NUMBER 305

FOOD STAMP PLAN APPROVED FOR COUNTY

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

There is any significance in the victory of Gov. W. Lee Pomeroy in his race for re-election as governor of Texas—a victory of greater magnitude than even his smashing election two years ago—it is that the people of the state are as much determined as ever that there be a change. For the great mass of the state of affairs, the state of affairs has been over-estimated to picture an insidious gang of professional politicians deliberately manipulating and organizing the governmental machinery as to confuse and defeat the efforts of the people and their honest representatives to make it operate efficiently and economically.

The truth of the matter is that the condition of affairs in the state developed like a long-tended crop. It is the long time result of a natural democratic struggle to prevent over-concentration of powers which tend to dictatorship. The struggle is providing the increasing number of services demanded as life grew more complex. The political ambitions of the hordes of officials and office-seekers who interested themselves in this struggle for selfish purposes contributed to the general result in a manner more confusing than any other.

Today we have a pattern of state government in many respects as archaic or feudal. Various counts, dukes and earls, defending with might their principalities, gathered into a curious formation of bureaus and departments which somehow manage to hold together, clinging along in the similarity of a common desire against the danger of being dissipated by an aroused public. The public doesn't know what is the matter, but they realize that something is wrong, that the organization isn't functioning as it should, and that it has to be changed and is now being changed in many things. But they don't know just where to apply the remedy. In a time of desperate determination to bring about reform, they have accepted O'Daniel both as an instrument and a symbol. He is honest, they believe. He is against the professional politicians. He is willing to do something. They want him to do it.

Now, it makes no difference whether or not you vote for W. Lee O'Daniel, the thing that O'Daniel stands for in the minds of the majority of the people of Texas, is a crusade for cleaner, simpler and more honest government of which he has become a symbol, is the supreme political fact of which his critics should take note. It would not change the significance of his overwhelming victory.

Morgan Gives Refuge to War Children

J. P. Morgan, the financier, welcomes the three British children to whom he will give refuge for the duration of the war. The older boy, center, with gas mask around his neck, is Lord Primrose. The younger lad on the right is George H. Smith. The name of the little girl in the nurse's arms is not known. The children were brought to New York on the SS Britanic.

McElreath Given Potential Test

A railroad commission potential test was being made of the Groover and Rose and Jones and Stansley McElreath Cadolime wildcat in the area south of Cisco today. Although gas pressure was so low that pumping may be installed, the test was being made on natural flow basis today. It flowed more than 50 barrels yesterday and again this morning, it was understood. Fluid level was not reduced. Operators said that on pump it would make from 150 to 250 barrels daily steadily.

BRITAIN IN DEMAND FOR DEATH PROBE

TOKYO, July 30 (AP).—Great Britain has demanded a full investigation into the death of Melville James Cox, veteran English newspaperman who, Japanese said, committed suicide after his arrest on espionage charges, reliable sources disclosed today.

Britain also has called for substantiation of charges of a British "espionage network" operating in Japan following Tokyo's action in rounding up several prominent British business men.

Japanese officials said Cox, a Reuters correspondent, dodged his guards and hurled himself through a second story window of the police headquarters while being questioned.

Foreign Sec'y Halifax said today that the British have taken a serious view of the arrest of 11 British men in Tokyo. He said he had summoned the Japanese ambassador to the foreign office and told him how seriously the government considers the incident.

The charge that the British business men were engaged in espionage activities, the foreign secretary said, is "pure bunk."

Former Mayor J. M. Williamson told the Cisco Daily Press today that he had not withdrawn from the race for the legislature from the 106th district, in which he and P. L. Crossley are in a run-off following the first primary.

"I shall have a statement to make within a few days," Mr. Williamson said.

NAZI STRIKE AT DOVER IN MASS FORCES

Port Is Logical Debarcation Point for Invasion

LONDON, July 30 (AP).—German pre-dawn raiders struck again today through the darkness at blacked-out towns of southeastern England where massed dive bombers yesterday pounded at the key defense works of Dover, within sight of the Nazi-held coast of France.

