WHAT'S...

COOKING?

By NORMAN WRIGHT

We suppose all mothers are alike, God bless 'em, and they think there is absolutely nothing their children can't do, but our 75-year-old mother carried it a little far this week.

She sent us a newspaper clipping telling about Corday Counts, California's chief weather forecaster, blaming all the heavy rains this year on the jet stream racing across the Pacific from Japan at 200 to 300 miles per hour causing unprecedented floods all over the United States.

The weather expert went on to say about the jet stream, "It is right over California and Texas right now causing all this topsy turvy weather and there is no definite trend to indicate when the rains will stop."

Then our mother said, "Son, if there is such a thing as this, you should do something to stop it at once."

Oh, well, bless 'em again.

If you folks really want to see a sight in this world, you ought to load up the family car and take the Sunday drive to Lake Texoma and back while it is at its present flood stage.

This daddy of all man-made lakes in the United States, or the world for that matter, will probably be going over its emergency spillway by the time you read this. That is an event which the lake engineers said would happen only once in a hundred years.

Lake Texoma at its normal level has a shoreline as long as from here to California. The distance across the top of the earthen dam is three miles. The lake makes Lake Leon look like a goldfish pond in somebody's back yard.

Where the water in Lake Leon has got up into a few boat houses, whole resorts have been covered up at Lake Texoma. It is a sight really worth seeing. We were up there two Sundays ago and the amount of water going through the floodgates was staggering to the imagination. It filled a person with terror to stand there and look at it. At the same time hundreds and hundreds of fishermen lined the banks of Red River below the dam.

The emergency spillway is right at the Texas end of the dam, and so are the floodgates. You can drive your car right down behind the dam and park right at the gates, as all the sightseers do.

If you should decide to make the trip, drive from here to Weatherford and then from Weatherford to Deatur. Go next to Gaineville, then to Sherman and then to Denison. The dam is about three miles beyond Denison. Taking this route you have a good road and no traffic after you leave Weatherford. The drive is about 3 1/2 hours and makes a wonderful (Continued on Page 6)

Four important guests will be in Ranger Tuesday night, June 4, to appear on the county-wide mental health dinner program that is to be held at Ranger Junior College Cafeteria which is being co-sponsored by the Texas Society for Mental Health, the Eastland County Parent-Teachers Association, and a large number of other clubs in Ranger.

Dr. Max Leach, head of the Psychology Department of Abilene Christian College, who made such a hit with members of the Ranger Lions Club at a program here recently, will be one of those on a panel of four that will give a layman's discussion of Mental Health.

Other panel members, also from Abilene Christian College, include Dr. Paul Southern, head of the ACC Bible Department; Dr. Orval Filbeck, professor of education and psychology, and William N. Fryer, assistant professor of psychology. (Continued on Page 6)

Little League to Try It All Again Thursday Nite

Ranger's Little League baseball teams, which have been trying to play their second game of the year for weeks, will try it all again Thursday night (tonight). Games of last Monday night were called off on account of wet grounds.

The two games scheduled are Yankees vs. Dodgers and Indians vs. Giants. In the only games played to date, the Giants beat the Yankees 23-3, and the Dodgers beat the Indians 11-7.

Heavy Coating of Dust On Main St. After Flooding

Now that flood waters have subsided Ranger merchants are being plagued with dust on Main Street. The muddy waters which swirled through part of the business district Saturday left a good coating of silt which has since been reduced to powdery dust.

Kicked up by automobiles, the dust is carried on spring breezes into the stores and has been creating quite a housekeeping problem. It has been a matter of sweeping floodwaters out one day and sweeping dust out the next.

Galloway Calls for More Fish Reports

Rip Galloway, manager of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce, said today he wanted to ask all owners of fishing camps around the lake to get as many fishing reports this weekend as possible, providing there is fishing weather. Galloway said fishing had been rained out for so long he was badly in need of reports to keep the lake publicity going.

These reports appear both locally and in the daily newspapers. "Get full names of everyone in each party," Galloway said.

Saying that Ranger Junior College is already here, and that it would probably beat any kind of an industry that Ranger could bring to the city now or within the foreseeable future, Ralph Duncan, of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, who conducted the Community Clinic here a short while back, told members of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce Tuesday they should bend every effort to make the college what it ought to be and to develop its every potential as one of the greatest assets the town has.

Duncan said a survey of the suggestion cards turned in at the clinic showed that Ranger Junior College led everything else in town in the matter of interest, and the sooner Ranger realized its responsibility to the college, the better all would be.

