Plateau Convention A Big Success

Approximately 3,500 People Present—
John F. Taylor Re-elected President for 9th Consecutive Year

Approximately 3,500 people attended the ninth annual convention of the Plateau Singers, held here, Saturday and Sunday, when the best talent of the twenty-six counties of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico joined together in what was said to be the best convention ever enjoyed by music lovers of this section. Song leaders, both secular and sacred, pleased the large audience with the widest variety of songs ever exhibited in a music fest of any type or size. A large number of the most popular music companies had their quartets, trios, and soloists present to partake in the ceremonies of the day. Charter members of the Plateau organization stated that the Lockney convention was the best ever held and were more than pleased with the co-operation given by the people of Lockney and Floyd county. Representatives from each of the twenty-six counties contributed their parts on the program with a degree of excellence hitherto unknown. John F. Taylor, President of the Plateau Convention handled the meeting with the greatest efficiency, and the Advisory Board were busy throughout the two days contributing their services towards making the meeting a success.

What might have been a very serious fire was prevented by the quick work of our fire department Monday morning about 7:30 o'clock at the Consumers Fuel Association station. The pump was immediately stopped and filling pipe hurriedly removed, scattering gasoline as it was jerked from the barrels. Flames enveloped the platform and quickly spread to the ware house containing tanks of oil. The flames were spreading over the oil tanks, but the quick work of the fire department put out the flames before the tanks were sufficiently hot to explode.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—On a pleasure trip on a liner in eastern waters, made possible by a lucky turn of fortune's wheel, the narrator, Philip Amory, impetuous but well-born young Englishman, World War veteran, now a trader at Daru, on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a young musical comedy actress known as "Gin-Sling."

CHAPTER II—He learns she is Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family, and after their introduction, tells her something of his life in Papua, including his knowledge of a wonderful gold field at Tatata, on the island, though he does not reveal the name of the place. He is told by "Gin-Sling" (Genevieve Treacher) that Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshaw, prominent in the islands. Amory leaves the ship, his holiday ends, as Fanshaw comes aboard, eager to greet Pia. Amory, however, is confident the girl is not indifferent to him.

"You don't," she stated, coolly. "Not after saving my life and all."

"Liking?" I said. "No, I don't like you. If I saw more of you, I should love—you. But liking, that's another thing."

Jenny puzzled this out. She was not used to subtleties. But she could jump to conclusions with fearsome swiftness, and she jumped now.

"I know what you mean by love," she said, and suddenly, coarsely, she turned and spat into the water.

"Do you know," she said—and she turned so that I could see her face; the bird-like eyes, gold eyes rimmed with dark; the desirous, beautiful mouth, the circling hair—"Do you know what the square emerald ring on Pia Laurier's hand is?"

"Ring?" I said stupidly. Most men notice rings scarce at all. I remembered seeing jewels on Pia's tanned brown-satin wrist—or was it on the fingers, with the dainty white V-marks between, where the sun had spared to strike?

"Do you know who set that fashion?"

"I didn't know it was a fashion," I answered, still hopelessly at sea.

"It was Princess Mary—when she got engaged. All the smart girls have wanted square emeralds ever since. Smoke that."

She whirled, one of her dancer whirrs, and left me. "Come on, girls," I heard her crying down the deck. "Get the gramophone going again. 'Nother dance—drink hearty, we'll soon be dead."

So little did I understand what she meant, that I was conscious, at first, only of relief. She had let me go; I could hunt up Pia Laurier, who had not been visible all afternoon. Part of my coinage of golden hours was still unspent; I must husband it, use it wisely. Pia—Jenny—

I was hurrying toward the music room, an excellent strategic point for viewing the main companion and the decks—when the full meaning of Jenny's remarks, and of her fierce "Smoke that!" broke on me.

Princess Mary had fancied a square emerald for an engagement ring. Princess Mary had made square emerald engagement rings popular with the set to which Pia Laurier belonged. Pia wore a square emerald ring—I remembered—fatally I remembered now—on her third left finger.

Three times, then—by my poverty by her position, and by the significance of that ring—Pia was not for me.

I believed what Jenny had said; I was very sure she was no liar. It was merely a determination to leave no stone unturned, that made me decide I would see Pia once more—only once—before I left the ship, and ask her to her face if what I heard was true.

Once, across the saloon that night I saw the clear profile, the beautifully shaped black head. Once, on deck the rose-geranium perfume that Pia Laurier used, came floating across a little space of dark, and I saw a pale dress pass—hesitate—go on again. I did not move; I said no word. If I am angry, I am angry. That night, had I taken the velvet neck of Pia in my hands, and twisted it back till it gave way, cracking, in my hands, (as I have twisted the neck of a German, rolling together in trench mud) than held her and kissed her as I had not yet done; as, I knew now, never should.

It was very early when the engine came to rest next morning, and the ship, her way stopped, lay still upon the eel-pond-blue waters that surround Goodie Island.

