs the railroad commission as the late great Gov. Jim Hogg wanted it run when he fought for its creation --- he runs it for all Texans, not any special group or clique. He regulates oil, gas utilities, railroads, pipe lines, motor transportation agencies as much for the general public and the workmen whose labor make those industries possible as for the men who control the companies.

6 Counties Receive Loans

AS, July 20.—Fifty-six counties in Texas and 27 in Oklahoma have been designated in the first year of the land purchase under the federal act during the fiscal year, it was announced by C. M. Evans, regional director of farm security administration.

Twenty-one Texas counties and 10 in Oklahoma were designated in which the loan program already begun in the year, and 35 new Texas and 17 Oklahoma counties designated in which no loans have yet been made. The counties were:

Atascosa, Bell, Cameron, Coleman, Coryell, Ellis, Fort Bend, Gonzales, Harrison, Hill, Hopkins, Kaufman, Liberal, Milam, Mitchell, Pecos, Panola, Polk, Red River, Smith, Tarrant, Taylor, Travis, Waller, Washington, Wilbarger, Young.

Old Texas counties designated were: Baylor, Bexar, Bowie, Dallas, DeWitt, Falls, Fayette, Haskell, Hidalgo, Houston, Hunt, Johnson, Lamar, Navarro, Nueces, Reeves, San Augustine, Tom Green, Van Zandt, Wharton, and Williamson.

New counties designated in Oklahoma were: Bryan, Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, Garfield, Grady, Haskell, Hughes, Johnston, Kiowa, Logan, Osage, Pittsburg, Pottawatomie, Rogers, Sequoyah, and Woods.

All Oklahoma counties in which loans were made last year will receive additional loans this year except Cleveland where local oil developments made it impossible to buy land at its true agricultural value, in the opinion of the state committee. The ten old counties re-designated are: Major, Washita, Caddo, Lincoln, Okfuskee, Okmulgee, Mayes, LeFlore, McCurtain, and Atoka.

A total of $2,118,147 has been allocated to Texas and $1,033,830 to Oklahoma, Evans said, but no announcement was made as to the amount which will be available in each county. It is estimated that 380 farms in Texas and 181 in Oklahoma will be bought with this allocation. Counties were selected upon a basis of tenant population availability of good farms, and territorial location. In case satisfactory prices are not obtained upon good land in the designated counties, alternate counties will be named. The counties were designated by Secretary of Agriculture upon recommendation of state advisory committees headed by A. G. (Pat) Mayse, Paris, Texas, and Clarence Roberts, Oklahoma City.

Applications will be received at the county offices of FSA in the counties designated for thirty days beginning August 10. A committee of three farmers actually living upon the land will select those to receive loans and will appraise farms to be bought.

All tenants or farm laborers are eligible, if actually engaged in farming at this time, and if they are not able to obtain purchase loans on reasonable terms from other agencies.

Farms to be bought must be "family-size." Acreage will depend upon type of farming, nature of land, and size of the family. No down payment will be required, and payments will be extended over forty years with three per cent interest. Annual installments on purchase price will in most cases be no more than the amount which has usually been paid as rent. Value of the land to be bought will be appraised strictly upon the basis of crops it has produced in the past.

4-H Club Boys Will Leave for Conservation Meet

Two Eastland county 4-H club boys and two Stephens county 4-H club boys will leave with Hugh F. Barnhart next Wednesday morning for Rockport, near Corpus Christi, for a three day game conservation and wildlife encampment. An outline of the program as received by Barnhart from L. L. Johnson, state boys' club agent, will cover a wide variety of subject dealing with wildlife, such as fish and birds of the coast country, conservation of wildlife, a visit through a game preserve, fishing in the gulf, etc. The two Eastland county boys have not as yet been named, but will be selected from boys who have done work in game conservation.

Sixty-three 4-H club boys and eighteen county agents will be enrolled for the camp, representing eighteen Texas counties. Last year a similar camp for west Texas Camp Stewart was held at Kerrville.

Training of 4-H Teams Next Week

Ass't County Agent Hugh F. Barnhart will give further training to the dairy demonstration, poultry judging, and dairy cattle judging teams in preparation to the final 4-H club state judging contest to be held at College Station on September 2nd. These three teams were among the winners in a semi-final contest held at College Station during the boys and girls short course on July

Friends of CECIL A. LOTIEF of Eastland County Urge Your Favorable Consideration of His Candidacy For the LEGISLATURE From 106th DISTRICT.

A GOOD RULE TO FOLLOW

In public as well as private business

When a man asks you for a job, demand to know his qualifications. The choosing of a REPRESENTATIVE TO THE LEGISLATURE is a BUSINESS MATTER because the election of any person is an investment of the public funds.

If the choice is bad, the people lose in DOLLARS AND CENTS AS WELL AS SERVICES

An individual in need of professional services, such as that of a doctor or lawyer, naturally wants one capable of delivering efficient service. This means emphatically that he must have years of training and experience in his line.

If he is not careless about the public money and wishes to use some of the economic caution he applies to his private business, the voter will do well to consider the point set out before, especially with reference to the candidate long experienced, well grounded and efficient in the performance of the duties of the office he seeks, and whose record is unimpeachable as against charges of any consequence.

Lotief voted for the chain store tax and as a member of the Revenue and Taxation Committee of the House made the motion to pass the same with a favorable recommendation.

Lotief is for the Fair Trade Act in order to help small business men exist and compete with foreign corporations.

Lotief is tried and proven to be honest, capable and experienced and well qualified for the job he now seeks.

Lotief never will place any extra tax burden on Eastland county industry and real estate.

Lotief proved to be loyal to the people. He was the only representative we ever had to keep us informed through the papers and otherwise about what was going on at Austin.

Lotief is the best friend of the aged and blind people and dependent children. He stands ready to help get an honorable pension for all who can qualify under the constitution as voted by the people and to see that all are treated on an equal basis. He will support legislation to match the funds paid by teachers into the Teachers Retirement Fund as voted by the people.

Regardless of who is elected from the 107th district a representative of experience is needed to work with him and Mr. Lotief is the logical candidate from the 106th district to do so and cooperate with him. He has lived in Texas 34 years, and has been a loyal and good citizen and public servant.