Duncan said the almost $1,000,000 institution should have a campus beautification program second to none in Texas, and that Ranger should develop a closer relationship with the college in every way, considering it as a Big Industry with a big payroll, and a magnet that brings thousands of dollars to the city every year.

Value of the Ranger Junior College plant is rapidly approaching the million dollar mark in Ranger and it is a firmly established school in its 31st year. Ranger is perhaps realizing only about one-tenth of what it could out of the college if it should develop a closer relationship with it and strive to take advantage of everything it has to offer.

Duncan said the school should be placed at the tip top of any priority list of things to be accomplished that Ranger might draw up for the future, and an opportunity should never be turned down to do something constructive for the college, and thus the town.

Retail Store Problem Duncan said the second greatest need felt in Ranger, according to 118 citizens on their suggestion cards, was the need for new retail outlets. He suggested the Chamber of Commerce develop a committee to make a detail study of the problems in Ranger and to take under study the retail needs of the community from all stand points. Duncan said that once such a study was made and once a set of specific questions and answers and figures and statistics was available, large retail stores with branches would begin to take an interest in Ranger.

Duncan also suggested that the Chamber of Commerce make a complete study of the agricultural problems of the community so that it would better know how to start solving them. He said the Chamber's agricultural program was the weakest thing it had today, because it was practically non-existent.

Duncan also suggested that the Chamber make a wider use of its committee chairman, its committee members, and all its personnel in general. He said there were up (Continued on Page 6)

Be it known that in the present dog fight in Ranger we are only coat holders, but it has become our duty at the request of the City Commission and the City Manager to explain a few points about the so-called "dog law" that might not have been understood at first.

When the City Commission announced it would enforce the City Ordinance which said all dogs in Ranger must be vaccinated for rabies and have a city dog license, that meant all dogs had not just a few of them.

It makes no difference if a dog is kept in a closed pen, or tied to the end of a rope, or whether it is kept inside the house, it must be vaccinated for rabies and have a city dog license. There are no exceptions, the Commission says.

Also, if the dog has been vaccinated and if the dog has a city dog license, the tags must be worn on a collar around the dog's neck. The State of Texas requires that all drivers of motor vehicles have a driver's license, and the license must be carried on the person; the license is no good back home in a drawer. The same is true of a dog license in the City of Ranger, according to the City Commission, and the license must be worn around the dog's neck, so that it can be seen.

The City Dog Catcher has run into all kinds of situations since Tuesday morning when the enforcement of the Ordinance went into effect.

In one case he was about to take possession of a dog when the dog's owner ran out of the house, picked up the dog and carried it inside the house. In a situation of this kind, with the dog either knowing that the dog has no license, he is instructed to report the matter to City Hall where it is turned over to City Police who are given orders to pick up the dog and hold the animal until such time as the owner has complied with the law. If not complied with in 72 hours the animal is to be destroyed.

The Dog Catcher, who is merely a city employee carrying out his orders, is not going to get into an argument with anybody who interferes with his picking up an unlicensed dog, but the matter will be reported to City Hall and the Police will handle the case from there on, we are told.

For that matter, there is no point to be gained in cursing out the dog catcher. Neither is there any point to be gained in cursing out the City Commission. If anybody wants to ease something they can cause a few printed words down at City Hall in the Book of Ordinances governing the City.

Once a dog is impounded the owner can get him out of hook by paying a pound fee of $1.00. He may then have the dog vaccinated at Hodges Veterinary Clinic, or any other clinic in the state for (Continued on Page 6)

Worse Than Needless School Aid Bill Faces Bleak Future

The House education and labor committee, refusing to face the political facts of life, has reported out a $1,500,000,000 bill for federal aid to the states for school construction.

The committee did make a faint bow in the direction of public opposition to this particular measure and to big spending in general. It knocked $500,000,000 off the amount the sub-committee had recommended. It gave scant consideration to a Democratic bill calling for a six-year $3,600,000,000 program.

As the bill comes to the House floor it calls for a five-year program, at $300,000,000 a year in grants to be matched by the states. The President had asked for a four-year program at the rate of $325,000,000 a year.

But even before this measure reached the floor its size had become comparatively unimportant. Of all the new spending programs before Congress, it has the least chance of passage. It's about as dead a pigeon as if it had been buried in committee.

Much has been made of Southern opposition to federal aid to school construction based on the undoubted fact that an amendment to deny aid to segregated schools will be brought up on the floor although voted down in committee.