Here the tender from Thursday was to meet us, and here my false splendors were to end. Phil Amory, bit of war wastage, trader from the back end of nowhere, was "to be taken to the place from whence he came." And if, once arrived there, he chose to hang himself by the neck till he was dead, it would be nobody's business but his own.

My suitcases were on deck, my steward tipped, the tender rising and falling below the ladder, on which I was just about to set foot, when the sound of my name, clearly and almost precisely spoken, made me look round.

Pia was there, at the head of the accommodation ladder, holding out her hand, the hand that did not bear the emerald ring.

I could not refuse to take it. I felt her cool fingers in mine, for one everlasting moment; and it was as if they came, in that moment, home, where they had always belonged. I don't know which of us first let go. I know that in one moment, with the tender dapping below and the luggage gone, and the passengers who were to join coming up the ladder, I realized that I had been an incredible fool, and that it was too late to do anything at all about it. If she was engaged—if she wasn't—she liked me. Me. She had not been flirting. Her eyes were dark with sleeplessness, and the shadow that comes of love denied. She looked at me, and made the little movement with her lips that means . . . you know. And I would have given five years of my life for the chance—impossible now—of taking her in my arms and kissing her very breath away.

All round us there were deckhands scrubbing, stewards carrying things, the fourth officer was posted at the head of the ladder, a stewardess, armored in white starch—God knows what she wanted there—was gaping in the nearest doorway. Passengers, new arrivals, began to shove past Pia and myself, coming between us. "Sir," said some cursed person, "if you want to go ashore, you'd better not keep the tender; captain's anxious to get away."

I don't know what I'd have done—missed my passage, maybe, and trusted to luck to see me back from the East when I had spent every coin I owned, getting there—if, at that minute, a very tall, thin man had not come up the ladder, pushed determinedly between Pia and myself, and taken her by both hands. He kept pumping her wrists up and down, and staring at her as if he could never have enough of it. He was extremely handsome—sharp regular features, somewhat marred by a brief George V beard, chestnut hair clipped close to keep it from waving, large, brown, hard eyes, figure of an athlete. I could have cheerfully split his skull with an ax. I knew who he was without asking; but if confirmation was needed, I had it when an obsequious steward rushed forward, treading on my toes as he went, and bleated—"What cabin, Sir Richard? Shall I take your luggage, Sir Richard?"

Instantly the whole weight of the social system by and in which the clan of Lauriers lived, seemed to press down upon me like a giant hand, pushing, relentlessly, Pia and myself apart. I saw in one thousand-faceted vision, the world my people had owned and lost; its myriad reserves, defences, shibboleths, its fierce prides and pitiless scorn; its solid pedestal of property, lifting all who belonged to it far, very far above the mud and dust in which we others must go.

The tense moment passed. Sir Richard had let go Pia's hand; was busying himself with the traveler's eternal preoccupation of baggage. I had seen what I had seen, and I knew, as well as if I had had an hour to think it all out, instead of a couple of seconds, that what was—for Pia—was best. I could wreck her engagement if I chose—of this I was sure—but I was equally sure that if I could, I would not. I would drop out of her world as I had dropped in. The male Cinderella's pumpkin coach was ready; his hour had struck; back to the ashes! and let the fairy princess stay in her palace, undisturbed.

If I was sick at heart, as I went down that endless stair, I was doubtless no worse than many millions elsewhere who were sick at heart that day, and of the same disease. So I tried to tell myself, when the tender was reached, and I had found a seat on the roof of the cabin, and the engine was beginning to turn over with loud spitting and drumming noises. So I tried to believe, when I saw the face of Pia looking down at me from the rail, a long, long way above, and felt her eyes fall on me like the light of a star, strange, sad, remotely fair. I, who was merry enough by nature, had no laughter left in me that day, else I think I must have been amused at the sudden sight of Mrs. Laurier, arrived too late, shooting her celebrated death-ray at me "with intent," as she stood, kimono-clad, in the alleyway door. Or at the other, fairer vision on the ship's sacred bridge—I knew at once that only Jenny could thus profane the high altar—holding an imaginary glass to its lips, waving an arm at me, and shouting what I guessed at, but could not hear—"Drink hearty, we'll soon be dead!"

Then the tender champed and fussed away, and the ship receded faster and faster, and that chapter of my life was done.

CHAPTER III

I came back to Daru, off western Papua, on a brimming tide, that masked the mud-flats with acres of reflected island, miles of bright mirrored sky. The dream that I had dreamed on the great liner clung about me still, but only as the after-math of an opium carouse may cling about a man who has left behind him, days and miles away, the place where he drank, and dreamed.

I reached the Daru roadstead, anchored, stung my dinghy out (for I had made the hundred-and-fifty-mile run across from Australia, alone) got pratique from the thin, young government official who rowed out to meet me, and changed with him the news of the islands.

