ALLEGED MINERS GUILTY OF ATTEMPT TO RETARD PRODUCTION OF COAL; ARRESTS ARE EXPECTED

I. W. W. PLANNED RIOTS IN WASH. 3 WEEKS AGO

CENTRALIA, Wash., Nov. 15.—Industrial Workers of the World planned the Centralia riot three weeks before Armistice day, according to an alleged confession made by Al Roberts, confessed I. W. W. who surrendered himself to the officers following Tuesday's shooting in which bullets from the guns of the radicals killed four former American soldiers, marching in the holiday parade.

The confession said the I. W. W. expected their hall would be attacked on Armistice day and that all the radicals who took part in the shooting expected to be shot. According to Roberts' statement, he and Wesley Everett, the second I. W. W., apparently directed the movement of the radicals as he sent Roberts and two others to Seminary hill near the scene of the shooting with orders to "shoot when they shoot or when they heard shots."

Roberts in his alleged confession implicated several alleged I. W. W. who are in jail here and in nearby cities. After making the confession Roberts is said to have stated he feared vengeance at the hands of his fellow radicals because of his admission.

Chief Parrish Heads Raiders On Cabarets

Saturday night Chief of Police Byron Parrish and his men raided every cabaret in Ranger and searched the crowds for weapons. A quart bottle of liquor and a pair of brass knuckles were found where the owners had hurriedly dropped them.

About ten officers took part in the raid. Large crowds gathered outside the cabarets while the search was going on. Most of the men searched took the affair good naturedly. The officers performed their work courteously and with despatch.

The raids were part of a program to put a stop to pistol "toying" in this city. It is the intention of Chief Parrish to break up this habit and all persons found unlawfully carrying guns or other forbidden weapons will be rigorously prosecuted.

RELIEF WORKER IN THE BALKANS

Mrs. L. M. Amerig is the wife of Captain Amerig, assistant secretary of war in the British cabinet who served on the staff of the British army in Salonika. Mrs. Amerig has taken her husband's place in the Balkans, but her work is not military. She is serving on the British committee for relief of the near east.

Hines Offers Railway Men Big Increase

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Director General Hines today submitted to representatives of the four railway brotherhoods an increase in wages amounting approximately to $3,000,000 a month.

MEN MAY ACCEPT.

The proposal laid before representatives of the brotherhoods at the closing session of the wage conference was taken under advisement. It was not what the men had asked for but their answer will be presented to the director general within the next ten days and it was considered they would accept.

The increase would affect trainmen, firemen, engineers and conductors, but more particularly those employed in the full freight train service.

There are many other questions affecting working conditions of trainmen which have not been decided and to which reference has been made by Mr. Hines in his public statements. These will be the basis for further conference between the brotherhood heads and members of the director general's staff. It was indicated that the conference might be resumed early next week but no definite date was set.

"COLONEL HOUSE OF FRANCE" IS NAME GIVEN TO MARTIN

William Martin is to President Poincare of France what Colonel House is to President Wilson—a confidential adviser and trusted aide. Martin has performed many important and secret missions for the French government. He was master of ceremonies at the signing of the peace treaty at Versailles. Like Colonel House, he is a postmaster in the art of maintaining silence.

AGREEMENT IS REACHED TO NEGOTIATE FOR WAGE SCALE AGREEMENTS NOW

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 15.—Evidence of reported violation of the temporary injunction by Judge A. B. Anderson of the United States district court against any conspiracy to reduce the production of coal is being gathered by agents of the United States government, which brought the injunction suit, it was learned this afternoon.

Leaders of the United Mine Workers of America, made defendants in the complaint filed by the government, are reported to have attended meetings where resolutions were adopted by the men not to return to work. It is said that arrests are not improbable in a day or two on charges of contempt of court.

It is a violation of the injunction for two or more miners to agree not to return to the shafts, because that constituted a conspiracy to violate the Lever act, a war-time measure, designed to prevent a reduction in the output of fuel or food. The granting of the injunction was based on alleged violation of the Lever act.

Petitions also are being circulated among the miners for signatures to a statement agreeing not to return to work, according to the information received by the court.

PARTIAL AGREEMENT REACHED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Coal miners and operators meeting here today could not unite upon the proposal by Secretary Wilson to negotiate a nationwide agreement, but did unite upon a plan to negotiate an agreement covering the mines in the central competitive field of western Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois.

Meanwhile the mine owners of the outlying fields who refused to merge their interests with those of the central territory caused a separation and went into a separate conference to determine how far the central territory field agreement, if negotiated, would serve as a basis for agreement in their respective fields.

This division came after a stormy morning of the joint session of operators' and miners' representatives, called by Secretary Wilson, in which John L. Lewis, acting president of the United Mine Workers, exchanged charges of bad faith with several spokesmen of the operators. F. W. Lukins, speaking for the operators in outlying fields, presented their refusal to comply with Secretary Wilson's proposal for a national agreement on the ground that its negotiation would take time that could not be granted in view of the need for coal. President Lewis, having accepted Mr. Wilson's plan, scored the operators for their refusal.

Secretary Wilson then advanced an alternative suggestion for a wage scale negotiation in the central fields. It was finally accepted though President Lewis again arraigned operators in certain fields for violation of law and demanded governmental action against them.

Representatives of miners in the outlying fields contended they were entitled to representation in any negotiation regarding the central field and that this would be used inevitably as a basis for their contract. The operators at Secretary Wilson's request agreed to consider a possible course and the conference adjourned until Monday.

RESERVATIONS DON'T DISTURB THE ALLIES

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The French foreign office considers the reservations to the German peace treaty in the American senate as constituting a question in the extreme delicate and the office is not disposed at present to make any official statement on the subject. Nevertheless persons of influence in French diplomacy express the view that the French government would be disposed to accept reservations by the American senate which would not require France and its allies to reopen the question already settled by the plenipotentiaries.

CLOTURE PUTS END TO SENATE PACT WRANGLES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—At last clamping down the lid on its peace treaty debate, the senate substituted action for discussion today with a vigor that quickly advanced the ratification fight into its final stages.

Working under cloture for the first time in history, the senate adopted in five hours ten more of the reservations written by the foreign relations committee and with only two committee proposals remaining at the parliamentary stage for a decision or a deadlock on the treaty early next week.

Republican and Democratic leaders worked together to invoke cloture, piling up a majority which far exceeded the two-thirds necessary for adoption. In the count of 78 to 16 the two parties contributed about evenly.

The roll call over, however, the cloture a fact, the Republican managers took complete charge and swept everything before them. Reservation after reservation went through just as it came from the committee until the Democrats apparently abandoned hope of making modifications and resigned themselves to a passive resistance.

Although many reservations proposed by individual senators will come to a vote after the committee's list is finished, leaders on both sides say that the end of the treaty fight is a question of a few days. The cloture rule that no senator can speak in all more than one hour between the time cloture was invoked today and disposal of the treaty.

The forensic prohibitions of the senate, which have held sway for more than six months of treaty discussion, died hard. Proceedings were repeatedly tanned by points of order and questions of personal right. A new flood of proposed reservations and amendments poured in, the presentation of which senators knew would be closed by cloture.

Democratic leaders reiterated their determination not to let the reservations get into final ratification and declared they were still firm in their determination to vote against the committee's ratification resolutions. Republican leaders began to lay plans for failure of the treaty, declaring congress might be forced to declare a state of peace by a joint resolution.

HOME-BUILDERS SIGN CONTRACT CENTRAL ADDN.

The Home Builders—Gardner, Smits & Gardner—among the first to take advantage of the opening of Hoeges Central addition, of the most desirable residence and business additions to Ranger, Saturday signed contracts with the W. R. Hodges estate for the construction of the first of their homes in the new addition. They will be located on attractive lots in blocks 18 and 21, east of the addition office, at Fifth and Bowie streets.

Meeting and exceeding the requirements of the exclusive sales agents, Driver & Proper, that all residences be of standard, four-room construction, the Home Builders will have on the market the best of design and containing exclusive features appealing to the discriminating buyer.

The houses which the Home Builders will erect in the new addition will be marketed through their office, in the F. & Q. Realty building, or through the expert sales staff maintained by Bert O. Driver and Malcolm J. Proper. Arrangements preliminary to the signing of the contracts were made through Driver & Proper.

In addition to being one of the most convenient building properties in Ranger, six blocks east of the Texas & Pacific station, served by roads that always are passable, the Hodges Central addition is ideal topographically. It is level, yet well drained, and already has well-graded highways.

88 I. W. W. MUST FACE CHARGES OF CONSPIRACY

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 15.—First federal action against alleged I. W. W. members, following the Centralia Armistice day massacre, was taken today when United States Commissioner D. H. Brockway issued warrants charging eighty-eight men, now in custody in Tacoma and Centralia, with conspiracy to overthrow the government.

All Industrial Workers of the world arrested in Seattle, Tacoma, Centralia and Chehalis are to be held in federal court with attempted conspiracy to overthrow the government, United States District Attorney Robert C. Standard declared today.

PALMER URGES STRICTER LAWS AGAINST "REDS"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The growth of radicalism throughout the country is to be attributed to inadequacy of federal laws against preaching violent overthrow of the government, Attorney General Palmer declared tonight in reply to the senate's recent inquiry as to what action had been taken by the department of justice to curb efforts to establish a dictatorship of the proletariat.

Mr. Palmer disclosed that the department has more than 60,000 persons under surveillance as radicals, with whom it is unable to cope because of weakness of present statutes.

The attorney general urged the passage of a law to supplement the espionage act and to take its place when the war-time measure ceases to be effective. He described the proposed act as being the most effective method of dealing with conditions of anarchy and radicalism generally, which members of his staff had been unable to grasp. Mr. Palmer said the bill was broad enough to stop off factually all attempts to overthrow the existing order and yet safeguard free speech and the press.

Activities of the foreign language press present another problem which the department has been unable to meet successfully, Mr. Palmer said. Investigations have uncovered 222 foreign language newspapers which have openly advocated changes in the governmental system by violence and preached sedition.

Most of the newspapers are practically devoid of advertising, which the department accepts as proof that funds are coming from outside sources, Mr. Palmer said.

He argued for changes in immigration laws and a revision in simply laws governing deportation. Radical leaders have taken advantage of technicalities to evade deportation, he explained.

Defer Examining Trial of Callan

SAN ANGELO, Nov. 15.—The examining trial of James Callan, prominent Texas cattle raiser of Menard, in connection with the fatal shooting Wednesday of C. Lee Billings near the Callan ranch, was today postponed at Menard until Thursday, Nov. 20.

Postponement was taken by agreement to await the arrival of Callan's counsel from Fort Worth. Meanwhile Callan is at liberty under $10,000 bail.

The reason for the killing of Billings, a young stockman of Dewitt county is unknown, Callan and eyewitnesses maintaining silence pending Callan's examination.

SEC. GLASS IS APPOINTED TO U. S. SENATE

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 15.—Appointment of Secretary Glass to the United States senate to succeed the late Thomas S. Martin and the acceptance of Mr. Glass were announced tonight by Leroy Hodges, aid to Governor Davis.

No Official Statement.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Secretary Glass made no statement on the offer of the senatorship from Virginia to succeed the late Thomas S. Martin, but the secretary's friends said he was considering it and was trying to decide whether he ought to leave the cabinet at this time.

NEGRO RIOTING SENTENCES NOT TO BE CHANGED

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 15.—Declaring that the governor's office would not be swayed by outside influences in regard to the death sentence passed upon eleven negroes for participation in the recent Phillips county race rebellion, Governor Brough today decided to ignore the telegrams from M. M. Browder, secretary of the National People's Rights League, requesting executive interference in the cases.

The governor again commended the manner in which Phillips county had handled the situation.

$1,000,000 Cotton Fire at Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 15.—Approximately 4,000 bales of cotton burned in a fire which swept part of the St. Louis Cotton Company's plant at Eldorado, Ark., today. The loss is about $1,000,000.

POWER AGAIN.

The tardiness of this issue of The Daily Times is due to the failure of the power and light company to furnish the necessary power for the operation of the plant. This is the second time this week that The Times has been delayed from this cause.

Since the new owners of the Ranger Power & Light company took charge, all three of the engines in use, by the carelessness of the former owners and their disregard for the public due to the pending sale of their franchise and plant. It is stated that the cheapest of fuel oil was purchased and every curtailment of necessary expenses was made, thereby enlarging their pocketbook and injuring the property which would soon be out of their hands. The engines will have to be rebuilt and the entire feeding system reinstalled.

The Daily Times trusts that the present owners will live up to their reputation and give Ranger the service it deserves and pays for.

Added to this handicap The Times is unable to furnish its readers with news stories this week due to the failure of the railroad to again make the delivery.

Every effort is made to publish a paper worthy of Ranger but such obstacles cannot be overcome, therefore the management asks the public to patiently wait for the betterment of conditions.

5 Planes and Much Equipment Burn

BELLEFOUNTE, Pa., Nov. 15.—Fire tonight destroyed the hangar, office building, four de Havilland and one Curtiss plane at the Bellefonte aviation field, the first station on the New York-to-Chicago aero mail line. The origin of the fire is unknown.

TEXAS COMPANY WANTS TO FIND STRAY HORSE

U. S. Prohibition Leader Hurt at London Better

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Continued improvement was reported today in the condition of William E. Johnson, commonly known as "Fussyfoot," American prohibitionist, whose eye was injured Thursday during his revolutionary participation in a parade through London streets on the day of students who had interrupted his prohibition meeting. Mr. Johnson is convalescing at a nursing home, where he was warned to keep absolutely quiet.

D'ANNUNZIO IS EXTENDING HIS CAMPAIGN NOW

The torpedo boat Nullo followed the other warships of his fleet. Six hundred troops were aboard, including his complete staff.

D'Annunzio is expected to continue his expedition to other Dalmatian ports.

"Irish Republic" Flags Torn Down

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 15.—Three flags of the so-called "Irish republic" were torn from automobiles in which Esmond de Valera and members of his reception committee were riding here today by members of the American Legion.

CHIEF OF POLICE BYRON PARRISH SEEKS HEARTY CO-OPERATION OF CITIZENS IN LAW ENFORCEMENT

In an interview with a reporter for The Daily Times, Chief of Police Byron Parrish said Saturday he will not commission anyone as night watchman in the downtown district. He said the police department will be able to give adequate protection to merchants and business men. It will be the policy of the department to reduce the number of gun toters and the chief thinks confusion will result from a number of private agencies operating along the lines which the department follows.

He cited the case of two Mexicans who are now in jail and positively identified as the two who robbed the Richardson-Brown store of $500 worth of goods about two weeks ago. Part of the stolen goods have been recovered and other Mexicans are under arrest and suspected of complicity in the affair.

Chief of Police Parrish said he will seek the hearty co-operation of the business men of the town in his work. He stressed the importance of citizens aiding the department in every way possible, especially in the matter of standing behind officers when they work up a case and make arrests. A great many people, he said, refuse to make complaint against a thief after he has restored property stolen from them.

