GUIDED MISSILES COMING?

In its issue of September 6, the Saturday Evening Post printed that an editorial note characterized as "perhaps the most desperately important message" it will publish this year. Entitled "Are We Ready for a Push-Button War?" and written by Joseph and Stewart Elson, it deals with the much publicized and little understood topic of guided missiles.

The principle of guided-missile warfare is simple enough. A button on a switchboard will be pushed, and a few minutes later a rain of missiles of incredible destructiveness will descend upon enemy targets. There will be no warning. The missiles will travel infinitely faster than sound, and so will arrive in complete silence. Factories, bridges, power plants, railroads, communications, even whole cities will be instantly destroyed—along with thousands and perhaps millions of people. The enemy's capacity to make war will cease to exist, and the conflict will be decided in a matter of hours.

That is the concept. We already have, in the atomic bomb and other weapons, the charges these missiles will carry. The problem is to produce a suitable missile. It is, in other words, purely a problem of developing a vehicle.

The Alsops begin their remarkable article with two statements made to them by a researcher in the field. He said: "The first thing to understand about guided missiles is that there aren't any. But the second thing to understand about guided missiles is that there will be."

When will practical missiles be ready to take to the air—and to the spaces beyond? The Alsops offer an answer to that based on extensive interrogation of the scientists. It is expected that an antiaircraft missile which will be guided by wonderfully perfected radar, and whose purpose will be to destroy invading planes, will be ready in two to five years. The intermediate strategic missile, which will be fired from planes, ships or forward bases, may be practical in six to ten years. Finally, missiles of the ultimate destructive power, with ranges up to 5,000 miles, which will make possible direct intercontinental warfare, may appear in ten to eighteen years.

Readers may wonder why no mention has been made here of the German V-2 missile which caused tremendous destruction in England in the last stages of the war. The reason is that researchers regard it as having been primitive in the extreme, even though it was a marvel of mechanical ingenuity and daring. Its range was short, and it could not be accurately guided. The V-2, by comparison with the missiles now on the drawing boards, will be like a muzzle loading blunderbuss opposed to a naval rifle.

The technical problems connected with the development of missiles literally stagger the lay mind. Even the Alsops, in a long article, have room only to touch some of the high spots. Ordinary metals would burst into flame at speeds far below those projected. Launching a missile which will proceed in seconds from the ground to heights of 60,000 feet or more and there start for a target, is an incredibly complex operation. Desirable fuels—capable of giving both sufficient thrust and range—are still in the laboratory phase. And, dwarfing all other difficulties, is that of guiding the missile with bullet-like accuracy to a target thousands of miles away.

As an example of the Jules Verne-like conceptions entering into the guidance problem, the Alsops cite one projected method whereby what amounts to a navigating bridge will be built into a missile. As the missile proceeds, instruments will take position from the stars, and constantly communicate orders to other instruments which in turn will operate on controls. The missile will thus be brought to its target precisely as a ship is brought into a port.

Achieving great distance is another terrific problem. One scientist believes that may be ultimately solved by joining two or more missiles together. One, for instance, would furnish the thrust for taking the missile off the ground and into the atmosphere where, at a given point, the second missile carrying the warhead would be "kicked" off, its engine would automatically start, its guidance equipment would take over, and it would proceed to the target.

What will be the cost of all this? No one really knows. Missiles will cost six or seven millions of dollars each to build, once we—or another nation—learn how to build them. A suitable wind tunnel for testing will cost more than $1,000,000,000, not counting maintenance. The total cost will obviously be incredibly great—greater perhaps than the cost of developing and making the atomic bomb. The science of utter destruction becomes more and more expensive.

Finally, must we give our money and our scientific energies to perfecting and manufacturing missiles? The Alsops feel that we must, in the name of self-preservation. It is known that the Russians are working on them at fever pitch, precisely as they are working with the problems of atomic power. Beyond the Urals, Soviet scientists are getting ready for another war. American scientists, with all the resources they can command, are doing exactly the same thing.

Mrs. Conde Davis went to Childress Saturday to visit in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Tony Landgrin, Mr. Landgrin, Ted and Gene. The two boys observed their birthdays October 8.

Mahon Reports On Conditions In Germany

By George Mahon

In a previous report I made reference to England where food is scarce and where life is hard for the British. From London our Congressional committee on Foreign Aid proceeded to Germany for three days. This was not time enough to see much but one of our sub-Committees will spend three weeks in Germany.

Generally speaking, Germany after the lapse of two years since V-J Day is still a nation of rubble and ruin. It hardly seems possible that places like Berlin, Essen and Frankfurt could be rebuilt within a decade. Some progress is being made in clearing the rubble and reestablishing business and industry but Americans who have not seen the war damage in Germany cannot possibly visualize what German cities look like. At long last the German people know with complete certainty what war is like.

Here is one of our difficult problems in Germany: Russia and Poland have control of the pre-war breadbasket of Germany. The United States and Britain have joint control of the industrial heart of Germany but our area is far from being self-sufficient in food. Under our agreement with Russia, the Potsdam Agreement, Germany was to be operated as an economic unit but Russia has refused to live up to the agreement. Under the law of nations an occupying power must prevent starvation in the area occupied. We can escape this responsibility by pulling our troops out of Germany, but if we stay we must maintain order and prevent starvation. If we pull out of Germany few doubt but that the vacuum would be filled by the Communists, which would mean that the full industrial capacity of the Ruhr would be at the disposal of the Russians.