By and by I slung my gear together, looked to the cable of the cutter, rowed myself ashore and pulled the dinghy upon the stones. I walked upon the endless stretch of Daru Jetty. The tide, now, was running fast away to sea, and the coming sunset was reflected in sheets of muddy flame upon the flats left bare. I had slipped through the magic door, got myself into the Fourth Dimensional world that lies beyond the world that most men know.

If the thought of Pia Laurier came back to me, in my trading store, behind the beach of Daru, I think it came as a chime of bells comes, from some distant clock tower, sounding often, scarcely heard; part of one's life, yet scarcely remembered, unless, for any reason, its music is withdrawn. Possibly I would have told anyone who asked, that I did not think of her.

She had gone through my life—it seemed—as a sudden gust of wind goes through a house, scattering the common things of hourly use, breaking the mirrors, slamming windows and doors, and making the place look as if nothing would ever be the same again.

But winds pass by, and household goods are gathered and set up once more. The wind that was Pia had blown, and passed—I thought.

One trace it had left. I could not keep from thinking of Sir Richard Fanshaw. He troubled me. Not so much because he was going to marry Pia, though that was a spot of raw pain, never unnecessarily touched—but because of a certain, odd, floating resemblance in his face to something, some one undetermined, that had struck me, in those few moments upon the ladder of the ship. It worried me as a name, half forgotten, worries; and that is like a loose tooth in the mouth.

It troubled me at the oddest moments. My store—I think I have not

My Store—I Think I Have Not Told You—Was Almost on the Beach.

It stood perched upon high piles, with a flight of rough steps leading up and in. The interior was one large dusky cave, with light that fell from doors set at each end. At first, you didn't see much; in a minute or two, the shining clusters of tin billycans and pannikins in the roof, and the piled strata of cottons, red, yellow, pink and green, and the loin cloths and the yard-long knives, and the strings of beads, like strange little fruits, and the plates and the lanterns and the sacks of rice and the towers of tinned meats and fish, became dimly visible, each in its place.

There was always a wind blowing through, from door to door, and there was a mossy and fishy smell from the reef, not unpleasant, and a warm whiff of frangipani flowers; for Daru is full of these. . . . Daru, Daru by the western boundary of Papua, where civilization stops, ships come seldom, and time is marked by rise and set of sun—Daru, an island, filled with the spirit of the islands, holds in its heart, though it is Western Pacific, the secret of the true South Seas.

All very well, and I felt it, as I moved about among my cottons and tins, bargaining with wild fellows from the Fly for a canoe load of coconuts, selling tinned meat for turtle-shell, rice for a catch of trocas. I felt it, and liked it, for I had tasted the honey of the South Sea world, and its flavor was pleasant to recall, though in truth the strong liquor of the Western Islands suited me best. But why—why was the store, and the blaze of green bush and dazle of seawater, seen through its open doorway, and the smells of reef and shell and frangipani flower—ay, and the very winds that blew unendingly from door to door—why was all this connected in my mind with Richard Fanshaw, airman, company promoter, wealthy man and future custodian of Pia Laurier's life?

I could not tell. Often I did not think of it. I was reasonably busy as a trader, and my beat, up and down the coast in a cutter, was a long one; the crucial peak of solvency had just been reached, and passed, and I was beginning to send money up to Port Moresby bank. Not much, heaven knows—but still, it was prosperity, or the dawn of that pleasant condition; and it promised.

"Industrial Leadership Depends Upon The Freedom of the Electrical Industry"

SAYS PROFESSOR MICHAEL PUPIN
 Director of the Phoenix Research Laboratory

Some one has said that "the only changeless thing in the universe is its eternal change."

Today, as never before, we live in a changed and changing world. Before the war, the world was an essentially political world. Today, economics takes the centre of the stage.

Prodigious as our government is, we realize that there are some things it cannot perform to the best interests of its 120,000,000 people. The very size and cumbersomeness of its machinery put certain limitations upon it.

Providing electric service for our homes and industries today call for highly trained executives of outstanding ability. Faced with technical problems of the utmost complexity, it is essential that the electric light and power companies be managed in accordance with the highest standards of business efficiency.

The soundest economic thinking and experience accepts as fundamental the need of individual enterprise in the conduct of any business requiring specialized knowledge. Individual initiative has given America the greatest electrical development ever known. Individual initiative alone can solve the greater electrical problems which the future holds.

This week's issue and also next week's, except for some material left by the editor, will be in the hands of the regular force, with the feeble assistance of the Methodist parson. Mr. Adams vacated his seat of honor as editor for a couple of weeks to attend the twenty-first annual Rotary Convention meeting in Chicago, June 23 to 27. Mr. Adams goes as the official delegate of the Lockney Rotary Club.