Monthly Missionary Meeting Tuesday

The monthly spiritual life and missionary meeting of the First Methodist W. M. S. was held Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. J. T. Anderson with Mmes. James Harvey and B. D. Barnard as co-hostesses. The spiritual life meeting was held first, and the missionary meeting was opened with the singing of the hymn, "Trust and Obey." Mrs. William Reagan was in charge of the very interesting program that was presented. The meditation talk on the "New Society" was given by Mrs. W. P. Powell, followed by talks on the subject, "Bringing Korea to Christ," by Mmes. B. E. Morehart, W. A. Cox, J. H. Witten and J. E. Crawford.

After the mission program, the W. M. S. president, Mrs. C. B. Sanford, presided over the brief business session.

Refreshments were served to approximately 25 present.

Group Four Meets Tuesday Afternoon

Group Four of the First Christian council met at the church Tuesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Troy Powell, in the chair. The devotional was led by Mrs. Jack Elkins, after which a discussion of new and old business was held. The meeting was then adjourned.

Mrs. Leech Mission Meeting Chairman

Mrs. Jack Leech, mission chairman for Circle One, was in charge of the program at the monthly missionary meeting of the First Baptist W. M. S. when it met at the church Tuesday afternoon. The meeting was presided over by the officers of Circle One, Mrs. L. A. Harrison led the devotional and those taking part on the program included Mmes. Barton Philipott, W. V. Gardenhire and T. E. House. The mission meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. Chumney, president of the general W. M. S., after which a brief business period was held. The circle count was taken and announcement was made concerning the book review on "Mission Study in the Bible" which will be given at the church August 9.

Mrs. E. J. Keough Honors Aunt at Bridge Luncheon

As a compliment to her aunt, Mrs. William Hastings, of Houston, Mrs. E. J. Keough entertained in her home with a prettily appointed bridge luncheon. The dining table was laid with an Italian cut work cloth and centered with a low bowl of marigolds and snapdragons, emphasizing the orange color scheme that predominated.

After luncheon, games of bridge were played. Mrs. J. C. Hanrahan won high prize and Mrs. Hastings was presented with a lovely gift by the hostess.

The guest list included Mmes. Hastings, Hanrahan, Rosbell Daniel, Arlington McGinnis, George Ruppert and the hostess, Mrs. Keough.

Helen Hayes Honored on Tenth Birthday

Helen Hayes was honored when Mrs. W. C. Clemens entertained with a party for her in celebration of her tenth birthday Monday afternoon. Honey-suckle and nasturtium were used effectively in the rooms for floral decorations. The little guests played games and were given favors of airplanes for the boys and toy wrist watches for the girls.

After the games the guests were served pink and white ice cream with birthday cake, frosted in white and topped with ten pink candles.

The guest list included Helen and Mary Hayes, Mona Bates, Hazel and Maggie Dawson, Betty Elmore, Howard Robinson, Mayor, Jimmie and Donald Farnsworth, Charles Dean, Walter Ray Clemens, and Martha Smith. The hostess was assisted by Mmes. Ed Estes and Roy Farnsworth.

Funeral Service Held Saturday for Leonard Surles

Funeral services for Leonard Surles, 38, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Surles of Dothan and long time employe of the Humble Oil and Refining company who died here at 5:35 p. m. Friday, were held Saturday afternoon at 4 from the First Baptist church with interment in Oakwood cemetery.

The Rev. E. S. James, former pastor of the Cisco church, now pastor at Vernon, assisted by the Rev. Judson Prince, present pastor, and the Rev. Mr. Funderburk of Wink, Texas, officiated. Green Funeral home was in charge of arrangements for burial.

Mr. Surles succumbed to the effects of a brain tumor which developed several months ago. He underwent treatment at Graham sanitarium here, Baylor hospital at Dallas and Mayo Brothers clinic at Rochester, Minn., where he submitted to two operations.

Pal bearers for the services were employes of the Humble company.

Born at Dothan
Leonard Surles was born March 6, 1900, at Dothan. He was married in 1925 to Miss Beulah Yarbrough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Yarbrough of Cisco, who survives him. They were the parents of two sons, Jack, 9, and Jim Bob, 5, both of whom survive.

His parents, two brothers and five sisters also survive. The brothers are Loyd Surles of Houston and Marston Surles of Cisco. The sisters: Mrs. Joe Black, Mrs. Luke Pippen and Mrs. Wesley Smith of Cisco; Mrs. B. B. Longacre of Fort Worth and Miss Louie Nell Surles of Eastland.

Mr. Surles was first employed with the West Texas Utilities company with whom he spent 12 years. He then went with the Humble Oil and Refining company. After three years with the company at Cisco he was transferred to McCamey where he remained until his illness.

One of Cisco's most popular young men, Mr. Surles had a host of friends who mourn his death. The church was crowded for the services Saturday afternoon and a great floral offering attested the

Demonstrations in Control of Cotton Insects Planned

Demonstrations in control of cotton flea hoppers by dusting with sulphur are being conducted by Oral Davis on the Poston farm near Okra and by R. T. Simon on the J. Frank Dean farm near Gorman in cooperation with the county agent. Davis and Simon started their demonstrations last week by dusting 5 acres of cotton each with approximately 15 pounds of dusting sulphur per acre. Farmers and others interested in witnessing the progress of these demonstrations are invited to visit the demonstration plots at any time. The cotton will be dusted each week as long as the flea hopper infestation exists.

APPEALS JUDGES ON VACATION

There were no orders in the court of civil appeals this week. It is playtime with the appellate judges, and all three have hiked away to their chosen resorts to enjoy the heated term allowed by law, that they may return when the weather is cooler, probably in the early part of September. We jollers may envy them, but we are not appellate judges.

Is a BUSINESS MATTER because the election of any person is an investment of the public funds.

If the choice is bad, the people lose in DOLLARS AND CENTS AS WELL AS SERVICES

An individual in need of professional services, such as that of a doctor or lawyer, naturally wants one capable of delivering efficient service. This means emphatically that he must have years of training and experience in his line.

If he is not careless about the public money and wishes to use some of the economic caution he applies to his private business, the voter will do well to consider the point set out before, especially with reference to the candidate long experienced, well grounded and efficient in the performance of the duties of the office he seeks, and whose record is unimpeachable as against charges of any consequence.