In one southeastern town bombs smashed into a working class residential district, wrecking homes. Residents fled to air raid shelters but the first bombs exploded before all could take cover. There was no estimate of the casualties.

Other raiders streaked inland from the northeast and southwest. For three hours German planes circled over Wales, dropping 14 bombs in one area. No anti-aircraft fire was heard.

Adolf Hitler hurled his greatest aerial thunderbolt against Dover, the logical debarcation point for any invading force, in a day-long series of savage attacks yesterday.

For an explosive half-hour upon wave of dive bombers and fighters—80 in all—blasted at the channel port, only 22 miles from the French coast and possible initial objective in the first major invasion attempted against England in 847 years.

British fighters, long-awaited just such an attack, swarmed into the skies to tangle with the attackers. Official figures placed the bag of Nazi craft downed in this engagement at 20, but unofficially the total was given as 23.

The ministry of information, relaxing its restrictions against naming towns attacked, gave permission to name Dover as the scene of the day's major battle. Earlier the action was referred to only as over a "southeastern port."

Some of the most important military concentrations in England are at Dover, a town of 40,000 and it was at these the Germans apparently were aiming their bombs.

Towering above the city is an ancient fortress, modernized in recent years. Military men say it can withstand virtually any assault.

Protecting its fine harbor are huge stone breakwaters through which in peacetime pass ships on the cross channel route between Dover and Calais.

From the Dover cliffs the shores of German-occupied France may be seen on a bright day. Today's tremendous attack led many Britons to believe Hitler would not be long in launching his threatened frontal assault against Britain—the first since the legions of William the Conqueror successfully invaded this island kingdom in 1066.

The day's overwhelming score in favor of Britain's defenders was offset somewhat by the announcement of the sinking of the destroyer Wren, 28th destroyer casualty of the war, by a Nazi air bomb.

"German machines were falling like autumn leaves," one eyewitness of the day's major battle reported. "Fragments of German planes, some blown to pieces by direct hits on their bomb racks, came down literally in showers."

Miss Marian Jacobs of Abilene visited friends in Cisco Sunday.

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy with scattered showers and thunderstorms Tuesday and Wednesday; little change in temperature.

EAST TEXAS: Partly cloudy; scattered thundershowers near upper coast Tuesday and Wednesday; moderate to fresh southeast and south winds on the coast.

Gale Hurls Grandstand Roof On Fans

Seven Amarillo, Texas, baseball fans were injured when a 45-mile-an-hour wind struck the grandstand roof under which they were sitting and huddled it down on their heads. Over 2500 fans were awaiting the start of a regional league all-star game when the gale struck and forced postponement of the game.

300 OR MORE EXPECTED AT FFA CAMP

Between 300 and 400 Future Farmers of America, members of chapters in Area Four of the State of Texas, will gather at Lake Cisco Thursday, Friday and Saturday for annual encampment under the sponsorship of the Cisco FFA chapter. The encampment devoted strictly to recreational activities, is annually held at the Lake. Facilities of the Presbyterian encampment grounds and the city parks are used.

Each chapter will do its own cooking and provide its sleeping quarters.

T. G. Caudle, instructor of the Cisco chapter, is general chairman of arrangements. He will be assisted by W. B. Cowan, Jr., of Paint Creek, director of playground baseball; Mr. Tiner of Breckenridge, director of water polo; W. A. Morgan of Comyn, director of horseshoe pitching; Lester C. Burk of Rotan, director of washer pitching; Charles B. Bell of Ranger, director of swimming and diving; Roy D. Armstrong of Scranton, director of shallow water wash tub boat racing and C. E. Hill of Albany, director of boxing.