But the integration issue is not the decisive one. There are plenty of other arguments swaying opponents to this measure. Two big ones are determination to keep control of schools at the local level, and to hold down federal expenditures. Congress, striving to inject a measure of fiscal sanity into the 1958 budget, simply isn't going to pass this new spending measure. Although calling for "only" $1,500,000,000 in five years, all past experience indicates that if adopted it would snowball through the years under pressure from the National Education Assn. and the bureaucrats.

Finally, there is no real need for federal aid for school construction. The backlog of needed classrooms is being whittled down, and will be wiped out by the states and communities themselves if they continue to stand on their own two feet in this respect.

As Raymond Moley, Chronicle columnist, concluded after careful study in several of the states which would be unable to meet their own needs if any were, there isn't a state in the Union that can't solve the school building problem for itself.

College Grads of 1957 to Be In Big Demand

MINNEAPOLIS—Earlier, faster and more furious than last year—this describes employer competition for the services of college graduates of 1957. Fantastic aspects of the spring job market are summed up in a preliminary bulletin from the 22nd annual survey of U. S. College placements, now under way by Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

On many campuses, the number of employing firms represented is greater than the number of seniors available for employment.

Various corporations are now trying to set up campus interviewing schedules for the next five years—up to and including the class of June, 1962.

Employment scouts are so numerous that some schools have been hiring hotel facilities for group interviews—to supplement the schools' own ample interview rooms. Columbia University, for example, has used an average of ten to twelve supplementary hotel rooms a day this spring.

Salary offers are up $20 to $40 a month over last year's record figures, and are edging still higher as commencement time nears. Engineers will start work in a prevailing range of from $400 to $525 a month, from present indications. Business and liberal arts men will average substantially less than technical people, but their offers, too, are up from those of 1956, right across the board.

Columbia University reports that in all areas, including liberal arts, there are more employing companies represented this spring than there are available senior candidates for jobs. University of Minnesota's school of business notes sharply higher demand for accountants and industrial relations men. Temple U. finds accountants to be in almost as intense demand as technical and science people. Temple and University of Cincinnati note an increasing trend to sign up juniors for summer employment, looking to a permanent connection upon their graduation. Notre Dame ended interviewing April 11, with all available June grads placed. Georgia Tech reports interviewing for 1957 seniors will end May 30, when next December's class should all be placed.

One barred placement official declared the major difficulty to be simply "a problem of trying to maintain opportunity for would-be employers" to get together with would-be employees, and still save out a little time for seniors to attend classes.

17-Month-Old Eastland Tot Drowns In Pond

A 17-month-old Eastland girl drowned in Eastland yesterday afternoon in a farm pond near her home as she played with ducks on the pond.

Dead is Mary Magdalene White, daughter of Mrs. H. C. Baker. The little girl was playing around the pond, which is just a few yards from the family home, about 6:30 Wednesday with two of her brothers and sisters. They said they had forgotten about the little girl for awhile and when they again noticed her she was lying face down in the edge of the pond. Her half-sister, Neva, 9, picked her up and carried her to the house where the children's mother was preparing supper. Mrs. Baker rushed to the child to Eastland Memorial Hospital. Attendants there said the baby was dead-on-arrival.

A neighbor told Mrs. Baker that she had seen Mary Magdalene following ducks around the edge of the pond only a few minutes before her body was discovered. The Baker home is on north Virginia, about four blocks from the "Y" on Highway 80 west of Eastland.

The child was born Dec. 24, 1955 in Ranger. Services will be held this afternoon at 2:30 in the Hamner Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. John Elser, Cisco Lutheran pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Eastland Cemetery.

Survivors include her mother, step-father; two half-brothers, David and Charles Hart; and a half-sister, Neva.

By BOYCE HOUSE

My favorite song among the pioneers of the old West was "Doc" Holliday. Doc, killed for pay—for the purpose of bringing up banks and trains, which after all, was another form of pay—or for the love of taking life. But Holliday seems to have been motivated by friendship—but of course not friendship for the ones he killed.

Doc was a dentist, hence the nickname. He was a consumptive, hence his contempt for peril—a man who has little life to risk thinks little of risking it. Holliday was versatile. He would just as soon kill you with a sawed-off shotgun or a knife as with a six-shooter. He was equally skilled with all three.

His most famous performance was in the wagon-yard at Tombstone, Arizona. The officers, led by Wyatt Earp, had been challenged by a lawless group and Holliday, who had no particular stake in the matter, joined his friends, the Earps, as they advanced to the field. The occasion offered action and Holliday seized the opportunity.