- 1---Lotief voted for the chain store tax and as a member of the Revenue and Taxation Committee of the House made the motion to pass the same with a favorable recommendation.
- 2---Lotief is for the Fair Trade Act in order to help small business men exist and compete with foreign corporations.
- 3---Lotief is tried and proven to be honest, capable and experienced and well qualified for the job he now seeks.
- 4---Lotief never will place any extra tax burden on Eastland county industry and real estate.
- 5---Lotief proved to be loyal to the people. He was the only representative we ever had to keep us informed through the papers and otherwise about what was going on at Austin.
- 6---Lotief is the best friend of the aged and blind people and dependent children. He stands ready to help get an honorable pension for all who can qualify under the constitution as voted by the people and to see that all are treated on an equal basis. He will support legislation to match the funds paid by teachers into the Teachers Retirement Fund as voted by the people.

Regardless of who is elected from the 107th district a representative of experience is needed to work with him and Mr. Lotief is the logical candidate from the 106th district to do so and cooperate with him. He has lived in Texas 34 years, and has been a loyal and good citizen and public servant.

CHAPTER XII

Miller said tremulously she had been just any girl in love instead of the efficient and hard-driving nurse at Saint Vincent. What makes you say that? he—how do you think?

"What?" said Tran briskly. "I have a set of symptoms you would not expect to be registered in a nurse. You'd see it, you'd feel it, you'd be scared if you weren't so scared if you were to go along before you time to dry off! If you only keep yourself looking at you're so sweet, all eyes and drizzly like that."

Another word Miss Miller turned and went, running, down the corridor stiffly on the chair.

What happened—if Stegert were really never again, then she had left. For the first time she had how inseparably her work had been in the thought of working him. . . . For if her visions—Tran was only ever held a more perceptive, it had long ago eliminated in the rest.

She got up heavily and out into the corridor. She knew how or why she way to the instrument except that suddenly she very much to cry, and its sterile sterility offered an privacy for that purpose. . . . Or perhaps it was the memory of that other as it less than two years when she had stood there, child it seemed to Tran raming over the shiny in- its in their glass cases.

ed up in a limp little gray a wide window ledge, she ng about the business for he had come in a ther- workmanlike manner when opened, and a man's voice

Lord! Hasn't anyone you yet that floods don't ical instruments any Benchley sauntered across m and stood, leaning the wall, his hands in his grinning down at her. er passion of loneliness, so glad to see him that ed all the more loudly.

"I had an idea you'd be letting your hair down somewhere," he went on cheerfully. "You would pick a nice festive little nook like this for it."

So he had been hunting for her. "I just thought you might like to know—"he was lighting a cigarette as he spoke, frowning down at it, carefully not looking at her—"that it isn't so bad as we thought at first—about Old Sarge, I mean. The paralysis was mostly due to shock. The tendons and nerves will probably be all right. Barring infection, which doesn't seem likely, your god will soon be hurling his thunderbolts at one and all again in his best Jovian form."

Tran gasped, "Oh, Bob, are you sure?"

"As sure," he said dryly, "as a mere junior surgeon is ever presumed to be about anything. But it may reassure you to know that the Lord High Executioner, himself, is pretty sure, too. We'd hardly got the bleeding stopped, by the way, before he assumed charge of the case, himself."

Remembering the surgeon in her historic nursing care report on the mythical case of X, Tran giggled through her tears.

"He wouldn't," she asked, "have been taking his own pulse, would he?"

"He was leading up to that when Miss Miller came in. She soon put a stop to it. There's never any question about who's in charge of a case when the perfect nurse steps into the room."

"So she's nursing him, then?"

"Very much so. . . . And it may interest you to know that she asked for you as her relief."

"Well," Tran said cryptically, "she certainly wouldn't want me around if things hadn't gone off according to schedule."

He stared at her as if trying to find in her tear-stained face the answer to a question that was troubling him.

"That depends on what you call 'according to schedule,'" he said at last. "When I opened the door a few minutes ago, the perfect nurse was weeping into her patient's pillow, while he patted her shoulder with his good hand, and looked—well, respect for the red-blooded man-eater old Sarge used to be makes me hate to use the only term that aptly describes the way he was looking. . . . I don't know what the discipline of this hospital's coming to."

"Well, we've still got you to uphold the good old traditions," Tran observed wickedly.

Then, at thought of Stephen Sargent patting Katherine Miller's shoulder while she wept into his pillow, her own loneliness swept over her in an engulfing tidal wave, and she sobbed anew.

Young Dr. Benchley took his hands out of his pockets; then, as if alarmed by his own impulse, thrust them hastily back again.

"Gosh, kid, I'm sorry!" he said after a moment. "I'd been thinking all this time that you were just off me because my frivolous companionship interfered with the seriousness of business of life. I didn't know it was because you—were in love with him."

"But I'm not," Tran sobbed. "Not in the way you mean. It's just—oh, he's so swell, and I'm so darned glad he's all right. I couldn't bear it—about his arm, I mean."

"Well," Bob said, "two shocks like this in one day are almost too much for me. First I find the ideal nurse weeping into a patient's pillow; and then I find her most ardent admirer and imitator dissolved in tears because—she says—she's happy. 'I—'

"Who?" Tran sat up abruptly.

"Me? Imitate her?"

"Well, who has been your inspiration then? Why, it was getting so you even looked and talked like her!"

Tran stared. . . . So that was the way she had been seeming to Bob—like Katherine Miller—the perfect icicle.

"Honestly, Agility," he was going on, "it restores my confidence in the balance of the universe to find out that you have an honest cry left in your system—even if it is all for another man."

He was grinning now—that old whimsical grin that made the homeliness of his lean dark face flash into boyish charm; but there was a wistful twist to the grin that tugged at Tran's heart-strings.

Suddenly she was remembering the magic of those early stolen minutes of theirs—rocking together in smothered laughter that day in here before the instrument case; dancing in the deserted service room of G-6 one intoxicating spring morning to the music of a hurdy-gurdy outside; the puffs snatched from his cigarette behind protecting screens; his little finger crooked momentarily through hers as they met by chance in a quiet corridor—that day in the steam of the sterilizing room when he had practically ordered her to marry him.