Weekly Program at Fee Esta Wednesday

The third in a series of weekly summer programs will be given at the Fee Esta park at 8:15 Wednesday night. An interesting and varied program has been planned. The response to the two past programs has been very good indeed and an effort is being made on our part to continually improve the program.

In as much as the program is given for your benefit and enjoyment it is hoped that if you have any suggestions or ideas that will help to improve the program in any way you will not hesitate to offer them. The WPA Recreation project cordially invites your attendance.

Ciscoan Youth Is Advanced in Navy

Roy Little, son of Mrs. Frances Little, is with the United States fleet somewhere in the Pacific Ocean. Roy joined the United States navy in December and since that time has been advanced to range keeper. In a recent letter to his mother, Roy stated that shortly he expects to be made a first class seaman.

Cisco Golf Women Hostesses to 55 Monday

Monday the Cisco golf women entertained approximately 55 golf women from Breckenridge, Ranger, Graham, and Phillico. The morning was spent in matches. Luncheon was served at the Lake View Inn for the visitors and matches and contests were continued in the afternoon.

Prizes in the various contests were won by the following: Medalist, Mrs. Mary Watts, Cisco. Putting contest, Mrs. A. A. Webster, Breckenridge. Bogey hole, Mrs. Tunnel, Phillico. Long driving, Mrs. Glen West, Ranger.

The group was invited to Graham to be guests of the Graham golf women on August 13.

ARGENTINA HEDGES ON AGREEMENT

HAVANA, July 30 (AP).—Argentina hedged last night on the important American foreign ministers conference agreement on treatment of foreign possessions in America by making a reservation to its signature of the "act of Havana."

Members of the Argentina delegation said that any signature put on the document here would have to be approved finally by the government in Buenos Aires.

Although they said the matter was merely an "academic question," the fact was that Argentina by making the reservation, left the door open to back out of an agreement that had been accepted by other nations as the most important continental defense measure ever taken in Pan-American conference.

In making the reservation some of the Argentine delegates said they did not want to take any action that would indicate a desire to take authority that rightfully belonged to congress.

Cecil Huffman's Condition Better

Some improvement in the condition of Cecil Huffman, critically ill with a bloodstream infection, was reported from Graham sanitarium early this afternoon.

Mr. Huffman became ill last week from an infection believed to have developed from a small pimple on his face. The infection proved to be one of the most virulent types, physicians said.

WHAT PRIMARY ELECTION COST CANDIDATES

August 6 is the deadline for filing third and final expense accounts for the first primary election, it was announced.

Absentee voting in the run-off primary begins August 4. First expense account for second primary, August 12 to 16. Absentee voting for second primary ends Aug. 21. Second primary will be held Aug. 24.

First Primary Expense

Candidates are now filing their final expense accounts for the first primary. Only one, W. L. Phippen had filed final report Monday. A list of the candidates for county judge and commissioner who have filed, their first and second reports, include the following:

For County Judge: Turner M. Caille, first and second reports, $204.71. R. L. Rust, first and second reports, $516.09. C. S. Eldridge, first and second reports, $696.77. Oscar Chastain, first and second reports, $299.40. W. S. Adamson, first and second reports, $543.

Commissioners

W. L. Phippen, first and final reports, $115.85. Joe Donoway, first and second reports, $127.75. Joe Tow, first and second reports, $178.50. John A. Blackwell, first and second reports, $123.25. Deadline Put On Rumanian Balkan Pact

BUCHAREST, July 30 (AP).—Germany has given Rumania until Sept. 15 to settle her territorial differences with Hungary and Bulgaria by direct negotiation, it was reported in authoritative quarters.

If there is no agreement then, it was said, the axis powers plan to step in and impose their own settlement.

Other than expressing satisfaction with the outcome of the Salzburg conference with Hitler, Premier Ion Gurgutu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu made no public comment. They reported direct to King Carol.

The government later issued a communique expressing appreciation for the German-Italian "comprehension of real interest for Rumania and the maintenance of peace in this part of the continent."

