McGavock for Second Term

Mr. A. H. McGavock comes before our people this week as a candidate for the office of County and District Clerk, and his announcement appears in the News. Mr. McGavock is the present incumbent, and aspires to another term believing that he is better qualified than ever for serving the people in this capacity, and submits his past record in support of his claims. He is well and favorably known by the voters of Lamb county who recognize and appreciate his value as a public servant. The office of County and District Clerk is an important and difficult one to fill, and the fact that not one word of complaint has ever been heard against him, speaks volumes in his behalf. Not only has Mr. McGavock discharged his official duties with entire satisfaction to his people and credit to himself, but is esteemed as a citizen, as a friend and neighbor. The success and welfare of our country depend upon the honesty and efficiency of our public servants, therefore we should think well before we make any changes. We ask a careful consideration of his claims before making your choice on election day.

Miss Mary Vereen of Amherst spent the week end with home folks.

Mr. Wilsie Moore, with the New York Giants, was in the city Friday and enjoyed a nice hunting trip with L. E. Slate and L. Hunt.

Mrs. L. E. Slate and son Crosby, returned the latter part of last week from Henderson where they spent the holidays with the latter's father and other relatives.

Mr. V. C. Nelson has returned from Fort Worth where he spent the holidays.

Conditions of This Community Flattering

According to the financial statement of the First National Bank of Sudan the financial condition of this community is very encouraging. The statement shows deposits of $239,744.39 at the close of business December 30, 1927, against $127,268.15 a year ago on the same date. The officials of the bank have been instrumental in bringing about this prosperous condition in that they have encouraged farmers and in many ways helped them in securing hogs, cows, chickens, etc., to be put on the farms, and which has done much toward increasing the income of the farms. The First National Bank of Sudan stands solidly for the betterment of every condition in this community, and just to put it in our humble words, "We are grateful that we have such a strong institution taking care of our financial interests in Sudan."

Mrs. Cunningham, of Hollis, Okla., and Mrs. N. Moore, of Baileyboro, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Hunt Tuesday afternoon.

Irvin Announces for Sheriff and Tax Collector

In this issue of the News will be found the announcement of J. L. (Len) Irvin as a candidate for re-election to the office of Sheriff and Tax Collector of Lamb county, subject to the Democratic party. Mr. Irvin is now serving his first elective term to this office, and appeals to your judgment and support on his past record, which is the most convincing proof any one can offer. He has not only made good in the Sheriff's department, but has done equally well in the Tax Collector's office. Just recently the State Auditor was at the county seat to check up on the Tax Collector and found Mr. Irvin's report on the dot, and commended him for his fine system in handling the records.

The office of Sheriff is one of the most important within the gift of our people. It is one of the most important in the state, or in the nation, and the man selected to fill it should possess the ability, the judgment and moral stamina to discharge its duties under any and all circumstances. In Sheriff Irvin the qualifications are to be found to fit the office. In the hands of the Sheriff rests our security, both of life and of property. His life at all times is at stake to vouchsafe these inalienable rights. For our protection, and that we may dwell in our land safely, the sheriff leads the way. No one else is required to precede him in the face of danger, for he must lead the way. Sheriff Irvin has led the way and proven himself equal to every emergency, and the right man in the right place. Aside from his official life Mr. Irvin is an all-around gentleman, the highest appellation that can be applied to one's fellow man. True in friendship, faithful to every trust, generous in thought and deed, genial and affable by nature, he is a model man in both public and private life. This is the time when the people should use the utmost care in selecting their public servants, especially that of sheriff, and when the time comes round our people could do no better than to keep Sheriff Irvin where he is.

T. Fife Removes to Teague

Mr. and Mrs. T. Fife, who have been residents of the Sudan community for the past two years, residing on their fine farm south of Sudan, left yesterday with their household goods and will reside at Teague, their former home. Mr. Fife has leased his farm here and is returning to Teague to resume the management of his large furniture store and other financial interests at that point. It is with sincere regret that we lose these good people from Sudan community, and our hope is that they will in the future see fit to return to this section. Mr. Fife and his estimable wife will be sorely missed by their many friends in this section, whose best wishes go with them to their new home. The News is frank to say that it is with unusual regret that we part with these good people.