Chief of Police Parrish said it is necessary for the public to support the police and do everything possible to convict criminals. He remarked it is for the public good. Nobody is going to steal anything from the police, he said, with the salary of the men at its present figure of $135 a month. He has issued instructions to the night men to stop all persons found prowling about the back ways and alleys late at night. If such men are honest, he pointed out, they will not mind being quizzed by officers, and if they are not honest the department will not mind their getting riled.

He said he would consider it a favor for any citizen to report any officer who is loafing about a pool hall, playing pool or otherwise neglecting his duty. Such information will be held strictly confidential and a careful investigation will be made of any complaint. If it is shown that the officer has been derelict in his duty he will be removed at once.

Mr. Parrish is also anxious for the citizens of the town to look into any place which has a bad reputation and report any violation of the law to the department. He explained that he is not going to persecute anybody. He stands square on a platform of law enforcement, and violations of the law will not be tolerated. Mr. Parrish is not playing any favorites. He said he never had a "pet" in his life. The gun-toter, the high-jacker and the gambler must go, and the co-operation and loyal support of decent citizens in ridding the town of these pests is earnestly sought.

Jack Gardner Shows 'Em How at Club Dance

Music that would make a cripple outclass Nijinski, delighted the guests of the Idlewild Country club and kept them up past the curfew at the Summer Garden Friday night. It was furnished, of course, by Jack Gardner himself and the other members of his Novelty Four. In his first excursion to Ranger the jazz king of Texas provided a party that will linger in memory. His return at the earliest possible date is insured by an oil operator who attended last night's jazz jamboree and who plans a special dance sometime soon.

"Broeze," as played by the Novelty Four and sung by Rags Thompson, who occasionally forsook his plaintive clarinet to burst into song, was the big number of the evening, though each dance of the ten played was encored many times with roused enthusiasm.

The Summer Garden was prettily decorated by Mrs. Mattie Felt, owner of the hall.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Turner, Mrs. M. H. Hagaman and Mrs. Goodman were chaperones. Out of town guests were Miss Anna Hughes of Fort Worth, visiting Miss Helen Ghobson, who returned from Dallas for the dance; Miss Marie Pennington and Miss Virginia Shaw of Stamford, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Haynes; Miss Hollie Davenport and Miss Ruby Wilson of Eastland, and H. B. Beard, J. W. Beard, R. L. Crutcher and T. O. Wilson of Eastland.

Jack Gardner was delighted with his first visit to Ranger and promised he would save his first open date for a return.

Parkhill Addition Placed on Market T.-P. Railway Here

Parkhill addition, west of Highland Park and north of Ranger Heights, is the latest suburban property to be placed upon the market. It is high, dry ground, level and free from mud.

The Texas Real Estate company has charge of the sale. There are about 600 lots in the addition. An abundance of good water is said to underlie the tract at a shallow depth.

J. W. Jennings, manager of the Texas Real Estate company, has employed two recently returned aviators as salesmen. They are D. E. Denman and E. F. Giles. Both were first lieutenants in the air service of the A. E. F. Lieutenant Giles is said to have four Boche machines to his credit. Lieutenant Denman has a supply of ficer.

PRUSSIAN ABROAD DISAVOW FATHERLAND

International News Service. GENEVA, Nov. 15.—British people will be surprised to learn that since the armistice there are no more Germans, and especially Prussians, abroad, notwithstanding the fact that in neutral countries one meets them every day.

I am not Prussian, but Bavarian, with English parents, and was forced to fight in the war.

My family are German-Americans and we are going to return home to Chicago as soon as possible.

My parents are Alsatian, and we shall settle in Milwaukee as soon as the treaty has been ratified.

All my relatives live in London and New York. We are not Germans, as we were naturalized long ago.

Such are the descriptions I collected among real Prussian and Bavarian officers and men staying in Switzerland who fought against the Allies by land and sea and air for four years. They are no longer Germans, but half English or American, and under this disguise want to enter these countries to continue their noisy propaganda and wait for another "day."

BIG HARDWARE CO. ASKS ACTION AT WASHINGTON

The Ranger Chamber of Commerce has received from the Simmons Hardware company of St. Louis a communication which is being widely disseminated asking that every pressure be brought to bear upon the tardy senators in Washington to put into effect the peace treaty and league of nations covenant, whether as originally drafted or with reservations.

SAN SABA NEWS.

Special to The Times. SAN SABA, Texas, Nov. 15.—At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce a committee of three was appointed to arrange for a mass meeting to be held in the near future looking towards the building of hotel and the possibilities of a better roads movement. Oil activities are living up a little with the sunshiny days and much interest is being developed in this locality. The Urquhart hotel reports the biggest business in the history of their several years' run here.

Hunter-Blake, representing the Mogul Oil company of Houston, Texas, which has large holdings in San Saba county, left for Brady to look into the recent new oil finds at that place.

Pecans are selling on the streets at 12 cents per pound. Fancy varieties are to be had on the market at from 15 to 30 cents per pound.

San Saba has hit on a novel way of warming up a teacher. The Ladies' Missionary society of the Methodist church met and went in a body to the pecan groves to gather pecans. Mr. Odion gave the ladies a tree and had it threshed, and is paying them 10 cents a pound to gather the pecans. The proceeds of this most pleasing party will be used for buying a heater for the parsonage.

LOCAL CLUB TO AID PROGRAMS AGAINST ALIENS

The Ranger Chamber of Commerce will co-operate with other chambers of commerce and commercial organizations in the southwest in an effort to have the bill prohibiting immigration from European nations passed in congress, it was announced by George Hemmingson, secretary, Saturday.

The bill would prohibit foreign aliens from entering the United States for a long period of years. The bill takes cognizance of the fact that most of the newly and revolutionary elements in this country come from Europe. The purpose of this bill is to create an American citizenship without the recalcitrant elements.

However, Representative Claude Hudspeth of El Paso has introduced an amendment which would permit the immigration of Mexicans from Mexico. The bill without this provision would bring a hardship on the Southwest by restricting the supply of labor and causing a decrease in production.

Opposition to the Mexican amendment to the bill is being vigorously shown by Congressman John C. Box of Jacksonville, Texas; Congressman Fritz G. Lanham of Fort Worth; Clay Stone Briger of Galveston; Sam Rayburn of Bonham; Lucian W. Parish of Houston; Tom Connally of Marlin, and others.

WEST FARMERS WILL REAP BY HOLDING SEED

West Texas this year is up to snuff in the matter of having the best cotton seed for planting purposes. Other sections of the state have been "holed" the boll weevil and boll worms.

The communication suggests that each community farmer convene a meeting of their members and make a plan looking toward rearing a reasonable profit from their seed for planting purposes.

Since little cotton is raised at present around Ranger probably no action in the matter will be taken, but other communities dependent almost solely upon cotton and its seed should continue progress are asked to take such action as suggested by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

PRISONER WHO ESCAPED FROM OGLETHORPE ARRESTED

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 15.—Escaping authorities six months after escaping from the German internment camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., risked his life climbing barbed electric wires, living under box cars, in hovels and disguised by a heavy beard, Herman Siebendorff was arrested at the Terminal station here recently.

He had ridden a freight train into Atlanta from St. Louis. Patrolman Patrick grabbed him at the depot. Unable to speak English, Siebendorff was turned over to the Detectives Barbo and Stone. At police headquarters S. Ablesman, a Decatur street merchant, was called in as a German interpreter.

Siebendorff's home was in Coblenz and he came to the United States in 1908 on a Belgian ship from Antwerp, he told the interpreter. The prisoner's disguise—a heavy beard—was removed on police orders by a Decatur street barber, and he was jailed while the police communicated with Oglethorpe.

RED CROSS SECURES 254 NEW MEMBERS IN SATURDAY DRIVE; CAMPAIGN ENDS NOVEMBER 22

Thirty-two firms in Ranger made 100 per cent records in contributing to the Red Cross, it was announced last night by Miss Mary Ann Cross, in charge of the Red Cross activities here.

The total membership of the Red Cross up to nightfall Saturday was 1,835, 254 new members having been taken in during the drive Saturday.

The campaign will be continued until November 22. The extension was a special dispensation of time in order that many communities and towns in the Southwest might overcome the loss by reason of the very inclement weather in the first stages of the campaign.

Ranger's quota has been fixed at $7,000. Ranger people who have not responded should do so at once. Miss Mary Ann Cross, special representative for the southwestern division of the organization, with headquarters in St. Louis, has been in the city since Thursday directing the work.

"I want to say I am pleased with the progress of the campaign here," said Miss Cross to a reporter Saturday evening for other points to assist in the work.

"Pleased With Work." "I want to say I am pleased with the progress of the campaign here," said Miss Cross to a reporter Saturday evening for other points to assist in the work.

The headquarters of the Red Cross in Ranger were moved Saturday from the Texas Bank and Trust company building to the lobby of the McCleskey hotel. An attendant will be in charge to take all contributions. During the remainder of the campaign solicitors will visit the business part to aid in the raising of the quota.

"The Honor Roll." Red Cross headquarters last night announced the following firms as having the honor of being 100 per cent solid for the Red Cross: National Supply Company of Texas.

Ranger Garage. Summers Quality Market. Mid-Texas Advertising company. Reid Furniture Company. City Drug Store.

Kerley & Van Winkle. Wilson Hotel. Oil Well Supply company. Norville Hardware company. Ranger Light and Power company.

Sanitary Market. T. & P. office. Texas Pipe Line company. McCleskey Hotel. Frick-Reid Supply company. Continental Supply company. Republic Supply company. Jarecki Supply company. Atlas Supply company. McEwens Supply company. Frick-Reid Warehouse. Parkersburg Rig and Reel company. Finkle Grocery Commission company. Guaranty Bank and Trust company. Farmers and Merchants Bank. First National Bank. Bank of Ranger.

"We trust that other firms will get on the honor roll," said Miss Cross last night. "It is a coveted place. It takes a little sacrifice. The sacrifice means happiness and cheer to others. We would appreciate the services of a number of other persons in the campaign," said Miss Cross. "You might be the means of putting it over. Those wishing to aid should call at the McCleskey hotel booth for instructions."

"KISSCURL" CAUSE OF MISS MARTYN'S TRIP HERE LONDON, Nov. 15.—A curl it was that sent Miss Kathlene Martyn aboard the Mauritania to land with a splash in the middle of that Broadway for which many strive unsuccessfully throughout life.

When everybody else in the musical revue world in England "bobbed" this little flapper person was distinctive; she concentrated all her attention on one solitary "kisscurl."

It got the collective goat of the soldier boys, particularly the officers of the air force, who wrote her notes by the basketful. And it got her onto the front page of a New York Sunday paper pictorial section.

There Mr. Dillingham saw it and he cabbed. Kathlene took the next boat, while her bobbed sisters remained to fight, through their new union, for a living wage that will protect them from traveling "revue pashas."

HIGHER MANHOOD.

Though we have nominally adopted Christianity, we are putting little into
 it. We have come to be second-rate infidels. Our blurred, chimerical conceptions of the Creator and of His uncompromising requirements have almost totally removed us from the sphere of Christian activity. Materialism has blinded us until it is now a joke to be taught the mysteries of a Creator and a future world. Sometimes in our health, in our pleasures and viciousness we doubt everything but the present world. We do not want a God. We feel omnipotent in ourselves.

Only a very small proportion of our people attend Sunday school and divine services. Our churches are quiet, grave, discordant places in which to meet and assemble. The first-century message of the speaker falls on our minds. We'd rather hear baseball, dancing, stocks and commercialism talked. We'd rather watch a fake medicine show on the street, watch a couple of "kiddos" scrap, game cocks in a gory contest, or whatnot. But as to Sunday school and church—piffle on them! The preacher is to be abhorred. When we see him ambling down the street, half fed and neat, but not stylishly dressed, we try to avoid him. We're afraid he's going to invite us to his "old, dull church."
 In a town of 500 Sunday school attendance rarely reaches 100 in all denominational churches; and most of that 100 are children. Most parents, it must be said in honor to them, believe in having their children attend this great institution; but it's too "innocent" for themselves.

There is a large element of our people—and they never attend church —who are quick to give a reason for the apparent decadence of our church institutions. One of the popular explanations is that they are trying to reach an enlightened people by ancient methods. Something in the form of amusement must be utilized to bring out the throngs. Something airy, light and easy must be called into play to attract people. Though this explanation may appear to be very plausible to the masses, it is as far from a solution of the situation as the east is from the west.
 People in this materialistic age have their consciences and hearts pricked to the deep when they sit through a

SCRIPTURE

John 2: 1-10

And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there:
 And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.
 And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.
 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.
 His mother saith unto the servants,
 Whatever he saith unto you, do it.
 And there were set there six water-pots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece.
 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.
 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.
 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was; (but the servants which drew the water knew;) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,
 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

religious service. When they enter the church they feel that the service has a particular concern for them—an individual appeal. The gravity of the hour is intense. The call to one's better self is insistent. The promptings to repentance troop into one's mind. One feels instinctively that he has missed the greatest happiness of life, but has gone so far into dishonesties, errors and sins that it is difficult to "back up." One's courage of convictions is lacking. Spiritual life seeks the ascendancy over physical life. The battle which will be decisive takes place in all its mighty array as one sits under the preaching of the word. Dynamite has a tremendous force, but it is comparable to a firecracker beside a big "bertha" with the power of the preached word in the hands of a consecrated minister of the gospel.

We hate to find ourselves. We hate to see that our personal premises are so unclean. We hate to have our own hearts condemn us. Those are some of the things—the principal ones—which shut us out of devotion and keep us from enjoying the greatest felicity which can come to a man on this side of the River Styx. The man who is clean at heart never hesitates to enter a church; in fact, he is very uncomfortable to be anywhere else but in a church when the bells in the belfries summon to worship of the Creator of all the Universe.

The destiny of America is wrapped up in how we treat the churches. If we are not to support them, we are to go into the blackness of the "dark ages." The man who voices opposition to these institutions is dead spiritually, and the world should distrust him. All the happiness of the ages and the prosperity of aeons of time is wrapped up in the perpetuation in man of that supreme confidence that life does not end here, but continues through eternity—that what is done upon earth is to be rewarded commensurate with our deeds. We must keep fixed in our minds the knowledge that wrong living here means a serious ordeal in the next world. If we eliminate this truth we cannot frame statutes to prevent the highest crime of ages. It should, therefore, be our purpose to foster every Christian undertaking, giving unsparingly of our means, for we may rest assured that with every step which we advance the cause of Christ we shall make future generations debtor to us. As much as we detest having our hearts pricked by the everlasting words of the Creator as we sit under the preaching of the word, we must remember that it is only through such discipline that we have attained to our present high sphere of influence and life. Any old 12-karat infidel knows there is a physical salvation in the church apart from the spiritual, which he denies, in that if all the churches in America were closed, the preachers expatriated and every religious influence destroyed, the American nation would be full of foul murders and atrocious and vicious influences which would soon steep it in the densest ignorance and precipitate annihilation.

