1941 Polio Drive Brilliant Success

The 1941 annual infantile paralysis campaign in Dallam and Hartley counties is history.

And it's a glorious history because more people joined actively in the program this year than ever before.

Support came wholeheartedly from every nook and corner of the two counties.

A new departure this year was sale of memberships, designated by a tiny lapel emblem depicting two polio victims and emphasizing how completely American children are looking to the Mercy Dollars, raised in these annual campaigns, to protect them from the maiming death, and to help restore those who have or may be stricken.

This membership or roll call idea had a universal appeal. People from strictly rural communities, where no formal benefit was field, made it a point to enroll in the great humanitarian campaign by writing to or hunting up someone from whom they could get a membership.

Entertainment, while not headlined this year to the virtual exclusion of everything else, still was available in variety and abundance for those who wanted it.

It included basketball games, a community night program, a womanless wedding comedy, book review and two or three special game programs offering dominoes, forty-two, bridge and other diversions. There were also several special Polio balls, and persons who bought a $1 membership got one ticket to any one of these balls, if they wanted it.

The 1941 campaign wound up last night with a specially dedicated Community Night program at Conlen, 20 miles east of Dalhart, and the two Polio balls in the Trianon and Legion halls in Dalhart.

Russell Ritchey, chairman of the Community Night program which is held monthly in Conlen, was master of ceremonies at last night's events which was attended by several Dalhartans. Farm and livestock leaders of Dallam and Sherman counties spoke briefly, after which there were a variety of party games, including dominoes and forty-two, and then refreshments were served. A freewill offering was taken and all the proceeds put into the polio war chests.

The two Polio balls in Dalhart offered an unusual number of attractions and were attended by the largest crowds in the history of the celebration.

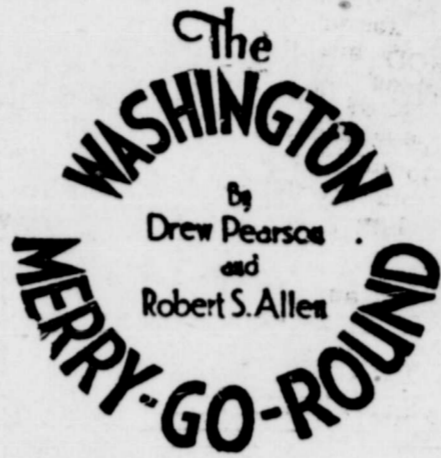

Marcella Maye and Her Royal Entertainers, recently of Chicago, played at the Trianon; and Johnny Lasswell and His Playboys were at the Legion home.

One of last night's special attractions was the resplendent hall decorations, done under the direction of Buford Moss and W. L. Crouch. Another was the singing and costume dance numbers of Miss Katherine Coons, Dalhart dancing teacher.

The most impressive—because it related directly to the nation-wide campaign against the maiming death—was the infantile paralysis tableau, originated, developed and staged by W. L. Crouch of the West Texas Utilities company.

Virginia Ann Gibney, 14, and Billy Autry, 15, portrayed in the flesh the two crippled tots shown on the 1941 lapel emblems. Billy was on crutches, and Virginia, holding his arm, walked with a massive brace on one leg. They were even dressed exactly as the WASHINGTON.—The forthcoming report of the Senate campaign fund investigating committee will show that one family—the duPonts—shelled out $187,780 in the 1940 campaign for Wendell Willkie.

Biggest donor was Lamont duPont, who made fourteen contributions, totaling $49,000, to the Republican national, to senatorial committees, and to the GOP organizations in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Tennessee, West Virginia, South Dakota, Wyoming, Missouri and Indiana.

Other heavy contributors were Irene duPont, head of the clan, who kicked in with $12,000 in Delaware, West Virginia and Pennsylvania; Pierre S., who spent $4600; and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene duPont, father- and mother-in-law of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., donors of $4700 to the Willkie war chest.

Other duPont givers were Miss Amy E. duPont, $2425; H. F. duPont, $5000; Henry B., $4000; Mrs. Lamont duPont, $4000; Lydia, $6000; Octavia M., $5000; Pierre S., III, $5000; F. S. and Alice B., $4000; Mrs. Mary Chichester duPont, $4000; and Marion duPont Scott, $4000.

REAL SECRETARY OF NAVY

Secretary Frank Knox is one of the most dynamic and forceful members of the cabinet, but apparently the admirals believe that they, not he, really run the Navy.

This interesting view leaked out during a conversation between Rear Admiral John H. Towers,

Nazis Using Bigger Guns

New and bigger German guns apparently have been established on the French channel coast, because today they were hurling high explosive shells to points ten and twelve miles inland from Dover.

Until today the Nazi guns have been able only to shell shipping in the channel, in Dover harbor or Dover itself, a distance of 22 miles.

The new longer range bombardment gave deadly point to Hitler's statement yesterday that he would force a decision in the Battle of Britain this year.

Observers admit that if Hitler can get enough of the long range guns on the French coast he may be able to lay down a box barrage and isolate a section of English coast on which he can land soldiers and mechanized equipment.

German daylight raids are increasing in severity. Some observers think the Germans may be taking advantage of cloudy weather to train new pilots in blind flying and bombing, preparatory perhaps to Hitler's next all-out effort to smash Britain.

Many Britains felt Hitler's attempt may be made in late February because weather and tides probably will be favorable.

Washington — The House Rules committee today cleared the way for prompt action on the British Aid bill, and Secretary of the Navy Knox warned the Senate Foreign Relations committee that an attempted British invasion may come any moment.

A very grave crisis will come in sixty to ninety days, he said. He predicted that Germans would use poison gas wholesale, and said if Britain falls Hitler will directly or indirectly invade the Western hemisphere unless the U. S. takes steps now to head him off.

That invasion may come sooner than Americans expect, he warned. Latin America is the danger spot. Hitler might more easily and quickly than Americans suspect establish bases there and strike hard and fast at the U. S.

The House committee acted to bring the aid bill before the House next Monday, and to limit debate to four days so that it can be passed by late next week.

London — According to reports reaching here an armistice has been signed between Thailand and French Indo-China, under Japanese sponsorship.

Cairo—Two English columns are pushing rapidly toward Bengasi, Libyan capital, and driving an estimated 10,000 Italians ahead of them, according to latest reports reaching here.

Seven Errors Of Chancellor Hitler

London.—That English writer, who recently said Chancellor Hitler had made seven major mistakes since the current war started, is said to have been referring to the following:

1. He should have opened immediate air attacks on Britain which at the opening of the war had virtually no fighting planes and candidly expected a quarter million air raid casualties in the opening weeks of the conflict. Instead Hitler waited 10 months and England was more or less ready for him when he struck.

