BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Let them be glad and rejoice that favor righteous dealing.—Ps. XXXV, 27.

God meant I should ever be, as I am, content, And glad in His sight, therefore glad I will be.

—ROBERT BROWNING.

Before we can bring happiness to others, we must first be happy ourselves; nor will happiness abide within us unless we confer it on others. If there be a smile upon our lips, those around us will soon smile too, and our happiness will become the truer and deeper as we see others are happy.—Mac- trerlinck.

An Illustration of the "American Way"

WE do a good deal of talking about the "American way" of doing things, but we don't often stop to figure out exactly what it means. The last year's record in regard to traffic deaths offers a good example.

During 1936, approximately 31,500 people in the United States were killed by automobiles. That, heaven knows, is certainly an appalling figure; yet there is a lot of encouragement in it, because it is about 8000 below the figure for 1937 and it indicates that the nation is at last beginning to solve its traffic death problem.

AND it is in the way the problem was tackled, the things that were done to solve it and the way the machinery was set in motion that this much-talked-of "American way" can be seen in action.

Let it be admitted freely that there was a terrible delay in getting started. The yearly traffic toll was a shocking disgrace for years before anything very effective was done. Nevertheless, the public did at last wake up to the situation. Public opinion was stirred from the ground up, and elaborate studies of the things that could be done to take the hazards out of auto traffic were made—made by private organizations and by tax-supported bodies simultaneously.

So the problem was studied on a broad front. The best brains available were put to work on it. Every angle was examined, from the work of school safety patrols to the possibility of eliminating danger through better highway engineering. The results were pooled and made easily available to authorities everywhere. And then the campaign got under way.

LIKE the original study, it was carried on a broad front. The public was given a course of education. Traffic codes were revised. New systems of police control were built up. And gradually the campaign began to be effective. People began to see that auto traffic was not an irresistible juggernaut but something that could be brought under control. The control was devised—and now we can be reasonably confident that within a few years the death toll will be got down to a level which a civilized community can view with some degree of equanimity.

Now all of that is a pretty fair sample of what we call the "American way"—or, if you prefer, the democratic way, the way of a free society—in operation.

It was not a campaign imposed from above. Instead it developed in response to a completely aroused and informed public opinion. There was no censorship to keep news of the situation from reaching the people; there was no repression to keep each man from speaking his mind about it; there was no regimentation to keep a score of solutions from being tried at once, so that a process of experimentation could cull out the worthless ones.

Instead there was a pooling of brains, so to speak; a uniting of the nation's best thought and best effort. And because the program was evolved in that way, it will stick.

An authority asserts that speeches without humor are just as effective as speeches with jokes and quips. Our experience is that they are the same thing.

The WPA worker leans on his shovel and the congressman leans on the WPA worker.

Listening With Both Ears

Texas Jackson Day Speaker

William O. Douglas of Washington, D. C., chairman of the Securities and Exchange commission, will be honor guest and principal speaker at the official Texas Jackson day dinner to be held in Dallas, Saturday, January 7, at the Adolphus hotel. Marion S. Church of Dallas, chairman of the Jackson day celebration, expects the coming of Mr. Douglas to Texas to result in the greatest rally of democrats in the history of the southwest. Mr. Douglas, who until his appointment, was a professor of law at Yale university, is one of the outstanding figures in world finance today.

Increases in Ford Production Are Announced

DEARBORN, Mich., Jan. 6.—Increases in the January production of Ford, Mercury and Lincoln-Zephyr cars were announced today at the home offices of the Ford Motor company here. Ford, Mercury and Lincoln-Zephyr production in domestic and Canadian plants during the month is expected to exceed 94,000 units, which is an increase over December and also over January, 1936. Increased activity was evident in other parts of the Ford organization as the new year opens. The company's new press shop, constructed in the Rouge plant as part of the $34,000,000 Ford expansion program during 1936, is now in operation. The same is true of the tool and die shop. This shop, which puts most all the tool and die operations of the Rouge plant in a single building, is probably the largest structure of its kind anywhere. Work also is going forward on installation of the company's new 110,000 k.w. high-pressure steam turbine generator. It will go into operation about April 1, materially increasing electrical power for the plant.