Education is one of the finest up-lifting mediums in the world. Education plays second fiddle to no other force save Christianity. However, education cannot thrive where infidelity is rampant. Take, for instance, all the great nations of today. You will find them to have embraced Christianity. On the other hand, look at the numerous nations which have never undertaken to put the principles of Christianity into practice and you will discover a people who never have succeeded commercially, educationally or in any other line above that of the pagans. Where you find Christianity you find education—they go hand in hand; they are the Jack and Jill of highest life.

The community which is alive to its religious and educational needs, therefore, is always in esteem. When a man wants to settle down for life, he goes there. He does not care for the marts where sin is rampant. If he has children to school he takes them where the influences are the best.
 However sordid he may have been in his past life, he always takes these things into consideration when he is about to make a choice of location for his family.

In many of our cities numerous urchins run about the streets every Sunday, in idleness and in crime.
 They have never darkened the door of any church. They do not know what a Sunday school is. Their parents care nothing for life—it has palled on them. They are poor, probably despised. They have been brought up ignorantly. To them all that life holds is a meal now and then. They are out with the world.
 They hate the rich; they hate the church; they detest institutions of the government. These people can be lifted. They need only a new idea in their head. They should be brought to know that there are thousands of Christians willing to lift them up and give them a place in the world where they can be more than angry devourers of the substance of the land. Their children should be placed in the Sunday schools by all means. Unless the present generation is brought up differently the nation itself will be undermined.

The boys and girls of today will be the men and women of tomorrow.

 Are we to be overrun with a large part of the race which knows nothing of the finer institutions of our land?
 Are we to have men who have been brought up as thieves and thugs? Are we to see women of unchaste natures? Are we as workers in the church doing our part? Have we lost the belief in our own work? Have not we been too dependent upon earthly sources for our success? Cannot we right now ask for a legion of angels and be provided?

The pulpit must divorce itself from the world. It must become more effective. It must not look so much to man for its strength and directing power. It must get it from the Source of All Power. Wonderful days in the development of the Christian religion are about to be ushered in.
 When we get to the point where we know that all power is generated from above we shall be enabled to shake off some of our own selfishness and bring about an awakening of the public conscience on matters vital to every community, to every nation and to the world at large. The great churches of our land are evolving powerful means to bring about the evangelization of the world. While they are doing this, shall not we ourselves return to the pristine richness of the Christianity which our sainted fathers and mothers taught us, without the addition of "higher critical" interpolations brought to us from Germany before the war was in its incipient. Infidelity destroyed old Germany. It will destroy new America
 if it is not checked.
 Go to church and Sunday school today.

J. W. Jennings Class Postpones Service

On account of a request from the Salvation Army, which is holding a meeting Sunday night, the devotional meeting and Indian play which was to have been in charge of J. W. Jennings and his class of young men, has been postponed until a later date. The play represents the work of early missionaries among the Indians. It was scheduled to take place following the devotional service at the Methodist church.

Mr. Jennings said Saturday that the play probably will be given a week from Sunday.

WINNER STORE PREPARING FOR MAIN STREET BUILDING

D. Joseph, manager and one of the partners in the Winner store, now located on Musk street just north of the F. & M. bank building, has returned from a trip to St. Louis, where he bought complete fixtures for what promises to be Ranger's most up to date department store.
 The Winner store has leased the main floor in the Hodges-Neal building, now being built on Main street just west of the Rexall drug store.
 The main floor will be 135x40 feet with a 50-foot balcony around the sides. This will make this store the most commodious department store in Ranger. Mr. Joseph says he is sparing no pains or expense in equipping this store with the most modern fixtures obtainable. This progressive merchant believes in Ranger and believes that the people of Ranger should have a store with every convenience for their comfort and convenience in shopping.
 Present plans call for completion of this building by February 1.

NEW PACKING RULES ADOPTED BY EXPRESS CO.

Steps were taken today by Agent K. D. Steffens, in charge of the city express office, to prepare for the new express packing requirements, which go into effect on Dec. 10. He has been advising express shippers to study the new rules which have been approved by the United States railroad administration, so that they may be able to adjust their packing methods to the forthcoming new standards.

Under the new regulations, which are embodied in what is known technically as supplement No. 5 to express classification No. 26, all shipments sent by express weighing over twenty-five pounds, must be packed in wooden containers, or cartons of fiberboard, pulboard or corrugated strawboard material, of specified "test strength." This means, according to Agent K. D. Steffens, that after Dec. 10, packages over the twenty-five pound limit will not be accepted for forwarding by the American Railway Express company handling the express business of the entire country as agent of the railroad administration, if only paper wrapped. Nor will ordinary paper boxes, wrapped or unwrapped, be accepted as suitable protection for the heavier shipments. The regulations, however, do not affect shipments under twenty-five pounds.

Regular shippers, Agent K. D. Steffens stated today, will not be mystified by the new regulations, as they follow very closely the packing requirements long in vogue in the freight service. The express regulations, however, allow a little more latitude in the size of the cartons used. The enforcement of the new rules was postponed until Dec. 10, so that shippers would have plenty of time to prepare themselves for this change in express packing standards. Agent K. D. Steffens expressed the opinion that these new rules will not work any hardship on shippers, but should operate distinctly in their interest, as the rules will provide additional safeguard for merchandise in transit. Moreover, they will establish a uniformity of express packing rules which, heretofore, has been lacking. The new order does not affect the movement of food products by express, which are ordinarily shipped in crates or barrels. "We believe," stated agent K. D. Steffens, in explaining the new regulations, "that the shipping public will welcome the new standards when they understand them, and the reasons for putting them into effect. "Never before in the history of the country has the express traffic reached such proportions as it has assumed today. At the same time, there has been comparatively little increase in the amount of car space available for this business. We have been asked to carry heavier shipments and commodities of every conceivable kind.

During the war, it was possible for car messengers to spread their freight out on the floors of the express cars without much congestion. Today, we are running dozens of through cars between the big cities and every one of those cars are packed to capacity. There has been a similar congestion in the local runs.

"This has made it necessary for express shipments to be stacked. As a result, individual shipments have had to be strongly enough packed to be able to stand up for themselves, and owing to the lack of uniformity in this regard, the new regulations were formulated and finally approved by the railroad administration. The stronger containers required, we believe, will very perceptibly help to improve the express service and to protect the miscellaneous articles of merchandise traveling through this channel from damage or interference en route."

An extensive educational campaign is planned to explain to express shippers how the new requirements will operate in the various trades which depend upon the express service for the movement of the bulk of their output and also to instruct employees regarding acceptance of matter for shipment under the new standards.

Agent K. D. Steffens is able to supply shippers with copies of the supplement No. 5 to express classification No. 26, in which the new rules are outlined in detail.

Do You Think For Yourself?

New York Herald: "One of the deplorable phrases of the present national discontent is the apparent increase in the number of persons incapable of thinking straight. Organization and group life, industrial specialization and class struggles seem to have atrophied the powers of individual thought and consequently increased the army of unthinking."

After the efforts of municipalities for half a century and more to promote a high type of civilization through better architecture, modern conveniences and endless luxuries—art galleries, parks, boulevards, free concerts, free libraries, the best books, "for a song" and everything to make happy lives of the majority—it is passing strange that there should be so much discontent and riotous conduct.

Some one has written: How few think justly of the thinking few. How many never think who think they do.

How well this applies to the many social reformers and radical leaders responsible for many, if not all, of the existing diseases of the social and industrial body?

All the financial and governmental vagaries which appear in times like these are the result of the activity of those who "never think who think they do." The American people as a whole, native born and naturalized, should be the happiest and most contented on earth. The Japanese have an old saying expressive of their plus ultra of beauty: "See Nikko and die." Nikko is the most beautiful spot in the whole of the Orient. Americans well can say: "See America and live," for here we have the finest cities, the most beautiful parks, the best music, the best universities, the best schools, the best civilization. Here money in millions is spent each year for the benefit of the masses—for their pleasures and entertainment and joy! Yet America now is afflicted with strikes, disturbances, crazy ideas and half-baked notions of government—and all because of the increase in the number of its unthinking.

Thought is not thinking as others have thought nor solving the thoughts of others. Thought is deduction from observation—imagination from the unseen. No man is a good citizen unless he thinks of others and thinks intelligently and straight. Thinking makes manhood—broadens the intellect and cures mental strabismus.

if the discontented would devote ten minutes each day to dwelling upon the many blessings they find in this land they soon would realize that America is a pretty good place after all and that American conditions as well as American institutions are the best on this earth; and in that realization they would find happiness.

fine is a negligible amount, that received by the assisting barterers. His bill to remedy the evil expected to pass.

Here is what the 15-year-old physical marvel does each day:
Rises at 5:30 a. m.
Breakfast—one quart clear cool water.
Lunch—Three peanut butter sandwiches, two bananas, one pint milk.
Juggles 75-pound weight all day.
Hot bath, 5 p. m.
Dinner—Vegetables only.
Retires 9 p. m.

SEATTLE, Nov. 15.—A Samson as a baby and a Hercules at the age of fifteen. That's the title that can be given to Dean Duffield Cutting, who at fifteen stands six feet three inches in height, weighs 185 pounds and is an all-around physical marvel. He has attained his physical perfection by following a program that is in itself astounding to heavy eaters.

On November 19, 1905, the Seattle Times published an article about Dean, then less than two years old, naming him the Baby Samson. The newspaper has followed his progress through thirteen years. It was predicted then that the boy would be a marvel and his mode of living has been carefully watched.

Young Cutting rises every morning at 5:30 o'clock. He has his breakfast—one quart of cool water—and then starts for work in a local shipyard. He plays around with a more 75-pound drill during the morning and takes his lunch at 11 o'clock—three peanut sandwiches, two or three bananas and one pint of milk. Note that nothing warm has touched his stomach since rising.

In the afternoon he continues his juggling act with the 75-pound drill and returns home at 5 o'clock. He then takes a hot bath and eats his dinner. Usually it is beans without pork, mashed Irish or sweet potatoes and other vegetables. He has never eaten meat. When a child he saw a picture of a dog retrieving a fowl and has never wanted meat as a consequence.

He started training when he was two years old, using two-pound dumbbells. At eleven years of age he kicked a football 109 feet. During the same year he had his first and only fight. An older boy called him a coward and a "frisky cat." They met after school and Dean landed on him once. Other pupils thought the lad was dead, but he came to after an hour and didn't want to call Dean a "frisky cat" any more.

He can lift his mother and carry her about the house as if she were a doll. His father, who weighs 190 pounds, has had more than one ride in his son's arms.

Dean's great strength has never been actually tested. Physical directors here, in both the high schools and at the state university, agree he is a marvel.

His fellow workers at the shipyard hoot the idea that he is only fifteen years of age. They believe him to be twenty-five. He does not want to become a professional athlete nor a prize fighter. He is looking forward to returning to school, where he will be a sophomore the coming semester. Football holds no attraction for him.

At two he was a Sampson; today he is a Hercules. What will he be when he grows up?

Frisco Is After Tidewater When Restriction Off

TULSA, Okla.—The aim of the owners and managers of every important railroad in this country is to secure direct connections with tidewater, so as to make their property assured proportion of a great freight carrier, says the World.

Two of the railroads entering Tulsa now reach tidewater. One does it at three points, another just once, while a third railroad is already planning as soon as the United States Railway Administration returns the roads to their owners to reach tidewater.

This is the Frisco, which at present is using a transportation man's remark—"Starts from nowhere and ends nowhere." While actually St. Louis is somewhere, and a great trade center, yet it would be of much more importance to the Frisco if that city were on the Great Lakes, or some other body of water—salt or fresh—from which commerce could be secure from all the world.

The Katy also starts at St. Louis, but succeeds in reaching both Houston and Galveston, ports of entry on the Gulf of Mexico. The Santa Fe starts at Chicago, on Lake Michigan, and reaches three ports on the Pacific ocean, and two on the Gulf of Mexico, thus making it one of the greatest transportation lines of the country.

According to prominent Frisco officials, this north and south line will next year secure a direct connection into tidewater over a little road that some of its owners have secured control of. This is the Gulf, Florida & Alabama, that now runs from Kilbourne, Ala., to Pensacola, Fla. As it exists today the G. F. & A. is not much of a railroad, but with a gap of about forty miles built it would tap the Frisco lines and the great coal fields of Northern Alabama and thus give the Frisco its tidewater line.

This will be the second time that the Frisco has had a tidewater line, though actually it never did have one. When B. F. Yoakum began acquiring and merging and otherwise building up the Frisco system back in the latter part of 1900, he got hold of a line that ran from Irons, Texas, to Baton Rouge, La., and made this a part of the Frisco system. To reach this division, however, the Frisco had to route freight and passengers over foreign lines to get to this distant possession just like the Katy does with its small branch in Texas. It did not pay and several years before the war during receivership proceedings this Gulf line was divested.

But the action of the federal courts failed to end the dream of Frisco officials for a tidewater route, and hence when the G. F. & A. began having financial dyspepsia, its owners, with a vision of the future, began steps to acquire it when it was finally buried in federal receivership and sale proceedings.

Such a step was taken before the war by the Burlington in providing financial rejuvenation for the Gulf, Mobile & Northern that runs from Jackson, Tenn., to Mobile, Ala.

Some railroad owners, especially those of small feeder lines, are content with drawing in all the trade from a certain territory that they can and distributing it to the lines that connect with their terminals. The Midland Valley is one of this type of railroad, supplying great volumes of business to the Frisco and Santa Fe in Tulsa, the Katy at Muskogee, the Kansas City Southern at Fort Smith, and the Rock Island and others at Wichita.

Two ounces of salted lizards, one-half ounce of Korea ginseng root, six dried grasshoppers—three male and three female—one ounce sweet potato leaves, one ounce walnuts, one-fourth ounce lotus leaves, one-half ounce of rattlesnake tail, two ounces black dates, one-half ounce elm tree bark, one-half ounce devil fish tentacles, one-half ounce hartshorn, one-half ounce bird claws, one-half ounce dried ginger and one-half ounce old coffin nails.

This was to be boiled in a gallon of water until reduced to a great thickness and then given to the patient in large quantities.

NEW PACKING RULES ADOPTED BY EXPRESS CO.

Steps were taken today by Agent K. D. Steffens, in charge of the city express office, to prepare for the new express packing requirements, which go into effect on Dec. 10. He has been advising express shippers to study the new rules which have been approved by the United States railroad administration, so that they may be able to adjust their packing methods to the forthcoming new standards.

Under the new regulations, which are embodied in what is known technically as supplement No. 5 to express classification No. 26, all shipments sent by express weighing over twenty-five pounds, must be packed in wooden containers, or cartons of fiberboard, pulboard or corrugated strawboard material, of specified "test strength." This means, according to Agent K. D. Steffens, that after Dec. 10, packages over the twenty-five pound limit will not be accepted for forwarding by the American Railway Express company handling the express business of the entire country as agent of the railroad administration, if only paper wrapped. Nor will ordinary paper boxes, wrapped or unwrapped, be accepted as suitable protection for these heavier shipments. The regulations, however, do not affect shipments under twenty-five pounds.