2. When the Belgian Army surrendered the Allied defenses were torn wide open, but Hitler didn't have resources ready to press the advantage.

3. Though he had nearly four million men under arms and hordes of idle planes, Hitler didn't put enough force into the Dunkirk (Turn to Page 9, Column 1)

Plan Program Of Fathers' Night

An entertaining program is being planned by Mrs. John Honts and C. L. Dunlap for a Fathers' Night event of the South Ward P.T.A. early in February. The affair will take place Thursday, Feb. 13, as a feature of Boy Scout week. Main speaker will be Bishop E. C. Seaman of Amarillo.

Lubbock Highway Meeting

A group of Dallam, Hartley and Moore county road leaders today are in Lubbock for a meeting called by the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association to discuss the Road Bond Assumption renewal bill that will soon be before the Texas legislature.

Among those attending are: County Judge L. M. West, Commissioner Allyn Finch and Former County Judge R. A. DeFee, Hartley county; County Judge Harry Schultz, Elmer Elliott and Secretary Rex Mahoney of the Chamber of Commerce, Dallam county; and Noel McDade, Moore county judge.

R. S. Coon Makes Lake Possible Near Guymon

R. S. (Uncle Dick) Coon, of Dalhart, who a few months ago bought the 100-section Stonebreaker-Zea ranch in Texas county, Oklahoma, has just announced that he will give to Guymon, the county seat, a block of land that will bring to fruition Guymon's age-long dream of a lake and recreation site.

Size of the block will not be finally determined until plans have been completed for construction of the dam which will form the lake. It, however, will lie on the section adjoining the Guymon townsite on the west.

Details of getting dam construction started, it was said, are in the hands of a committee that includes District Judge F. Hiner Dale, President Grady Thompson of the Chamber of Commerce, and Attorney Jerry B. Lancaster, all of Guymon.

The ranch itself is one of the oldest established ranches in the Southwest. From the Guymon townsite it runs 18 miles west, and is roughly eleven miles from north to south.

Its western edge is west of Texhoma, and its south fringe extends down to within six miles of Texhoma, and three miles of Goodwell. It has 30 miles of running water, and a number of small dams.

Coon, who has been ranching in the Northwest Texas Panhandle more than four decades, and who headed the famed Coon & Culbertson ranch from its inception to its friendly dissolution a couple of years ago, plans to develop his new Oklahoma range into one of the finest ranches in the Southwest. But he cannot start until a current lease expires.

This new ranch will not, it was said, affect in any way his ranch holdings in Dallam, Hartley and Moore counties in the Texas Panhandle, or his wide and varied business interests in Dalhart.

Local Store Is Presented Award

The C. R. Anthony Co. store here has been presented an honor award for the efficient operation of any of the company's 61 stores in December. The certificate was given Manager R. S. Jacques during a recent store convention in Oklahoma City.

Tax Office To Be Open Tonight

The Dallam county tax assessor-collector's office will remain open until 10 o'clock tonight for the convenience of taxpayers and voters, as today is the deadline for paying county and state taxes and securing poll tax receipts and exemptions.

Only 670 poll taxes and 139 supplements had been paid this morning, and 16 exemptions issued. Voters are reminded they must have poll tax receipts or exemptions to ballot in elections this year, and that today is the last chance to secure them.

North Ward Pie Supper Tonight

A full entertainment program is assured by the North Ward P. T. A. and the Lions club for a joint program and pie supper at the school at 7:30 o'clock tonight, and the public is invited to attend. The affair is sponsored by the P. T. A.

Featured will be selections by a Lions' chorus, the North Ward girls' choral club, a male quartet, a girls' trio, and Bill Nite. J. W. Pigman will conduct an I. Q. contest, and readings will be given by Ruth Campbell, Ronald Durham and Norma Jean Brewster.

TODAY

At the Mission: "Gone With the Wind."

At the La Rita: Bill Elliott in "Wildcat of Tucson."

THE WEATHER

West Texas cloudy with scattered rain tonight and Saturday. Little change in temperature.

An Iron Guard insurrection in Rumania again brings a crisis to the Balkans. The Nazi-Fascist Iron Guard claims, in a radio broadcast, to have overthrown the power of Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu. A state of virtual anarchy existed in Bucharest. Diplomatic reports told of sharp fighting among Iron Guardists and troops of both the German and Rumanian armies. Two factions of the Iron Guard appeared to be pitted against each other, an extremist or "Codreanu Communist" faction and another wing led by Horia Sima, vice premier under Antonescu and leader of the Iron Guardists. The U. S. minister in Bucharest, Franklin M. Gunther, told Washington the "situation is critical." German troops are reported to have been moving in the country for several weeks. What part they play in the present crisis is not disclosed in present dispatches from the front.

Juvenile Aid Fails

Salt Lake City, Utah (UP)—Few communities in the United States have more groups designed to reclaim youth, or to prevent the need of reclamation, than Salt Lake City. However, juvenile delinquency increased by one-third in 1940 over the previous year's total. Police reported 1506 cases, compared to 1162 in 1939.

SEND YOUR PLEAS TO WASHINGTON

"The situation regarding Highway 54 is now in a decidedly critical stage."

That statement, made by Quay County Senator I. L. McAliser, speaks for itself. The fate of the much-discussed highway may be decided within the next few days in Washington, where it is sure to come up for much study and discussion.

Senator McAliser, who is attending sessions of the 15th legislature in Santa Fe, has sent word that federal aid for highways in New Mexico in 1941 will be given only those which are classified as military roads.

With his mission to get "54" designated as a military highway, Ivan Hilton, of the state highway commission, leaves Saturday for Washington.

The situation has now reached the critical point, and developments in the next few days may spell success or failure. Hilton is willing to do his part, but he is going to need some help. That's where we come in. Civic organizations and individuals in the county are urged to wire or write Congressman Clinton Anderson and other key officials in Washington urging designation of "54" as a military road. If the undertaking is carried to successful completion, it may mean improvement of the road during 1941 — with federal aid.

The Rotary club at their meeting Thursday went on record in a resolution calling for more pleas to be wired New Mexico's senators and congressman. Other organizations and individuals are expected to fall in line immediately.

The time is short. Immediate action is imperative. Tucumcari and this entire region should rally to the support of "54" without further delay.