The communique said that "only general principles to establish conditions which can lead to a definite entente in the Danubian basin" were discussed at the talks with the axis heeds.

TO BE PUT INTO EFFECT SEPTEMBER 1

To Replace Old Method of Distributing From Depots

Cong. Clyde L. Garrett today wired Eastland county officials that the department of agriculture at Washington has approved Eastland county for a set-up of the Food Stamp plan of the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation, effective at 11 a. m. today.

Thus the efforts of the county commissioners court, County Auditor Don Parker and Eastland Co. Sec'y Tanner to institute this program in the county in the place of the old method of distributing commodities to relief clients from depots, has met with success.

Regional Dir. James S. Allen, of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corp., Food Stamp division, announced that the program would go into effect in the county about September 1. Emmett A. McBride, program organizer, is now in the county making preliminary plans. Joe Black of Cisco has been named by the commissioners court to handle the county stamp office at Eastland.

Institution of this program of disposing of surplus commodities to relief clients through regular retail channels will mean about $15,000 to $20,000 per month additional income to the grocers of the county, it was estimated.

A call meeting of the county food industries committee will be summoned in the near future, Tanner said today. Later there will be a called meeting of all grocers, including wholesalers.

Details of the plan will be explained fully during the month. The program has worked with great success in various other parts of the country in which it has been tried.

However, Juliu Maniu, leader of Rumania's powerful peasant party, opposed any further ceding of territory.

Rumania's Iron Guard organization also has said there must be no further loss of territory and has declared that the people would fight first.

Sources close to the government indicated that Rumania might try a compromise to solve Hungary's claims.

Mrs. John Jones left today for Brady where she will recuperate from an appendectomy which she underwent recently at the Graham Sanitarium.

Coronation in a Washroom

HAILE SELASSIE is one of the most pathetic figures of today's world.

He is pathetic not because of the loss of his Empire of Ethiopia, not because of the Seventeen Umbrellas in the exploitation of which he preceded Chamberlain. But there is about this caged Lion of Judah something infinitely appealing. Perhaps it is in the way in which his poor brummagem empire was tossed about on a sea of world events which he could scarcely comprehend, much less control.

Five years ago his Ethiopia, for all its proud tradition, was a mangy little hill kingdom of the equator, dirty, unkempt, and fly-specked. Atop all this sat Selassie's court, glittering with misbegotten magnificence like a dime-store bracelet on a dung-hill.

Yet with all this, Haile Selassie among his ignorant tribesmen was not unenlightened. He evidently sought to improve his country, and he joined the League of Nations, listening to the promise of the world's great powers that even so bizarre a land should be allowed to work out its own destiny in its own bizarre way.

Came the Italian legions, and Haile Selassie had to look on helplessly while the "great" powers showed their collective impotence to protect him against the rapacity of one to whom even his poor loot was too tempting.

NOW the collective impotence of the "great powers" has involved them all, and as a detail in a greater struggle, Haile Selassie is dusted off and given backing for an attempt to regain his lost glories. He came to Alexandria as the quiet, lustrous-eyed little man whose civilian dress could not conceal his innate dignity.

He entered the men's washroom of the former Italian Yacht Club, and was seen to emerge clad once more in the resplendent uniform of an Ethiopian generalissimo, once more King of Kings, Elect of God and Light of the World.

It is ridiculous, it is pathetic. But is it any more ridiculous and pathetic than the struttings and posturings that have put Europe where it is today? One can find it in his heart to weep for the little Negus, but never to laugh at him.

Not having heard from Confucius in recent weeks, we begin to wonder if he wasn't just another of those political candidates who wound up as also-rans at the conventions.

It being summertime, and hot, we find the Youth Movement extremely inactive, especially when it comes to having the lawn mowed.

In this scientific age, the little voice inside one is no longer his conscience. It's just one of those new pocket radios.