Regular shippers, Agent K. D. Steffens stated today, will not be mystified by the new regulations, as they follow very closely the packing requirements long in vogue in the freight service. The express regulations, however, allow a little more latitude in the size of the cartons used. The enforcement of the new rules was postponed until Dec. 10, so that shippers would have plenty of time to prepare themselves for this change in express packing standards. Agent K. D. Steffens expressed the opinion that these new rules will not work any hardship on shippers, but should operate distinctly in their interest, as the rules will provide additional safeguard for merchandise in transit. Moreover, they will establish a uniformity of express packing rules which, heretofore, has been lacking. The new order does not affect the movement of food products by express, which are ordinarily shipped in crates or barrels. "We believe," stated agent K. D. Steffens, in explaining the new regulations, "that the shipping public will welcome the new standards when they understand them, and the reasons for putting them into effect.

"Never before in the history of the country has the express traffic reached such proportions as it has assumed today. At the same time, there has been comparatively little increase in the amount of car space available for this business. We have been asked to carry heavier shipments and commodities of every conceivable kind.

Before the war, it was possible for car messengers to spread their freight out on the floors of the express cars without much congestion. Today, we are running dozens of through cars between the big cities and every one of those cars are packed to capacity. There has been a similar congestion in the local runs.

"This has made it necessary for express shipments to be stacked. As a result, individual shipments have had to be strongly enough packed to be able to stand up for themselves, and owing to the lack of uniformity in this regard the new regulations were formulated and finally approved by the railroad administration. The stronger containers required, we believe, will very perceptibly help to improve the express service and to protect the miscellaneous articles of merchandise traveling through this channel from damage or interference en route."

An extensive educational campaign is planned to explain to express shippers how the new requirements will operate in the various trades which depend upon the express service for the movement of the bulk of their output and also to instruct employees regarding acceptance of matter for shipment under the new standards.

Agent K. D. Steffens is able to supply shippers with copies of the supplement No. 5 to express classification No. 26, in which the new rules are outlined in detail.

Do You Think For Yourself?

New York Herald: One of the deplorable phrases of the present national discontent is the apparent increase in the number of persons incapable of thinking straight. Organization and group life, industrial specialization and class struggles seem to have atrophied the powers of individual thought and consequently increased the army of unthinking.

After the efforts of municipalities for half a century and more to promote a high type of civilization through better architecture, modern conveniences and endless luxuries—art galleries, parks, boulevards, free concerts, free libraries, the best books, "for a song" and everything to make happy lives of the majority—it is passing strange that there should be so much discontent and riotous conduct.

Some one has written: How few think justly of the thinking few.

How many never think who think they do.

How well this applies to the many social reformers and radical leaders responsible for many, if not all, of the existing diseases of the social and industrial body?

All the financial and governmental vagaries which appear in times like these are the result of the activity of those who "never think who think they do." The American people as a whole, native born and naturalized, should be the happiest and most contented on earth. The Japanese have an old saying expressive of their plus ultra of beauty: "See Nikko and die." Nikko is the most beautiful spot in the whole of the Orient. Americans well can say: "See America and live," for here we have the finest cities, the most beautiful parks, the best music, the best universities, the best schools, the best civilization. Here money in millions is spent each year for the benefit of the masses—for their pleasures and entertainment and joy! Yet America now is afflicted with strikes, disturbances, crazy ideas and half-baked notions of government—and all because of the increase in the number of its unthinking.

Thought is not thinking as others have thought nor echoing the thoughts of others. Thought is deduction from observation—imagination from the unseen. No man is a good citizen unless he thinks of others and thinks intelligently and straight. Thinking makes manhood—broadens the intellect and cures mental strabismus.

If the discontented would devote ten minutes each day to dwelling upon the many blessings they find in this land they soon would realize that America is a pretty good place after all and that American conditions as well as American institutions are the best on this earth; and in that realization they would find happiness.

EVEN HIGH COST OF INTOXICATION GOES UP

International News Service. PARIS.—The high cost of living is going to make it more expensive to get drunk and disorderly in France. M. Escudier, one of the deputies from Paris, points out that the present fine of $8 assessed by French magistrates drunkard is ordinarily smaller than that received by the assisting bartenders ago and that the amount the ers. His bill to remedy the evil in French government gets out of a expected to pass.

Many thousands of non-union miners are still at work, particularly in the fields of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Utah. The anthracite miners are not affected by the strike.

HERE'S A REAL BOY HERCULES! READ ABOUT HIM

International News Service.

Here is what the 15-year-old physical marvel does each day:
 Rises at 5:30 a. m.
 Breakfast—one quart clear cool water.
 Lunch—Three peanut butter sandwiches, two bananas, one pint milk.
 Juggles 75-pound weight all day.
 Hot bath, 5 p. m.
 Dinner—Vegetables only.
 Retires 9 p. m.

SEATTLE, Nov. 15.—A Samson as a baby and a Hercules at the age of fifteen. That's the title that can be given to Dean Duffield Cutting, who at fifteen stands six feet three inches in height, weighs 185 pounds and is an all-around physical marvel. He has attained his physical perfection by following a program that is in itself astounding to heavy eaters. On November 12, 1905, the Seattle Times published an article about Dean, then less than two years old, naming him the Baby Samson. The newspaper has followed his progress through thirteen years. It was predicted then that the boy would be a marvel and his mode of living has been carefully watched.

Young Cutting rises every morning at 5:30 o'clock. He has his breakfast—one quart of cool water—and then starts for work in a local shipyard. He plays around with a mere 75-pound drill during the morning and takes his lunch at 11 o'clock—three peanut sandwiches, two or three bananas and one pint of milk. Note that nothing warm has touched his stomach since rising. In the afternoon he continues his juggling act with the 75-pound drill and returns home at 5 o'clock. He then takes a hot bath and eats his dinner. Usually it is beans without pork, mashed Irish or sweet potatoes and other vegetables. He has never eaten meat. When a child he saw a picture of a dog retrieving a fowl and has never wanted meat as a consequence.

He started training when he was two years old, using two-pound dumbbells. At eleven years of age he kicked a football 109 feet. During the same year he had his first and only fight. An older boy called him a coward and a "frisky cat." They met after school and Dean landed on him once. Other pupils thought the lad was dead, but he came to after an hour and didn't want to fight Dean a "frisky cat" any more. He can lift his mother and carry her about the house as if she were a doll. His father, who weighs 190 pounds, has had more than one ride in his son's arms.

Dean's great strength has never been actually tested. Physical instructors here, in both the high schools and at the state university, agree he is a marvel. His fellow workers at the shipyards hoot the idea that he is only fifteen years of age. They believe him to be twenty-five. He does not want to become a professional athlete nor a prize fighter. He is looking forward to returning to school, where he will be a sophomore the coming semester. Football holds no attraction for him. At two he was a Samson; today he is a Hercules. What will he be when he grows up?

The courtship extended over the period during which the couple were residents of Prospect Hill, N. C. Mrs. Allen also was given judgment for expenses which she incurred in coming to Fort Smith.

Frisco Is After Tidewater When Restriction Off

TULSA, Okla.—The aim of the owners and managers of every important railroad in this country is to secure direct connections with tidewater, so as to make their property assume proportion of a great freight carrier, says the World.

Two of the railroads entering Tulsa now reach tidewater. One does it at three points, another just once, while a third railroad is already planning as soon as the United States Railway Administration returns the roads to their owners to reach tidewater.

This is the Frisco, which at present uses a transportation man's remark—"starts from nowhere and ends nowhere." While actually St. Louis is somewhere, and a great trade center, yet it would be of much more importance to the Frisco if that city were on the Great Lakes, or some other body of water—salt or fresh—from which commerce could be secure from all the world.

The Katy starts at St. Louis, but succeeds in reaching both Houston and Galveston, ports of entry on the Gulf of Mexico. The Santa Fe starts at Chicago, on Lake Michigan, and reaches three ports on the Pacific ocean, and two on the Gulf of Mexico, thus making it one of the greatest transportation lines of the country.

According to prominent Frisco officials, this north and south line will next year secure a direct connection into tidewater over a little road that some of its owners have secured control of. This is the Gulf, Florida & Alabama, that now runs from Kilbourne, Ala., to Pensacola, Fla. As it exists today the G. F. & A. is not much of a railroad, but with a gap of about forty miles built it would tap the Frisco lines and the great coal fields of Northern Alabama and thus give the Frisco its tidewater line.

This will be the second time that the Frisco has had a tidewater line, though actually it never did have one. When E. F. Young began acquiring and merging and otherwise building up the Frisco system back in the latter part of 1900, he got hold of a line that ran from Brownsville, Texas, to Easton Rouge, La., and made this a part of the Frisco system. To reach this division, however, the Frisco had to route freight and passengers over foreign lines to get to this distant possession just like the Katy does with a small branch in Texas. It did not pay and several years before the war during receivership proceedings this gulf line was divorced.

But the action of the federal courts failed to end the dream of Frisco officials for a tidewater route, and hence when the G. F. & A. began having financial dyspepsia, its owners, with a vision of the future, began steps to acquire it when it was finally buried in federal receivership and sale proceedings.

Such a step was taken before the war by the Burlington in providing financial rejuvenation for the Gulf, Mobile & Northern that runs from Jackson, Tenn., to Mobile, Ala.

Some railroad owners, especially those of small feeder lines, are content with drawing in all the trade from a certain territory that they can and distributing it in the lines that connect with their terminals. The Midland Valley is one of this type of railroad, supplying great volumes of business to the Frisco and Santa Fe at Tulsa, the Katy at Muskogee, the Kansas City Southern at Fort Smith, and the Rock Island and others at Wichita.

WOULD BRING BACK HEROES TO U. S. SOIL

International News Service. PITTSBURG, Nov. 15. — "An American tomb in America for every American hero who died on foreign soil." That is the slogan of a nationwide movement for the return of America's soldier dead, recently started here. Unimpressed by the promises of foreign governments, especially of France, and the peoples of foreign countries, that the graves will be cared for, nearly 200 parents or next of kin of the boys who gave their lives for the cause of democracy met here and demanded that the United States government keep its solemn word that the bodies would be brought back to this country. An organization known as the "Bring Home the Soldier Dead League" was formed to bring pressure to bear upon the government, and it was announced that the campaign would be "pushed to the limit." The passage of a bill by the French chamber of deputies, which provides that the bodies of Americans must not be removed from France for three years, was bitterly condemned by the speakers, who charged that the French government was making use of the dead to promote commercialism. While economic and sanitary reasons were given by the French for this action, it was said that the real motive was to compel relatives of heroes to make a pilgrimage across the Atlantic to visit the graves. It was also charged that bodies of soldiers are constantly being moved from one cemetery to another, one father explaining that the body of his son had been moved no less than four times. The purposes of the league are set forth as follows: "To aid in the formation of similar organizations throughout the United States and to enroll every parent and widow and other relatives of deceased soldiers now interred in France. "To solidify such organization and make it permanent and secure the aid of every sympathetic person in the country. "Petition congress to require the secretary of war or other government official on or before February 1, 1920, to begin bringing back home the soldier dead and to have the work completed within six months. "To demand that the action for the bringing home of the soldier dead shall be taken by this government without regard to the wishes, objections or suggestions of France or of any individuals. "To demand that the contract made with our boys before they all had gone across, when they were solemnly promised—and the parents assured—the dead would be brought back, be faithfully kept by bringing back our dead now. "As our boys kept faith with the country, the country must not fail to keep faith with the mothers and widows who mourn as none but they do. "To these ends the parents and widows solemnly pledge every effort and their worldly all."

NOT IMPRESSED BY AMERICAN GIRLS

Miss Edith Chen, saying that she did not know American boys well enough to pass judgment upon them, but stating that she didn't like American girls at all—especially those who smoke cigarettes and those who have too much initiative—Miss Edith Chen, a little Chinese girl of Syracuse University, summed up her impressions of America. She added that she would never get "as us" we should "to stay" in. She is the daughter of Dr. R. Chen Chang Chow, of Fookien, China, and she is studying here to equip herself to become a teacher in China.

Ex-Kaiser Spends the Simple Life

By Associated Press. AMERONGEN, Holland, Nov. 14.—A Hollander who recently dined with the former German emperor at Bentinck castle told the Associated Press correspondent that the exiled ruler almost monopolized the conversation at the dinner table. Speaking on all manner of international subjects, he gave little opportunity for the other diners to speak, and after dinner, talking about the defeat of the Kaiser and his escape in the war, he illustrated with maps just how it was done. There has been but little change in the daily routine of Amerongen's exile since he crossed the Dutch border nearly a year ago. He breakfasts rather early with his wife, then had been jilted by his sweetheart, who refused to see him. He wrote, warning her that he would be revenged. As the girl stood among a crowd at the railway station where potatoes were being distributed, the forsaken lover appeared and hurled a number of bombs at the girl with terrible effect. Six persons, including the jilted lover, were killed and twenty-one injured. Love tragedies in Germany are now so frequent that they have become a standing feature of the newspapers. Another case occurred in which the principals were little more than children. A Hamburg schoolboy, aged sixteen, holiday making in Berlin, became enamored of a girl of seventeen. While they were strolling together yesterday evening the girl's former admirer, also aged seventeen, came on the scene. A heated altercation ensued, at the end of which the young Hamburger

WILSON ABLE TO WRITE WITH EITHER HAND

International News Service, WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—President Wilson is ambidextrous. In addition to his many other unusual accomplishments, the president of the United States has patiently acquired the ability to use, with equal facility, his right or left hand in signing his name.

The authority for this statement is Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., personal friend and physician to the president. Why the president determined to become ambidextrous is a short but interesting story and shows in a new light the painstaking seriousness with which Woodrow Wilson regards his job as head of this great republic. Here it is presented roughly speaking. Mr. Wilson signs his name to 15,000 public documents yearly. In addition, he autographs thousands of photographs, etc., at the request of admirers and souvenir collectors, besides attending to his personal correspondence, which is enormous. During the war this signing process was augmented by thousands of commissions for the army and navy. Mr. Wilson is particular about his signature. He never neglects it and he prides himself upon the neatness of his work.

As the burden of his autographing grew during his continuance in office, Mr. Wilson began to notice sharp pains attacking his right hand following a long session with his pen. Eventually he took the matter up with Dr. Grayson, who diagnosed his trouble as neuritis and advised frequent resting spells. Postponement of work laid before him is the one thing that openly chafes the president and causes irritation in his otherwise extremely serene personality. So, unknown to his doctor friend, he commenced to practice writing with his left hand.

With the facility which is one of the president's characteristics in handling all problems, large and small, he was soon able to satisfy himself that he could do as equally a neat job of his name with his left hand as with his right, and the next time Dr. Grayson advised him to quit because of neuritis the president as happily as a child with a new toy displayed his new accomplishment.

President Wilson retained this ability even in his recent serious illness and recently signed pardons for six men confined in federal prisons, with an indelible pencil held by his good left hand.

Science Has a Cure for Strike

International News Service, PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 14.—Strikes of coal miners need not worry future generations. The coal's energy can be obtained and harnessed as it lies in the ground.

The process is quite simple. Holes are drilled into the coal seams. Air is pumped into the holes and the coal is changed into a combustible gas which is pumped out of other holes. The combustible gas so produced may be converted into electricity by central power stations or may be distributed in pipes by the usual method.