What a blind little idiot she had been all these months! . . . Why, all those high-handed things she had said to Miss Miller—if Bob were right, she ought to have been saying them to herself. . . . Well, it's a wise woman who knows enough to take her own good advice, she thought.

"Of course I got off with the wrong foot," he was going on with his funny, twisted grin. "I should have played Old Sarge's system, and put you in your place with a few verbal brickbats in the beginning. But no—I had to lead with my chin. . . . Well, I could cut off both my arms, and not a tear out of anyone."

"Bob," Tran said in a small frightened voice, "I—you don't suppose we could pretend we were beginning all over—do you? . . . Way back at that first day in Emergency, I mean. . . . When you asked for a 'probe'—remember? And I thought you meant a probationer, I said—"she sobbed—"Wouldn't I do? I'm one—a probationer, I mean."

"And I said—although maybe you didn't hear it—You bet you'll do. . . . Honey, I'd like awfully to kiss you if I could only find a dry spot."

And as they clung together,

laughing—partly to mask their desperate seriousness, and partly because it was spring and they were young—this time, mercifully, no one opened the door.

4-H Club Boys Will Leave for Conservation Meet

Two Eastland county 4-H club boys and two Stephens county 4-H club boys will leave with Hugh F. Barnhart next Wednesday morning for Rockport, near Corpus Christi, for a three day game conservation and wildlife encampment. An outline of the program as received by Barnhart from L. L. Johnson, state boys' club agent, will cover a wide variety of subject dealing with wildlife, such as fish and birds of the coast country, conservation of wildlife, a visit through a game preserve, fishing in the gulf, etc. The two Eastland county boys have not as yet been named, but will be selected from boys who have done work in game conservation.

Sixty-three 4-H club boys and eighteen county agents will be enrolled for the camp, representing eighteen Texas counties. Last year a similar camp for west Tex-

Training of 4-H Teams Next Week

Asst County Agent Hugh F. Barnhart will give further training to the dairy demonstration, poultry judging, and dairy cattle judging teams in preparation to the final 4-H club state judging contest to be held at College Station on September 2nd. These three teams were among the winners in a semi-final contest held at College Station during the boys and girls short course on July 6-8th. Should these teams win the state contest in September they will represent Texas in the national contests to be held at Columbus, Ohio, and Chicago, Ill., in October and December.

Nikki turned half in panic. . . "That's right," said the man standing in the opened door. "Close it back up and then just forget that you ever saw it."

Illustration by E. H. Gunder

CHAPTER I

Noisy, impatient Grand Central Station lowered its voice and consciously paused to make a path for Nikki as she walked across the concourse between the two tall men. It was a tribute to lissome youth and loveliness with golden lights, a figure that men wanted to paint or possess. At the gate she paused and spoke to her father.

"Goodbye dear, I'll wire you when we arrive. Steve will take good care of me." She smiled at the young man standing hat in hand, kissed her father and patted him lightly on the shoulder. "Don't worry so much about your old diamonds. I wish you were coming with us."

Peter Jerome smiled back at his only daughter. "Have a good time and give my love to Uncle Jim and Aunt Amy," he said. "Have your bags gone on down?"

"The redcap took them on to the train," said Steve. "We'd better go too." He grinned. "I'll keep Nikki away from wild horses and tame cowboys. Goodbye sir."

Nikki's father followed the course of his daughter and the man she was engaged to marry down the ramp and then he turned away to take a cab. But as he turned his eye caught a figure going through the gate, and he halted, startled.

He raised his arm in an involuntary gesture as though to call the man he had seen. Then he paused thoughtfully, wrote hurriedly in a notebook, tore out the sheet and gave it to a redcap with a dollar and careful directions. That done, Peter Jerome continued on his way, a worried line creasing his forehead.

In her stateroom Nikki removed the tiny jacket of her tailored bolero suit, untied the wisp of a veil and laid aside her straw sailor. Then she turned to the bags the porter had placed in her stateroom before she arrived. Nikki thought about the trip ahead with a feeling of anticipation. She hadn't seen her aunt and uncle for five years, which seemed suddenly a long, long time, because previously she had spent at least part of every summer on the Lazy R Ranch and Aunt Amy had really taken the place of a mother in her affections since her own mother had died.

Nikki supposed that Uncle Jim was busier now that he had turned the Lazy R into a dude ranch. She remembered him writing that "you easterners will always pay a good price to be entertained, but I can't tell anymore what I'll get for a carload of steers at Chicago." He had been very successful, Nikki knew.

Five years away. And during those five years she had finished school, made her debut, spent a year in Europe and become engaged to Steve Mallory, the young attorney who was this moment arranging his own luggage in another stateroom. He would join her in a few moments for Stephen Mallory was impatient of things which kept Nikki away from him, as he was impatient with details and monotony and dullness. She had known Steve less than a year but he had a way of brushing aside opposition.

Nikki glanced at her own profile in a mirror, a slightly imperious profile if she had recognized it as such, and pressed the release snaps on her dressing case.

She raised the lid and stood staring with sharply indrawn breath. She touched the case with one finger. It was an unconscious movement.

For in the case, instead of her own neat array of toilet articles, Nikki saw bundle upon bundle of green and gold currency heaped in fascinating disorder.

There were packets of ten dollar bills, twenties and fifties, precisely bound and each labeled "$100." They had evidently been packed in stacks of denominations, but in movement the bundles had been mixed and confused.

The first thought Nikki had was that the interior of the case looked like a bank teller's cage after an earthquake. Letting her breath out slowly she touched the money gingerly as though expecting to see it fade away and be replaced by the familiar golden tops of the jars in her toilet case. But the money remained. There must be at least a hundred of the bundles, Nikki thought. Whose money was it and why was it in her bag? Nikki thought back.

The maid had packed for her. Well, the maid certainly hadn't put $100,000 in her bag. Nor had anyone else. It was impossible. But there it was, impossible or not.

A dozen thoughts started through her head. She should call the conductor. No, better call Steve. Maybe the money was stolen. Maybe it was counterfeit. They might be involved in some long investigation and have to return to New York. They might even be suspected of something, heaven knows what.