Meeting of City Commissioners

City Commissioners met in regular session Tuesday night, and transacted the regular routine of business. Besides hearing a proposition for plans and specification of a water system for Sudan, C. A. Luck of Levelland, representing the Edward Gantt Engineering Co., of Austin, was present and offered to make plans and specifications, free of charge, for a water system in Sudan. The proposition was considered and the plans and specifications will be presented to the City Commission at some future date. The Gas Franchise was up for consideration and was passed and signed by the commissioners. We will probably have natural gas taps in Sudan by the first of November. Delinquent taxes came next; there are many delinquents in the City of Sudan and the Commissioners have given instructions to file suit on all delinquent taxes after February first, but left the proposition open with only a ten percent penalty, providing all taxes are paid by February 1st.

Party at DeLoach's

A party was given to the young folks by Mrs. W. G. DeLoache Friday night. It was given for the return of Otis Padgett from Limestone county. We listened to the new player piano they received Xmas. She aims to give us another party some time.

Chevrolet Leads

Having achieved world leadership in automobile manufacturing in 1927 with a yearly output nearly 2,000 units in excess of its program of a million cars, the Chevrolet Motor Company has embarked in 1928 upon the most ambitious production and sales plans in its entire sixteen years of existence, according to W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager.

Production for the year just ended totaled 1,001,834 units for a gain of more than 36 per cent over the 732,147 cars and trucks built in 1926 and 93 per cent over the 1925 production of 519,060.

The 1,000,000th car built in 1927 rolled off the assembly lines at the Flint, Michigan plant December 30, with C. F. Barth, vice-president in charge of manufacturing at the wheel. The history making model was a sedan. It was prepared for immediate shipment so that, with more than 32,000 other new models built in December, it might be available for prompt delivery to new car purchasers.

Throughout 1927 factories were on peak production schedules, while month after month tentative schedules had to be increased to meet the demand for the 1927 models.

The year as a result was the most spectacular and most successful in Chevrolet history.

Remarkable as were its 1927 achievements, however, the outlook for 1928 looms even brighter, according to Mr. Knudsen, who stated that while no definite production figure has been set for 1928, this year's volume is certain to top by a comfortable margin the record high mark for 1927.

His prediction is based on country-wide prosperity which by every token should bring the automobile industry the greatest year it has ever known, Mr. Knudsen stated.

"Our own organization is prepared to handle its full share of this anticipated growth in business," he said. "All Chevrolet production operations are on a maximum capacity basis that we may meet the 1928 demand, and make immediate delivery on all models.

"During the latter part of 1927 we made extensive preparations for our 1928 program. Our sales organization has been enlarged and intensified through the creation of the new regional and zone sales offices, and by additions to the field personnel.

"Our service to the owner is on a new high level through the opening of new parts depots and warehouses to expedite delivery of new or replacement parts.

"Production facilities also have been augmented by the recent purchase of a $4,500,000 foundry at Saginaw, Michigan, and a new assembly plant which will get into production shortly at Atlanta, Ga., to supply the Southwest, and which will increase by 350 cars a day the volume of the other seven assembly plants now in operation in the United States.

"With these improved facilities, and with our bigger and better car for 1928, which at substantial price reductions won such a warm public reception upon its initial showing on January 1, we feel assured of establishing new records this year, and of maintaining the steadfast public confidence in the Chevrolet Motor Company which alone made possible our very gratifying showing in 1927."

SUCH IS LIFE—Mother Wanted Quiet, but Look What She Got

Peppermint Drops

South Bend, Ind.—Peppermint oil, once so precious that dealers kept it stored in bank vaults, has built and shattered dreams of wealth in shorter time almost than any other farm crop. Two years ago a pound of it brought almost $30, buyers fought to contract all the growers had and muck fields reached a premium in Michigan and Indiana.

As quickly as it rose the price decreased. Current sales hover around $3 for a pound, and producers say it costs $2.50 a pound to grow it. This year's crop is a subject of controversy. Buyers declare supplies are plentiful but growers insist production is inadequate. Whatever event tenor there may be is due to long-term contracts, by which far-sighted growers accepting a sliding scale, insured themselves of better prices than the open market brings.

Observers predict increasing demand for oil. In respective order of importance it is used in dentifrices, confections and chewing gum, and in the retail drug trade. Makers of dental cream declare the world is just beginning to brush its teeth, and candy manufacturers report steadily increasing sales.