The theory is known to the scientific world. One of the customary and most efficient methods of getting energy from coal in large manufacturing plants is to make from it a combustible gas by pumping air and steam through the coal into gas producers. Sir Oliver Lodge, eminent English scientist, recently proposed doing the same thing underground.

Dr. Raymond P. Bacon, director of the Mellon Institute, advances the plan or even on high wages and labor troubles at the mines.

TO TELL SCHOOL GIRLS WHAT THEY SHOULD WEAR

By Associated Press, AUSTIN, Nov. 14.—The state department of education has launched a statewide contest in the designing, making and selection of artistic and practical dress for high school girls. County contests to select competitors for district contests which will eliminate for a final state competition will be held. Dates have not been fixed. In another only domestic art departments of Texas high schools may enter, and the departments must enter the contest as a unit.

Banners will be awarded the superior department in each competition. No funds are available to pay expenses of the plan, and each school will be expected to meet the expenses of its department.

The object of the plan, according to the department of education, is to raise the standard of dress and increase interest in the art of good dressing.

The special features of the contest will be the judging of the following:

- A school dress for fall or spring, worn by members of the class for whom the garments were made or chosen, together with all accessories, underwear, shoes, hose and hat; a school dress for winter, with accessories, judged as worn; a graduation dress and accessories; a summer dress suitable for the high school girl's social events; a thousand-word paper on the minimum wardrobe requirement for girls in different occupations (Each girl may choose a type and illustrate with magazine clippings, etc., giving prices arrived at as nearly as possible); an 800-word theme on the subject "Clothing Standards of My Community"; a general exhibit of the articles made in domestic art classes. Banners will be presented to the schools with the best all-around records.

The educational department suggests that a style show be held previous to or in connection with the county meets. Garments made in schools are to be displayed and a small admission fee may be charged to help defray expenses.

THE TIMES' DAILY SHORT STORY

THE WEDDING SPECIAL

By Latimer J. Wilson

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The wispy wreathes of pale smoke settled into diaphanous strata in the air of Orville's room, where he and Harold were sitting. It was near the end of a day busy with preparations for a peculiar expedition to a distant city. The village of Baneville was getting ready to escort Orville, as a prospective groom, and Harold, as prospective best man, to the distant old city of romance, New Orleans, where the bride-to-be resided. For eight long months her friends in Baneville had missed her from their dances, parties and social events. Orville had been twice to see her there, and now he was planning to take the whole town to bring her back.

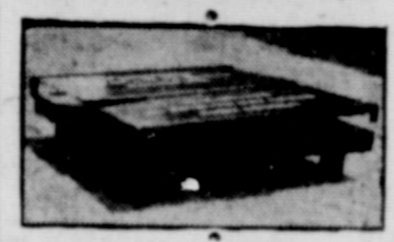

His friend looked casually toward the group. He had serious dark eyes and waving dark hair combed loosely back from a wide, intelligent brow. Orville was no less handsome, but he was blonde and slightly stout and his eyes were blue and less seriously expressive. "A good fellow," some called him. "A good fellow," others said. His jovial manner won friends easily. "Look here," he said, taking up one of the photographs. "Jane's a trick, all right. We thought a lot of each other one time. She was wild about me."

"If I were in your place, old chap," said Harold disapprovingly, "I'd quit boasting and put all those pictures away except one—the One."

"Ah! Moon of My Delight!" Orville exclaimed, holding up the large portrait of the bride-to-be. Harold did not lift his eyes from the point in space at which his gaze was thoughtfully fixed.

"Have on," was all he said.

"There's the girl of girls! See here, old man; when it comes time to slip me that little circle of gold, don't you forget which pocket it's in," said Orville. "But what do you think of our wedding party, anyway? Isn't it a swell to take the whole burg 800 miles to see you haltered for life? There'll be just two carloads of us; the Pullmans are reserved and the train'll be ready at 1 a. m., southward bound."

Harold looked keenly beneath his dark brows toward Orville.

"Of course it's all right," said Orville unabashed. "Every girl in this old burg will know within forty-eight hours what kind of a wedding can be pulled off in metropolitan style. There'll be nothing else to talk about for six generations to come. Leave it to me to do things right."

"You've got the bank account behind you," commented Harold, "and a life of happiness with a fine girl ahead," he added. Orville began to gather up the photographs, dumping them into an open drawer of his desk. For an instant one of the pictures lingered upon the Persian pattern of the table cover. Harold's eyes fastened sharply upon it, then he reached forward and took it up.

"Say, old chap—this girl doesn't belong to your collection. I'm going to cop this," and he put the picture into his own pocket.

"Certainly you can have it," said Orville willingly. "You're right. She's only mine and Mabel's friend, and I guess she thinks more of you than ever she thought of me. Then he added, "What a stunning maid of honor she'll make! You and she will make a fine looking pair."

A noisy, fun-filled crowd of young men and women with elderly guests gathered at the town depot at midnight. They piled into the reserved Pullmans when the train arrived fifteen minutes late in Baneville. Sleeping passengers were aroused by the clamor. Throughout the next day smiling faces greeted the passage of the train bearing in large letters on two of its Pullmans the large sign, "The Wedding Special."

Orville did not reserve much time to himself en route, generously sharing it with the originals of his photographic collection and others. But here came an interval when everybody found himself with his feet stretched across the arm of an empty seat in the smoking car. Darkness was framed outside the windows and smoky Jim-lit reflections were framed within. In the tobacco haze of the room came an image of the past, refreshing Orville's memory of a cherished scene.

He remembered how the moonlight silvered gables and turrets, and how patches of its pale, green fell at his feet when he and Mabel sat on the front steps of her old home in Baneville. In the depths of her eyes he had seemed to see the response which he had craved so long. But Mabel had always been more or less of a shy-like mystery to him. She then had surprised him by saying, "No, there is no one else. I like you as well as any one."

But he wanted far more than that from her. He had determined that if she would not promise him that night to be his wife the blame of failure would be his alone. He remembered how with the ardor of sudden impulse he had swept her bodily into his arms, holding her so firmly that she could not struggle.

"Oh, Orville! Don't—please don't," she had whispered while tears came into the corners of her eyes. But his arms were locked and he had thrown away the key.

Under the spell of his arms and as she had promised. Her father and mother were pleased with the turn of affairs, and the engagement had been announced soon after Mabel had gone. That was eight months ago, and now—here he was almost at the journey's end. Soon Mabel would be a member of the wedding party traveling back to the drowsy little town where he was so important. Financially and socially he could make his wife very proud.

His reminiscence was dispelled by the preparations nearing the end of the journey. New Orleans, that quaint old town, was beginning to glide past the windows. There would be a great time ahead for the jolly crowd in the Pullmans when they set about seeing the curiosities of the interesting city. Orville and the members of his family were to be the guests of the brides' father and mother. The others were booked for a hotel. When the train came to a full stop in the station the party were assembling around the cars awaiting directions. Orville caught sight of his future father-in-law, a large man with gray side whiskers. He came forward with some embarrassment and taking Orville by the arm whispered, "We must not be overheard—come over to the waiting room a moment."

Orville called to his friends to wait until he returned. Then, at the corner of the busy room he heard the news.

"Mabel has greatly disappointed all of us," said her father in a much-broken voice. "Just two hours ago she left a note telling us that she had eloped with a certain young man who has been friendly since we came here. Neither her mother nor I had any idea how things were going. We would have stopped them in time or would have let you know if it was bad, but nothing can be done now about it."

Orville was stunned at first. He was too dazed to reply. Without a word he took his never-to-be-father-in-law by the arm and piloted him back to the crowd.

"Stand here a moment," he said hoarsely. Then he took Harold aside. After a brief consultation, the latter whispered a few words to the maid of honor. She turned pale, then blushed and shook her head in slow approval.

Orville stepped up in front of the attentive, silent crowd, and said in a voice loud enough for all to hear: "Friends, wedding guests, Banevillers! A minor change has been made in our plans because of the whims of the lady chiefly concerned. My friend here," he said, touching Harold's arm, "will take my place as groom. And this charming lady," he added, taking the maid of honor by the hand and leading her toward Harold, "is to be the bride. As for myself," he took out a cigarette and lit it. "Well, the joke's on me—and so is the blame, if ever one of you don't have the best time imaginable in this old town. Let's carry out all plans as originally intended, banquet and all, barring the change mentioned. Fretful! Come now! On with the play!"

Murmur started in the crowd. There were whispers. "He's a good fellow, anyway," and all the originals of his photographic collection rallied around him with genuine delight.

WILSON ABLE TO WRITE WITH EITHER HAND

International News Service. WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—President Wilson is ambidextrous. In addition to his many other unusual accomplishments, the president of the United States has patiently acquired the ability to use, with equal facility, his right or left hand in signing his name.

The authority for this statement is Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., personal friend and physician to the president. Why the president determined to become ambidextrous is a short but interesting story and shows in a new light the painstaking seriousness with which Woodrow Wilson regards his job as head of this great republic. Here it is: Roughly speaking, Mr. Wilson signs his name to 15,000 public documents yearly. In addition, he autographs thousands of photographs, etc., at the request of admirers and souvenir collectors, besides attending to his personal correspondence, which is enormous. During the war this signing process was augmented by thousands of commissions for the army and navy. Mr. Wilson is particular about his signature. He never slights it and he prides himself upon the neatness of his work.

As the burden of his autographing grew during his continuance in office, Mr. Wilson began to notice sharp pains attacking his right hand, following a long session with his pen. Eventually he took the matter up with Dr. Grayson, who diagnosed his trouble as neuritis and advised frequent resting spells. Postponement of work laid before him is the one thing that openly chafes the president and causes irritation in his otherwise extremely serene personality. So, unknown to his doctor friend, he commenced to practice writing with his left hand. With the facility which is one of the president's characteristics in handling all problems, large and small, he was soon able to satisfy himself that he could do as equally a neat job of his name with his left hand as with his right, and the next time Dr. Grayson advised him to quit because of neuritis the president as happily as a child with a new toy displayed his new accomplishment. President Wilson retained this ability even in his recent serious illness and recently signed pardons for six men confined in Federal prison with an indelible pencil held by his good left hand.

Somewhat expressed. "What's the problem?" "A perplexing one. Mrs. Skiddo claims she got six bad eggs in the last lot." "Well?" "She wants me to make 'em good." —Detroit-Free Press International News Service. PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 14.—Strikes of coal miners need not worry future generations. The coal's energy can be obtained and harnessed as it lies in the ground. The process is quite simple. Holes are drilled into the coal seams. Air and steam are then pumped into the holes and the coal is changed into a combustible gas which is pumped out of other holes. The combustible gas so produced may be converted into electricity by central power stations or may be distributed in pipes by the usual method.

Science Has a Cure for Strike

The theory is known to the scientific world. One of the customary and most efficient methods of getting energy from coal in large manufacturing plants is to make from it a combustible gas by passing air and steam through the coal into gas producers. Sir Oliver Lodge, eminent English scientist, recently proposed doing the same thing underground. Dr. Raymond P. Bacon, director of the Mellon Institute, advances the idea of a curb on high wages and labor troubles at the mines. "With the present very high cost of labor and its ever-increasing demands," Dr. Bacon says, "the way to bring down the high cost of living is to reduce the labor by taking every advantage of advances in science and engineering to do the things with a labor-saving device."

"One fundamental reason that labor is so costly and can afford to make such great demands is that there is a real shortage of labor. Almost any man willing to work can get a job at high wages. Even with the present high prices of coal the actual return to the mine owner probably does not average more than 25 cents a ton of bituminous coal. By utilizing the proposal of making gases from the coal in the ground the gasous equivalent of a ton of coal probably could be delivered on top of the ground for a cost of 50 cents, including the 25 cent return to the owner of the mine."

The Modern Family Doctor. "Who is your family doctor?" "I can't tell you." "Why not? Don't you know his name?" "Yes. Dr. Johnson used to be our family doctor, but nowadays mother goes to an eye-surgeon; father to a stomach specialist; sister goes to a throat specialist; my brother-in-law is the case of a lung specialist, and I'm taking treatments from an osteopath." —Detroit-Free Press

By Associated Press. AUSTIN, Nov. 14.—The state department of education has launched a statewide contest in the designing, making and selection of artistic and practical dress for high school girls. County contests to select competitors for district contests which will eliminate for a final state competition will be held. Dates have not been fixed. In another only domestic art departments of Texas high schools may enter, and the departments must enter the contest as a unit.

Banners will be awarded the successful department in each competition. No funds are available to pay expenses of the plan, and each school will be expected to meet the expenses of its department.

The object of the plan, according to the department of education, is to raise the standard of dress and increase interest in the art of good dressing.

The special features of the contest will be the judging of the following:

A school dress for fall or spring, worn by members of the class for whom the garments were made or chosen, together with all accessories,

underwear, shoes, hose and hat; a school dress for winter, with accessories, judged as worn; a graduation dress and accessories; a summer dress suitable for the high school girl's social events; a thousand-word paper on the minimum wardrobe requirement for girls in different occupations (Each girl may choose a type and illustrate with magazine clippings, etc., giving prices arrived at as nearly as possible); an 800-word theme on the subject, "Clothing Standards of My Community"; a general exhibit of the articles made in domestic art classes. Banners will be presented to the schools with the best all-around records.

The educational department suggests that a style show be held previous to or in connection with the county meets. Garments made in schools are to be displayed and a small admission fee may be charged to help defray expenses.

THE TIMES' DAILY SHORT STORY

THE WEDDING SPECIAL

By Latimer J. Wilson

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The wispy wreaths of pale smoke settled into diaphanous strata in the air of Orville's room, where he and Harold were sitting. It was near the end of a day busy with preparations for a peculiar expedition to a distant city. The village of Baneville was getting ready to escort Orville, as a prospective groom, and Harold, as prospective best man, to the distant old city of romance, New Orleans, where the bride-to-be resided. For eight long months her friends in Baneville had missed her from their dances, parties and social events. Orville had been twice to see her there, and now he was planning to take the whole town to bring her back.

Through the cigarette fog a number of photographs could be seen on the table in the center of Orville's room. "There they are—all of them!" he said, pointing the tip of his cigarette toward the pictures. "If I suppose you know every girl I ever went with in this burg."

His friend looked casually toward the group. He had serious dark eyes and waving dark hair combed loosely back from a wide, intelligent brow. Orville was no less handsome, but he was bionde and slightly stout and his eyes were blue and less seriously expressive. "A good fellow," some called him. "A good fellow," others said. His jovial manner won friends easily. "Look here," he said, taking up one of the photographs. "Jane's a trick, all right. I thought a lot of each other one time. She was wild about me."

"If I were in your place, old chap," said Harold disapprovingly, "I'd quit boasting and put all those pictures away except one—the one—"

"Ah! Moon of My Delight!" Orville exclaimed, holding up the large portrait of the bride-to-be. Harold did not lift his eyes from the point in space at which his gaze was thoughtfully fixed. "There's the girl of girls! See here, old man; when it comes time to slip me that little circle of gold, don't you forget which pocket it's in."