No doubt this will be a great convention, and the local Rotarians are fortunate in having Mr. Adams as their representative, as a newspaper man, he perhaps will be able to bring back to us valuable information that the average uneducated traveler could not get. There is no doubt but the boys up there in the great metropolis of the West, as Chicago is called, will have the time of their lives. The June copy of the Rotarian denotes much space to the wonderful time the Chicago boys are going to show their visitors. Here is hoping our representative and his family, who accompanied him, will escape the rough hands of gangsters, and come back on time, safe and sound. We think it is exceedingly wise that our representative's family accompanied him, for there is nothing so contributes to the proper equilibrium of a man as the presence of his better half. For proof of this assumption you are respectfully referred to the graphic story of Maggie nad Jiggs.

Seriously, we wish for Mr. Adams and family a safe journey, free from any serious mishaps, and that journeying mercus may be theirs, and a most joyous and profitable trip.

We hope the next two issues of the Beacon will be at least passable, all the good, credit us with it, all the bad, lay it on Harry. He's gone, Selah.—J. E. Stephens and the force.

Editor's Note—The following article was written by Miss Watson on the eve of her all Summer's Journey, which will take her through the Canadian Rockies, on to Alaska, back to our Pacific Northwest, through national parks, and other places which await the visits of those who resolve to "See America First." In her own inimitable style, she will describe her experiences in other articles soon to appear in the Beacon.

High In the Rockies

By Marion Watson

Today we are high in the Rockies. In a sea of mountains atop the world. Up shaggy slopes, through clammy tunnels, crackling over creeks and mountain streams, and out upon the shores of glass-green, half-frozen lakes, we are winding our way through these "Alps of America" whose pinnacles pierce the clouds. Hour after hour, mile after mile, the giant range twists and tosses on the horizon, its heavy blanket of snow pieced by millions of spruce tops that rise through the silent whiteness like a village of cathedral spires. In the canyons, hundred of feet below, armies of aromatic pines and aspen twinkle in the sunlight, as they stand guard in fantastic formations. Far up, as high as the eye can see, the mountain crests are outlined against a jutting sky-line of sapphire blue. And over all, is a brilliant, penetrating sun.

Now and then, a deer bounds out and crosses the road with an incredible spring. A bear ambles along and stares curiously over his shaggy shoulder. In the brush on a gentle slope, a flock of antelope graze lazily. For sheer, indescribable beauty, these mountains are the premier spectacle of America. Submerged in centuries, yet enchanting, and eternally new, they are as exhilarating as a rare old wine. Snow-clad peaks, gleaming white glaciers, rugged precipices, waterfalls, foaming torrents, canyons, beautiful lakes set in pine forests, . . . flung together by the Creator in unparalleled profusion. . . are all visible in the course of a day's journey.

TEXAS THOUGHT

(Editor's Note: Opinions expressed in this column do not necessarily constitute the editor's opinion. The column is reproduced as an impartial analysis of the political situation as seen from Austin.)

POPULAR control of governmental functions in Texas still is one of the foundation planks of the Democratic party in Texas. Such was the tone of remarks of members of the State Executive Committee of Democrats meeting in Austin on Monday.

Committee members voiced disapproval of the Terrell election law that places control of party elections and conventions within the purview of statutory law. Steve Pinckney, committeeman from Houston, voiced particular disapproval of the election law and declared that party solidarity and independence was contingent upon a repeal of the Terrell law and the substitution in its place of a workable statute that would leave party control within the party.

CENTRALIZATION in politics or in governmental affairs is being frowned upon at the present time. A majority of the candidates for high state office have declared themselves in favor of allowing the electorate to retain control over governmental functions. Governor Moody, however, is one of the advocates of centralization. At one time he favored a proposition that would permit the election of only three state officials—governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general. All other state officers he declared should be appointive.

He termed his proposal the "short ballot idea", and expressed the hope that some day it would be the rule in Texas.

MOODY, it was thought, would take the "short ballot" idea to the electorate. His dramatic refusal Monday to be a candidate, however, removes that possibility—unless, of course, Ross Sterling, Moody appointee to the highway commission should decide to adopt the Moody idealism.

The withdrawal of Moody brought about sharp exchange of retorts between Ferguson and Moody, and even though it was an anti-Ferguson crowd the honors of day were about equally divided.

Love will get his name on the ballot despite his refusal to pledge himself to support party nominees. He frankly told the committee that he would not support Mrs. Ferguson should she be the party nominee for governor, or R. L. Henry should he get the senatorial nomination.

The courts told Love that he could get his name on the ballot even with his mental reservations, and the Dallas senator boldly asked the committee—"What are you going to do about it?"

The committee did nothing and his name will be certified.

PROMINENT among gubernatorial candidates at the state meeting Monday were Thomas B. Love and Barry Miller, both of Dallas, and former governor James E. Ferguson. Ferguson is running his wife's campaign and it is therefore safe to call him a candidate for governor. Lee Satterwhite was present looking after the candidacy of Clint C. Small of Wellington.

