does embarrass many people and cause suffering, but the white light of publicity through mediums which are responsible for what they publish is the finest disinfectant for political and social evils that can be found.

But the average newspaper serves much more than a bulwark against political and social oppression. It is an instrument of public stimulation and economic progress. It fosters industry and commerce and gives form and voice to a public spirit which seeks aggressively to build. It is an influence which, if removed from the community or section to which it is dedicated, would be missed more than any other factor contributing to the welfare and development of that community or area.

SERIAL STORY WOMEN WANT BEAUTY!

BY LOUISE HOLMES

CAST OF CHARACTERS SUSIE LAMBERT—She served waffles and dreamed of being beautiful. DICK TREMAINE—He liked Susie's waffles but he couldn't see Susie. JEFF BOWMAN—His chief concern was to make Susie as beautiful as she wanted to be.

CHAPTER IX People brushed past Susie as she waited for the Chicago bus scarcely without knowing she was there. They looked through and around and over her, not once directly at her.

She wore a dark blue suit, the skirt of which came almost to her ankles. The ill-fitting jacket hunched at her shoulders and broke at the waistline. Her hat was just a hat, dark felt, up in the back, down in the front, too round, too flat, too everything. She wore black fabric gloves and heavy, mannish shoes.

The bus, easing into the depot, lumbered no more than did Susie as she climbed aboard. During the long ride to Chicago she was unable to relax, her taut nerves tightened with every mile, she had panicky moments when the safety of her room and the Waffle Shoppe seemed more to be desired than dubious adventure.

How would they know her? She and Mr. Harker should have arranged a system of signals, or she should have worn a white carnation. Again the demoralizing laugh rose in her throat. It was so much like a sob that she reached for her handkerchief.

But at that moment a young man breezed out of the crowd. He had red hair and very blue eyes. His eyes were smiling. He was vaguely familiar. Snatching off his hat, he held out a hand.

She spoke it quite spontaneously for Susie. "Yo" came to the waffle shop looking for a Lambert family. He laughed pleasantly. "Fooled you, didn't I?" "Fooled me?"

He told her seriously, "I was sleuthing—being a cover-up man—scouting for you. If everything else fails I can be a detective."

Susie thought this over. When she spoke it was to make one of the first clever remarks of her life. "I guess you were boy scouting," she said. "I was your good deed for that day."

Jeff's brows shot up. Not so bad. Maybe she did have something hidden under the pounds. "I take it you wanted to come," he remarked.

"I had to come," she said simply. "I'm so tired of being myself, so sick of me." With a little impulsive rush she asked, "Do you think Mr. Harker can make me someone else?"

Right then Jeff saw her as an individual, not merely a subject for the Chief's well-meant experiments. And right then Jeff liked Susie. Perhaps she knew it without knowing it. Perhaps his friendliness was the first point of the wedge which was to break through her inhibitions.

with me," he said as they drove out through Lincoln park. "My mother wants to meet you. You'll like her, she's swell."

"That's nice," Susie said, a little trill in her voice. No one had ever wanted to meet her before. Then she remembered and laughed. At the laugh Jeff shot her an amazed glance.

"What's funny?" he asked. "I was thinking that naturally your mother would want to meet me. Anyone would want to meet a poor fool." She said it quite good-naturedly. Susie's sense of humor was coming out of the dark by leaps and bounds.

"Say," Jeff scowled, "cut out that kind of talk. You're lucky, just plain lucky to be elected."

A shudder of fear ran the length of Susie's spine. "I'm scared, Mr. Bowman. This thing is too fantastic to believe. You and I know that I'm impossible. Mr. Harker will see it in the morning and send me back home. I'm not afraid of what he's going to do, it's what he will refuse to do." This was a long, involved speech for Susie.

"You don't know John Harker. He won't send you home. If there's anything he likes it's a battle." Jeff blushed. "I don't mean that just the way it sounds—"

Susie laughed again, a soft tinkle. "He'll find a war on his hands when he tackles me," she said. Jeff wanted to reassure her. He wanted to tell her that she wasn't so bad. Honesty kept him silent. Bad? She was terrible. Slumped beside him, stringy hair hanging from below her hat, eyebrows flaring out pugnaciously, idiotic button of a nose, Jeff humorously decided the Chief had better junk her and start all over.

Scranton 4-H Girls Hear Miss Caldwell

Half of the success in raising chicks depends on having a good, clean brooder house and all of its equipment in perfect working order at the start, said Miss Mabel Caldwell to the Scranton 4-H club girls, meeting at the Scranton schoolhouse on February 13 at 2:30 p. m., with Juanita Hughes presiding.

"At least two days before the chicks arrive, start the brooder stove and make all necessary adjustments to place the brooder in proper working order," she said. "Place clean litter on the floor. Check up on the feeder and water containers."

Lillian Jones was introduced as a new member at the meeting. The following members were present: Juanita Hughes, Lucile Adams, Gladys Adams, Doris Jean Harrison, Jewel Dean Baird, Fred-nell Sproules, Bobbie June Stewart, Ora Jane Clinton, Katie Beth Speegle, Charlotte Shardt, Betty Ann Sproules, Irene Wedworth—Ora Jane Clinton, Reporter.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fenley entertained recently with a shower complimenting Miss Geneva Fenley, who Sunday afternoon became the bride of Reuben Grothe of Albany.

A program of music was presented by R. D. Weeks, G. W. Weeks and Doyle Miller, after which Miss Josephine Miller recited several poems. Little Misses Rowena Moad and Wanda Lee Garrett presented the honoree with a large bouquet of gladioli and ferns, the pink and blue streamers of which led to a lovely array of gifts.

After a number of interesting games, refreshments of coffee and cake were served to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Linebarger, Mrs. L. H. Drifting Men Mean Drifting Soil FSA Supervisor Says

"Drifting men mean drifting soil," said George I. Lane, Eastland county Farm Security Administration supervisor, today as he invited land owners of the county to consider using the "flexible farm lease," description of which may be had at his office.

"This lease provides a method and an incentive," Mr. Lane stated, "whereby tenants will remain on their land owners' farms for a longer period instead of moving every year."

"Men who own the soil are the ones most vitally concerned in bringing about improvements encouraging tenants to remain and to take care of the land as if it were their own," he said in appealing to landlords to consider the flexible lease and other current proposals to improve tenancy conditions.

"The foundations of agriculture in this state are threatened by difficulties within the cotton industry," Mr. Lane continued, "and it is imperative that we develop a system depending more largely upon livestock and other diversified farm products. This cannot be done with farmers who stay upon a place for only one or two years. They must have time to build up their herds, develop pastures, build barns and fences."

"It is not the purpose of the flexible lease," he explained, "to benefit either land owner or tenant at the expense of the other. But it would stimulate mutual benefits, such as we already find in this very county, where some tenants have remained for a number of years and have planted orchards, built terraces and new buildings and improved old ones. Tenants of this type would be multiplied many times if assured that they will remain upon the land until they have received the benefits of their labor and expense, or that they will be fairly repaid for these improvements in case they should be required to move through no fault of their own."

The people of Texas, he concluded, were not yet ready to dip into the gutter for revenue.