"—had Orville?" "But what do you think of our wedding party, anyway? Isn't it a stunt to take the whole burg 800 miles to see you nattered for life? There'll be just two carloads of us; the Pullmans are reserved and the train'll be ready at 1 a. m., southward bound."

Harold looked keenly beneath his dark brows toward Orville. "Don't you think it's rather nervy to take along all the ashes of your past romances to pave the way for wedded bliss?" he asked.

"Of course it's all right," said Orville unabashed. "Every girl in this burg will know within forty-eight hours what kind of a wedding can be pulled off in metropolitan style. There'll be nothing else to talk about for six generations to come. Leave it to me to do things right."

"You've got the bank account behind you," commented Harold, "and a life of happiness with a fine girl ahead," he added. Orville began to gather up the photographs, dumping them into an open drawer of his desk. For an instant one of the pictures lingered upon the Persian pattern of the table cover. Harold's eyes fastened sharply upon it, then he reached forward and took it up. "Say, old chap—this girl doesn't belong to your collection. I'm going to cop this," and he put the picture into his own pocket.

"Certainly you can have it," said Orville willingly. "You're right. She's only mine and Mabel's friend, and I guess she thinks more of you than ever she thought of me. Then he added, "What a stunning maid of honor she'll make! You and she will make a fine looking pair."

A noisy, fun-filled crowd of young men and women with elderly guests gathered at the town depot at midnight. They piled into the reserved Pullmans when the train arrived fifteen minutes late in Baneville. Sleeping bassengers were aroused by the clamor. Throughout the next day smiling faces greeted the passage of the train bearing in large letters on two of its Pullmans the large sign, "The Wedding Special."

Orville did not reserve much time to himself en route, generously sharing it with the originals of his photographic collection and others. But there came an interval when everybody was tired and when Orville found himself with his feet stretched across the arms of an empty seat in the smoking car. Darkness was framed outside the windows and smoky, dim-light reflections were framed within. In the tobacco haze of the room came an image of the past, refreshing Orville's memory of a cherished scene.

He remembered how the moonlight silvered gables and turrets, and how patches of its pale, green fell at his feet when he and Mabel sat on the front steps of her old home in Baneville. In the depths of her eyes he had seemed to see the response which he had craved so long. But Mabel had always been more of a loss of a physics-like mystery to him. She then had surprised him by saying, "No, there is no one else. I like you as well as any one."

But he wanted far more than that from her. He had determined that night to be his wife the blame of failure would be his alone. He remembered how with the ardor of sudden impulse he had swept her bodily into his arms, holding her so firmly that she could not struggle.

"Oh, Orville! Don't—please don't," she had whispered while tears came into the corners of her eyes. But his arms were locked and he had thrown away the key. "You must promise me now—tonight. It is our last night together. You must say that you will let me come for you and bring you back as my wife."

Under the spell of his arms and such she had promised. Her father and mother were pleased with the turn of affairs, and the engagement had been announced soon after Mabel had gone. That was eight months ago, and now—here he was almost at the journey's end. Soon Mabel would be a member of the wedding party traveling back to the drowsy little town where he was so important. Financially and socially he could make his wife very proud.

His reminiscence was dispelled by the preparations nearing the end of the journey, New Orleans, that quaint old town, was beginning to glide past the windows. There would be a great time ahead for the jolly crowd in the Pullmans when they set about seeing the curiosities of the interesting city. Orville and the members of his family were to be the guests of the bride's father and mother, the others were booked for a hotel. When the train came to a full stop in the station the party were assembling around the cars awaiting directions, Orville caught sight of his future father-in-law, a large man with gray side whiskers.

He came forward with some embarrassment and taking Orville by the arm whispered, "We must not be overheard—come over to the waiting room a moment."

Orville called to his friends to wait until he returned. Then, in the corner of the busy room he heard the news. "Mabel has greatly disappointed all of us," said her father in a much broken voice. "Just two hours ago she left a note telling us that she had eloped with a certain young man who has been friendly since we came here. Neither her mother nor I had any idea how things were going. We would have stopped them in time or would have let you know it's too bad, but nothing can be done now about it."

Orville was stunned at first. He was too dazed to reply. Without a word he took his never-to-be father-in-law by the arm and piloted him back to the crowd.

"Stand here a moment," he said hoarsely. Then he took Harold aside. After a brief consultation, the latter whispered a few words to the maid of honor. She turned pale, then blushed and shook her head in slow approval.

Orville stepped up in front of the attentive, silent crowd, and said in a voice loud enough for all to hear: "Friends, wedding guests, Banevillers! A minor change has been made in our plans because of the whims of the lady chiefly concerned. My friend here," he said, "knowing Hag-old's arm, will take my place as groom. And this charming lady," he added, taking the maid of honor by the hand and leading her toward himself, "he took out a cigarette and lit it. "Well, the joke's on me—and so is the blame, if every one of you don't have the best time imaginable in this old town. Let's carry out all plans as originally intended, banquet and all, barring the change mentioned. Presto! Come now! On with the play!"

Murmur started in the crowd. There were whispers. "He's a good fellow anyway," and all the originals of his photographic collection rallied around him with genuine delight.

FOR 2ND TIME FIRE FAILS TO DESTROY FAMED ARCADE

International News Service. PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 15.—Aga's fire has failed to destroy the Arcade, one of the architectural wonders of America.

In December, 1909, fire attacked the western half of the great structure. And now fire has swept thru the basement, doing $200,000 worth of damage.

Few of the busy shoppers that enter the arcade from Westminster and Peace streets know that this piece of handiwork when it was dedicated in the middle of the last century was considered one of the seven architectural wonders of the United States. The Arcade was built in the form of an Ionic temple and its pillars are the largest monoliths in America except those of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York. They are twenty feet high and three feet in diameter and were cut by hand in the town of Johnston and drawn intact to Providence on big sleds. Napoleon's building, the Madeline in Paris, is thought to have been the stimulus for erecting even or eight arcades in the United States about the time this one was completed, but none now stands but the original in Providence. Its dedication was one of the grand affairs of its time.

NEW "BACKLESS" MODE WORRIES ENGLISH LADIES

International News Service LONDON, Nov. 15.—My dear, how can it be done in comfort? The vast and unsolved problem of the new backless mode in dresses, according to "Priscilla," who writes for the Tatler, isn't how to keep warm though unclothed, or how to display seductive ankles that must be hidden in crinkly Russian boots, but—

"How in display one's back to its best advantage when sitting in a box yet keep an eye on the stage at the same time?"

COMPILES REPORT AFTER 3 YEARS OBSERVING LADIES' ANKLES

(International News Service.) LONDON, Nov. 15.—Dr. Walter Kidd, by his own confession, has been closely observing ladies' ankles during his walks abroad and has compiled a report. But worse than that, he had published it. His observations have extended over a period of three years. Here is the result. Many women walk like deers' hands. "Some affect hideous instances of spay-foot. Nineteen per cent suffer from flat foot, inelegant or pronounced. Most have deplorable ankles and feet. "The majority display their deficiencies with charming levity and audacity."

International News Service. NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Education alone will overcome the modern craze for immoral styles, "which have reached the stage where nothing in the world is left to the imagination," according to Baroness Katherina von Klenner, the noted singer. "You can never stop these crazes by prohibiting them by law. When you start prohibition then you encourage to have people believing they are enjoying persecution. When people are told they can't have a certain thing that is just when they are determined they shall have it."

"We should not blame the shopkeepers too much either. Take those indecent negligees and 'teddy bears' such as you see displayed in the store windows. The reason that they are placed there is simply because the young people ask for them. "Why, we are just about back to the days of Adam and Eve. The Bible tells us that 'they were naked and unashamed.' This is a day when nothing in the world is left to the imagination. Many of these 'chickens' are not well developed and they are decidedly unattractive when only half clothed."

These words were drawn from Baroness von Klenner as a result of the storm of criticism that has swirled about her because she recently helped to defeat a resolution at a meeting of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs condemning "indecent dress." The Baroness made it plain that she is as much opposed to the present fashions as any sane woman, but she believes the time to legislate against dress extremes is in the kindergarten. "When a child sees its own mother at home in an indecent dress what chance does it have to formulate well-balanced ideas? Mothers should be more than particular about the modesty of their attire when around their children."

Baroness von Klenner believes the hall bedroom in which many New York girls are raised to live help destroy their morals and decency. Conditions in busy boarding and rooming houses, she says, cause young girls to run through halls scantily clad. These things would make any girl lose her self-respect.

"I don't know what we're coming to," concluded the Baroness. "And I am no prude either. Nice young girls in the foreign countries are not allowed to dress the way an American girl does. They would consider it not quite so common as 'ordinaire' and 'low.'"

She Goes to Her Death When Spirit of Lover Calls

(International News Service.) AUCKLAND, N. Z., Nov. 15.—A case in which the cult of spiritualism led to a suicide of an extraordinary character was decided before the Auckland supreme court, where a girl of nineteen, named Pearl Burke, was tried on the charge of aiding and abetting a friend in committing suicide.

The case concerned the drowning of Jessie West in Whangarei harbor. Jessie West, it appeared, after attending several spiritualist meetings, held a seance in company with Pearl Burke, in her bedroom. Upon that occasion, according to Pearl Burke, the spirit of Frederick Potts, a man who had died three months before and of whom Jessie West had been enamored, appeared before the two girls and declared he wanted Jessie, without whom he could not rest himself. Pearl Burke accompanied her at night to Whangarei.

"Upon arriving at the wharf," declared the accused girl in court, "Jessie took off all of her clothing with the exception of a nightdress and a pair of stockings, and after handing her clothes to me, walked down the wharf steps and went quietly into the water. I watched her three or four minutes before I left the wharf to return to the hotel."

Upon being asked why she did not attempt to prevent the young woman from committing suicide, Pearl Burke replied: "I could not disobey an order coming direct from the spirit land. It would be sinful."

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and Justice Chanman said he agreed with their findings, pointing out that the woman who had committed suicide was the leading mind and that the part played by Pearl Burke was an entirely passive one.

BOSTON TRAFFIC COPS TO BE "ALL LIT UP" BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Boston traffic

officers are to be "all lit up" hereafter. The First Motor Corps of the State Guard, which is handling traffic on Boston streets until a new police force is formed, have originated the "lighted cop" idea to direct the streams of motor vehicles during the waning light of the evening rush hour.

The head dress consists of a light framework of copper wires with a band fitting the hat and a small incandescent red bulb at the apex, lighted by electric current from a battery carried in the pocket. In addition the traffic officer wears a white shoulder harness, making it possible to see the officer several blocks away. The illuminating device was originated by Lieutenant James A. Morse, of the Motor Corps.

KING DISCLOSES QUICK WIT DURING VISIT TO FRISCO CLUB

International News Service. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 15.—King Albert of Belgium was being escorted through the rooms of the Olympic Club here on his recent visit. Judge Fitzpatrick escorting him. WOULD BRING BACK HEROES TO U. S. SOIL

International News Service. PITTSBURG, Nov. 15. — "An American tomb in America for every American hero who died on foreign soil."

That is the slogan of a nationwide movement for the return of America's soldier dead, recently started here. Unimpressed by the promises of foreign governments, especially of France, and the peoples of foreign countries, that the graves will be cared for, nearly 200 parents or next of kin of the boys who gave their lives for the cause of democracy met here and demanded that the United States government keep its solemn word that the bodies would be brought back to this country.

An organization known as the "Bring Home the Soldier Dead League" was formed to bring pressure to bear upon the government, and it was announced that the campaign would be "pushed to the limit." The passage of a bill by the French chamber of deputies, which provides that the bodies of Americans must not be removed from France for three years, was bitterly condemned by the speakers, who charged that the French government was making use of the dead to promote commercialism. While economic and sanitary reasons were given by the French for this action, it was said that the real motive was to compel relatives of heroes to make a pilgrimage across the Atlantic to visit the graves.

It was also charged that bodies of soldiers are constantly being moved from one cemetery to another, one father complaining that the body of his son had been moved no less than four times.

The purposes of the league are set forth as follows: "To aid in the formation of similar organizations throughout the United States and to enroll every parent and widow and other relatives of deceased soldiers now interred in France.

"To solidify such organization and make it permanent and secure the aid of every sympathetic person in the country.

"Petition congress to require the secretary of war or other government official on or before February 1, 1920, to begin bringing back home the soldier dead and to have the work completed within six months.

"To demand that the action for the bringing home of the soldier dead shall be taken by this government without regard to the wishes, objections or suggestions of France or of any individuals.

"To demand that the contract made with our boys before they all had gone across, when they were solemnly promised—and the parents assured—the dead would be brought back, be faithfully kept by bringing back our dead now.

"As our boys kept faith with the country, the country must not fail to keep faith with the mothers and widows who mourn as now but they do.

"To these ends the parents and widows solemnly pledge every effort and their worldly all."

Ex-Kaiser Spends the Simple Life

By Associated Press. AMERONGEN, Holland, Nov. 14. — A Hollander who recently dined with the former German emperor at Bentinck castle told the Associated Press correspondent that the exiled ruler almost monopolized the conversation at the dinner table.

Speaking on all manner of international subjects, he gave little opportunity for the other diners to speak, and, after dinner, talking about the defeat of the Russian armies early in the war, he illustrated with maps just how it was done.

There has been but little change in the daily routine of Amerongen's exile since he crossed the Dutch border nearly a year ago. He breakfasts rather early with his wife. Then,

NOT IMPRESSED BY AMERICAN GIRLS

Miss Edith Chen.

Saying that she did not know American boys well enough to pass judgment upon them, but stating that she didn't like American girls at all—especially those who smoke cigarettes and those who have too much initiative—Miss Edith Chen, a little Chinese co-ed of Syracuse University, summed up her impressions of America. She added that she would never get "as us we" enough to stay in America. She is the daughter of Dr. R. Chen Chang Chow, of Foo-kien, China, and she is studying here to equip herself to become a teacher in China.

If the weather permits, he saws wood in the garden or walks with the former empress, his aides or his secretary. Luncheon is generally taken alone with his wife in their apartment.

had been filled by his sweetheart, who refused to see him. He wrote, warning her that he would be revenged. As the girl stood among a crowd at the railway station where potatoes were being distributed, the forsaken lover appeared and hurled a number of bombs at the girl with terrible effect. Six persons including the filled lover, were killed and twenty-one injured. Love tragedies in Germany are now so frequent that they have become a standing feature of the newspapers. Another case occurred in which the principals were little more than children. A Hamburg schoolboy, aged sixteen, holiday making in Berlin, became enamored of a girl of seventeen. While they were strolling together yesterday evening the girl's former admirer, also aged seventeen, came on the scene. A heated altercation ensued, at the end of which the young Hamburger drew out a revolver and shot his rival through the heart.

THREE JAGS CHRONICLED ARMISTICE DAY AT DALLAS.

WILSON ABLE TO WRITE WITH EITHER HAND

International News Service. WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—President Wilson is ambidextrous. In addition to his many other unusual accomplishments, the president of the United States has patiently acquired the ability to use, with equal facility, his right or left hand in signing his name.