MORE ABOUT TAXES

The News has changed its mind about the O'Daniel transaction tax. While we think it is silly for the Governor to howl about a sales tax, and then propose a multiple sales tax, we now say that the transaction tax should be passed, provided it is for a two or four year period only. The reason: Texas is head over heels in debt. There is no other way out than to pass some sort of tax that will get the money quickly. The sales tax would do the job—but the sales tax is very unpopular in Texas. It has been cussed from one end of the state to the other by nearly every candidate for public office. All of those who are condemning a sales tax close their eyes to the fact that we are paying a sales tax on gasoline and oil, cigarettes, and many items classified as luxuries. We say nothing about this kind of sales tax. Just why should O'Daniel be sold on a multiple sales tax, when a single sales tax is so obnoxious to him? We hear that he advocates this multiple deal because he does not wish any kind of a tax. Maybe that is true, and maybe it is pure speculation. One thing is sure and certain; if Texas is to get out of debt and pay the big Social Security bill which the Governor has been advocating, a sales tax or transaction tax must be passed. Regardless of the kind of tax, the people are going to pay the bill. It will come out of the pockets of the people of Texas, and the easiest, quickest method should be the best. The legislature should accept the dare of the Governor by putting his pet scheme up to the people and see how it fares. The News admits that our position is probably unpopular and diametrically opposed to our past positions, but we realize that it is time for some radical change in our taxation system. If we are going to get wild on taxation, let's go all the way, clean up our old obligations in two or four years and then get back to earth. Adding $62,000,000 to the annual tax bill of Texas, will not suit the people of Texas we are sure, since the State is just pulling out of a long depression, but it will take this money to do the job. So that is that!!!

A Dalhart man, in the entertainment field, remarked the other day, "I'm trying to get my wife to give up dipping snuff for cigar smoking. I don't mind her spitting behind the divan but here lately she has gotten careless and started to spitting on the carpet."

I told him that his statement would give me something for my column and he replied, "It's not as dirty as some of the other stuff you use."

From Old Tack's column: "A great, great show, probably the greatest of the year, will be here next February. It's 'Kitty Foyle' and those who have seen it are raving about it. It has made a tremendous hit wherever it has shown." Now Tack, if you'll wait until next Monday most any Dalhartan can tell you whether this is a great show or not. It will be seen in Dalhart Sunday and Monday. Come on up and get the drop on the rest of the boys in the big city who think they get to see the new shows first.

Had an excuse to visit the Rock Island superintendent's office yesterday and got to visit with Mr. Herdman. I like him. Particularly because there's nothing stiff about the fellow. He even works in his shirt sleeves and makes an insignificant newspaperman feel perfectly at home. You know newspaper folks have a reputation for being the worst dressed people in the world. And if you believe the movies most all of them are drunkards. Albert upholds the dressing reputation and I'm the drunkard.

Death Claims Dutch Mantell

Dutch Mantell, colorful Amarillo character since 1924, died in North-west Texas hospital there this morning at 10:30. He had been ill a long while.

About 60, he was a native of Luxembourg, small land-locked kingdom in Europe. In fun, Dutch was often referred to as the admiral of the Luxembourg navy. He was widely known in Dalhart and throughout the Panhandle.

Mantell was in his time a wrestler and a good one, and never lost his zest for sports. He was an able sports promoter.

Funeral arrangements had not been announced at noon.

Undersecretary of State under Herbert Hoover, William R. Castle testifies before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, attacking the end-lease bill. He declared that should the United States become involved in the war this country would be attacked by Japan.

Food Stamp Plan Is Moving Food

College Station, Jan. 31.—Surplus foods valued at $271,219.50 were moved in Texas as a result of the Surplus Marketing administration's food stamp plan.

This figure represents the total amount of blue stamps issued throughout the state during the month. Blue stamps are exchangeable for surplus agricultural commodities designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, while orange stamps are exchangeable for any food intended for human consumption other than food ordinarily consumed on the premises of a retail food store.

Persons participating in the program maintained their regular purchases of foodstuffs by buying $358,101 worth of orange stamps during the same month.

Houston led all the stamp plan areas in the state in the amount of stamps issued with $113,718.50 in both orange and blue stamps. Close behind were Dallas and Dallas county with $108,667 and Fort Worth and Tarrant county with $107,525.

14,000 Youths Die In Mishaps

Chicago — The National Safety Council reported today that during 1940 accidents claimed 14,000 American young men, enough for a full Army division. Total accident victims in 1940 were 96,500 four per cent over 1939 but still under the record year of 1936 when over 110,000 died in mishaps.

Sport Parade

By HENRY McLEMORE

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.—(UP)—Putting the sports shot here and there.

Roy Waldron is rapidly acquiring a reputation as the hard-luck trainer of the turf. He scored his first—and probably only—major triumph when Gallahadion sneaked past Bimelich in the Kentucky Derby, but since then he has collected nothing but a few useless nomination blanks. His latest blow came with the discovery that Gallahadion will not train up to the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap and that his employer, Mrs. Ethel V. Moss, won't be able to watch her silks in that race.

The boys who have installed Galladon as a 3-1 favorite in the future books on the golden gallop may also find their pretentious bubbles broken. W. L. Brann's ready Maryland-bred rapped him the other day and won't be able to make his first start until the Santa Anita track dries out—which may be never. . . . Speaking of the rain, they now identify a California native son as a man who has lived in the state since the day they were supposed to open the Albany track.

We trust Mike Jacobs will let nothing alter his plan to take Lew Jenkins, Fritzie Zivic, Billy Conn and Joe Louis to Nassau for a boxing exhibition in which Edward, Duke of Windsor, is interested. . . . I would swim to Nassau underwater to listen to Uncle Mike chatting with the duke in government house, and explaining to his royal highness the ins and outs of Jacobs Beach. . . . Mike could take Mushky Jackson along as his liaison officer. . . . and Harry Balogh and Fatso Zuckerman as official interpreters.

Gene Mako, who is making a tennis comeback after his "layoff" by the U. S. L. T. A., has announced that he soon will have a devastating, cannonball service instead of the aunty pitty pat delivery that has handicapped him in the past.

We will know the revolution has arrived when Mako finally does come up with a real service and Frankie Parker develops a decent forehand. . . . The Pacific Coast football conference, after all these years, has decided that good eyesight is important in its officials, and will make the arbiters get an eye from an optician before being assigned work next fall.

Clayton Defeats Grenville Quint

Clayton, Jan. 31.—After a week-end road trip that saw them drop a 21-12 game to Tucumcari and a 33-13 tilt to Clovis, the Clayton Yellowjackets bounced back this mid-week to nose out the flashy Grenville crew 18-16 in two overtime periods. The game ended 16-16 and neither club scored in the first extra period.

The Jackets are on another road trip this week-end, and will play the Raton Tigers tonight, and the fast Dawson Miners tomorrow night.

Clayton players are smart, knowing men, how can you explain the delightful argument between the heads of the Detroit and Cleveland clubs as to which is higher paid, Buck Newsum or Bob Feller. . . . Never in history was there a better time for such a discussion. . . . Jam Dandy, whose defeat of Gallant Fox and Whichone in the Travers at Saratoga in 1930 provided one of the major turf upsets of all time, is being brought back in his 14th year for training as a show horse. . . . The big fellow who paid off at 100 to 1 is here on the coast and started schooling a week or two ago.