Generally the mint supply is less than the demand. There are natural restrictions on production. Growers become discouraged when weeds overrun their crop and contaminate the oil so much that it suffers discounts on the markets. Distilling is a problem. Most growers have their own equipment, although custom stills are operated. Private stills do not pay on less than 20 acres of good mint. However, mint production frequently is considered a subsidiary industry, and as one producer drops out another fills his place. While not always as profitable as truck crops adapted to similar land, mint is perhaps more certain. The enormous price reduction has not cut the acreage seriously. Michigan and Indiana claim 85 per cent of the total mint acreage, with Oregon, Washington and California ranking next in importance.

Early Keys

In the metal keys excavated at Herculaneum we find the early foreshadowing of the spring locks of later times, for their keys were made to perform only a partial revolution, unlike those of the keys functioning in the wooden locks, wherein they described a complete circle.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Coconut Crab

There is a certain kind of crab which lives on coconuts. The largest of the crab family, he makes a home for himself among the roots of the coconut tree and lives conveniently near the source of supply. As much as a quart of pure oil is obtained from these crabs as a result of this coconut diet.

"Unscrupulous" Man Is Offered Many Jobs

Baltimore, Md.—Describing himself in an advertisement in which he sought work as "thoroughly unscrupulous" and "with no references," George Boppe of Pimlico recently said he received 25 offers within a few hours. "Some," he said, "were from persons who had an occasional piece of dirty work; others from those who wanted a henchman."

Formerly of East Orange, N. J., Boppe said he was a college man and had worked at many trades. "I have no references; I can't get a job," he continued, "so I concluded to seek work that didn't require a reference."

KEEPING YOUR END UP

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

WE WERE taught very distinct moral lessons in the old readers which we used in the public schools when I was learning to read, and especially were these lessons emphasized without subtlety or suggestiveness in the texts which were given us to copy in our writing books. The fact that I cannot at this moment recall any one of them suggests that they did not eat themselves into my memory very deeply. There was one story, however, which I still recall with some distinctness. Possibly it was the illustration which accompanied it which left its impress upon me. Two boys were carrying a heavy basket suspended from a pole which rested upon their shoulders. The cleverer of the two discovered that by pushing the basket nearer to his companion he lightened his own load. It was a laboratory experiment in physics and in fair dealing. The lesson as I recall was that everyone is under obligation, when he assumes a responsibility of any sort, to keep up his end of the load.

Most of us have a good many poles upon our shoulder, placed there by the society in which we move or the business in which we are engaged. Or possibly it might be more accurate to say that there are a good many baskets on the pole, one end of which we are helping to carry.

There are the schools in the town

Growth of Languages

Authorities believe that all languages had their origin in the dialects of one common language, whose home is conjectured to have been between the Baltic and Caspian seas. The language spread with migrations in the different places, and the separation and race admixtures increased the differences in the dialects until they became distinct languages, which in turn spread and broke up into dialects.

Ration Increase Gives Soldiers Fresh Food

Washington.—The army is being fed fresh fish, fowl, vegetables, fruit and milk, instead of the canned varieties of these foods, under the 44 per cent increase in ration cost approved by President Coolidge. Maj. Gen. Frank E. Cheatham, quartermaster general, says in his annual report made public.

"With the ration allowance it will not be necessary to augment subsistence funds by dividends received from post exchanges, and the funds thus released can be used for other purposes to improve the comfort and contentment of the enlisted men," he says.

Before the order increasing the ration became effective it cost 34.8 cents a day a man to feed the army in the 1927 fiscal year, General Cheatham said, a reduction of 1.32 cents compared to the previous 12 months. The new ration is based on an approximate cost of 50 cents a day and was worked up after study of the ration costs of the navy and marine corps.

NO SPATS POSSIBLE

Manila.—The man who married a dumb wife is more than a fiction title in the Philippines. It accurately describes a matrimonial situation which seems curiously prevalent in these tropic isles.

Of course the wives in question are not actually dumb. But to all intents and purposes they might as well be. They are dumb by force of circumstances, as it were. For their husband can't speak their language, nor can they speak the tongue of their lords and masters.

Throughout the Far East it is common for white foreigners to marry women of the country in which they settle. Nowhere save in the Philippines, however, does a practically complete lack of verbal contact seem at all prevalent. Perhaps it is the enervating climate, which is not conducive to the mental exertion required in learning a new language. In any case, examples of this strange mating are not hard to find.