Increased employment also was reported in the newest of the Ford "village industries," the Ford carburetor plant in Milford, Mich. This plant was completed in November and now is producing a large proportion of Ford carburetors. Two similar generators now are in use. The tire plant, which began operations in 1936, opens the new year with the production of Ford inner tubes as well as tires. The enlarged Ford activities were not confined to the Rouge plant. The manufacture of safety glass is to begin within a week or so in the Twin City plant at St. Paul. Production there will supplement the output of the company's glass plant here. Approximately 150 additional men are to be employed in the Twin City branch because of the new operation. ### SERIAL STORY SKI'S THE LIMIT

CAST OF CHARACTERS
SALLY BLAIR—heroine. She had everything that popularity could win, her except DAN REYNOLDS—hero. He might have had Sally but while he was king of skis COREY PORTER was king of the social whirl. So . . . But go on with the story.

Yesterday: Seeing Dan only convinces Sally that she still loves him. Later that day Sally and Dan lose their trail in a storm.

CHAPTER XXIV
If they had missed the trail they might, with one misstep, plunge over the side of the canyon, 5,000 feet in depth. Sally shivered. "What else can we do?" she asked Corey. She easily could have given up, too; her every breath was an agony to her lungs, her hands and feet were heavy cakes of ice. "We can't stay here all night. We'd freeze to death. They'd dig us out in the spring—and wouldn't we get a pretty sight!"

"Shut up!" Corey snapped. "I mean—don't talk that way. Even in fun." He knew a person could easily die of exposure on such a night. He prided himself on being a good sport, but this was a bit too thick for him. "I'm going on," Sally said flatly. "You can come with me, or not—suit yourself." She plunged blindly ahead, using the tiny wheel of each ski pole to feel her way and lend support, inching along, floundering and groping. "Wait! Wait for me!" Corey panted, a few feet behind her. The snow was so heavy now that a few steps took one almost out of sight. They dared not become separated for even a few seconds. Sally waited, but she could not help a slight feeling of contempt. Corey should have been the one to have led the way, to have lent her courage. She thought of Dan. If only they had taken his advice. Dan

Corey," she said. "We'll have to keep on—until we drop." She was so weary now it really did not matter whether they kept on or not. It would have been much simpler. But something within Sally Blair would not let her do that. She had been born a fighter. She would have to keep on fighting to the end. What was that she heard above the storm, the angry wailing of the wind? She lifted her head, throwing back the hood of her parka to listen. She heard it again, a long high call—could someone else be lost in the storm, too? Corey thought he heard it too. They listened together. Again it came. It was a human voice! And it had sounded nearer. They tried to yell in response, but the wind tore the cry from their lips, smothering it. They waited a moment, then tried again. "Yahoo! Yahoo! . . . here we are! Hi, there!" Hope gave them fresh impetus. They plunged on again, pausing every now and then to lift their voices, to call out, to listen for that answering call that seemed to be drawing nearer. "There's a snowshoe track!" Corey cried. He pointed at the ground with trembling fingers. There on the driven whiteness was a wide, web-like print. "Whoever it is must have crossed here a short while ago, for no track could last. We'll turn here," Sally directed. "Try to follow them." There was a curve of tracks, fresher and deeper, though some were already blurred. Sally raised her voice to call again. They floundered on, 400 yards or so, through the thick timber. It seemed to Sally that the storm was lifting a bit. There was a break in the leaden sky, a tiny patch of blue smiling through. The snowdrops were larger, they did not fall so fast. "Look!" Sally gasped. Coming toward them was the figure of a man. A figure that even in this moment was familiar, raising an arm to wave to them. "It's Dan!" Sally gasped. Dan, coming to meet them, to rescue them. Dan

Refinery May Locate at Rising Star

RISING STAR, Jan. 6 (Sp.)—Messrs. Jones and Cornh, of Sweetwater, Texas, were here the past week looking over the ground with a view to moving their refining plant here in order to be closer to oil production.

A site just north of the Sinclair service station has been tentatively selected and terms for its purchase agreed upon. Just how long it will take to effect the removal of the plant could not be learned but it was understood the details would be wound up as rapidly as possible.

In discussing the matter the Sweetwater men stated that they were attracted to Rising Star mainly on account of the promising new shallow field just south of town and the fact that a steady production of oil for a number of years is indicated.

As planned the refinery would have a 500-barrel daily capacity. However, it was thought that 200 barrels daily would supply the present demand. The firm would manufacture at present, only gasoline and fuel oil.

Local oil operators express much interest in the location of the refinery, stating that it would result in their saving at least 20 cents per barrel in getting their oil to other refineries at distance.