Now that Sam Snead has won another golf tournament, his fellow pros are on his bandwagon again. . . . Half a dozen of them told me that in a 72-hole tournament Snead, rated off his ability to hit the ball, should spot the field four to five shots.

Note to Tony Galento: Don't come out here to fight Turkey Thompson. . . . The big colored fellow will knock your head off quicker than you can knock the head off a stein of beer. . . . Uncle Sam owes Steve Owen and the New York Giants a debt of gratitude.

The Giants spent all last fall getting Granny Lansdell, former all-American from U. S. C., in shape, and now the Army has him.

Teams Preparing For Three Games

Starters are announced today for only one of the three basketball games the Dalhart Wolves and Wolverines will play Saturday. Coach E. A. Kimmins of the Wolves will open the tussle against Dumas Demons here Saturday night with his usual first-string: Proffitt, center; Thomasson and Vicars, forwards; Ball and Thurman, guards.

Seven wolves will go to Canyon Saturday at 2 p. m., but Coach Kimmins this morning did not know which ones would be able to make the trip. They will play WTSC training school cagers. Wolves had a good workout Thursday afternoon and are in condition for two fast games, Kimmins stated.

Wolverines line-up for the clash with Dumas Demonettes at 7:30 p. m. Saturday will be announced following this afternoon's practice, said Coach A. O. Swofford.

New Dipsy Doodle Pitcher Edging In

By PAUL SCHEFFELS

United Press Staff Correspondent
New York (UP)—A new "softie" —Danny MacFayden is going to try to edge into the select group of the American League "nothing ball" pitcher, headed by Dutch Leonard and Ted Lyons this season.

The veteran MacFayden is down in Florida conditioning himself with several daily rounds of golf until such time as the first contingent of Washington Senators arrives for spring training. Then bespectacled Danny will don his third American League uniform—he was with the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees—and try to float his "butterfly" ball past the junior league sluggers.

On the face of it, a MacFayden comeback seems to belong under the heading of dubious experiments. He already has seen fifteen years of service in the major leagues. Besides the three American league clubs, he's played with three National league outfits, going to Cincinnati, after terms with the Red Sox and Yankees, then to Boston, to Pittsburgh, and finally the Senators.

Sluggers Turned Back

Despite his age, he'll be 36 in June, there's much to be said for his type pitcher. His experience alone will be of inestimable help to a big league team with a bunch of rookie moundsmen in camp. Then his type of "softie" delivery, easy, floating, dipsy-doodlers, has found much success against sluggers of the Rudy York, Joe DiMaggio and Jimmy Foxx brand.

Owner Clark Griffith of the Senators need go no further than his own outfit to find a particularly bright example in Dutch Leonard.

"Dutch" is another oldtimer who found tough sledding in the National League and floundered around for several years trying to find somebody to handle his difficult knuckler. He landed with Washington in 1938 and won 46 games in the next three years. He has been a particular jinx to the heavy-hitting Yankees.

New York (UP)—A pair of sunglasses reported to be the most expensive set ever made, are set with small diamonds around the rims and with a 2-carat square-cut diamond in center. Price was $2000.

Adolf Hitler Is U. S. Ranch Owner

As strange as it may seem, Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany is a U. S. ranch owner. Howard Lathem, Dalhart real estate man, and Pem Denton, formerly of Dalhart and now with the land acquisition department of the Soil Conservation service regional offices in Amarillo, know the general story but not all the details. The Amarillo SCS offices serve parts of Colorado, Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas. The story has two versions. One is that the old German owner of the 15-section ranch, which lies near Kit Carson, Colo., died and willed it to Hitler. The other is that he willed it to his two daughters, who returned to Germany before the current war, and lost the range to Hitler through confiscation. Anyway, the ranch is absolutely in Hitler's name, said Lathem and Denton, and according to Kit Carson real estate men is for sale.

Old Coffin Makes Bed For Britisher

London (UP) — A 400-year-old stone coffin is the latest thing in air raid shelters. It rests in the crypt of Christ church, Spitalfields, and is the home of Michael O'Connor, a London East End laborer. Blasted from his home by a bomb three months ago, he has passed every night since, reading, eating and sleeping in the coffin. "And very comfortable it is, too," he says. Every morning, except Sunday, when he has a "lie-in," Michael is awakened by his wife with a cup of tea. Then he goes to work to face cracks from his mates, such as "Hullo, Mike, back from the dead?" The O'Connors, with their 15-year-old son, have made their corner of the crypt as comfortable as possible. Mrs. O'Connor doesn't "fancy the coffin much," so she sleeps on the floor with her son, while Michael sleeps "like the dead" in his strange bed. "I've slept in worse places," he says, "it's quite comfortable. There's plenty of room to move around. "The first couple of nights I felt a bit strange and kept waking up, but I've got used to it now, and I sleep like a top."

Clayton Aviation Set-Up Is Praised

Clayton, Jan. 31.—C. E. Turner, of Washington, a federal aviation inspector under the national defense program, says Clayton's aviation program is the best in his four-state district from the standpoints of organization and quality of work, number and interest of students, and condition of shops and classrooms. Chas. Boyd, former lessee of the Municipal airport in Amarillo, is instructor in the CAA-sponsored program. Courses in aviation mechanics, machine shop work, acetylene welding and lathe work is given in day classes to forty older high school boys; and in night classes to sixty adults. Another forty adults are taking ground school work preliminary to flight instruction this spring. The 100 adults come not only from Clayton, but from nearby points in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. The City of Clayton has already asked for bids to construct a ten-plane hangar on the 640-acre airport a mile east of town. Mayor Bryan Sachse said the city is also seeking government aid for further needed airport improvements.

Austin, Jan. 31.—(UP)—The Texas House of Representatives' invitation to its most distinguished "graduate," John Nance Garner, to address the legislature recalled that one member sits in the Texas House who served with the man who became vice-president.

Garner's colleague of the 26th and 27th Texas legislatures (1899-1903) was W. W. Bridgers, 74, of El Paso. Bridgers is now on his seventh term in the House. He did not seek the office for many years between 1905 and 1935.

In 1902, Garner—a slender ranch-country lawyer with sandy hair—ran for Congress and was elected. He stayed in Washington until Jan. 21, serving as speaker of Congress and two terms as vice-president of the United States.

Bridgers and Garner have been fast friends. In 1932 Bridgers started in El Paso county a movement to instruct the Texas delegation to the National Democratic convention to boost Garner for president. Franklin D. Roosevelt then was just one of several candidates for the nomination.