Then Nikki saw a brown morocco edge among the piles of green and yellow, and she lifted out a man's wallet that apparently had been tossed into the case with the money. It was an ordinary enough wallet. Nikki had seen others like it in the hands of escorts who had leaped out bills to settle countless checks for countless dinners and lunches.

She opened the billfold and across the inside flap read in plain gold lettering:

"Charles Dillon."

Nikki repeated the name to herself and she held the wallet a moment and then dropped it back into the bag. As she did there was a movement at the door. The lock clicked. Nikki turned half in panic, her right hand making an involuntary gesture to close the bag.

"That's right," said the man standing in the opened door. "Close it back up. And then just forget that you ever saw it."

He held out a dressing case. Nikki saw then that the hand and the one which she had seen in the case which held the sets of bills.

"I think you will find your things in good order. My eyes were still upon the door as you bowed slightly at the door gone.

It was only seconds after the knock sounded on the door. Nikki hadn't moved.

The second rap was followed by the sound of a key in the lock and Nikki opened the door to take a note from a boy. She felt the note and slowly glide into the left station. The note was her father and read:

"Be on your guard but in circumstances antagonistic to Dillon who is on the scene. This extremely confidential explain later."

The largest pyramid ever made of 300,000 blocks of limestone weighing one and a half tons.

The voice and the eyes don't fit, thought Nikki. The eyes are his. The voice he has stolen from someone else. It doesn't belong. She fought off a feeling that she was standing half-dressed. She heard him saying:

"I am very sorry. The bags were together and the porter made a mistake. Not a very serious mistake, although I really haven't much use for the things in this."

He held out a dressing case. Nikki saw then that the hand and the one which she had seen in the case which held the sets of bills. "I think you will find your things in good order. My eyes were still upon the door as you bowed slightly at the door gone. It was only seconds after the knock sounded on the door. Nikki hadn't moved. TO THE MERCHANTS and VOTERS of CISCO

Precinct No. 4

Vote for Jess Nobles for Commissioner of Precinct No. 4

We want a road out here, so we can get to Highway 29, which will connect the Breckenridge, Albany and Moran highways. It will take only a short piece of road to do this, and it will bring lots of trade to Cisco. Stephens county has a good road up to the line of Eastland and Stephens county line. I understand the commissioners have approved of this road and had the money to put it in. The right-of-way has been received by Mr. Mitcham and he has offered to furnish some material to put on this road. It will go between his ranch and mine. But it seems that we can get no action on this. Anyone who is fighting us is fighting Cisco merchants by keeping trade out. We want all of the people to get to Cisco, good weather or bad. Someone out here is fighting this road for some cause or other.

People who want to develop the county and our town should have a road if anyone does. Who is trying harder than I am to keep Cisco alive? I want good roads and good streets. I gave $2600 in cash to help pay to pave Cisco streets with brick. How many property owners in Cisco came up to that? I saw cars stuck in the mud on Cisco main street before we got the street paved. It might make the mud haulers mad to pave the streets because they lose their job hauling mud. It might stop this road dragging job to give us a road.

All of Cisco's business men, good property owners and real estate men help me get this road.

Vote for Jess Nobles for Commissioner of Precinct No. 4

DO YOU WANT A YOUNG MAN ANXIOUS TO MAKE GOOD?

Do you want a young man in years but old in experience; a man young enough to have a zeal for work and an overwhelming desire to do the right thing. All Wayne Sellers asks is an equal consideration at the hands of the voters before the door of opportunity is slammed in his face.

Here Is What Sellers Is For

Utmost honesty, freedom from prejudice and bias in his discharge of his duties at Austin. The fact that he or his family has never been involved in politics will enable him to give a type of service which most people would be unable to render.

A liberalization of old age assistance. The full amount, $30, should be paid to those who need it and the position of an applicant's children should not be taken into consideration, neither should an applicant be denied assistance merely because he owns a small home.

Fuller educational opportunities. Poll tax repeal.

Greatest economy in government. Passage of soil conservation and fair trades acts.

Wayne Sellers will forever be on guard to protect the interests of the small oil men. The interests of the people of this section are identical with small oil men's interests. He will oppose any taxes upon them.

Wayne Sellers is recommended by his fellow townsmen as being years older than his actual age in experience and is asking for the office for a chance to begin his career in life, for a chance to make good and for a chance to serve the people of his district.

Funeral Service Held Saturday for Leonard Surles

Funeral services for Leonard Surles, 38, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Surles of Dothan and long time employe of the Humble Oil and Refining company who died here Saturday afternoon at 4 from the First Baptist church with interment in Oakwood cemetery.

The Rev. E. S. James, former pastor of the Cisco church, now pastor at Vernon, assisted by the Rev. Judson Prince, present pastor, and the Rev. Mr. Funderburk of Wink, Texas, officiated. Green Funeral home was in charge of arrangements for burial.

Mr. Surles succumbed to the effects of a brain tumor which developed several months ago. He underwent treatment at Graham sanitarium here, Baylor hospital at Dallas and Mayo Brothers clinic at Rochester, Minn., where he submitted to two operations.

Pall bearers for the services

were employes of the Humble company.

Born at Dothan

Leonard Surles was born March 6, 1900, at Dothan. He was married in 1925 to Miss Beulah Yarbrough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Yarbrough of Cisco, who survives him. They were the parents of two sons, Jack, 9, and Jim Bob, 5, both of whom survive.

His parents, two brothers and five sisters also survive. The brothers are Loyd Surles of Houston and Marston Surles of Cisco. The sisters: Mrs. Joe Black, Mrs. Lake Phippen and Mrs. Wesley Smith of Cisco; Mrs. B. B. Longacre of Fort Worth and Miss Louie Nell Surles of Eastland.

Mr. Surles was first employed with the West Texas Utilities company with whom he spent 12 years. He then went with the Humble Oil and Refining company. After three years with the company at Cisco he was transferred to McCamey where he remained until his illness.

One of Cisco's most popular young men, Mr. Surles had a host of friends who mourn his death. The church was crowded for the services Saturday afternoon and a great floral offering attested the

Demonstrations in Control of Cotton Insects Planned

Demonstrations in control of cotton flea hoppers by dusting with sulphur are being conducted by Oral Davis on the Poston farm near Okra and by R. T. Simon on the J. Frank Dean farm near Gorman in cooperation with the county agent. Davis and Simon started their demonstrations last week by dusting 5 acres of cotton each with approximately 15 pounds of dusting sulphur per acre. Farmers and others interested in witnessing the progress of these demonstrations are invited to visit the demonstration plots at any time. The cotton will be dusted each week as long as the flea hopper infestation exists.