W. Gregory Hatcher, who made a last minute switch over from the governor's race to that of railroad commissioner, also was among the present LESSER state candidates also, were present either in person or by proxy. Walter C. Clark, candidate for state treasurer, was looking on, and George H. Sheppard, seeking re-election to the comptroller's department after an appointive term of less than a year, had friends present who looked on at the committee proceedings. Edgar E. Witt's friends were present boosting the former state senator's campaign for the lieutenant governorship.

In addition to the candidates and committeemen, a crowd of curious ones were present. A delegation of negroes from San Antonio, claiming that they were lifelong Democrats, waited outside the hotel in an attempt to get a hearing before the committee upon the question of being allowed to participate in the primaries. The committee refused to hear their plea.

COUNTY committee will meet Monday and by lot will determine the position on the ballot that shall be occupied by the various state candidates. Certificates will have been mailed out by Albert Sidney Johnson, secretary of the state committee.

Whether all county committees will obey the instructions of the state committee, however, is a debatable question. Several members of the state body in meeting Monday declared that their home committees would obey only that portion of whatever instructions were sent to them as pleased their individual desires and temperaments.

After the First Twenty-five Thousand Miles

THE VALUE of sound design, good materials and careful craftsmanship is especially apparent in the new Ford after the first twenty-five thousand miles. Long, continuous service emphasizes its mechanical reliability and economy of operation and up-keep.

As you drive the Ford through many months and years you will develop an increasing pride in its appearance and a growing respect for the substantial worth that has been built into it. From every standpoint—in everything that goes to make a good automobile—you will know that you have made a far-seeing, satisfactory purchase.

Wherever you go, you hear enthusiastic praise of the car and this significant, oft-repeated phrase—"I'm glad I bought a Ford."

A FORD owner in New York tells of a 13,000-mile trip across the United States and back in sixty days and says "the car was extremely economical to operate, comfortable and speedy." A grateful father tells how the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield saved his wife and children from serious injury.

To test tires, a large company drove a new Ford day and night, for an average of 500 miles every twenty-four hours. It was still giving satisfactory service after 105,000 miles.

A Ford car that had fallen into Fernan Lake was submerged for twelve days before being raised. After a new battery and carburetor bowl were installed, it was driven back to Spokane under its own power.

Many police departments have written of the special advantages of the Ford in crowded traffic because of its alert speed, acceleration, and ease of control. An increasing number of fleet owners are also purchasing the Ford because their cost figures have given conclusive proof of its economy of operation and up-keep.

In addition to important triumphs in Germany, France and Italy, the Ford won six out of seven leading places in a contest in Finland, first and second in the Rafaela races in Argentina, first and second in the run from Copenhagen-to-Paris-to-Copenhagen, three gold medals in England, first ranking in the durability test over the tortuous Amancaes road in Peru, and first place in the 1930 reliability run conducted by the Royal Automobile Club of Sweden.

This contest was an exceptionally severe test of endurance and sturdy construction because it was held in the dead of winter and covered 600 miles of steady running over snow-covered country roads and mountainous hills.

HISTORY OF THE SOUTH PLAINS SEVENTH GRADE

Here we are at the very last lap of our Grammar school days and to us it has seemed years and years, yet when we mention it to our mothers or teachers, they say "Why is it possible? It was only yesterday you started to school."

One bright day we went our first day to school down at the "Old Sunset" building, two miles east of the present building. It was only a three room building painted white, and very few cars passed along to cause us to stop our studying, and we had never dreamed that the railroad would pass so near, and bring us a real train—for to us a train was a vision, only East Texas children saw them.

That first morning back in 1924 we saw three teachers—Mr. Tate, Mrs. Nelson, and Mrs. Snodgrass, or as we have always said "Miss Verna." We knew Mr. Tate and Miss Verna because we'd visited some the year before and saw them. But Mrs. Nelson was new, and we thought she was so pretty, and how she could sing. That morning Mr. Nelson, who was county judge then, came and made a very interesting talk. Then we went to our room which was the one on the south side.

How well we remember those blue walls and the pictures of some babies laughing and some crying, and at the bottom it said it was a dark and stormy night. But the next morning everyone was happy "n" everything. Also charts for phonics, cards for reading, and number work, and Woodrow Wilson's picture and some flags. Most of the seats were soon filled by the first three grades. The first grade set on the south side of the room and was made up of the following: Sibyl Karr, Ruth Richards, John Lovejoy, Homer Holden, Noel Davenport, W. H. Wooton, Frank Counts, Linnie Milton, and Gladys Gilliland. Soon we were listening to stories about the letters and all the phonics families, and sentences on the board, and in a few weeks we could read in the Playmates primers all about May and Will and their dog, Fly. We soon found that we must do as we were told at school. One day we were skating on ice when Miss Verna told us not to any more. We thought perhaps she had forgotten and were soon skating again. But she had not forgotten and in a short time we were punished. Imagine, how we felt when J. T. Cummings laughed at us. But the teacher spied J. T. and he too, was punished. Our first appearance on the stage was in a "Tom Thumb Wedding," most of us being flower girls, best men, and etc. Doodle Milton was the groom and Nina Mae Calahan, the bride. Those who were not in the wedding were in a flag drill. We had nine months of school that year and it quickly passed, and some of us stayed in the first grade and some of us went to the second. Linnie Milton and Gladys Gilliland were promoted to the 3rd grade.