A certain farmer's hen lays an egg in every new car that stops at his owner's home. Certain radio comedians do the same thing for every new sponsor.

U. S. Marines on Guard in Tropical Isle

Far across the Pacific is a tiny tropical island where approximately 600 Americans are living, yet it is virtually unknown. It is remote from the routes usually followed by tourists and, apart from the natives, nearly all of its white inhabitants are attached to the naval service.

The name of this little-known island is Guam. It is about 30 miles long and from 4 to 8 miles wide and has been owned by the Uncle Sam since the Spanish-American war. Thousands of U. S. Marines have served there for varying periods, and despite its isolation the island is an important outpost of the Pacific.

Guam's chief value to our government is as a naval base, although it is entirely unfortified. Its population, including the naval establishment, is about 23,000 and has increased rapidly in recent years.

"Most of the U. S. Marines who go there expect a Robinson Crusoe existence," says Sergeant William H. Greene, in charge of the Marine Corps recruiting station, 401 U. S. Co., "house Building, 10th and Lamar streets, Fort Worth, Texas. They are surprised to learn that Guam is quite up-to-date with compulsory education, a hospital, several churches and many of the conveniences of the mainland."

O'Daniel Asks Cooperation In State Program

AUSTIN, July 30 (AP)—Governor W. Lee O'Daniel declared Monday the result of Saturday's primary in which he was re-elected over all opponents was a great victory for the common citizens of Texas, and appealed for cooperation in accomplishing a program which he outlined.

Argentina Headed--

The Argentine action created a complicated situation with regard to the old Pan-American conference custom of unanimity.

The United States which always has been a stickler for unanimous consent to such matters, actually had the agreement of the 20 other American republics to sign the "act of Havana," yet Argentina at any time could say: "We withdraw our consent."

Just as Argentina waited until the last minute on Thursday to introduce its own resolution on foreign possessions in this hemisphere, it waited until the "act of Havana" was ready for the final plenary action—the formality of signature—before slipping in the reservation about the necessity of getting its government approval.

Argentine Headed--

They also showed runoff necessary August 24 between Pierce Brooks and Olin Culberson for the railroad commission and James P. Alexander and Hal Lattimore for chief justice of the supreme court.

Interest was shifting heavily to the outcome of legislative contests where well-known legislators were defeated and returned for additional terms.

Nineteen of 20 Texas congressmen asking re-election appeared to have won and Rep. Clyde Garrett and Sam Russell faced a runoff in the seventeenth district.

Ernest O. Thompson, runner-up to O'Daniel, and Harry Hines, runner-up third, in brief statements congratulated the governor. Jerry Sadler, in fifth place, said he bowed to the people, pledged cooperation with the governor "if he wants it and as long as he stays with the will of the masses," and declared he would continue his fight for a tax on those "with ability to pay and against any form of the sales tax."

Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, running fourth, had made no statement.

No Bitterness

In his statement, Governor O'Daniel said the "battle of ballots" culminated "one of the most bitter and ruthless assaults" against his efforts to carry out the will of the people.

He asserted that the campaign was over, that he felt no bitterness and that he would devote his time to serving all the people of the state.

The major tasks facing the next legislature he outlined as financing social security, making more money available for education, providing better facilities in eleemosynary institutions, providing for retirement of the general fund deficit, submission of a constitutional amendment prohibiting appropriations without providing taxes in advance to meet them, establishing budget control, making the state auditor responsible to a legislative committee, providing money in special funds to be placed in the general treasury to be paid only on appropriation and consolidating state departments.

"On taxation," he said, "I stated in my opening announcement that my personal preference would be

9-Cent Loan on Cotton Predicted

WACO, July 30—A nine cent government loan on the 1940 American cotton crop was predicted here today by Burriss C. Jackson of Hillsboro, past president and chairman of the legislative committee of the Texas Cotton association.

Jackson said some loan announcement would likely be made by the department of agriculture just as soon as funds are made available by congress, which is expected shortly.