HARRISBURG, July 21 (AP)—Pennsylvania's democratic governor Earle Wednesday counted upon the democratic-controlled legislature to halt "usurpation" of power by the judiciary.

He said he would issue a formal call Thursday at the special session to investigate charges of defrauding the commonwealth hurried at him and 13 associates.

No Beer Selling in County During Voting

Texas Liquor Control board officials have announced that beer retailers will not be permitted to sell beer in Eastland county from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m., hours of the primary election.

From Austin, however, it was stated that deliveries by distributors and wholesalers to retailers would be permitted during those hours. The announcement from Austin was by Bert Ford, administrator for the liquor board.

APPEALS JUDGES ON VACATION

There were no orders in the court of civil appeals this week. It is playtime with the appellate judges, and all three have hiked away to their chosen resorts to enjoy the heated term allowed by law, that they may return when the weather is cooler, probably in the early part of September. We toilers may envy them, but we are not appellate judges.

If the choice is bad, the people lose in

DOLLARS AND CENTS AS WELL AS SERVICES

An individual in need of professional services, such as that of a doctor or lawyer, naturally wants one capable of delivering efficient service. This means emphatically that he must have years of training and experience in his line.

If he is not careless about the public money and wishes to use some of the economic caution he applies to his private business, the voter will do well to consider the point set out before, especially with reference to the candidate long experienced, well grounded and efficient in the performance of the duties of the office he seeks, and whose record is unimpeachable as against charges of any consequence.

- 1.---Lotief voted for the chain store tax and as a member of the Revenue and Taxation Committee of the House made the motion to pass the same with a favorable recommendation.
- 2.---Lotief is for the Fair Trade Act in order to help small business men exist and compete with foreign corporations.
- 3.---Lotief is tried and proven to be honest, capable and experienced and well qualified for the job he now seeks.
- 4.---Lotief never will place any extra tax burden on Eastland county industry and real estate.
- 5.---Lotief proved to be loyal to the people. He was the only representative we ever had to keep us informed through the papers and otherwise about what was going on at Austin.
- 6.---Lotief is the best friend of the aged and blind people and dependent children. He stands ready to help get an honorable pension for all who can qualify under the constitution as voted by the people and to see that all are treated on an equal basis. He will support legislation to match the funds paid by teachers into the Teachers Retirement Fund as voted by the people.

Regardless of who is elected from the 107th district a representative of experience is needed to work with him and Mr. Lotief is the logical candidate from the 106th district to do so and cooperate with him. He has lived in Texas 34 years, and has been a loyal and good citizen and public servant.

CHAPTER XII

Tran stared, . . . So that was the way she had been seeming to Bob—like Katherine Miller—the perfect icicle.

"Honestly, Agility," he was going on, "it restores my confidence in the balance of the universe to find out that you have an honest cry left in your system—even if it is all for another man."

He was grinning now—that old whimsical grin that made the homeliness of his lean dark face flash into boyish charm; but there was a wistful twist to the grin that tugged at Tran's heart-strings.

Suddenly she was remembering the magic of those early stolen minutes of theirs—rocking together in smothered laughter that day in here before the instrument cases; dancing in the deserted service room of G-6 one intoxicating spring morning to the music of a hurdy-gurdy outside; the puffs snatched from his cigaret behind protecting screens; his little finger crooked momentarily through hers as they met by chance in a quiet corridor—that day in the steam of the sterilizing room when he had practically ordered her to marry him.

What a blind little idiot she had

"I had an idea you'd be letting your hair down somewhere," he went on cheerfully. "You would pick a nice festive little nook like this for it."

So he had been hunting for her—"I just thought you might like to know—he was lighting a cigaret as he spoke, frowning down at it, carefully not looking at her—that it isn't so bad as we thought at first—about Old Sarge, I mean. The paralysis was mostly due to shock. The tendons and nerves will probably be all right. Barring infection, which doesn't seem likely, your god will soon be hurling his thunderbolts at one and all again in his best Jovian form."

Tran gasped, "Oh, Bob, are you sure?"

"As sure," he said dryly, "as a mere junior surgeon is ever presumed to be about anything. But it may reassure you to know that the Lord High Executioner, himself, is pretty sure, too. We'd hardly got the bleeding stopped, by the way, before he assumed charge of the case, himself."

Remembering the surgeon in her historic nursing care report on the mythical case of X, Tran giggled through her tears.

"He wouldn't," she asked, "have been taking his own pulse, would he?"

"He was leading up to that when Miss Miller came in. She soon put a stop to it. There's never any question about who's in charge of a case when the perfect nurse steps into the room."

"So she's nursing him, then?"

"Very much so. . . . And it may interest you to know that she asked for you as her relief."

"Well," Tran said cryptically, "she certainly wouldn't want me around if things hadn't gone off according to schedule."

He stared at her as if trying to find in her tear-stained face the answer to a question that was troubling him.

"That depends on what you call 'according to schedule,'" he said at last. "When I opened the door a few minutes ago, the perfect nurse was weeping into her patient's pillow, while he patted her shoulder with his good hand, and looked—well, respect for the red-blooded man-eater old Sarge used to be makes me hate to use the only term that aptly describes the way he was looking. . . . I don't know what the discipline of this hospital's coming to."

uphold the good old traditions," Tran observed wistfully.

Then, at thought of Stephen Sargent patting Katherine Miller's shoulder while she wept into his pillow, her own loneliness swept over her in an engulfing tidal wave, and she sobbed anew.

Young Dr. Benchley took his hands out of his pockets; then, as if alarmed by his own impulse, thrust them hastily back again.

"Gosh, kid, I'm sorry!" he said after a moment. "I'd been thinking all this time that you were just off me because my frivolous companionship interfered with the seriousness business of life. I didn't know it was because you—were in love with him."

"But I'm not," Tran sobbed. "Not in the way you mean. It's just—oh, he's so swell, and I'm so darned glad he's all right. I couldn't bear it—about his arm, I mean."