The next year 1925-1926 we had Mr. Tate and Miss Verna again, and that was the year we took Mrs. Phegley from Liberty. Miss Verna was still our teacher and the class was made up of the following: Earnest Kelly, Ruth Richards, Odessa Thomas, J. T. Counts, Arley Shears, Jo Si Collins, Gladys Gilliland, Linnie Milton, Irene Simpson, and Gladys McGavock.

Mountainview consolidated with Sunset that year and we had several new boys and girls from over there. That was also the year the new brick building was being built and we thought they'd never get it done so we could move into it, but finally long about Thanksgiving we were rewarded by waiting and moved into our beautiful new building. Oh, how pretty our room was and our desks were "bran new". At Christmas we had a play and a beautiful big tree down in the auditorium for the whole school. That was the first year we had the trucks and we enjoyed riding in them very much because they were new and ran beautifully.

On Fridays of that year we always sang and had some kind of program down in the auditorium. We remember so well the songs "Ba Ba Black Sheep," "Hickery Dickery Dock" and others we learned. But that year came to the end and we were ready for the fourth grade.

We entered the fourth grade the year 1926-27 with the teachers Mr. Tate, Mrs. Phegley, and Miss Verna. The class was made up of the following: Irene Simpson, Earnest Kelly, Arley Shears, Ruth Richards, Odessa Thomas, J. T. Counts, Jo Si Collins, Gladys McGavock, Linnie Milton, and Gladys Gilliland.

We were all glad that we were in the fourth grade and in the room with the fifth and sixth grades. Irene Simpson seemed prouder than any of us that she was in the fourth grade and in Mrs. Phegley's room. One day Irene failed to know her lesson, Mrs. Phegley had her to remain in at recess and recite it. After she recited it and was leaving the room she said, "I don't like Mrs. Phegley any more." Mrs. Phegley heard her and made her stay in longer.

We had nine months of school and we were all glad for vacation time was nearly here. We were all taking our final exam. Some were ready for the fifth grade and some were not.

We entered the fifth grade the year 1927-28. There were a good many new pupils with us. The teachers with us that year was Mr. McCloud, Mrs. Phegley and Miss Verna. We were very crowded that year and after Christmas the trustees hired Miss Pearl Cowand. The fifth grade class was made up of Irene Simpson, Edith and Thelma Tedford, Jo Si Collins, Arnold Gilliland, J. T. Counts, J. B. Piland, Annie Lee Pitman, Linnie Milton, and Gladys Gilliland.

That Christmas we had a Christmas tree in the school auditorium. April the first 1928 almost every one in school ran off. We were almost to the canyon when we saw a school truck coming toward us. We ran and thought we could get to the canyons and hide before the teacher got there. But, Mr. McCloud, our principal, caught us. He would put part of us in the truck and would go back after some more and those in the truck would get out and hide. Finally he got most of us in the truck and took us back to the school. It was a solemn march without music when we went into the schoolhouse. He took us in his room and whipped everyone of us. These are some of the ones that he whipped. Irene Simpson, Jo Si Collins, Arnold Gilliland, and Linnie Milton.

This year came to a close and we entered the sixth grade with several new pupils, among them were Flavi Gilbert, whom everybody thought that he was very good in his lessons, but soon found out different. Another one was Cecil Cook, but we found that he was timid and afraid of girls. Another one was Juanita Hawkins, who was timid and would not speak for fear she would blush. Miss Bessie Wood was our teacher, and we missed several of our classes when her beans came to see her. All of us passed from the sixth to the seventh grade that year.

It was the year 1929-30 when we entered the seventh grade. We had another new teacher, which was Miss Noevle Hawkins, whom we thought lots of, for she introduced a new trick in our school. She made her pupils grab their ankles when she punished them.

The same pupils are with us this year that were with us last year, although, we have several new ones. They are Thelma Smith, John Hayes, Frank Claunch, and Arby Mulder. Thelma used to enjoy going to school to Mr. Cook, but she doesn't any more. Arby Mulder things he is quite of a jelly bean because he claims he used to be a hand on a ranch.

We have had two parties since it got warm and had an enjoyable time at both parties, which were given at Mrs. Jarnagin's and Mrs. Milton's.

One day Mr. Cook was gone from school to a ball game and part of us were late coming in the room. Next day we all had to bring excuses from our mothers telling what we said when we came home. We sometimes wonder if they wrote all we said.

We all have had a very enjoyable time during our school days. We are now at the end and ready for a new field of work next term of school.

We hope that the coming years of our school days will be as happy as those numbered in the past.

