FIRST PAVING UNITS AWAITING APPROVAL

QUICK ACTION SEEN; WORK TO START MARCH 1

Repaving of South D and Other Brick Streets First

Held up temporarily because of the illness of Mayor J. T. Berry prevented holding a meeting of the commission to pass on the program, the first units of the Cisco WPA paving project were oked by the commission this week and the project dispatched to Fort Worth WPA district office for approval.

Quick action by the WPA authorities in Texas is expected, and work on the project probably will start March 1, city officials said. The units are part of a city-wide program already approved at Washington, and it is necessary now to receive approval only of the state WPA administration before starting work.

The first units call for repaving South D avenue from 14th street to the southern city limits; repaving Ninth street from E avenue to H avenue; repaving Seventh street from E to Front; repaving Sixth from E to Front, and paving Fifth from E to H.

The latter unit requires property owner participation to the extent of 70 cents per running foot of abutting property. The other streets, already paved with brick, require no such participation.

Under the project each street is a unit and work can be halted with any one of the several of the city finds it necessary, it was explained. The first projects will give work to about 150 men for a period of five or six months.

The city-wide project provides opportunity for paving practically all Cisco streets, provided the property owners of the city cooperate. Cost to them of the paving will be $35 per 50-foot front.

Suit for Divorce Is Filed by James Roosevelt

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16 (AP)—James Roosevelt, the president's oldest son, whose career in motion pictures put 3,000 miles between him and his wife, sued for divorce Thursday.

He charged the former Betsy Cushing of Boston and New Haven with desertion. They had been separated nearly 18 months, but had maintained strict silence in the face of frequent rumors that their 10-year marriage was headed for the courts.

Roosevelt, preparing to leave tomorrow for Philadelphia and a Washington birthday banquet speech, declined comment on the suit. In New York, her attorney issued a statement over her signature:

"I now confirm the fact that my husband and I have separated and that he has brought an action against me in California for divorce.

Agreement
"Under our settlement agreement I have the custody of the children (Sara Delano, going on 8, and Kate, 4). I expect to reside in the East. My husband, I am informed, will continue to reside in California. All other matters between us being of an entirely private nature there is nothing more to be said of public interest."

As recently as two days ago Roosevelt called "Jimmy" by everyone in the film industry—had repeated his stock answer: "Nothing to say," to a report he would file suit.

A few months ago, when the rumor bobbed up, an associate told a reporter:

"There will be no divorce action (Continued on Page Four)

'Perfect Crime' Slayer on Trial

Finns Battered From Front Line

LONDON, Feb. 16 (AP)—A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Helsinki Thursday night said the Finns have withdrawn from their first-line positions at a number of points in the Summa sector on the Karelian Isthmus.

The British dispatch said the Finnish withdrawal was admitted here Thursday night.

It quoted a Finnish artillery officer on leave as saying Russian artillery fire was so intense 2,000 shells had fallen around his battery alone, and that most Finnish casualties were from the hot artillery fire.

The greatest advance yet made in the fifteen-day offensive to knock out the Mannerheim line was reported at Moscow by the red army.

Fifty-three defensive fortifications, the largest number yet reported seized by the Russians in a single day's operations, were occupied in Thursday's fighting, the regular military communique asserted, and the Finns are being shoved back toward Kamara, four miles to the rear and to the east of Summa, scene of the war's greatest battle.

"Retreating to the Rear"
"The enemy is retreating to the rear, abandoning arms and war materials and suffering grave losses," said the communique.

The approach to Kamara indicated an attempt to break the Summa defenses by driving to the east.

At Helsinki it was reported Russian's great offensive rumbled Thursday night over a literal carpet of its own dead the entire breadth of the Mannerheim line, behind a murderous screen of artillery fire that dumped 20,000 shells into the battered Finnish positions in a single hour.