In one case the wife is a pure blooded Filipino woman who speaks both Spanish and the Tagalog dialect, but no English. The husband speaks English only. They have two children, who do quite well in all three languages and now serve as family interpreters.

Another odd case was found in the union of a Japanese woman and an American. Neither speaks the other's language, though in Japan such unions ordinarily result in each picking up a smattering of the other's speech at once. The situation seemed so extraordinary that an interpreter was obtained in order to query the wife in detail. Said she:

"You see, my husband works at night and he stays home and sleeps in the daytime. I work during the

Finds Ancient Scroll Is Schoolboy's Sums

London.—Little did a young Egyptian, who 4,000 years ago scribbled something on a thin sheet of leather, realize the trouble he was originating. For more than 50 years he kept the British museum guessing.

The scroll came to the museum in 1875. It was so brittle that it had to be treated with a special solution before it could be unrolled.

Learned men declared it was a scribe's ready reckoner. The Egyptians were always such poor fellows at adding up that they sent their figures in a dial to the local scribe to work out.

But, S. R. Glanville, translator of Egyptian hieroglyphics, has spotted the old story.

"This," he said, "is a sheet of schoolboy's addition sums. Moreover, one of the sums is wrong."

The Great American Bird

The great American bird, for the most practical of all utilitarian purposes, is the common, everyday, barnyard hen. She lays 729 eggs every year—that is to say, in modern, stimulated mass production, she generally produces that many eggs in the country at large every second of every day in the year! Biddy is the best bird.—Savannah News.

day and sleep at night. We hardly see each other and don't find it at all inconvenient not to be able to talk. When we want to converse we can always find somebody handy to interpret."

Observers of these speechless matings point out that they have certain striking advantages over the ordinary sort. There is no chance for a quarrel, because neither can start it. Intellectual friction isn't likely to develop where there is no exchange of views. Neither can be bored with the other's conversation. Ill feeling is avoided by the absence of temptation to "have the last word," for where there isn't any first word there can't very well be a last one.

On the other hand, the wife has to go out and tell the neighbors when she detects several pesos missing from the weekly pay envelope. There is no chance to settle the matter within the family circle. Also, if the husband feels that the food isn't appearing fast enough or in sufficient quantity, he is handicapped in making his ideas known.

Sizing Up Solons

Washington.—Measurement of members of the national house and senate is to be attempted during the present term of congress by Dr. Arthur Macdonald, anthropologist, in an effort to determine the physical status of the American people.

Doctor Macdonald, author of scientific book, will try also to arrive at mental and physical proportions of the citizenry of 30 other nations through similar examination of their legislative bodies, which he is endeavoring to arrange with the co-operation of the State department.

He believes members of congress to represent, both mentally and physically, the American people.

The anthropologist purposes also to compare various groups of congressmen as to legislative ability, predominant lineage, sociological condition and physical status, after which he will calculate the relation between these factors.

He hopes that the work may lead in which we live. Even though we are far beyond school age and may not have anyone in our family for whose education we are responsible, we would be very sorry not to have a good school system in our community. But here, I am sometimes afraid, we shove the basket over toward the end of the pole which the school board is supporting, or toward those who seem more closely concerned with school affairs and walk along carrying a very light weight of educational responsibility. We don't feel much call to keep up our end of the load.

There's the church, too. Of course, we believe in the church, and we wouldn't live in a town without one. We are strong for it, all of us, but too often we let the women or those who seem to have nothing else to do look after the church. Maybe we chip in occasionally when the every-member canvass is on—maybe we feel too many other obligations pressing—but we are inclined to slip the basket toward the other end of the pole.

There is the political situation; there is the failure of those in authority to enforce the laws. We don't like the way things are going, but we have elected officials to take charge of these matters—some of us at least voted at the last election—and it is their business to carry the load—so we push the basket slyly in their direction.

What a wonderful world it would be if every one would see to it that he kept his end up.

GIRLHOOD TO MOTHERHOOD

Iowa Woman Found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Always Helpful

Vinton, Iowa.—"When I was seven years old I had to stay at home from school. I finally had to quit school, I was so weak. I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children, and I have taken it before each one was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."—Mrs. FRANK SELLES, 610 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

Many girls in the fourth generation are learning through their own personal experiences the beneficial effects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mothers who took it when they were young are glad to recommend it to their daughters.