"Well," Bob said, "two shocks like this in one day are almost too much for me. First I find the ideal nurse weeping into a patient's pillow; and then I find her most ardent admirer and imitator dissolved in tears because—she says—she's happy. 'I—'

"Who?" Tran sat up abruptly.

"Me? Imitate her?"

"Well, who has been your inspiration then? Why, it was getting so you even looked and talked like her!"

Tran stared, . . . So that was the way she had been seeming to Bob—like Katherine Miller—the perfect icicle.

"Honestly, Agility," he was going on, "it restores my confidence in the balance of the universe to find out that you have an honest cry left in your system—even if it is all for another man."

He was grinning now—that old whimsical grin that made the homeliness of his lean dark face flash into boyish charm; but there was a wistful twist to the grin that tugged at Tran's heart-strings.

Suddenly she was remembering the magic of those early stolen minutes of theirs—rocking together in smothered laughter that day in here before the instrument cases; dancing in the deserted service room of G-6 one intoxicating spring morning to the music of a hurdy-gurdy outside; the puffs snatched from his cigaret behind protecting screens; his little finger crooked momentarily through hers as they met by chance in a quiet corridor—that day in the steam of the sterilizing room when he had practically ordered her to marry him.

What a blind little idiot she had

beginning all over—do you? . . . Way back at that first day in Emergency, I mean. . . . When you asked for a 'probe'—remember? And I thought you meant a probationer, I said—" she sobbed—"Wouldn't I do? I'm one—a probationer, I mean."

"And I said—although maybe you didn't hear it—'You bet you'll do.' . . . Honey, I'd like awfully to kiss you if I could only find a dry spot."

And as they clung together,

laughing—partly to mask their desperate seriousness, and partly because it was spring and they were young—this time, mercifully, no one opened the door.

THE END

The annual cost of medical care for all people in the U. S. is estimated at $3,577,000,000 and the wage loss from illness at $1,000,000,000.

4-H Club Boys Will Leave for Conservation Meet

Two Eastland county 4-H club boys and two Stephens county 4-H club boys will leave with Hugh F. Barnhart next Wednesday morning for Rockport, near Corpus Christi, for a three day game conservation and wildlife encampment. An outline of the program as received by Barnhart from L. L. Johnson, state boys' club agent, will cover a wide variety of subject dealing with wildlife, such as fish and birds of the coast country, conservation of wildlife, a visit through a game preserve, fishing in the gulf, etc. The two Eastland county boys have not as yet been named, but will be selected from boys who have done work in game conservation.

Sixty-three 4-H club boys and eighteen county agents will be enrolled for the camp, representing eighteen Texas counties. Last year a similar camp for west Tex-

Camp Stewart was held at Kerrville.

Training of 4-H Teams Next Week

Ass't County Agent Hugh F. Barnhart will give further training to the dairy demonstration, poultry judging, and dairy cattle judging teams in preparation to the final 4-H club state judging contest to be held at College Station on September 2nd. These three teams were among the winners in a semi-final contest held at College Station during the boys and girls short course on July 6-8th. Should these teams win the state contest in September they will represent Texas in the national contests to be held at Columbus, Ohio, and Chicago, Ill., in October and December.

Only seven states, California, Colorado, Delaware, Indiana, Maryland, New York and Pennsylvania, fix the beginning salary of teachers with four years of professional training at $1,000 a year or more.

SERIAL STORY MYSTERY AT THE LAZY R BY CLARKE NEWLON

COPYRIGHT, 1938
NEA SERVICE, INC.

Illustration by E. H. Gunder

Nikki turned half in panic. . . "That's right," said the man standing in the opened door. "Close it back up and then just forget that you ever saw it!"

CHAPTER I
Noisy, impatient Grand Central Station lowered its voice and consciously paused to make a path for Nikki as she walked across the concourse between the two tall men. It was a tribute to lissome youth and loveliness with golden lights, a figure that men wanted to paint or possess. At the gate she paused and spoke to her father.

"Goodby dear, I'll wire you when we arrive. Steve will take good care of me." She smiled at the young man standing hat in hand, kissed her father and patted him lightly on the shoulder. "Don't worry so much about your old diamonds. I wish you were coming with us."

Peter Jerome smiled back at his only daughter. "Have a good time and give my love to Uncle Jim and Aunt Amy," he said. "Have your bugs gone on down?"

"The redcap took them on to the train," said Steve. "We'd better go too." He grinned. "I'll keep Nikki away from wild horses and tame cowboys. Goodby sir."

Nikki's father followed the course of his daughter and the man she was engaged to marry down the ramp and then he turned away to take a cab. But as he turned his eye caught a figure going through the gate, and he halted, startled.

He raised his arm in an involuntary gesture as though to call the man he had seen. Then he paused thoughtfully, wrote hurriedly in a notebook, tore out the sheet and gave it to a redcap with a dollar and careful directions. That done, Peter Jerome continued on his way, a worried line creasing his forehead.

In her stateroom Nikki removed the tiny jacket of her tailored bolero suit, untied the wisp of a veil and laid aside her straw sailor. Then she turned to the bags the porter had placed in her stateroom before she arrived. Nikki thought about the trip ahead with a feeling of anticipation. She hadn't seen her aunt and uncle for five years, which seemed suddenly a long, long time, because previously she had spent at least part of every summer on the Lazy R Ranch and Aunt Amy had really taken the place of a mother in her affections since her own mother had died.

Nikki supposed that Uncle Jim was busier now that he had turned the Lazy R into a dude ranch. She remembered him writing that "you easterners will always pay a good price to be entertained, but I can't tell anymore what I'll get for a carload of steers at Chicago." He had been very successful, Nikki knew.

Five years away. And during those five years she had finished school, made her debut, spent a year in Europe and become engaged to Steve Mallory, the young attorney who was this moment arranging his own luggage in another stateroom. He would join her in a few moments for Stephen Mallory was impatient of things which kept Nikki away from him, as he was impatient with details and monotony and dullness. She had known Steve less than a year but he had a way of brushing aside opposition.

Nikki glanced at her own profile in a mirror, a slightly imperious profile if she had recognized it as such, and pressed the release snaps on her dressing case.