"Under existing world conditions any loan much higher than nine cents would take the States completely out of the port field, even with an subsidy," Jackson added.

The Texas Cotton association said that Brazilian cotton, selling at $10 a bale below American cotton, and that it would be ruinous to Texas growers to lose any more of our exports.

MAR... JONES, TEXAS CONGRESSMAN, BOOM FOR CABINET POST IF WALLACE RESIGNS

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Although President Roosevelt has said publicly he "assumes" Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace won't resign in order to campaign for the vice presidency, there are New Deal strategists who are hoping the secretary will step down.

Catton

They see two things to be gained that way; some of the disgruntled party brethren could be appeased, and farmers who don't like the Wallace crop-control program could be brought back into the fold.

To replace Wallace they are suggesting Congressman Marvin Jones of Texas, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture. Farmers who oppose Wallace's production-control ideas would warm up to Jones, since he has been identified with the more popular domestic allotment-cost production plan. And since he is a Farmer Democrat, putting him in the cabinet would assuage a lot of wounded feelings in the southwest.

VAGUE PROMISES GAINED SEVEN VOTES
SENATOR JOSH LEE OF Oklahoma really started the Jones boom. At the convention he discomfited the Oklahoma delegation wouldn't go for Wallace; in a caucus, the secretary got only four votes. So Lee hunted up Harry Hopkins and suggested that Wallace, if nominated, be replaced by Jones.

Hopkins replied that he naturally had no authority to promise anything of the kind, but would promise to lay the request before the boss back in Washington. Lee returned to his delegation and made his report; and merely on

Miller-Penney Take Close Win Over Recreation

(By Softball Reporter)

Last night's game was fairly one-sided until the seventh inning. The Recreation boys never gave up and came back in the seventh to score 7 runs which was just short. Miller-Penney managed to nose them 16 to 15 with runners on third and second. Pitcher Starling took a hot grounder then to toss the man out at first and win the ball game.

Jack Tong pitched a very good game. His support wobbled some and he gave over to Howsley who did a creditable job for his team until the disastrous 7th, when everything went wrong. Manager Starling then took over and finished, getting out with the win. You will have to admit that A. D. can dish it out but he can also take it. He came through some of the worst tightest any pitcher could possibly be in, yet came through with his head in the game and won.

C. Pippet did well for the losers but did not have his usual control. His support wasn't the best that could be found and he finally gave over to a newcomer named Perry, who did exceptionally well except a fat pitch to Rylee that went for a home run with two on. Rylee, White, and Howsley led the hitting for Miller-Penney. Horn, and Boles led Recreation. Manager Horn made no bones about his teams misdeeds, but did his best, by shifting his players to win. He almost did, too.

Only 3 fights were fought, three of the fighters failing to show up. The first fight was a honey, Little Billie Anderson, 79 pounds, soaking wet, laced a game and battling Freddie Mayhew. It was very fast, and those boys gave all they had. Travis Childers, who loves to fight, took on J. V. Allen in a bout to fill in and took the decision. Buford Childers also took Marion Smith into camp by hitting him every way for Sunday. Marion might have won if Buford hadn't squirmed, ducked, and scampered away. It was a good bout. They had fought several bouts without gloves, so this was to see what they could do with them on.

Moffett and Callarman refereed the bouts. Mr. Leach, Coach Petty, and Dizzy Dean were the judges.

Norris Demands Congress Quit As Inefficient

WASHINGTON, July 30 (AP). — Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) said Monday that "congress has become the hysteria center of the country" and urged adjournment on the ground that further sessions would be "dangerous" but others held that prospective defense measures made chances remote for leaving the sizzling capital.

"There is not a member of congress who is in shape to pass upon legislation," Norris said in an interview, referring to a heat wave which has seen the temperature in the upper 90's more than a week.