For over half a century, women have praised this reliable medicine.

IDEAL WAY TO COOK A SIRLOIN STEAK

Broiled Porterhouse Steak.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The ideal way to cook a juicy, tender steak from a choice cut of beef, such as the porterhouse or sirloin, is to broil it over a coal or wood fire. As many people have to cook with gas or kerosene as fuel, this is not often practicable. With a stove of either type, however, it is possible to cook deliciously, provided one understands the method of handling juicy, tender meats. The main point, says the bureau of home economics, is to sear over the outside rapidly, at a high temperature to prevent the escape of the juices, and then to continue cooking the meat evenly at a reduced temperature by turning it from side to side until it is done.

To panbroil a steak over a kerosene flame or gas, heat a skillet very hot, grease it lightly with a piece of suet, and sear each side. In lifting it from the pan to turn it, use two forks, and do not pierce the surface of the steak or the juices will escape and the steak will be dry and tasteless. Do not season with salt and pepper until the steak is ready to serve. Cook it at a lower heat after it has been seared, until it is done as you like it—rare or medium well-done.

A steak may also be cooked in the broiling oven of a gas stove. Have the oven well heated before the steak is put in, sear the steak on each side as in other methods of cooking, and take the same care not to let the juices escape. Any fat or meat juice in the skillet or broiling pan is usually poured over the steak to be served with it.

Other methods of cooking are better for cuts of beef that are less tender, such as the round or short steaks.

CORNERED BEEF IS MADE AT HOME

Cheaper Cuts of Meat Are Generally Made Use Of.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cheaper cuts of meat, such as the plate, rump and chuck, are generally used in making corned beef. Meat from fat animals makes better corned beef than that from thinner animals. The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for making corned beef on the farm:

Cut the beef into pieces five or six inches square. These pieces should be of uniform thickness so that they may be packed in even layers in the barrel. When the meat is thoroughly cooled it should be corned as soon as possible, for meat which has begun to spoil is unwholesome and will probably sour during the curing process. Under no circumstances should meat be put in cure while in a frozen condition.

A standard recipe is: Eight pounds salt, two pounds sugar, two ounces saltpeter, five gallons water per 100 pounds green meat. When it is desired to corn only a small quantity of beef for home use, the brine is made in the same proportions, and after the meat has been salted overnight, sufficient brine is used to cover the pieces completely. In salting overnight, sprinkle a layer of salt quarter inch deep over the bottom of the vessel, pack the cuts of meat as thickly as possible, then add salt on top.

If the meat has been corned during the winter and must be kept into the summer season, it is advisable to watch the brine closely during the spring, as it is more liable to spoil at that time than at any other season. If the brine appears to be rosy, the pieces of meat should be removed and vigorously washed off with a stiff brush and hot water, then repacked and covered with new brine. The brine should be kept in a cool place, as the sugar in the brine has a tendency to ferment. To cure thoroughly the meat should be kept in the brine 28 to 40 days. Plates will be quite palatable after ten days in cure. Meat removed from the brine should be hung up and allowed to drain thoroughly before wrapping or smoking.

Spanish or Creole Sauce Excellent With Omelet

An excellent sauce to serve with omelet, with boiled rice or potatoes, or stewed meats, or such fish as cod, haddock, or halibut is known as Spanish, or Creole sauce. It requires a number of ingredients, but it often happens that many of them will be on hand. The directions for making it are given by the bureau of home economics.

Spanish or Creole Sauce.
2 cups canned tomatoes
2 tbs. chopped onion
1 chopped green pepper or canned pimento
1/2 cup chopped celery
2 tbs. butter
2 tsp. minced parsley
4 tbs. minced ham or bacon
1 bay leaf
1 tbs. flour
Salt and pepper to taste

Add the onion to the butter and cook it until it is tender and yellow. Add all the other ingredients except the minced ham or bacon and the flour, and simmer for half an hour. Remove the bay leaf. Blend the flour with a little melted butter and add to the sauce. Cook for five or ten minutes longer, add the ham or bacon, and serve at once.