The authority for this statement is Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., personal friend and physician to the president. Why the president determined to become ambidextrous is a short but interesting story which shows in a new light the painstaking seriousness with which Woodrow Wilson regards his job as head of this great republic. Here it is:

Roughly speaking, Mr. Wilson signs his name to 15,000 public documents yearly. In addition, he autographs thousands of photographs, etc., at the request of admirers and souvenir collectors, besides attending to his personal correspondence, which is enormous. During the war this signing process was augmented by thousands of commissions for the army and navy. Mr. Wilson is punctilious about his signature. He never slights it and he prides himself upon the neatness of his work.

As the burden of his autographing grew during his continuance in office, Mr. Wilson began to notice sharp pains attacking his right hand, following a long session with his pen. Eventually he took the matter up with Dr. Grayson, who diagnosed his trouble as neuritis and advised frequent resting spells. Postponement of work laid before him is the one thing that openly chafes the president and causes irritation in his otherwise extremely serene personality. So, unknown to his doctor friend, he commenced to practice writing with his left hand.

With the facility which is one of the president's characteristics in handling all problems, large and small, he was soon able to satisfy himself that he could do as equally a neat job of his name with his left hand as with his right, and the next time Dr. Grayson advised him to quit because of neuritis the president as happily as a child with a new toy displayed his new accomplishment.

President Wilson retained this ability even in his recent serious illness and recently signed pardons for six men confined in federal prisons, with an indelible pencil held by his good left hand.

Somewhat perplexed. "What's the problem?" "A perplexing one. Mrs. Skiddle claims she got six bad eggs in the last lot!" "Well?" "She wants me to make 'em good." —Detroit Free Press

Science Has a Cure for Strike

International News Service. PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 14.—Strikes of coal miners need not worry future generations. The coal's energy can be obtained and harnessed as it lies in the ground.

The process is quite simple. Holes are drilled into the coal seams. Air and steam are then pumped into the holes and the coal is changed into a combustible gas which is pumped out of other holes. The combustible gas so produced may be converted into electricity by central power stations or may be distributed in pipes by the usual method.

The theory is known to the scientific world. One of the customary and most efficient methods of getting energy from coal in large manufacturing plants is to make from it a combustible gas by pumping air and steam through the coal into gas producers. Sir Oliver Lodge, eminent English scientist, recently proposed doing the same thing underground.

Dr. Raymond F. Bacon, director of the Malton Institute, advances the plan as a curb on high wages and labor troubles at the mines.

"With the present very high cost of labor and its ever-increasing demands," Dr. Bacon says, "the way to bring down the high cost of living is to reduce the labor by taking every advantage of advances in science and engineering to do the things with a labor-saving device."

"One fundamental reason that labor is so costly and can afford to make such great demands is that there is a real shortage of labor. Almost any man willing to work can get a job at high wages. Even with the present high prices of coal the actual return to the mine owner probably does not average more than 25 cents a ton of bituminous coal. By utilizing the proposal of making gases from the coal in the ground the gaseous equivalent of a ton of coal probably could be delivered on top of the ground for a cost of 50 cents, including the 25 cent return to the owner of the mine."

The Modern Family Doctor. "Who is your family doctor?" "I can't tell you." "Why not? Don't you know his name?" "Yes. Dr. Johnson used to be our family doctor, but now-a-days mother goes to an eye specialist; father to a stomach specialist; sister goes to a throat specialist; my brother-in-law is in the care of a lung specialist, and I'm taking treatments from an osteopath." —Detroit Free Press.

TO TELL SCHOOL GIRLS WHAT THEY SHOULD WEAR

By Associated Press. AUSTIN, Nov. 14.—The state department of education has launched a statewide contest in the designing, making and selection of artistic and practical dress for high school girls. County contests to select competitors for district contests which will eliminate for a final state competition will be held. Dates have not been fixed. In another only domestic art departments of Texas high schools may enter, and the departments must enter the contest as a unit.

Banners will be awarded the successful department in each competition. No funds are available to pay expenses of the plan, and each school will be expected to meet the expenses of its department.

The object of the plan, according to the department of education, is to raise the standard of dress and increase interest in the art of good dressing.

The special features of the contest will be the judging of the following: A school dress for fall or spring, worn by members of the class for whom the garments were made or chosen, together with all accessories, underwear, shoes, hose and hat; a school dress for winter, with accessories, judged as worn; a graduation dress and accessories; a summer dress suitable for the high school girl's social events; a thousand-word paper on the minimum wardrobe requirement for girls in different occupations (Each girl may choose a type and illustrate with magazine clippings, etc., giving prices arrived at as nearly as possible); an 800-word theme on the subject, "Clothing Standards of My Community;" a general exhibit of the articles made in domestic art classes. Banners will be presented to the schools with the best all-around records.

The educational department suggests that a style show be held previous to or in connection with the county meets. Garments made in schools are to be displayed and a small admission fee may be charged to help defray expenses.

THE TIMES' DAILY SHORT STORY

THE WEDDING SPECIAL

By Latimer J. Wilson

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
The wispy wreaths of pale smoke settled into diaphanous strata in the air of Orville's room, where he and Harold were sitting. It was near the end of a busy day with preparations for a peculiar expedition to a distant city. The village of Banerville was getting ready to escort Orville, as a prospective groom, and Harold, as prospective best man, to the distant old city of romance, New Orleans, where the bride-to-be resided. For eight long months her friends in Banerville had missed her from their dances, parties and social events. Orville had been twice to see her there, and now he was planning to take the whole town to bring her back.
Through the cigarette fog a number of photographs could be seen on the table in the center of Orville's room.
"There they are—all of them," he said, pointing the tip of his cigarette toward the pictures. "I suppose you know every girl I ever went with in this burg."
"I have seen them," Harold said.

His friend looked casually toward the group. He had serious dark eyes and wavy dark hair combed loosely back from a wide, intelligent brow. Orville was no less handsome, but his eyes were blue and less seriously expressive. "A cynic," some called him. "A good fellow," others said. His jovial manner won friends easily.
"Look here," he said, taking up one of the photographs. "Jane's a trick, all right. We thought a lot of each other one time. She was wild about me."
"If I were in your place, old chap," said Harold disapprovingly, "I'd quit boasting you think of those pictures away except one—the one."
"Ah! Moon of My Delight!" Orville exclaimed, holding up the large portrait of the bride-to-be. Harold did not lift his eyes from the point in space at which his gaze was thoughtfully fixed.
"Have on," was all he said.
"There's the girl of girls! See here, old man: when it comes time to slip me that little circle of gold, don't you forget which pocket it's in," laughed Orville. "But what do you think of our wedding party, anyway? Isn't it a stunt to take the whole burg 800 miles to see you nattered for life? There'll be just two carloads of us; the Pullmans are reserved and the train'll be ready at 1 a. m. southward bound."
Harold looked loosely beneath his dark brows toward Orville.
"Don't you think it's rather nervy to take along all the ashes of your past romances to pave the way for 'wedded bliss'?" he asked.
"Of course it's all right," said Orville unabashedly. "Every girl in this burg will know within forty-eight hours what kind of a wedding can be pulled off in metropolitan style. There'll be nothing else to talk about for six generations to come. Leave it to me to do things right."
"You've got the best account behind you," commented Harold, "and a life of happiness with a fine girl ahead," he added. Orville began to gather up the photographs, dumping them into an open drawer of his desk. For an instant one of the pictures lingered upon the Persian pattern of the table cover. Harold's eyes reached forward and took it up. "Say, old chum, the girl doesn't belong to your collection. I'm going to con this," and he put the picture into his own pocket.
"Certainly you can have it," said Orville, willingly and cheerfully. "She's only mine and Mabel's friend, and I guess she thinks more of you than ever she thought of me." Then he added, "What a stunning maid of honor she'll make! You and she will make a fine looking pair."
A noisy, fun-filled crowd of young men and women with elderly guests gathered at the town depot at midnight. They piled into the reserved Pullmans when the train arrived fifteen minutes late in Banerville. Sleepy passengers were aroused by the clamor. Throughout the next day smiling faces greeted the passage of the train bearing in large letters on two of its Pullmans the large sign, "The Wedding Special."
Orville did not reserve much time to himself en route, generously sharing it with the originals of his photographic collection and others. But there came an interval when everybody was tired and when Orville found himself with his feet stretched across the arm of an empty seat in the smoking car. Drowsiness was framed outside the windows and sleepy dim-lit reflections were framed within. In the tobacco haze of the room came an image of the past, a forsaken Orville's memory of a cherished scene.
He remembered how the moonlight silvered pebbles and tree tops, and how patches of his pale steen fell at his feet when he and Mabel sat on the front steps of her old home in Banerville. In the depths of her eyes he seemed to see the response which he had craved so long. But Mabel had always been more or less of a sphinx-like mystery to him. She often, there is no one else. I like you as well as any one."
But he wanted far more than that from her. He had determined that if she would not promise him that she would be his alone. He remembered how with the savor of sudden impulse he had swept her bodily into his arms, holding her so firmly that she could not struggle.
"Oh Orville! Don't—please don't." she had whispered while tears came into the corners of her eyes. But his arms were locked and he had thrown away the key.

Under the spell of his arms and eyes she had promised. Her father and mother were pleased with the turn of affairs, and the engagement had been announced soon after Mabel had gone. That was eight months ago, and now—here he was almost at the journey's end. Soon Mabel would be a member of the wedding party traveling back to the dowry little town where he was so important. Financially and socially he could make his wife very proud.

His reminiscence was dispelled by the preparations nearing the end of the journey, New Orleans, that quaint old town, was beginning to glide past the windows. There would be a great time ahead for the jolly crowd in the Pullmans when they set about seeing the curiosities of the interesting city. Orville and the members of his family were to be the guests of the bride's father and mother. The others were going for a hotel. When the train came to a full stop in the station the party were assembling around the cars awaiting directions. Orville caught sight of his father-in-law, a large man with gray side whiskers. He came forward with some embarrassment and taking Orville by the arm whispered, "We must not be overheard—come over to the waiting room a moment."
Orville called to his friends to wait until he returned. Then, in the corner of the busy room he heard the news.

"Mabel has greatly disappointed all of us," said her father in a much broken voice. "Just two hours ago she left a note telling us that she had eloped with a certain young man who has been friendly since we came here. Neither her mother nor I had any idea how things were going. We would have stopped them in time or would have let you know. It's too bad, but nothing can be done now about it."
Orville was stunned at first. He was too dazed to reply. Without a word he took his never-to-be father-in-law by the arm and piloted him back to the crowd.

"Stand here a moment," he said hoarsely. Then he took Harold aside. After a brief consultation, the latter whispered a few words to the maid of honor. She turned pale, then blushed and shook her head in slow approval.
Orville stepped up in front of the attentive, silent crowd, and said in a voice loud enough for all to hear: "Friends, wedding guests, Banerville! A minor change has been made in our plans because of the whimsy of the lady chiefly concerned. My friend here," he said, touching Harold's arm, "will take my place as groom. And this charming lady," he added, taking the maid of honor by the hand and leading her toward Harold, "is to be the bride. As for myself," he took out a cigarette and lit it. "Well, the joke's of me—and so is the blame, if every one of you don't have the best time imaginable in this old town. Let's carry out all plans as originally intended, banquet and all, barring the change mentioned. Presto! Come now! On with the play!"

Harold started in the crowd there were whisners. "He's a good fellow, anyway," and all the originals of his photographic collection rallied around him with genuine delight.

FOR 2ND TIME FIRE FAILS TO DESTROY FAMED ARCADE
International News Service.
PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 15.—Aga in fire has failed to destroy the Arcade, one of the architectural wonders of America.
In December, 1909, fire attacked the western half of the great structure. And now fire has swept through the basement, doing $200,000 worth of damage.
Few of the busy shoppers that enter the arcade from Westminster or Wayboston streets know that this piece of handiwork when it was dedicated in the middle of the last century was considered one of the seven architectural wonders of the United States. The Arcade was built in the form of an Ionic temple and its pillars are the largest monoliths in America except those of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York. They are twenty feet high and three feet in diameter and were cut by hand in the town of Johnston and drawn intact to Providence on big sleds. Napoleon's building, the Madeline in Paris, is thought to have been the stimulus for erecting seven or eight arcades in the United States about the time this one was completed, but none now stands but the one in Providence. Its dedication was one of the grand affairs of its time.

NEW "BACKLESS" MODE WORRIES ENGLISH LADIES
International News Service.
LONDON, Nov. 15.—My dear, how can it be done in comfort?
The vast and unsolved problem of the new backless mode in dresses, according to "Priscilla," who writes for the Tatler, isn't how to keep warm though unclad, or how to display seductive ankles that must be hidden in crinkly Russian boots, but—
"How to display one's back to its best advantage when sitting in a box yet keep an eye on the stage at the same time?"

COMPILES REPORT
AFTER 3 YEARS OBSERVING
LADIES' ANKLES

(International News Service.)
LONDON, Nov. 15.—Dr. Walter Kidd, by his own confession, has been closely observing ladies' ankles during his walks abroad and has compiled a report. But worse than that, he had published it.
His observations have extended over a period of three years. Here is the result:
Many women walk like dahshunds.
Some afford hideous instances of spray-foot.
Ninety per cent suffer from flat foot, incipient or pronounced.
Most have deplorable ankles and feet.
The majority display their deformities with charming levity and audacity.

PLANTING OF WHEAT IS REPORTED LIGHT.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 14.—H. B. Dorsey, secretary of the Texas Grain Dealers' Association, said today that prospects for a large acreage in wheat another year were anything but good. He urges planting as wheat prices next year are expected to be good.

Fashions of Today, Says Singer

International News Service
NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Education alone will overcome the modern craze for immoral styles, "which have reached the stage where nothing in the world is left to the imagination," according to Baroness Katherine von Klenner the noted singer.

"You can never stop these crazes by prohibiting them by law. When you start prohibition then you are sure to have people believing they are enjoying persecution. When people are told they can't have a certain thing that is just when they are determined they shall have it."
These words were drawn from Baroness von Klenner as a result of the storm of criticism that has swirled about her because she recently helped to defeat a resolution at a meeting of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs condemning "indecent dress."
The Baroness made it plain that she is as much opposed to the present fashions as any sane woman, but she believes the time to legislate against dress extremes is in the kindergarten.
"When a child sees its own mother at home in an indecent dress what chance does it have to formulate well-balanced ideas? Mothers should be more than particular about the modesty of their attire when around their children."

"We should not blame the shopkeepers too much either. Take these indecent negligees and 'teddy bears' such as you see displayed in the store windows. The reason that they are placed there is simply because the young people ask for them."
"Why, we are just about back to the days of Adam and Eve. The Bible tells us that they were naked and unashamed. This is a day when nothing in the world is left to the imagination. Many of these 'chickens' are not well developed and they are decidedly unattractive when only half clothed."
"And then look at the fat old ladies who adopt the same styles. They remind me of Kipling's gentleman who had 'nothing in front and little less than 'arf behind.' They are neither decent looking nor attractive. It is a question of latitude and longitude, but their decisions in regard to this question are not in good taste or appropriate."
Baroness von Klenner believes the hall bedroom in which many New York girls are caused to live help destroy their morals and decency. Conditions in many boarding and rooming houses, she says, cause young girls to run through halls scantily clad. These things would make any girl lose her self-respect.