"I was for Garner then, but I have been for Roosevelt ever since he was first nominated," said Bridgers. "I supported the President for a third term."

Bridgers recalled that Garner's famed poker-playing ability was recognized even when he was a Texas legislator. Fellow-members called him "Jock" and Bridgers was surprised that Washington associates later dubbed Garner "Cactus Jack."

After Garner left the legislature, Bridgers did not see him for 20 years. It was then that he first noticed the bushy eyebrows which became the delight of cartoonists.

Several Texans who still are well-known sat in the legislature with Garner and Bridgers 40 years ago. One was Tom Connally, now United States Senator. Another was Pat M. Neff, now president of Baylor university. Neff was speaker of the 28th legislature and later served two terms as Governor.

Senate gallery visitors recently were treated to some heavy debate. Topic: Shall the Senate authorize a coin vending beverage machine in the ball hall?

The machine already was there and in use but Sen. Olin Van Zandt of Tioga offered a resolution to make it official. He proposed that Lieutenant Governor Stevenson be authorized to have it installed.

"Leave me out of this," cautioned Stevenson. Stevenson shortly before had delivered a plea for adherence to the state constitution in his inaugural address. "I doubt if we have authority to license a private business on state property," he said.

Van Zandt mentioned that there is a private stand selling beverages in the state office building.

"Now we have to give the pages two cents a bottle deposit to have drinks sent in," Van Zandt argued. "We seldom get the two cents back. The automatic vendor is more convenient, most hygienic and will save money."

Sen. Weaver Moore of Houston suggested that a rental might be collected and go into the contingent fund for expenses of the legislature.

Sen. Joe Hill of Henderson thought an automatic vendor so conveniently located might break up the practice of senators drinking from pop bottles in the senate chamber. He suggested a rule to that effect.

Senate debate is not always on trifles. It became loud, earnest, and insistent when treatment of applicants for old age assistance was brought up by Senator Hill.

There were complaints that the law of the last legislature directing the old age assistance investigators to ignore ability of relatives to help applicants is being flagrantly disregarded.

Galleries were filled at the time when Senator Hill moved a study

Majority Of Texas Wheat Into Loans

College Station, Jan. 31.—Texas wheat producers placed 65 per cent of the wheat they produced in 1940 under the government loan, receiving an average of slightly more than 64 cents a bushel with protein premiums taken into account.

Of the 29,355,000 bushels of wheat produced in the state last year, 19,039,000 were placed under the Commodity Credit corporation loan, Charlie L. Thomas, state AAA committeeman and Pampa wheat grower, announced. The total amount loaned in the state was $13,955,523.

of the situation by the whole senate. About that time the gallery visitors, school children from San Antonio, left. Hill later withdrew his motion.

"The galleries are empty, anyhow," Lieut. Gov. Stevenson remarked from the chair.

Hill said sharply that the gallery had nothing to do with his proposal. The way other senators carried on the discussion with the galleries empty indicated a stiff quizzing of the welfare board members when their appointments by Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel come before the Senate for confirmation.

The second inauguration of Gov. O'Daniel and Lieut. Gov. Coke Stevenson should have the best photographic record of any in Texas history. The photographers were there—still and moving picture makers, young and old, amateur and professional.

Judge Thomas L. Beauchamp of the Court of Criminal Appeals was there with his home movie camera, as active in the pursuit of good pictures as the most avid youngster with his first "candid box." Mike O'Daniel stooped to the floor of the speaker's platform to get an unusual "angle" picture of his father taking the oath of office.

Two raised platforms were filled with newsreel cameramen, and school-age youngsters scrambled with the newspaper boys for the best vantage points.

The Governor and his family are described as unusually photogenic and each can always muster a big smile for the birdie. At the inaugural, the family complied with numerous repeat requests to "stand up close together" for group pictures.

The Governor and his party walked to their seats down an aisle of crossed sabres held by members of the white-uniformed Ross Volunteers, crack Texas Aggie military drill unit. The picture was a "natural," but one photographer wasn't on hand when the official party arrived.

So, at the photographer's request, Governor and Mrs. O'Daniel walked back under the sabres, turned around and gave the cameraman the shot that he wanted.

Chief Justice Alexander, who swore in Governor O'Daniel for the second term, was the first person in the memory of supreme court attaches to recite the oath from memory.

The Governor's mistake in his inaugural address when he referred to JAMES Barret as commander at the Alamo has caused many chuckles about the state capitol. The Alamo fell under William Barret Travis.

It was NOT the first error made by a governor in a published statement. Former Gov. Dan Moody was much embarrassed during his administration when some Bible reader wrote to point out a misquotation from Holy Writ.

As Governor Moody was a Sunday school teacher, the error proved quite embarrassing until his secretary, Pat Dougherty, admitted the mistake was his, and not one by the Governor.

Governor O'Daniel has no such alibi. He said "James" in his address and it appeared "James" in copies of his prepared speech. It also appeared as "James" in the Senate Journal's reproduction of the speech. Barret was spelled properly with one "T."

CINNAMON BROWN NEW COLOR FOR SPRING SEASON

The spring season will see a new color that will be a favorite for all types of costumes, all climates and all occasions. It is cinnamon brown. The three photographs above prove how popular this color has become, as it predominates in all three costumes. Rosalind Russell, left, has selected a tri-colored combination in her new dressmaker coat. The dolman sleeves are gathered in a wrist strap. The shoulder tucks permit front fullness in the upper section, with the fabric in graduating sections of beige, tan and cinnamon. Beige felt hat, cinnamon suede bag and beige gloves complete the outfit. Margaret Hayes, who was Miss

Los Angeles in a recent fashion show, center, is modeling an evening gown designed by Charles Cooper. The bodice is a coppery cinnamon crepe, the very full skirt is in layers of organza, brown over white, a very smart effect. Rhinestone buttons form the front closing. Laraine Day, right, is shown in a travel suit which combines suede and tweed. The jacket is cinnamon brown suede lined in green, gold and brown plaid tweed, the tweed showing on collar and lapels. The jacket is worn over a straight tweed skirt. Hat, gloves, bag and shoes are in the same cinnamon brown as the jacket.

Color Of Fires Reveal What Bombs Have Hit

Washington (UP)—Great Britain's aviators, who carry out assaults on German territory, are able to tell fairly accurately what they hit by the color of fires set by their bombs, military experts here report.

Royal Air Force communicues have placed special emphasis on the color of fires observed after a bombing raid. For instance, after a recent bombing raid on Bremen, the official communique reported 13 red fires and too many white fires to count.

According to experts here, the red fires indicated oil tanks and the white fires denoted ammunition dumps that were hit.

A double check system is used to enable intelligence officers to determine just what has been hit. Aviators were instructed to report factually the color of flames that arose when the objective was hit by bombs, and not to give their personal opinions.