Oxtails as a Meat for Tasty Stew Are Favored

Many people do not know oxtails as a meat for a tasty stew are the foundation of a very good soup. The recipe below, which has been tested by the bureau of home economics, provides for making a stew with a good deal of rich gravy. If less gravy is desired, part of the water in which the oxtails are cooked may be reserved for a soup, with some of the vegetables and the water in which they are boiled. When serving oxtail soup, put a thin half slice of lemon and a half teaspoonful of chopped parsley in each soup plate.

Oxtail Soup.
1 oxtail
2 1/2 quarts water
4 carrots, diced
2 turnips, diced
2 onions, sliced
1 large potato, diced
2 tbs. butter
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce or other seasoning
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tbs. parsley, chopped fine
Slices of lemon

Wash the oxtail, cut in short lengths, and brown it in its own fat. Cook the onions in the butter, add to the meat with 1 1/2 quarts of water, and simmer until the meat is tender, about three or four hours. In the meantime, cook the carrots and turnips for ten minutes in one quart of the water and add to the meat, with the water in which they are cooked. Add the potatoes, the sauce, and the salt and pepper. When the vegetables are soft, thicken the stew with a small quantity of flour mixed with a little cold water to a smooth paste. Cook until thickened. Sprinkle with the parsley and garnish with slices of lemon.

Prunes Ever in Season for Delicious Dessert

Prunes lend themselves to many delicious desserts that can be made of ingredients on hand in every pantry. No matter how remote you may be from the nearest store, you could easily make the prune pudding without having to get a single item specially, for who does not keep her supply of sugar, cornstarch, eggs, spices and flavors, and even prunes always available? From the bureau of home economics the following directions are sent for making this excellent and simple dessert:

Prune Pudding.
2 cups water
1/2 lb. dried prunes
1/2 cup sugar
2 egg yolks
2 tbs. sugar
2 tbs. cornstarch
1/4 tsp. vanilla
1/4 tsp. salt
2 egg whites
1/2 tsp. cinnamon.

Wash the prunes, and soak them overnight in the water, then cook them in the same water until tender. Remove the stones and cut the prunes in small pieces. To the prunes add the 1/2 cupful of sugar, the salt, and the cornstarch, which has been mixed with some of the prune juice. Cook for twenty minutes in a double boiler. Pour this mixture into the egg yolks, add the vanilla and cinnamon, and mix well. Place in a greased baking dish and cover with the meringue made with the egg whites and the two tablespoonfuls of the sugar. Bake in a moderate oven until the meringue is brown. Serve hot or cold.

Meats and Relishes

Roast lamb, mint sauce. Roast turkey, cranberry sauce. Roast goose, apple sauce. Venison or wild ducks, black currant jelly. Broiled fresh mackerel, sauce of stewed gooseberries.

Community Building

Indiana Town Proud of Art Development

Richmond, a small city in southeastern Indiana, is an example for other cities because of its development of art.

Richmond is the only city in the United States to boast of a real community art gallery, free to the people, which receives annual support from the department of education and which is an actual part of its educational plans and equipment. The Richmond Art association, which made this possible, had its thirty-first anniversary a short time ago. Through its efforts the public schools have a broad art course with a supervisor and nine special teachers. Student art leagues have been formed for special study in the junior and senior high schools. Saturday morning classes are held for talented children and both drawing and painting classes for adults.

These influences, added to the fine exhibits held annually in the gallery, have produced a group of 30 painters whose work is hung in the annual exhibits by Richmond painters and in important exhibits elsewhere.

The art movement in Richmond began in 1897 when Mrs. Melville F. Johnston secured the use of the school building for free educational art exhibits. Fourteen years later she established the present gallery in the high school, rooms being specially built for this purpose. A circuit of exhibits was at first secured and excellent works were loaned by collectors in all the large cities. From this start official support was soon secured and the city occupies an enviable place among its sister cities—Anna Steese Richardson in the Woman's Home Companion.

Seeking All Methods of Civic Improvement

Eighteen Wisconsin cities are no longer satisfied to boast of having the "finest town in the state"; they are now conducting investigations to ascertain just how they measure up with other cities and with minimum standards established by authorities in all the phases of civic life, including education, industry, municipal government, recreation, city planning, social work, library, town and country relations and religion.

This information is from Aubrey Williams, Madison, general secretary of the Wisconsin conference of social work, under whose guidance and leadership the investigations are conducted.

The survey is not, Mr. Williams explains, made by "imported experts" but by citizens of the community who wish to find out for themselves in just what ways their city excels, and just what it needs to make it a better "home town."