Again the Finns said they were holding fast to all vital positions and inflicting terrible losses upon the seemingly inexhaustible ranks of their attackers; again they insisted their own losses were phenomenally low. Nevertheless, the Helsinki government called to the colors the second class of reserves in two days. Thursday's call was for the class of 1896—Wednesday's for that of 1897. The men affected are from 42 to 44 years old.

4,000 Reds Killed
Thursday night's communique of the high command mentioned 4,000 Russians were killed on Summa fronts, exclusive of the Summa sector, where the heaviest fighting has occurred and the greatest losses registered.

AT LEAST 65 COUNTED DEAD AFTER STORM

At least 65 persons perished as a result of a howling nor'easter that left a wide section of the country—from Maine to the nation's capital and westward to Ohio—struggling to restore snow-bound transportation on land, sea and in the air.

Howling out to sea, the storm and gale disabled the Boston trawler Flow, which reported tonight she was "leaking badly" and in need of assistance about 300 miles east of Cape Sable, N. S.

New England, receiving the full force of the storm Wednesday night just before it moved out to sea, counted a toll of 19 dead. Twenty-one died in New York, 11 in Pennsylvania and 14 in New Jersey.

Accompanied by a gale which in at least one instance reached 80 miles an hour, the snow piled up in gigantic drifts, which buried automobiles, blocked rail and bus lines, made flying fields unusable and delayed shipping.

In Pennsylvania, country roads were blocked by drifts and a new light snow was predicted.

One Massachusetts fishing vessel, the Palmers Island, of New Bedford, was known to have been disabled and remained unreported since the height of the storm. Fears were held for the safety of her crew of five.

Clogged streets represented an acute fire hazard in New Jersey, three homes burned while firemen were helpless to bring up apparatus. There were two such instances in Massachusetts.

Many thousands of men found temporary employment clearing streets. In Boston alone, cost of snow removal was placed at $300,000.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Anderson are spending today in Dallas.

VAN OVER AND PARTY TO BE HERE NEAR 5

Castor Plant Expert Speaks Tonight at C. of C. Forum

M. D. L. Van Over and his party, including Gilbert C. Wilson, professor of chemistry at North Texas State Teachers college, will reach Cisco between 5 and 6 this afternoon to be met by Cisco chamber of commerce officials at the Laguna hotel. Mr. Van Over intended arriving at 2 o'clock for a tour of the agricultural areas around Cisco, but a severe cold and some unexpected business matters intervened.

There will be at least four in the Van Over party, H. H. Monk, chairman of the forum committee, was informed in a telephone conversation with the castor plant expert this morning.

Van Over will speak at the Cisco chamber's February dinner-forum at 7:30 this evening at the First Christian church. His visit is in connection with a program inaugurated by the Cisco CoC to test the possibilities for large scale growing of the commercial castor plant in this area, and Van Over, leading authority on the plant and an executive of the Woburn Degreasing company of New Jersey, will come prepared to discuss the subject frankly with business men, farmers and civic leaders.

Wilson to Be Here
Dr. Wilson, a previous and highly popular forum speaker, whose work with the starch sweet potato has attracted nationwide attention, was largely instrumental in bringing Mr. Van Over to Cisco for this meeting.

Representatives of many communities, large and small, in west Texas have been invited and numerous acceptances received, including some from Stephenville, Breckenridge, Eastland, Rising Star, Brownwood, Abilene and elsewhere. Special invitations have been sent county agents of the various counties and to representatives of John Tarleton college. Newspapers have also been invited.

Prospect was that, despite the influence of the rain early today, attendance on the dinner would be the largest of any yet realized at a forum dinner.

Entertainment will be provided by the German band section of the Lobo high school band and by Merle Jenkins, talented Caddo youth, whose accordion and piano music have been the sensation of public programs on which he has appeared in Stephens and adjoining counties.

Test Plantings
Test plantings of the castor bean are being arranged over a wide area about Cisco under the supervision of T. G. Caudle, Cisco vocational instructor, and these will cover practically every type of soil found here. Van Over is bringing sufficient beans with him to do this planting. Soil samples have been taken from each plot by Mr. Caudle and these are being analyzed. Soil testing equipment to be used in this connection has been purchased by the chamber of commerce.