Doc's renown spread throughout the West.

Fort Griffin was the wildest town in the country—crowded with buffalo hunters, traders, base of the pecan and enters to feed. Because of the short period of time the worm is exposed, timing of control measures is of utmost importance, says Hancock. Sprays made of long residual insecticides can be applied when a number of eggs are found in the orchard. If insecticides with fairly short residual period are used, it is best to wait until some of the eggs have hatched and the worms found feeding in the buds.

Proper application of the insecticide must include a thorough wetting of the nut clusters and the stems immediately below.

Hancock urges pecan producers to check with their local county agent on the details of a good control program. Ask for a copy of L-245, Guide for Controlling Insects and Diseases on Fruits and Nuts in Texas.

To be sure of the timing, the specialist urges pecan growers to check the nut clusters closely at regular intervals for the appearance of casebearer eggs. The eggs are usually deposited singly on the tip or blossom end of the small nuts; are pearly white with a bluish cast and about a third the size of a pin head. They hatch in four to five days. After hatching, the small worm moves down below the pecan cluster and feeds on the buds in the leaf axil. The buds are hollowed and the tell-tale webbing and black frass around the bud can be seen. After the worm now days of bud feeding, the worm now much larger, moves back to the nut cluster and bores a hole at the

Since this is a once-over-hundred-years deal, you ought to see it.

One surprising thing about all the high water we have had in Ranger within the past week is that nobody called us during that Saturday flood to come running with the camera and take a picture of some stray cattails swimming around in the living room.

Some of you folks seemed to doubt those stories about five and six pound fish being caught in the gutters around Ranger. Heck, we saw those fish. Some of our dear sweet (grrrr) readers would mention those fish tales to us and then, sort of twirl their fingers around their ears and shake their heads and walk off looking sad and all that stuff. You don't think we would put anything in this Ranger Times that wasn't so, do you?

More especially fish stories. We might lie about something else, occasionally, but every fish story we print is the honest gospel truth.

Something really and truly nice is coming to Ranger on the night of Tuesday, June 4, and that is the Mental Health Dinner and program that will be held at the college cafeteria. It is a countywide affair being sponsored by several service organizations including the Eastland County P-T-A.

When you hear the words "mental health" you should not think of crazy folks and asylums. This program is not about that kind of mental health. It is about the way to improve the mental stability of all normal people so that they may live better with themselves and their neighbors, and get the very richest and best out of life. Mental health can be improved greatly, the same as vitamins can improve a well person's physical health.

Some of the very finest speakers in the state will be on this program, and important people will be here from all over the county. To sum it up, it is simply one of the FINER things that come along occasionally.

You will hear more about it, and you should plan to attend. It will cost you $1.25, but we can assure you the dinner alone will be worth twice that.

DOGS—

that matter, for a fee of $2.00. City license tags are $1.00 for male dogs and $2.00 for female dogs.

Failure to comply with the law is a fine of $1.00 to $25.00, and each day counts as a separate offense.

If dog-owners wish to avoid trouble with the law all summer long, there is only one thing to do and that is to comply with the law as it is written and as it is being enforced. By doing that all the confusion is being over. No one dog owner is being asked to do something that is not being asked of all other dog owners. More than 100 citizens have complied with the Ordinance and others will have to or suffer the consequences.

As one member of the City Commission said, "We didn't put the dog license law on the books, but since we have had such an overwhelming number of complaints from citizens about stray dogs that are public nuisances, we are going to enforce the law since it is there. And in order to enforce it fairly, we must require that all dogs be vaccinated and tagged and not just some of them. The fact that a dog may live inside a fenced yard or inside a house makes no difference at all. He is still a dog and will have to be vaccinated and tagged like all the rest of them. A small percentage of dogowners who have shown defiance of the law, may just as well have their pets vaccinated now or prepare to be bothered all summer long, with each new day constituting a new offense."

If anyone sees a stray dog and wishes to report him, they are invited to call City Hall and give the dog's whereabouts.

You Who Own Real Estate—

... and have never filed the deed for record should do so at once for your own protection and safety. This also applies to every other important instrument pertaining to your title to land. We have seen good titles fouled up and costly law suits made mandatory just because important title instruments, like deeds, were not filed promptly. Don't blame us if you get caught—for we are urging you now to send all your unrecorded title documents to the County Clerk's Office today.

Twenty-one Chamber of Commerce members were present for the meeting, which was presided over by president C. B. Prout.