"I don't know what we're coming to" concluded the Baroness. "And I am no prude either. Nice young girls in the foreign countries are not allowed to dress the way an American girl does. They would consider it not quite so common as 'ordinaire' and low."

She Goes to Her Death When Spirit of Lover Calls

International News Service.
AUCKLAND, N. Z., Nov. 15.—A case in which the cult of spiritualism led to a suicide of an extraordinary character was decided before the Auckland supreme court, where a girl of nineteen, named Pearl Burke, was tried on the charge of aiding and abetting a friend in committing suicide.
The case concerned the drowning of Jessie West in Whangarei harbor. Jessie West, it appeared, after attending several spiritualist meetings, held a seance in company with Pearl Burke, in her bedroom. Upon that occasion, according to Pearl Burke, the spirit of Frederick Potts, a man who had died three months before and of whom Jessie West had been enamored, appeared before the two girls and declared he wanted Jessie, without whom he could not rest.
The girl then decided to drown herself. Pearl Burke accompanied her at night to Whangarei.
"Upon arriving at the wharf," declared the accused girl in court, Jessie took off all of her clothing, with the exception of a nightdress and a pair of stockings, and after handing her clothes to me, walked down the wharf steps and went quietly into the water. I watched her three or four minutes before I left the wharf to return to the hotel."
Upon being asked why she did not attempt to prevent the young woman from committing suicide, Pearl Burke replied: "I could not disobey an order coming direct from the spirit land. It would be sinful."
The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and Justice Chanman said he agreed with their findings, pointing out that the woman who had committed suicide was the leading mind and that the part played by Pearl Burke was an entirely passive one.

BOSTON TRAFFIC COPS TO BE "ALL LIT UP"
BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Boston traffic officers are to be "all lit up" hereafter. The First Motor Corps of the State Guard, which is handling traffic on Boston streets until a new police force is formed, have originated the "lighted cap" idea to direct the streams of motor vehicles during the waning light of the evening rush hour. The head dress consists of a light framework of copper wires with a band fitting the hat and a small incandescent red bulb at the apex, lighted by electric current from a battery carried in the pocket. In addition the traffic officer wears a white shoulder harness, making it possible to see the officer several blocks away. The illuminating device was originated by Lieutenant James A. Morse, of the Motor Corps.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 15.—King Albert of Belgium was being escorted through the rooms of the Olympic Club here on his recent visit. Justice Fitzpatrick escorting him.

"Then you'd probably rather have an 'ace' than a 'king' in here," was Albert's immediate reply.

JIMMY WILDE, BRITISH MARVEL, TOURING U. S. A.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Jimmy Wilde, heralded as the greatest human fighting machine developed in England since Jim Driscoll, arrived in this country today for a tour which he hopes will end with him in possession of the world's bantamweight championship.

The little Briton is already matched for an important bout, which will be held at the opening show of the proposed international sporting club, Feb. 3. Joe Lynch is the most likely choice. Under the terms for this Match Wilde has agreed not to appear in a boxing match east of Chicago prior to Feb. 3.

Negotiations are already under way for a series of three matches in the west. The first is scheduled for Milwaukee, where Wilde will box ten rounds either Thanksgiving day or Dec. 1. His opponent will be either Rennie Vogel or Young Marino. The two other bouts will be held in St. Paul and California.

Rice Wins 19-7 From Sewanee

HOUSTON, Nov. 15.—The Rice Owls today played like whirlwinds against the strong Sewanee team and won by a score of 19 to 7.

All through the game both teams resorted to open field work and forward passes, the Rice team excelling in this style of play.

Sewanee presented a very much crippled team, many of its men being out of the game while Brown, their star line man, is ill with typhoid fever.

DOINGS IN RING DURING WEEK

Lynch Outpoints Bantam Champ.
PHILADELPHIA.—Joe Lynch of New York had the better of Pete Herman of New Orleans, bantamweight champion, in a six-round bout. Herman led in the first and third rounds, especially the third, when he landed repeatedly on Lynch's body. The remaining rounds went to Lynch. In the second he staggered Herman with a hook to the jaw. In the fifth and sixth he rushed Herman to the ropes and the champion was forced to hold to avoid punishment.

Tillman Holds Own.
DETROIT.—Johnny Tillman of Minneapolis held Jack Britton, welterweight champ, to a draw. Both men were ready to swap punches at all stages of the bout, and Britton was called on at times to use all his craftiness in order to escape punishment. Britton looked as though he had not fully recovered from his recent illness.

A. E. F. Champ Wins.
ST. LOUIS.—"Babe" Asher, A. E. F. bantam champion, buried the Zulu Kid of Brooklyn under a rain of blows in all except the seventh session of an eight-round bout. Asher was in constant motion and at times he landed blows with the rapidity of an expert typist pounding the keys, but there was little more force behind them. The Brooklyn boxer continued to wade in undismayed. In the seventh round his persistence almost bore fruit. He landed one on Asher's jaw and the A. E. F. boy crumpled to the floor. He was up at the fifth count and slipped along the ropes, with Zulu Kid hot after him. His head was cloudy and his legs unsteady, and the Zulu Kid landed another. This time Asher was up immediately and on the defense, just as the bell rang. Asher was master of the situation again in the eighth.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Benny Leonard, weighing 136 1/2 pounds, easily defeated Soldier Bartfield weighing 146 pounds, in eight rounds. Mel Coogan outpointed Johnny Dundee in eight fast rounds.

How Can They Sleep at Night? Neither Hornsby or Roush Knows Who Led the National's Hitters

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15.—Until the official batting averages are made known, there will be a dispute as to whether Roger Hornsby of the St. Louis club or Eddie Roush of the World's Champion Reds, was the leading hitter among the regulars in the National League. At the close of the season two sets of figures were going the rounds. One had Hornsby leading Moran's star, while the other had Roush outdistancing Hornsby by about 3 points.

ALLEY SIDING CONTRACTS ARE NOW EXECUTED

About twenty industries will be located on the new Barber industry track which the Texas & Pacific railroad is soon to lay in the alley between Oak street and Railway avenue, from in front of the Mid-Kansas Oil company's offices and plant to the Prairie Oil & Gas company, according to a statement made by C. B. Jones, agent for the Texas & Pacific. Mr. Jones has just returned from Fort Worth and Dallas, where he went to see about the signing of contracts in connection with the so-called "alley" track.

This track will be a "main line" as for sidings. It will not be used as a team track nor will it be occupied by cars of freight. The house tracks running off from it alone will be used for unloading and storing cars. More industries than those which already have contracted for siding will be put in. In fine, it is expected that the "alley" track will increase the jobbing interests of Ranger greatly and will obviate the necessity for many of the large companies at present without track facilities to haul their material and supplies from the railway yards. Likewise, much more room for cars for unloading in the yards will be available.

The track will be laid several feet lower than the present surface of the ground. This was done because of the new street paving on the east side. The track will be laid to conform with this new street grade.

The "alley" track matter has hung fire several months. Considerable trouble was encountered in securing permission to pass through certain premises. Now that this has been overcome, ties and steel will shortly be laid and the track facilities of industries increased.

FIFTY-FOOT FRONTAGE ON MAIN ST PRESENT SITE OF GUARANTY STATE BRINGS RECORD PRICE OF $100,000

The fifty feet, fronting on Main street, by one hundred forty fronting on Austin, on which the Guaranty State Bank's temporary building is located, was disposed of yesterday by the Rev. C. H. Ray of Weatherford, through the Craven-Marowitz Realty company, for a consideration of $100,000. This represents $2,000 per front foot, or the highest price ever paid for property in Ranger.

The deal started about ten days ago when a crowd of nineteen Philadelphia capitalists with a staff of photographers came to Ranger to invest in oil. They called at the office of the Craven-Marowitz Realty company and these live wires commanded all the itizens in town to show them the sights. The end of this sight-seeing trip found them astonished—even flabbergasted—at the marvelous development going on here.

In the crowd were S. B. Dobbs, brick manufacturer of Philadelphia; J. R. Wilson, a prominent attorney of Camden, N. J., and L. B. Roney of Philadelphia. These men were impressed with the upgerly belonging to Rev. Ray and realized at once the opportunity it offered for investment.

When their special car pulled out that night, stowed away in one of the compartments were J. A. Craven and C. J. Harner of Ranger. During the night, Rev. Ray was picked up at Weatherford. The party proceeded to Fort Worth and the next day a deal was closed between Mr. Wilson and the preacher. Rev. Ray many hours Wilson turned his interest over to Mr. Harner, who came back to Ranger burdened with the most valuable piece of property in town.

Another trip was made to Fort Worth and Dallas, where the same realty company brought Charles Sanger of Sanger Bros. and U. M. Simon, a prominent attorney of Fort Worth, into action, with the result that a three-story brick building is to be built on the property.

Sanger Bros. are rated well into the millions and Mr. Simon is known to have made a large fortune dealing in oil in this district. Both are heavily interested in local real estate.

Mr. Craven and Mr. Marowitz feel especially proud of their accomplishment on account of the many obstacles in the way. These hindrances took four months in process of disentanglement. They furnish a reason why this property has not been improved at an earlier date.

In each of these deals a handsome profit was made by the parties who disposed of their interests. Other deals are pending in which Messrs. Sanger and Simon are interested. They will be announced by Craven-Marowitz in the near future.

When interviewed Saturday night by a Daily Times reporter, Rev. Ray gave a history of the property from the time he bought it.

"I am pastor of the North Side Baptist church of Weatherford, at present," said Mr. Ray, "but I used to live in Ranger. I bought this lot and a 50 by 140 foot lot adjoining it from E. P. Davenport about four years ago for $200, paying $100 down and giving a vendor's lien note for the balance. I got this note carried by different parties for seven or eight years, sometimes paying as high as 15 per cent interest.

"At the time I bought it people made fun of my purchasing a business corner so far from town. Later I built some small shacks on the property and established a produce business with a capital of $40. My business grew to be one of the most profitable in Ranger. An ice house and a meat market helped to make this corner one of the liveliest spots in the little town. Many of the people who later became rich through the oil development used to bring eggs, butter and produce to the market.

"I finally leased the corner and business to Davis Brothers, who now live at Weatherford. They made good money out of it.

"On Sept. 1, 1918, I leased the corner to Flippen, Shane and Sutherland and they built the old Wilson hotel on it. The hotel was burned down in the disastrous fire of April 6, 1919. Since then I got the corner back and now I have closed the deal mentioned.

"In March, 1918, I sold the 50 by 140 feet adjoining the corner lot for $2,500. When I refused $25,000 cash for the corner people said I was missing my opportunity. When I refused $40,000 people said I had lost my mind. I turned down an offer of $60,000 cash and people remarked that preachers didn't have any business sense, anyhow. What will they say now?"

A three-story modern store and office building will be erected on the property, and construction on the building will begin in the next few days, according to the owners.

SUPER FEATURE AT LIBERTY MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Charles Neville Buck, author of "When Bearcat Went Dry," the super-feature which will be the attraction at the Liberty theater on Monday and Tuesday, began his literary career in Louisville, Ky., as a reporter on the Courier-Journal.

In order to while away time while waiting to fulfill his assignments, young Buck wrote fiction stories on the back of envelopes and slips of paper. At night, when his newspaper work was over, he would collect these slips and put them together. The result of these labors would be sent away to magazines, and if one editor turned them down away they would go to another.

This persistence won out in the end. Mr. Buck's returns from his stories became so remunerative that he quit his newspaper job and took to fiction seriously. He soon became the most noted writer in this country who made use of the mountains of western Kentucky as the background for stories of moonshiners, illicit stills, feuds and feudists.

Having won a following, he then began to write novels, of which he has contributed nearly a score to American literature. Of his novels two of them have been made into plays and eight into pictures.

FLORENCE REED AT HIPPIE "ETERNAL SIN" WEDNESDAY

Intense, unselfish love, mystery, prison plots, vengeance, jealousy and all the other dominant human emotions are elements of Herbert Brenon's new production for Selznick Pictures, "The Eternal Sin," which will be the feature at the Hippodrome theater next Wednesday. The story is taken from the drama, "Lucretia Borgia," by Victor Hugo, author of that other masterpiece, "Les Misérables," and the star of the cast is the singular Florence Reed. This photo-drama will provide a striking contrast to Mr. Brenon's previous achievement, "War Brides."

"The Eternal Sin" tells the story of Lucretia Borgia's attempts to avenge herself for the attacks of unscrupulous enemies. Her brother was assassinated and she herself denounced in the presence of the one person in the world for whose good opinion she would have sacrificed everything. Her affection for this one man was her undoing. She was a beautiful woman, and the few admirers of her had tried to work her downfall. Instead she followed to her death. Lucretia Borgia to accompany them.

There are all scenes with intense action and when Lucretia's corpse was found she came to life over her victims, she finds Brenon in their midst. The story ends with the most powerful

SEARCH OF ARCADE WITH BILLIE RHODES AT OPERA

"In Search of Arcady," the latest production starring the mirthful Billie Rhodes, is a screen adaptation of the story of the same name by the popular writer of fiction, Nina Wilcox Putnam. Miss Putnam has written many successful novels and is a regular contributor to The Saturday Evening Post.

"In Search of Arcady" is regarded as the most entertaining of her books and has had a record-breaking sale. The popularity of the story augurs well for the reception accorded the picture, while those who enjoyed the fascinating story will not be disappointed when they see it on the screen at the Opera House Tuesday.

In dramatizing it for the screen, John B. Clymer has succeeded in retaining the humorous and dramatic situations and at the same time giving a pictorial setting which enhances the delightful comedy by its sheer beauty and Arcadian atmosphere.

As Barbara Chichester, the pretty madcap daughter of an American millionaire, who detests any man with a title attached to his moniker—goes a-gyping and unwittingly falls in love with a real English earl who is "traveling" as a peddler—Miss Rhodes has a charming role which suits her admirably. The production is the best the vivacious little star has made since "Hoop-La." It was produced by National Film Corporation and released by Exhibitors Mutual.

MOVIE NOTES

John Barrymore's Paramount picture, "The Dictator," is being reissued by the Famous Players-Lasky corporation as a part of its Success series. The story by Richard Harding Davis in the stage version of which William Collier achieved great success some years ago, is said to afford Mr. Barrymore ample opportunities to tickle the risibilities of audiences.

PEPPY COMEDY DRAMA AT LONE STAR TOMORROW

That motion picture acting isn't all easy work is illustrated in Enid Bennett's latest Paramount-Ince photoplay, "Stepping Out," which comes to the Lone Star tomorrow and Tuesday. In this picture charming Enid Bennett appears as a poor man's wife and the high-salaried star has to sew, cook, iron and even get down upon her hands and knees and scrub.

In the opening scenes of the picture she certainly has real drudgery, but in the finish she has a chance to wear fine clothes and the happy change in the woman is designed by the author to please the feminine fancy.

The picture is an interesting drama with considerable comedy sparkling throughout. Miss Bennett is supported by a cast of well known players.