She raised the lid and stood staring with sharply indrawn breath. She touched the case with one finger. It was an unconscious movement.

For in the case, instead of her own neat array of toilet articles, Nikki saw bundle upon bundle of green and gold currency heaped in fascinating disorder.

There were packets of ten dollar bills, twenties and fifties, precisely bound and each labeled "$100." They had evidently been packed in stacks of denominations, but in movement the bundles had been mixed and confused.

The first thought Nikki had was that the interior of the case looked like a bank teller's cage after an earthquake. Letting her breath out slowly she touched the money gingerly as though expecting to see it fade away and be replaced by the familiar golden tops of the jars in her toilet case. But the

The maid had packed for her. Well, the maid certainly hadn't put $100,000 in her bag. Nor had anyone else. It was impossible. But there it was, impossible or not.

A dozen thoughts started through her head. She should call the conductor. No, better call Steve. Maybe the money was stolen. Maybe it was counterfeit. They might be involved in some long investigation and have to return to New York. They might even be suspected of something, heaven knows what.

Then Nikki saw a brown morocco edge among the piles of green and yellow, and she lifted out a man's wallet that apparently had been tossed into the case with the money. It was an ordinary enough wallet. Nikki had seen others like it in the hands of escorts who had leaped out bills to settle countless checks for countless dinners and lunches.

She opened the billfold and across the inside flap read in plain gold lettering:

"Charles Dillon."

Nikki repeated the name to herself and she held the wallet a moment and then dropped it back into the bag. As she did there was a movement at the door. The lock clicked. Nikki turned half in panic, her right hand making an involuntary gesture to close the bag.

"That's right," said the man standing in the opened door. "Close it back up. And then just forget that you ever saw it." His eyes were on the case.

The voice wasn't unpleasant. It was low and rather smooth, the voice of a man very sure of himself and very sure of the situation. Nor was the man unpleasant. His medium height fitted compactly into a dark suit. His age was indeterminate—maybe 35, maybe 40. A little too well barbered, thought Nikki.

She let the lid of the dressing case drop and glanced back at the owner of the voice. He wasn't looking at the bag now. He was looking at her. He saw the blond hair and the wide gray eyes that were even wider now as they stared at him. He saw the smooth column of her throat, the firm chin and the lower lip whose fullness was a perfect foil for the curving line of the upper. He saw the slimly curving figure with its deceptive suggestion of fragile delicacy.

Then he spoke again, but his eyes hadn't ceased their covetous admiration. His voice was still smooth, low.

The voice and the eyes don't fit, thought Nikki. The eyes are his. The voice he has stolen from someone else. It doesn't belong. She fought off a feeling that she was standing half-dressed. She heard him saying:

"I am very sorry. The bags were together and the porter made a mistake. Not a very serious mistake, although I really haven't much use for the things in this."

He held out a dressing case. Nikki saw then that the hand and the one which he held were identical.

He stepped over to her, the bag in his hand, and he held the case which held the sets of bills.

"I think you will find your things in good order. Your eyes were still upon my bowed slightly at the door gone.

It was only seconds after that a knock sounded on the room. Nikki hadn't moved.

The second rap was faint. "Redcap" and Nikki opened the door to take a note from a boy. She felt the note and slowly glide into the left station. The note was her father and read:

"Be on your guard but in circumstances antagonistic to Dillon who is on the scene. This extremely confidential explain later."

Precinct No. 4
Vote for Jess Nobles for Commissioner of Precinct No. 4

We want a road out here, so we can get to Highway 29, which will connect the Breckenridge, Albany and Moran highways. It will take only a short piece of road to do this, and it will bring lots of trade to Cisco. Stephens county has a good road up to the line of Eastland and Stephens county line. I understand the commissioners have approved of this road and had the money to put it in. The right-of-way has been received by Mr. Mitcham and he has offered to furnish some material to put on this road. It will go between his ranch and mine. But it seems that we can get no action on this. Anyone who is fighting us is fighting Cisco merchants by keeping trade out. We want all of the people to get to Cisco, good weather or bad. Someone out here is fighting this road for some cause or other.

People who want to develop the county and our town should have a road if anyone does. Who is trying harder than I am to keep Cisco alive? I want good roads and good streets. I gave $2600 in cash to help pay to pave Cisco streets with brick. How many property owners in Cisco came up to that? I saw cars stuck in the mud on Cisco main street before we got the street paved. It might make the mud haulers mad to pave the streets because they lose their job hauling mud. It might stop this road dragging job to give us a road.

All of Cisco's business men, good property owners and real estate men help me get this road.

Vote for Jess Nobles for Commissioner of Precinct No. 4
JESSE PENN, P. O. Box. 923.
P. S.—Pull for Cisco trade territory in the new oil belt field north of town.

RE-ELECT LOSS WOODS AS YOUR SHERIFF
He Deserves a Second Term on His Record

I want to thank the people for the courtesies shown me during the entire campaign.

I have done my best to give the people an honest, clean and efficient administration.

I am asking for a second term on my record and will deeply appreciate your vote on July 23rd.

LOSS WOODS
(Political Adv.)

DO YOU WANT A YOUNG MAN ANXIOUS TO MAKE GOOD?

Do you want a young man in years but old in experience; a man young enough to have a zeal for work and an overwhelming desire to do the right thing. All Wayne Sellers asks is an equal consideration at the hands of the voters before the door of opportunity is slammed in his face.

Here Is What Sellers Is For

- Utmost honesty, freedom from prejudice and bias in his discharge of his duties at Austin. The fact that he or his family has never been involved in politics will enable him to give a type of service which most people would be unable to render.
- A liberalization of old age assistance. The full amount, $30, should be paid to those who need it and the position of an applicant's children should not be taken into consideration, neither should an applicant be denied assistance merely because he owns a small home.
- Fuller educational opportunities.
- Poll tax repeal.
- Greatest economy in government.
- Passage of soil conservation and fair trades acts.
- Wayne Sellers will forever be on guard to protect the interests of the small oil men. The interests of the people of this section are identical with small oil men's interests. He will oppose any taxes upon them.
- Wayne Sellers is recommended by his fellow townsmen as being years older than his actual age in experience and is asking for the office for a chance to begin his career in life, for a chance to make good and for a chance to serve the people of his district.