"Congress has not done a damn thing since before the republican convention and it's in no mood to do things right now. All this talking and bickering only tends to produce hysteria."

With democratic majorities in both house and senate, Norris said the leaders should force a test vote on the adjournment question. Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky) said that "no one can predict when congress will adjourn" on account of pending measures. Senator Harrison (D-Miss) thought it might be possible to clear up defense and tax legislation for an adjournment "sometime in September."

Senator McNary (R-Ore), republican leader and vice presidential nominee, was unchanged in his demand that congress stay on the job even during the fall election campaign.

SERIAL STORY

SUMMER THEATER

BY MILDRED WILLIAMS

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

JOHNNY REGAN'S hand, jingling the coins in the pocket of his bush coat, closed suddenly over Jean Reynolds's last letter.

He took it out and read it again, trying to form in his mind a polite reply, something saying firmly but he thought she was a swell girl but that they had both better give up the idea of orange blossoms, wedding bells, and a two-room apartment in Boston. He would tell her he intended spending the summer on the Cape, keeping shop for his friend, Ned Walters, while Ned was in Canada. Perhaps, here on their old stamping ground he would be able to survey his life, to find out what had happened to their love affair.

But Jean's impulsive, upright scrawl staring up at him from the beautifully monogrammed stationery didn't help matters: "Darling," he read, "What on earth happened? Dad is furious. Jobs, he says, don't grow on bushes. Not one 1940 graduate in 700 could have walked into a job as good as the one he offered you. But you don't have to take his old job, if you don't want to. I told him so. Going to bat for you as usual. I love you so terribly. But for you to leave without a word to me. That hurt. Truly it did."

Johnny crumpled the note and threw it into the empty grate. He went to the door of his shop and looked out on the clean strip of blue sea before him, watched the gulls dipping like graceful waves in the sky. Why had he come to Cape Cod, of all places? The Cape, where he and Jean had spent summer after summer, playing together? Where every landscape reminded him of something they had shared.

MEMORIES of the Reynolds' cottage with roses looking as beautifully unreal as a stage set, roses sprawling over the gateway and down the wall. The more modest "Regan Raven," weathered gray by the sea's relentless spray. Jean Reynolds, her brown legs trotting after him as they trudged over the wet sands. He smiled, remembering.

Jean had always made him feel important and infallible. When her father had brought her the noisiest sailboat, she had murmured, "I wouldn't dare go out alone, Johnny. Always go with me, please."

And so they had played and sailed and dug in the sand, until suddenly they were grown up. He was at Harvard and she was standing with him on the bank of the Charles, watching their sculls nose out a win. She was dancing with him at a prom, her pretty face upturned to his. She was saying as they walked out into the moonlight, "Why is everything I do with you such fun, Johnny?" And because the moon was pointing its silver finger from behind the ivy-covered corner of a building, making a fairyland of the whole yard, he had answered, "I feel the same way, Jean." He had kissed the small flower that was her mouth, smoothed the sweet curls of her hair.

She had looked up at him with shining eyes, "Oh, Johnny, this is what I've hoped for. And on our wedding day I want you and a prayer book and the cameo—no orchids or champagne or cake, with a silly little bride and groom on top."

The Reynolds came, prized possession of her family, was a priceless bit of stone and gold fashioned by artists. And Jean wanted Johnny and the cameo on her wedding day.

STANDING in the doorway of his shop, decorated so feignly with its strings of lacquered gauds, Johnny hated himself. He wished a surgeon's knife could have cut out of his heart all of the uncertainty, to leave him feeling about Jean as he had that night one year ago.

He wanted love, but a love more sweeping than the mere comfort he felt in her presence. Once she had said, "Love comes in like the tide." He wanted a love to come in that way, sweepingly and overpoweringly.

The bell on the handle of his shop door jangled, and he walked to greet a customer.

"Nice day," he said, professionally.

"Ummmm," she acquiesced and smiled.