Special invitations have been carried to the farmers of the Cisco country to attend the meeting tonight. The dinner is also open to women, as has always been the case with the CoC forum.

County Vote on Beer Sale Is Set for March Second

ELECTION IS HELD LEGAL BY ATT'Y GEN.

Eastland county will vote March 2 on whether or not sale of 14 per cent beer will be legal in this county. The order calling the election was passed by the commissioners court this afternoon, March 2 falls on Saturday.

The action of the court was in response to a petition of voters, found to bear the required number of qualified signatures.

The action was taken after a ruling of the attorney-general at Austin held that under the circumstances it was legal to call the election. The opinion was sought by District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., at the request of the court. Mr. Conner advised that his interpretation of the state laws governing such elections found it legal to call the vote.

The issue was whether or not it was legal to call, within six months of another election, a vote upon an alcoholic beverage in another of the three separate categories which the law sets up. The law prohibits a vote on the same issue within a year of a previous vote. Last fall the county voted out four per cent beer. The current election is on 14 per cent, held to be a separate issue from the four per cent.

Deep Well in Amity Pool Being Cleaned

RISING STAR, Feb. 16 (Spe).—St. John-Choate et al have this week placed a rig over the Smith deep well in the Amity field for the purpose of cleaning it out. It is understood that the hole will be acidized and may be given a light shot. A light showing of oil and a strong flow of gas was found in the well when drilled in at a little over 2,900 feet. The gas is to be used in re-pressuring the shallow wells in the field, it was said.

In the shallow field a new hole has been started off-setting Ayers No. 1 to the north. A test on the J. T. Landreth place was dry.

County Vote on Beer Sale Is Set for March Second

O'Daniel Sends Quarrel Back to Liquor Board

AUSTIN, Feb. 16 (AP)—Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel Thursday tossed the turbulent state liquor control board controversy back into the laps of its members.

To board members Dr. W. D. Bradford of Dallas, E. W. Crouch of McGregor and D. J. Decherd of Flatonia, who had appealed to O'Daniel for an investigation of what Dr. Bradford, a prohibitionist and former Methodist minister, said were charges against board Administrator Bert Ford, the governor sent letters replying:

"I consider all matter pertaining to the liquor control board still in the hands of its members."

Decherd and Crouch exonerated Ford of the unnamed charges which Bradford, appointed to the board by O'Daniel last fall, said had been made to him in the form of affidavits which he forwarded the governor with a request for an inquiry by "an authoritative agency."

Cross Fire
The board majority had accused Bradford of "going around the board" with criticism of its policies and asserted the charges had originated with discharged department employees.

Bradfield countered that the affidavits indicated the state's liquor traffic was attempting to determine who should be elected to public office in Texas. He admitted the complaints against Ford had come from "disappointed men."

In answering Crouch and Decherd, the governor stated today that "I am more certain today than I have ever been before that I made no mistake in selecting Dr. Bradford (for the board chairman post)."

O'Daniel answered Bradford's appeal for an investigation in a manner similar to that of his letter to the board majority, adding his thanks "for the service you are performing for Texas."

Crouch and Decherd, informing O'Daniel they intended to continue Ford's service as administrator, said Bradford's activities had brought the board into public disfavor and disrupted work of the department.

Reds Claim 53 Finnish Forts Taken

MOSCOW, Feb. 16 (AP)—Fifty-three defensive fortifications of the Finnish Mannerheim line were captured yesterday by soviet troops, a red army communique declared today, and "the enemy is retreating to the rear, abandoning arms and war materials and suffering grave losses."

The 53 defensive positions captured, the Russians said, included 21 iron and concrete artillery forts and brought to 153 the number of fortifications taken by the Russians in their 14-day offensive on the Karelian isthmus front.

The communique said soviet troops were approaching the station of Kamara.

Kamara is four miles north of Summa, focal point of the most serious fighting of the war, and is located on the Viipuri-Leningrad railway.