TEXAS THOUGHT BY WAYE

AT LAST the Texas electorate draws a sigh of relief. There will be no more candidates this year—the state ballot list was closed on June 7 and that for county offices on June 14. Now the voters have only the problem to solve of making a choice from the large numbers that have announced.

Prior to the closing of the lists many voters were undecided. Some cherished the hope that new material would be brought into the races that would be less objectionable than some already in. But the time has passed; the hope has faded—and the electors must choose from those who have offered.

THE DRAMATIC entry into the gubernatorial race of R. S. Sterling and the more dramatic withdrawal of Governor Moody furnished grounds for many voters making up their minds in reference to the gubernatorial candidates. Three East Texans, men who attempted to draft Moody into the race, have pledged support to Earle B. Mayfield. On the other hand, Cone Johnson of Tyler, one of the early sponsors of the Jim Young candidacy, is reported to be making eloquent speeches in favor of his chief on the Highway Commission, R. S. Sterling.

East Texas, supposedly a Young stronghold, apparently seems to waver between Mayfield and Sterling, with perhaps Mayfield having the edge due to the fact of his early entry into the race.

ABILENE is said to be a good barometer of West Texas political thought. A correspondent of the San Antonio Express writing from Abilene reported to his paper that of the approximately 9,000 votes that will be cast in Taylor county it is likely that Mayfield will carry a plurality. He picked Mrs. Ferguson and Tom Love as second and third place winners.

Former Senator T. H. McGregor of Austin makes the same prediction in reference to the vote of the entire state. He picked the three leaders as Mayfield, Ferguson and Love, but refused to state which would place first and second.

DAVIDSON and Sterling will fight it out in the South Texas territory near Houston. Of a half dozen or more South Texas voters questioned in regard to the gubernatorial possibilities in their localities, each was emphatic that Sterling would be the leader. Some placed Barry Miller as a close second.

But the fact that Davidson also is from Houston will mean, it is said, that the vote will be so split as to leave both out of the running.

WITH FOURTEEN persons seeking the nomination for the governorship, candidates for the minor state offices are having a hard problem to make themselves heard. It is such an easy matter to get a gubernatorial candidate to make a speech in any locality that a seeker after one of the minor offices would not draw a handful of listeners should he announce a speaking date. Faced with this extremity candidates for the Treasurer's and Comptroller's offices are being forced to resort to the personal solicitation method. Walter C. Clark, candidate for State Treasurer, and George H. Sheppard, seeking the office of State Comptroller, already are in the field. Both have had political experience and realize that they must get before the voters in order to win.

Their opponents and candidates for other minor offices are resorting more or less to placards and letters. But "placarding" days are not what they once were. The Highway Department has ruled that candidates cannot place placards on telephone and telegraph posts along routes of state highways. Legitimate newspaper advertising is profiting by the huling and more and more candidates are resorting to the columns of the weekly papers.

THE CONTEST for nomination to the post of railroad commissioner now held by former governor Pat M. Neff will be a spirited one. Senator Nat Patton of Crockett, doubtless, will be Neff's most formidable rival. Patton started campaigning at an earlier date than did Neff, but the Neff friends are getting busy. Placards and platform literature are being sent supporters in all sections of the state and the candidacy of the former governor is expected to gain momentum within the next week or ten days.

POLITICALLY speaking this correspondent knows nothing except what he hears. Who's going to win in each of the races. One day reports have one candidate on top and the next day it is another. So there you are. Politically, this columnist knows nothing until after July 26.

Shantung, Durable and Inexpensive, Is Ideal Fabric for Summer Frocks

SHANTUNG proves itself one of the most popular and correct fabrics for summer wear.

Its light weight, its ability to stand up under much wear and tear, its pliable texture and its pretty colors give it four-fold appeal.

More than that, it is inexpensive. It washes easily and irons to look like new, which is more than many fabrics can boast.

For the woman who goes to work, a frock or two of shantung will come in very handy. For the woman traveling, a dark blue or black shantung suit with colored organdie blouses is a blessing. Shantung is even excellent for the children's things.

Further, hats, shoes, bags and purses are on the market already made up in shantung. That makes it possible, with a minimum of shopping, to get all fixed up in a most presentable ensemble with your frock, and all its accessories matching.

FOR the business-like girl, a Paquin semi-tailored suit comes in a natural colored shantung trimmed with brown buttons. It has a little white shantung sleeveless jacket with a high collar. The skirt is pleated with a deep inverted fold at the center front, on both sides and in the back. The coat is semi-fitted, with brown buttons from the waist down and it has no collar. The little blouse has the same brown buttons. A bow tie finishes it.

Quite a different type of costume, but also one suitable for business wear or shopping in summer time, is a pink shantung frock made with an all around pleated skirt below a deep yoke made of bandings of the material. The waist has a deep yoke effect and bandings finish its collar line. A lingerie bow slips through these bandings, at the front of the neck, and can be changed to give variety. A bow tie of pink and black polka dotted chiffon or linen would be a good change.