Reports of the colors are made with regular reports, and are turned over to intelligence officers who correlate various reports of attacks on the same vicinity. Using the reports as a guide, a checking them against various establishments known to be located in a given area, intelligence units are able to state what was struck and what was missed.

The color of flames, experts said, depends on temperature and the chemicals in the objective.

If a white flame arises, a dump of smokeless powder, such as bulk TNT and picric acid—main German explosives—has been hit, experts explained.

If chlorine, chloride or berium salts are in the dump, the flame will have a greenish tinge; potassium will cause a violet hue, and strontium salts are indicated by blood red flames.

Aircraft and other factories not producing chemicals burn with a red and yellow flame like a house fire.

The tableau was presented on a specially-built miniature stage at each hall. Lights went out; there was slight rustle as curtains were drawn back, and then the tableau leaped into full and impressive view under the brilliance of a big spotlight.

Each audience stood in rapt and reverent attention before this heart-warming story of what the polio campaigns means to American childhood. The orchestra played softly and Dr. E. U. Johnston sang "God Bless America" in which a good many of the spectators joined in subdued and respectful tones.

The children stood against a dramatic background that included Old Glory, a huge painting of President Roosevelt and an artist's conception of the song, "God Bless America".

Crouch has asked that his appreciation be extended to Jim Burrow, Clarence Lutes and Herman Steele for the donations they made toward the miniature stages and other properties for the presentation. Mr. Burrow also furnished one of the big Roosevelt paintings.

The West Texas Utilities co. furnished spotlights and a lot of electric wiring necessary for operation of the tableau lights.

Elmer Elliott of the De Soto hotel furnished a piano for one of the halls.

The Trionon continued its fine tradition of donating all its facilities to the ball. A. I. Hills, proprietor of the hall for years, had always donated it, and his son, A. L. Hills, who succeeded to the hall management upon the death of his father, was equally generous this year.

The Legion hall, completed within the past year, was also donated, and for two weeks prior to the Polio Ball Commander Roy Noland and the Roy Rhoades post cancelled their regular weekly dances in order that they would not, in the least way, detract from the support for the infantile paralysis cause.

chief of aeronautics, and L. M. Walling, head of the Labor department's public contracts division, which administers the Walsh-Healey act requiring all firms to pay prevailing wages on government work.

In league with other admirals, Towers is quietly gunning for this New Deal labor law. He publicly assailed it before the House naval affairs committee, and secretly is working with Committee Chairman Carl Vinson to put through an amendment suspending the law on defense contracts.

Disturbed by Towers' testimony, Walling telephoned him to point out that the act does not affect sub-contractors. Towers had asserted that because of the law, sub-contractors were refusing defense orders.

"You are wrong about that, Admiral," Walling said. "The Walsh-Healey act specifically exempts sub-contractors."

Towers hemmed and hawed, finally admitted that he might have been in error. "But," he added, "I've been hearing a lot of talk around here about the harmful effects of the act. The Navy department feels that it should be amended to remove its inequalities."

Walling expressed surprise. "That's quite different from the view expressed by Secretary Knox at his press conference yesterday," he pointed out. "The Secretary said flatly that the Navy department had no plans for a drive to amend the law."

"Oh," explained Towers, "a group of the bureau chiefs here got together and decided what had to be done. Secretary Knox wasn't at the meeting and probably wasn't informed of what we had decided."

NOTE.—Knox has consistently held that both the letter and spirit of the labor laws must be adhered to in all Navy contracts, but few of the brass-hats agree. Behind the scenes, they have sided against the unions and now are trying to inspire legislation on Capitol Hill to riddle these laws.

NEW DEAL SLEUTHING

Between Harold Ickes' department and the department of agriculture there has long been a vitriolic and sometimes blazing feud. One accusation hurled at Ickes by the other side during this row was that he tapped wires, hired sleuths to spy on his own associates, used the OGPU methods of Soviet Russia.

Now, however, Paul Appleby, under secretary of agriculture, has hired some of Ickes' former sleuths to do some investigating of his associates in the agriculture department. Those he has hired are: Edward M. Loweree, Lawrence F. Frissell, and Edward W. Huckins, all former investigators for Ickes' PWA.

Appleby has assigned these men to investigate the rural electrification administration, which is one of his department's own bureaus. Also, two of the old Ickes investigators are former utility company employees. And the REA is bitterly hated by the utilities.

NOTE.—Senator George Norris of Nebraska, one of the fathers of the rural electrification administration, is threatening to take the Senate floor to question Appleby's sleuthing methods, especially his use of ex-utility employees.

DIES AND DOUGH

Representative Martin Dies may make good on his boast that there will be less opposition this year to continue his un-American investigation than there was last year. But getting that million dollars he wants is going to be a different story.

The ebullient Texan doesn't know it, but the accounts committee, which holds the purse strings on House investigating committees, privately has decided to limit his appropriation to between $100,000 and $150,000.

And this isn't the only point. Though Dies is sure of a big majority to continue his probe, he will have to listen to some scorching oratory on his lecture profits, an estimated $75,000. Many congressmen consider it unethical to "cash in" on the publicity from an investigation, and they are itching for a chance to say so on the floor of Congress.

Another thing that may be brought out is the inside fact that, while Dies now contends is committee is indispensable, he didn't feel that way six months ago. When he asked for an additional $50,000 last fall—and got $25,000—he promised Speaker Sam Rayburn in a letter that his committee would quit when the money was spent.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Keenly interested in the movement to do away with Southern poll taxes, Mrs. Roosevelt will address the conference of the Southern Electoral Reform league in Richmond, Va., this week-end. The only Virginia candidate for governor who so far hasn't taken a stand against poll tax repeal is Representative Colgate Darden, who is being backed by Senator Harry Byrd. . . . While John L. Lewis personally has kept mute on the lend-lease bill, his daughter and secretary, Kathryn, issued a blast against it as chairman of a CIO women's auxiliary organization. . . . Miss Lewis is in New York undergoing a reducing treatment. . . . Latest book on the reading table of fishing enthusiast Franklin Delano Roosevelt is Philip Wylie's "Salt Water Daffy," a rollicking tale of the adventures of two professional Florida fishermen.

Top, Ernest Eisele and, below, Deputy Robert Jones

Four persons, including two law enforcement officers, were wounded at Pontiac, Ill., when the officers attempted to serve a federal warrant charging a farm youth, Raymond Eisele, 22, with failure to register for selective service. According to Deputy Sheriff Don Morrison, Eisele and his father suddenly drew jackknives and attacked them in the Eisele living room before the officers managed to reach their guns and start shooting. The youth was quoted as saying that "when war breaks out I'll enlist, but until that time what I do is my own business." Eisele is shown, top, seriously wounded, in a hospital, and a deputy, Robert Jones, who suffered neck wounds, below.