Johnny's throat contracted as he stared at her. This was why he had known her and Jean were washed up! This was the girl he had known in his dreams, a tall blond reed of a girl. He wanted to say, "You're poetry by Yeats. You're music by Chopin. You're a sunset with nymphs by Frazer."

But he only said, "Nice day," and watched her as she roamed about the shop, reading the rhymes he'd written for his wares. He watched her and wondered where she belonged in Captain's assortment of summer people. The tide had come in, as Jean had predicted. He was in love.

"Anything in particular you wanted to see?" Johnny asked.

"Yes, and no," she glanced at Johnny, and he noted that her eyes were the deep blue of violets, not the trusting brown spaniel ones Jean had turned up to him, "I want to borrow an old lamp for our set in the next play."

"So that's it," Johnny said, with relief.

"What do you mean? Oh, we'll give your shop credit for any props we borrow. It'll be good advertising."

"Oh, that part's all right. We Cape Codders are used to turning everything over, lock, stock and barrel, for stage sets in summer. I was trying to catalog you for my file of summer people. You're with the Theatre. You see, it's settled."

She sat down on the old sea chest in front of the window.

"Don't stare so. You make me feel like a ghost."

He hadn't realized he was staring, but he amended hastily: "No ghost, but a dream. You make such a nice picture, sitting on my sea chest. I'd like to use you for a window display."

Her laugh, too, belonged to Johnny's dream, a deep, melodious sound of bells ringing.

"Sorry," she said, "but I'm a window display somewhere else. That's what summer theaters are. Showcases where producers from New York can come down to look over new shows and new talent."

"Are you new talent?" Johnny asked her. With one of Carter Earl's apprentices he might have a chance; with actresses from Broadway the answer to summer romancing was usually, "No dice."

"You've been reading my mail. I'm new to them, but I'm not new, really. I'm Hayes, I'm Cornell, I'm Hepburn. But I'll have to prove it."

Johnny reflected that anyone so lovely without footlights or make-up would have very little difficulty proving anything. He answered playfully, "You left out Duse and Bernhardt and Mrs. Siddons."

"I'm serious," she said firmly. "This summer I intend to meet everyone who's important theatrically. I'm tired of dramatic schools and apprenticeships. I intend to go places on Broadway."

"All of you do. I've spent every summer since I was 6 watching the sweet young things from Carter Earl's theatre fret their way upon the stage."

"And then be seen no more? Well, listen to me, whoever you are. I let him give me his worthless, old scholarship, knowing he planned to import leads from the city, have a regular cast from Equity and that we little apprentices were to do all the dirty work and 'oh and ah' approval."

"No indeed for all the fire and vinegar, though it is becoming," Johnny laughed. "I don't count. I'm not theatre."

She jumped down off the sea chest and started to the door. She was laughing herself now. "Sorry, Mister, that's just my pet peeve. Some night you must come and see me fretting my way upon the stage."

She was leaving and he hadn't told her any of the things he wanted to say! Even now he surprised himself with the evenness of his voice.

"I'd like to show you the town some day when you aren't too busy. We could go down to the beach on a couple of rented bicycles. But I've never dealt with strong women before. I daresay that sort of thing would bore you."

She almost shook her head, then hesitated, looked at him with a little frown.

"If you're a Cape Codder, you ought to know a lot of people. We're getting up a patrons' list, and . . ."

"I get it," Johnny said, "but some day we'll see the sunset first . . ."

"Right," she told him, and held out her hand.

She swung out of the shop, and the bell on the screen door jangled after her. Johnny watched her go down State street toward Cottage. He liked the way her pink linen skirt flirled about her bare knees. He turned and went back into the shop, the sound of her voice still echoing in his ears. When he looked at the sea chest he could almost see her sitting there, swinging her feet, kicking her heels against the worn oak sides.

Suddenly, he stopped still. He ran to the door. She had gone. Absolutely disappeared. And he didn't even know her name.