Another pink shantung has a fairly long, circular skirt, pleated all around below the waistline, a tuck-in blouse of matching shantung and a sleeveless jacket all bound in a four-inch edging of brown. A stitched pink shantung hat has a brown grosgrain banding and brown shantung shoes, bag and purse make this quite a stunning outfit.

Among the shantung shoes shown are many embroidered ones. Shoecraft uses embroidered natural shantung for an effect ensemble set. Pinks and blues in many tones are used, so that the shoes may be worn with a variety of frocks. The shoes have pipings and heels of parchment kid and the pouch purse is bound in it, too.

Coolidge Is 58 On the 'Fourth'

Although Calvin Coolidge has retired from public life, his birthday will always be recalled as falling on Independence Day. The former president, 58 years old on this fourth of July, is shown in an interesting photo below as he appeared about the time of his 19th birthday, just before entering Amherst College.

THE GREAT COMMISSION

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for June 22. The Great Commission, Matt. 28:1-10.

THE great commission was the commission from our Lord to the disciples to go forth into the world and make disciples of all nations in His name and in His fellowship. In the fulfillment of this commission the disciples were assured of the spiritual presence of the Master. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the ends of the world."

The power of that commission has been manifest in the growth and progress of the Christian Church. Judged from the supremacy of the Church's ideal, and from the standpoint of the condition of the world in which the Church has to perform its work, it might seem at times that the progress of the Church and of the Gospel has not been great. But when one looks back over the years and sees the conditions under which the Christian Church began, the immensity of the forces of ignorance and of evil with which the Church has had to contend, the marvel is that even in 19 centuries such progress should have been achieved.

Where Science Has Failed

In our own day it is true that the progress of science in its revolutionizing of life seems immense. But science has not been particularly successful in solving many of the deeper problems associated with its own service. Where it ought to be, in harmony with its own principles, constructive, it has been, in large measure, destructive. Its implements and its agencies have been used too often not to benefit, but to destroy men and to make the conditions of their life not easier, but harder. When one observes in our own generation the failure of these most enlightened forces to accomplish the most enlightened ends and purposes, he gets a proper perspective of the way in which even the Christian forces of life have had to proceed. The Kingdom of Heaven is still a small measure of heaven in the immensity of a world that is only slowly transformed. But when one looks beneath the surface, he sees how vital and real has been this fulfillment of the commission of Jesus. The preaching of the Gospel and the living of the Gospel have been vital factors and forces despite all the shortcomings and defects of the religion of which this earnest preaching and practice have been a part. Wherever the Gospel has been fulfilled and earnestly proclaimed, it has produced much the same results, whether it be among savages in the heart of Africa, in the slum regions of a great city, or in social and intellectual circles of the more highly favored and called.

When the true experience of religion has come to men, it has made them responsive to the great commission and the divine commissioner. The man of wealth and social distinction who hears the call of Christ becomes a humble and earnest servant of his fellowmen. The man of education and training when he understands the reality of this commission becomes a teacher of his fellowmen. His educational advantages are not an occasion of arrogance or of superiority or of separation from his fellowmen.

Says Wichita Lady Suffered for Twelve Years from Stomach Trouble

MRS. DELLA SETTLE

"I cannot praise this Konjola too strongly, because I tried many other medicines and treatments, but none gave the remarkable relief that Konjola did," said Mrs. Della Settle, 1719 Mildred Avenue, Wichita. "I just had to force myself to eat, and nearly everything I ate made me sick. I had cramping pains in my stomach and bowels until I could hardly endure them, and I simply felt miserable all the time."

"Finally I decided to put Konjola to the test. That proved to be a wise decision. Right from the start I noticed improvement. I now have a much better appetite, and meals are a pleasure as food digests without pains or misery in my stomach. My bowels are functioning as they should, and it is certainly a relief to be rid of that tired, worn-out feeling. I gladly endorse this splendid medicine that restored my health."

Konjola has become the most talked of medicine in America because it makes good. And Konjola makes good in the most stubborn cases when given a fair trial and from six to eight bottles are used.

Konjola is sold in Lockney, Texas, at the Stewart Drug Co., and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

the NOISELESS way

ICE cubes are one of the greatest pleasures of owning an automatic refrigerator. Especially when you freeze them just as silently as nature makes ice. That's the way Electrolux makes them. Not the slightest sound to ever disturb or annoy you. Because a tiny flame and a trickle of water do all the work.

Picture for yourself a refrigerator that freezes ice cubes and desserts quickly, chills salads and drinks perfectly, and at all times gives a constant refrigerating cold that keeps food fresh and wholesome for days and days. That's Electrolux, the gas refrigerator . . . at your service. Won't you drop into our showroom to-day, or to-morrow at the latest, and let us tell you more about it.

Costs only 4¢ to 10¢ a day
It wouldn't be fair to keep the best part of the story from you any longer. You can slice your ice bill 1/4 to 1/2 by installing Electrolux.