Six enemy airplanes were brought down in yesterday's war in the air, the Russian communique said.

FDR Bound for Fish or Statesmen?

ABOARD, U. S. S. LANG, Gulf of Mexico, Feb. 16 (AP)—President Roosevelt rode salt water aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa, while newsmen could only guess whether he sought belligerent fish or belligerent's envoys.

In response to a direct question, he neither affirmed nor denied that he might meet spokesmen of warring powers while cruising in southern waters.

Bouncing along on his convoying destroyer, reporters found much food for speculation, few facts in the chief executive's cryptic remarks at a final dry land press conference yesterday aboard the train that brought him from Washington to Pensacola, Fla., to start a ten-day-to-two-week sea trip.

Pursuing picturesque possibility—but expecting an awful "kick in the pants"—reporters asked if the president might have a rendezvous at sea or in some neutral port to discuss grave neutrality and peace problems with representatives of Britain, France and Italy.

Instead of dealing out one of the Rooseveltian oral spankings, the president said only that he did not think he would comment.

Oklahoma City Man Dies on Visit Here

G. M. Douglass, 49, of Oklahoma City, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. H. Erwin, last night at 11:30. The body has been sent overland to Oklahoma City by the Green Funeral home.

Mr. Douglass is survived by his wife and three daughters. His death occurred while he visited his sister here.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Since the Cisco chamber of commerce announced that it was bringing M. D. L. Van Over, castor plant expert, to the chamber's forum-dinner tonight, the general interest which Mr. Van Over's coming aroused has brought to light a number of instances in which the castor plant has figured in this area. It is well known that the ordinary variety of castor plant thrives in this country, where it has usually been looked upon as a pest except for chicken yard plantings and plots about the house cultivated for ornament and not profit. An instance has come to light in which a few of the plants grown in a yard near Pioneer produced "several bushels" of the beans on stalks reaching twenty or more feet in height. Most of these beans were burned, for want of any use. The plants were not of the commercial variety of course and it is doubtful if the beans had any industrial value.

"Doc" Sellers, Rising Star publisher, recalls in his journal this week that a former Eastland county farmer living between Cisco and Rising Star, H. F. Massman, now of California, was convinced of the possibilities of the castor plant and did considerable experimenting with the plant. "Doc" says Massman found the land here "admirably adapted to the propagation of the castor bean and grew some very fine specimens on his place."

None of these experiences can be taken to prove whether or not there is a field here for commercial development of the plant. Simply because the common variety of the plant has grown well in a section does not mean that the plant will be a commercial success. On the contrary only about six highly developed types of the plant are commercially valuable. It is true that the plant cannot be successfully grown for the oil alone. A plant from which by-products can be made must be produced to make it profitable to the grower and the processor.

There is only one way in which to find out about the possibilities of the plant. And that is to test it under actual growing conditions. This, of course, requires long range planning, cooperation and persistence.

The crop, even if found feasible, will not be a bonanza. On the contrary it will be another money crop for the farmer for which a market already exists. As such, however, it would be a valuable addition to the agricultural economy of the area and one which would contribute much to the prosperity of the section in future years. It is something well worth the investigation.

SERIAL STORY THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER BY HELEN WORDEN

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MARIE LA PORTE—model in exclusive dress shoppe, lives on a barge.
DAN DONOVAN—playboy son of a rich Irishman, in love with Marie.
TOMMY RYAN—leader of the truckers fighting Marie's father.
LYNDA MARTIN—society debutante, wants to marry Dan.
BAPTISTE LA PORTE—Marie's father, owner of a fleet of barges.

CHAPTER XXII
Dan Donovan's decision not to see Marie La Porte again came after he talked with his mother Saturday morning. Although he laughed at her, and teased her and saw through all of her silly ways, he adored her. If he had been asked, he might have said he cared for her even more than he did for his father, perhaps because she was such a transparent, lovable fraud. She needed protection. Until yesterday, he had never caused her any unhappiness.