I saw hundreds of German farms. I went into some of the farm homes and walked over some of the fields. The farms are extremely well cared for and, generally speaking, they have not suffered war damage. Fertilizer and equipment are needed but otherwise I doubt that there is much room for the improvement of European agriculture. The farmers apparently use every foot of ground to the best advantage. This year the crops are short because of the severe drought. Some of the Irish potatoes which were being harvested in Germany were little bigger than marbles.

German coal production is the key to economic recovery and coal miners are being given extra food rations to encourage output of coal. I visited a mine, talked with the miners and tasted some of the rations.

If the coal and industrial production in the British-American Zone be sufficiently increased, this will enable the Germans to export enough to get the money to make up the deficit in food. That is the objective now being sought to help the people help themselves.

There is no evidence of happiness in Germany. Indeed, there is little for these defeated people to be happy about. Yet they have no one to blame for their misery but themselves and their leaders. The people are not inclined to be friendly or to smile at passersby. Perhaps I mistook a state of hopelessness and bewilderment for unfriendliness.

Rarely do you see a man or woman on the streets of a German city who does not carry a satchel or small handbag of some kind. They are black-marketing, trading, and trying to devise means for getting food and other necessities. We went into some of their homes in the basements and bomb shelters of their devastated cities where conditions are the worst. Their cupboards were almost bare. Of course, there are variations of misery among the people. Some of them live better than others. The people who live on the farms are in far better position than the rest of the population.

Prior to the war many of the nations of western Europe relied on Germany for coal and steel and heavy machinery. Germany's neighbors are now in difficulty because those products are no longer available to them. How to permit the revival of Germany without encouraging the future rebirth of German militarism is the big question. The French are very vocal in opposing the revival of German production. America and Britain are trying to work out a level of industry for Germany which will enable Germany to become self-supporting without becoming a menace to the peace of the world. Of course, the Big Three have not yet made substantial progress in the Peace Treaty with Germany and until the treaty is made, makeshift policies will have to be relied upon.

Wanda Mae Rhine was one of twenty girls who attended the Dallas Fair on opening day. The girls were accompanied by their sponsor, Mrs. Masel Allen.

17,343 ENROLLED AT T. U.

Austin.—Enrollment in the University of Texas this fall total 17,343—the highest figure in its 65-year-old history. For the same period in 1946 the enrollment was 17,108.

Veterans number 19,577, as compared with 19,839 last fall. There are 496 less freshmen than were enrolled last year.

More stringent entrance requirements for out-of-state students, the growth of the junior college movement, and the housing shortage were listed as contributing factors to decrease in freshmen enrollment by Byron Shipp, registration statistician. Shipp believes post-war registration of veterans may have reached its peak.

Only 4 Percent Of Crosby Wheat Is Poor

College Station.—Crosby county wheat this year had a very low percentage of dockage due to poor milling qualities as compared with most West Texas counties.

The reason, says County Agent W. R. Kimbrough, is that wheat farmers in the county planted most of their acreage to registered and certified wheat varieties. Only four per cent of the wheat harvested in Crosby county this year was classed as poor-milling grain.

Plans are being carried out, says Kimbrough, to eliminate all the poor milling wheat in Crosby county. Over 5,000 bushels of registered and certified Westar wheat were purchased for planting this year, plus 10,000 bushels of certified Tenmar seed and 1,000 bushels of certified Comanche. These varieties are recommended as good millers. The grain was purchased from elevators and feed companies that are cooperating by stocking good planting seed.

Kimbrough says plans are already made to organize an association to produce certified wheat and to build a seed cleaning and treating station.

Come On, Texas!

When action aboard the Battleship Texas reached battle heat, her crew members used to shout, "Come on, Texas!" . . . which meant: "Let's get in there and fight!" After 35 years of service, through two world wars, she won't fight any more. The Navy has put her on the retired list, and, unless the State of Texas takes action, she goes to the scrap heap. But she won't go to the junk pile, if thousands of Texans can help it. They are already contributing to a $225,000 goal needed to bring the old battleship to the San Jacinto Battlegrounds, below Houston.

She is seen above, steaming out to open sea, as she was in her glory as a capital ship of the U. S. fleet. To bring her home to Texas, Lloyd Gregory, chairman of the Battleship Texas Commission, urges every Texan to aid the fund-raising campaign which began September 15. All contributions are to be sent to Mr. Allan H. King, Battleship Texas Fund, First National Bank, Houston 1, Texas.

(Continued from page 1) participation but that since other roads in the county were ahead of this one on the building schedule, it would probably be three or four years before the road could be paved with state participation unless the federal government makes another appropriation for farm-to-market roads enabling the State Highway Department to build these roads without counties participating in the cost. The group then decided to investigate the matter of asking for an increase in the amount of the proposed bond issue to an amount sufficient to provide for the Aiken-Providence road and possibly other roads in the county which are not included in the present program. It was estimated that a bond issue of $565,000 would be necessary to provide for all roads.