Stocks, Grains Advance Today

Grains and stocks are up today. Chicago wheat advanced a quarter to three-eighths of a cent; May 82 corn and oats were both unchanged to a quarter higher.

In New York the three hour stock market volume was 310,000 shares, and all Dow-Jones stocks went up: Industrials 47 cents; rails 20; utilities 12; the entire list of 65 stocks advancing an average of 20 cents.

campaign to prevent the escape of the cream of England's Army.

Collapse of the Low Countries rout of the French, followed the Dunkirk escape threw the fish into confusion but again he didn't press his advantage.

He bragged that he would be in London by mid-August, then moved it to mid-September and moved both times, thus allowing his people to learn that he was neither infallible nor infallible as he had always led them to believe.

He erred when he made peace with France without demanding the French fleet against Britain and occupation of North Africa. At that time he apparently thought Britain was in his grasp.

He seriously miscalculated Mussolini's sagacity and Italian army strength when he gave Il Duce a free hand in Greece and North Africa.

His Name Is Tom: His Family Is Cat, But He's a Hi-Yo Silver Boy Anyhow

Sweetwater, Jan. 31.—(UP)—He was only a cat, and not a well-bred one at that. But he was a scrapper like the rugged workers whose lunches he shared at a refinery here.

His hide was scarred from nocturnal encounters with others obviously less rugged than he, for he always came back, "bloody, but unbowed." They called him Tom.

Well, Tom is dead. And his exit from the long ramp where he used to perch while the refinery employees gave him tid-bits from their lunches was the same as his entrance—a bundle of bedraged felinity.

Several years ago Tom mewed piteously outside the refinery gates, his face badly scratched and his coat, none too clean even for an alley cat's, ripped in a midnight fracas.

The employees took Tom in. Time healed his wounds, and the coat that once had stretched thinly over his bones became fat and sleek.

Tom made his headquarters in the office of Maintenance Superintendent John Kelley, but his sphere of activities took in the whole plant—and forays into the outer world where he played a lone and secretive hand.

He always came back, sometimes battered, yet you could tell by the way he strutted when he showed up for his lunch box snack the "other guy" came out the worst.

Tom was the terror of all the cats in the neighborhood—and the mice too, for he had the fighting heart that goes with a hunter as well as a scrapper. Once he brought back a full-grown jackrabbit, bigger than himself, that he had stalked outside the grounds.

Tom is dead now. He came back as usual after a fracas one night, but the fellows who fed him for the years he hung around the ramp think he tackled something too big for himself.

"Maybe a dog," they said. He crawled to Kelley's office badly mauled, and you could tell by the look in his eye that he had been beaten. He died hours later.

They buried him there among the stilts and retorts of the refinery, just an alley cat and lone ranger, but a scrapper that always came back.

There's a vacant place now on the long ramp where the refinery workers gather to eat their lunches.

Mr. Duggar of Centerville, N. M., was in Dalhart today on business and visiting his brother, Steve Duggar.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

"You see, Mrs. Osborne," said the editor soothingly, "there isn't a word that could be considered actionable. It is merely a simple record of family life and of a tragedy which entered into it. Sympathetically treated, I'm sure you will agree?"

"It's horrible," said Edith in a hushed tone. "It rips away the last shred of privacy that was left to us. It is as though your million readers were marching into our house and watching us eating—sleeping—brushing our teeth."

"You think so? I am inclined to agree. As a matter of fact, that's why I bought it. Nothing pleases the public more than a good human interest story, and this one is really well done."

"Mr. Snaith, I appeal to you. Don't print this story. Don't! Can't you see what it will do to my family? We've suffered so much already. We've been through such a lot. Now people are beginning to forget. This will start it all over again."

"Mrs. Osborne, I'm sorrier than I can say. Sometimes I have to do things I dislike intensely. This is one of them. I've been a newspaperman for almost twenty years, and I assure you I've never printed a story with wider appeal than this one. To kill it is impossible. I'm sorry, but I just can't do it."

"Why the murder of my sister-in-law is not news. It is an old story."

"But a story of which the public is not likely to tire, Mrs. Osborne; and this approaches it from a new angle. There is nothing so absorbing, you know, as an unsolved murder. Most murders die on us with startling abruptness as soon as the murderer is tried and hanged. There is something final about a hanging; it leaves us with nothing more to say. But an unsolved murder—that's always a story. It offers endless grounds for speculation. The public loves it."

"Am I to understand, then, that this is not a single isolated story? Do you mean to go on raking up the scandal indefinitely?"

"Not the Sunday World, Mrs. Osborne. We'd soon lose our readers if we harped on the same string too long. No, this story will finish the case for us for a time, at least, but some other paper is sure to rehash it before long. It was a meaty murder, you know; too meaty to be dropped. Why, the man who wrote our story is writing a novel based on the case. He's calling it: 'Murder in the Family,' I'm told. I don't suppose his will be the only book the case will inspire. Unsolved murders have a way of popping up in print—again and again."

"So that even after I am dead, and my children are grown men and women, this awful business will haunt them?"

"When you die, Mrs. Osborne, the Osborne mystery will feature in your obituary notice. When one of your daughters marries, the papers will remind their readers that she is a niece of a murdered woman whose murder was never solved. If one of your sons distinguishes himself—"

"Stop! Stop!" cried Edith, aghast to the lips. "I can't bear it!"

"I am indeed sorry, Mrs. Osborne. I was trying to make you see my point. I can't kill this story. It's too full of public interest."

"Forever and ever. On and on. Always this curse on my unhappy family—"

"Unless, of course, the police discover the murderer. As I said, hanging is final in more ways than one."

Mr. Snaith solemnly lit a fresh cigarette with rather more care than was necessary. He seemed lost in sad thought. At last he looked up.

"I hesitate to suggest this, but since the publicity is inevitable, there seems no reason why you shouldn't benefit in some way from it. Why don't you write me a story giving your own angle on the case? I can offer you—say—two thousand dollars—"

Edith did not answer. She only looked at him; that was all. It was enough.

"Sorry," he said uncomfortably. "Thought I'd just mention the offer."

As she left the building Edith was mocked by an array of posters on the opposite wall. With pitiless monotony they screamed:

READ
THE FAMILY THAT CANNOT FORGET
AN ABSORBING HUMAN DOCUMENT
In Next Week's
SUNDAY WORLD
Over 1,000,000 Readers!

The posters were repeated on each of a long line of trucks ranked outside the building. The words hammered on her brain...

Numb, miserable, she sat in a tea-shop so long that the waitresses began to discuss her among themselves. "Looks as though she's seen a ghost." "Seen a ghost? Looks like a ghost herself, if you ask me!"