He formulated his plans for the day as he shaved. He would breakfast with his mother; his father had probably gone to the office. He would go to the florist and order the best corsage money could buy for Lynda, but first he must find out what she was going to wear. Hang it, he knew what she was wearing, hadn't he seen the very dress on Marie.

At thought of Marie, the old ache came back. What had the girl done to him? He couldn't get her out of his mind night or day. He was glad for the interruption of a knock.

"Madame Donovan would be happy if you came to her sitting room for breakfast." It was Susette, speaking in precise English.

"O. K., be right down," sung out Dan.

Thinking of Marie, even for a few moments, as he first saw her, made him feel brighter.

On the way to his mother's apartment he wondered how she was. She probably had a hangover and a good one, to put it in plain English, after that swig of straight whisky she took last night.

Well, you had to hand it to the old girl, at least she swallowed it.

He would take his cue from her, if she spoke about it, he would ask her how she felt otherwise not a word. Even he and his father had avoided mentioning it last evening.

"Gee, it's good to have you back, Katie," Dan breezed in and kissed his mother.

She was sitting up on a blue satin chaise lounge, set in the bay window of her sitting room. The pink taffeta window curtains were half drawn to shut out the gray, stormy day. A fire burned cheerfully in the little gilt grate.

Mrs. Donovan drew her soft pink wool bed-jacket more close about her shoulders. "Tell me frankly, Dan," she asked, "was I drunk last night?"

"Why, do you feel as if you had been?"

She put her hand to her head. "Yes, I've got the worst hangover in the world."

She reached out for his hand. "You know I would never admit this to your father for anything, but you understand."

He squeezed her hand. "I'll mix something to chase that morning-after feeling away," he said. "No, don't go." Her voice grew even more affectionate. "Danny, dear. Did I dream it, or did I dress," he told the clerk. "Formal, I take it?"

"I suppose so."

"May I ask if it's a large party. We might be supplying other ladies with flowers and we wouldn't want to duplicate."

Dan told him he thought it would be rather big.

"Mrs. William Martin is giving it," he added, strolling about the store. He liked flower shops. A nosegay of tiny red rosebuds with a heart of forget-me-nots in the center, attracted him.

The clerk hurried forward. "What about these yellow orchids, sir. Expensive, but—"

"Fine," said Dan, absent-mindedly reaching in his pocket. "How much?"

"Thirty dollars, sir. They're the only three in New York. And to whom shall I send them?"

"Of course the nam does help. Miss Lynday Martin."

The clerk bowed obsequiously. "That's going to be quite a party, I understand. The owner of this shop is supervising the decorations."

Dan was back looking at the nosegay of red rosebuds. They made him think of Marie. He left them, reluctantly, in the window.

What a weak-kneed sap he'd been, he told himself, as he walked out of the flower shop. No more intention of see Marie La Porte again than he had of flying to China, and yet, here he was thinking of buying presents for her. He might send them to her anonymously, that's what he'd do, down through the years and she'd never know where they came from. Crossing 57th street, he turned north on Madison avenue. Another ache in his heart, the last time he'd been on this block was with Marie. A gust of wind and snow blinded his eyes. Head bent, he bumped squarely into a girl just in front of him.

She turned to protest. It was Marie.

"Oh, Dan," she cried. "I've been looking for you, and wanting to find you."

He put his arms around her. "My darling."

People passing smiled and hurried on.

"I came on this block because we'd been here," she drew away. "But this will be the last time

No doubt every home in Cisco has an old picture that you value at a very high price and would not take any amount of money for. Probably it's an old picture of your Mother, Dad, Sweetheart or someone that is dear to you. If its one of the old tintype or card pictures and you only have but one of them bring them to us and we will make you a new one from the old. We always keep a negative of your picture in our files and if ever you want another one made you can come to this Studio and we can supply your need, even if you don't have the picture. When down in town be sure and come by 511 Avenue D. and see this window at our Studio we have made up of this type of pictures. Our prices are right and the work is guaranteed. Cisco, Texas.