The pot of tea she had ordered, as an excuse for sitting down, grew stone cold, untouched...

Lunch was over, the dishes washed and dried, and for an hour no pressing duty called for Hannah's attention, so she collected the silver and began to polish it. She put all her brawn into the task. Hannah was a firm believer in elbow-grease. While she rubbed and buffeted, her mind was as busy as her tireless arms.

There was something wrong, she knew. It was not merely the brooding shadow which had hung over the household for long months. That had begun to abate. This was something tense and terrible, something that had only evinced itself within the past twenty-eight hours, something that had plunged her mistress back into the gloom from which she had gradually emerged.

It had been late last night when her employer had returned from New York and gone straight to bed with a headache. There had been no need for her to say that she had a headache; it had been written in the grey pallor of her face. This morning, for the first time in many years, she had remained in bed. She had refused food and answered Hannah's anxious enquiries in dry, toneless monosyllables.

The master had been upstairs and down all morning, and every time he had come down his expression had been more unhappy than before. Now he was mooning about in the garden among his precious roses. Oh, something was wrong, there was no doubt about that!

Stephen came into the kitchen and stood by the door undecidedly, stroking his hair nervously.

"I suppose— My wife— She hasn't rung for you, Hannah? Or— or anything?"

"No, sir, she has not. And—taking a liberty—if I were you, sir, I'd let her be. She doesn't want to be disturbed."

"I—I expect you're right," he said huskily.

He went through the hall and Hannah heard him wearily mounting the stairs. She shook her head. The master's fussing and fretting was doing the mistress no good. Rub. Rub. Rub. In her abstraction Hannah put fresh polish on silver she had already shone to perfection.

What was that? It sounded like a cry. No, not a cry; it was a hoarse growl! Hannah pushed open the kitchen door and listened. The house was still—she shivered—still as the grave. She stood listening and after a time she heard dragging footsteps crossing the floor overhead. Back and forward they went two or three times, and then she heard a door opening and the steps came out to the upper floor landing.

The first Hannah saw of her employer when he started to descend the stairs was his feet. Her mouth opened and remained like that. His feet seemed to fumble their way down as though he had lost all power to guide them. They made her scalp prickle. It seemed an age before his legs followed and then his body. Hannah saw his face; his staring eyes. All the horror of Death and Disaster was in his wide, stricken eyes. His mouth was slack, as though some terrible blow had shattered it.

"Good gracious, sir, what is it? Mr. Osborne! What's wrong, sir?" Stephen looked at her, trembling as though with the ague.

"The doctor, Hannah..." he muttered hoarsely. "Go quickly... the doctor..."

Stephen went through the kitchen, out of the house. There was something in his hand. Hannah could not see what it was. With a gasp, she darted upstairs. At the door of Edith Osborne's room she raised her hand to knock, but some power stronger than habit drove her headlong into the room.

She came to an abrupt halt at the foot of the bed. All the strength drained out of her at what she saw as she clutched at the bed-rail for support.

Hannah tried to speak, to stammer out something, but her paralyzed tongue would not utter words. As abruptly as she had entered the room, she hurried from it and clattered down the stairs. Throwing wide the front door, Hannah ran out of the house.

Hurrying along the road she was stopped by Miss Whipple, who caught her arm and stared at her with glistening eyes.

"What's wrong, Hannah? Has anything happened?"

Hannah glared like a mad woman. "Get away, you culture!" she cried. "Take your hands off me! Let go!"

Tearing herself free, she ran across the road, and beat a frantic tattoo on the knocker on Dr. Denham's front door.

"I want the doctor," she panted to the startled maid who opened the door. "The doctor—quick!"

The commotion brought Dr. Denham into the hall. He looked curiously at Hannah's distorted face and dishevelled hair.

"My good woman, whatever—"

"It's Mrs. Osborne, Doctor, it's Mrs. Osborne! She's very sick—perhaps dying! Oh, Doctor, come quick! I'm feared she's dead."

"I'll come at once."

Search Started For Stokowski's Youth Orchestra

Austin, Jan. 31.—All young people between the ages of 16 and 25, whether they work on NYA projects or not, have until Feb. 10 to apply for local auditions at the nearest NYA area office for Leopold Stokowski's All-American orchestra.

This is the announcement of Miss Nell Parmley, state supervisor of public school music, State Department of Education, who is a member of the state selection committee for auditions for the orchestra.

The NYA, she said, is assisting Stokowski to select young musicians for his orchestra which is scheduled to tour the United States, Mexico and Canada in May and June.

Local auditions will be Feb. 10-19; the state auditions will be in Austin Feb. 24 and 25, and the five best musicians chosen at Austin will have final auditions before Stokowski himself in Dallas March 8.

the SRA Round-Up—edited by Carl A. Studer, association secretary at Canadian, is just off the press and Dalhart has a front-page story.

The story is in connection with Dalhart being chosen as the 1941 convention city. The association, according to The Round-Up, will meet here the first week in next December.

Studer also offers an interesting believe-it-or-not item as follows: "The word cowboy is not Western. In fact, it's an Eastern word, used to describe King George III's fifth columnists during American colonial days.

"The cowboys of those days wandered through the woods at night ringing cowbells. Unsuspecting American patriots sallied forth with lanterns in search of the straying cows and were promptly shot."

Dr. C. Todd To Portland, Ore.

Dr. Charles Todd, former Dalhart pioneer physician, was released last week from a Federal prison at El Paso, where he served two years on a narcotics law violation charge. He will join his wife, Dr. Jone Todd, at the home of their son in Portland, Ore., where they will make their home, according to Sheriff H. D. Foust.

Vitamins Talked At Texline Club

"Scientists and government experts have a sensational new plan to add life-giving vitamins to ordinary white flour which will bring increased health and strength to our people," Mrs. Bud Hunter told the Texline Home Demonstration club Wednesday in the home of Mrs. W. A. Robinson. In vitamins, one slice of the whole-wheat bread of our forefathers was worth five of the bread most of us eat today, she continued.

Mrs. A. L. Brookhart, Mrs. Young Sewell and Marie Baker discussed diet and health rules observed in the animal kingdom.

Refreshments were served Mesdames Bud Hunter, A. L. Brookhart, Louis Bleiker, John Rotan, Fred Wachmuth, John Claborn, E. R. Cleavinger, Olin Sheets, W. A. Robinson and Miss Marie Baker.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Hunter on Feb. 5.

Watch Family Now While Epidemic Colds Are Spreading

At a treacherous time like this, with an epidemic of contagious colds all around you, what you do today may save you and your family a lot of sickness, worry and trouble later.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION . . . put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) use Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today—have them handy, ready to use.