Transplanting Trees

The owner of a new home not blessed with shade trees need not wait the passing of slow years if he is willing to expend the not inconsiderable sum necessary to transplant ready-grown shade trees. However, the difference between a treeless lot with a house on it and an embowered home is really worth considerable outlay.

To prepare a large tree for removal a deep trench should be dug around it from 5 to 7 feet from the base and worked under so as to enable all the smaller roots to be cut off without injury to the bole. The ends of the roots should be cut smooth and the tree carefully underlined with a pick, care being taken to remove the soil with as little injury as possible to the young fibers. The tree should then be drawn over until the tap root can be cut. Bagging should be used to wrap the ball of earth and roots, which can then be loaded on a stone wagon.

Check on Contractors

One large producer of suburban homes in Long Island, adjacent to New York, uses a novel method of guaranteeing good construction in his houses.

After plans are approved construction progress pictures are taken of every step in the erection of the houses. These become an integral part of the deed when the ultimate purchaser takes possession. They form a chronological sequence of the types of materials used; the time needed to complete various operations; the state of the weather which prevailed day by day during the construction period. By this "foolproof" method, the builder claims, the owner is enabled to directly trace any imperfection of building which may crop up and to assign the job of making it good to the particular sub-contractor who performed the faulty work.

Town's Patience Ended

North Wales (Pa.) residents enthusiastically endorsed the action of their town council in framing an ordinance to penalize owners of "vacant lots" which become eyesores because of weeds.

It was declared that virtually all such properties were owned by persons who lived out of town, and repeated efforts to bring about improvement through appealing to pride resulted in failures.

Consolation Found in Firm Religious Belief

I envy no quality of mind or intellect in others—not genius, power, wit, or fancy; but if I could choose what would be most delightful, and I believe most useful to me, I should prefer a firm religious belief to every other blessing, for it makes life a discipline of goodness, creates new hopes when all earthly hopes vanish; and throws over the decay, the destruction of existence, the most gorgeous of all lights; awakens life, even in death, and from corruption and decay calls up beauty and divinity; makes an instrument of torture and of shame the ladder of ascent to paradise; and far above all combination of earthly hopes, calls up the most delightful visions, palms and amaranths, the gardens of the blessed; the security of everlasting joys, where the sensualist and skeptic view only gloom, decay and annihilation.—Sir Humphrey Davy.

IDLE ISLAND

CHAPTER I

It might have been a tall, straight, slim young boy who stood alone, far up in the bow of the white steamer as she nosed from island to island in her run up Casco bay; boylike the feet planted squarely in sturdy English walking boots, the hands thrust deep into the pockets of smartly tailored knickers; boylike the set of the straight shoulders in the wine-red suede jacket with the soft silk mannish collar and tie showing at the throat; boylike most of all the sleek bobbed head in jaunty leather hat. But all the boyish cast of Gay Delane was given the lie by the softness of her slender face, the delicacy of her throat as it curved into the mannish collar, the dark weariness of her grave eyes, the tired drooping of her fine red lips.

The rest that Gay Delane came seeking in the Northland, she had earned indeed. Years of willful slavery to faint brushes and palette, dogged persistence at her easel in the face of physical exhaustion, led inevitably to relinquishment of hopes, ambitions and plans, and Gay Delane was obliged to turn the key at last upon her pretty studio in Greenwich Village and go in search of recreating rest among the cooling breezes along the pine-girdled coast of the North.

Her slender sturdy foot was first upon the gangplank, and it was she who led the stream of eager tourists ashore, making her way with impatiently quick assurance to the head car of a line of waiting taxis. Her brisk gesture of intent to ride brought up a tall, fair, freckled lad, who came with slow but willing gait, an ambling roll to his locomotion that was almost seaworthy.

"I want to look at cottages," she said briskly.

"Well—all right," he assented slowly, in the soft New England drawl that curiously harmonized with his walk. Gay thought. He cranked the car and slid into the driver's seat. Gay swung up beside him.

"Now, I'll tell you exactly what I want," she began, "and you can take me to it. A small cottage, preferably, set by itself somewhere, with trees around it, and near the water. Quiet, very quiet. I am going to sleep for two weeks. If I can't find a cottage, I will take a suite of rooms in a private house. With an old couple, if possible, deaf and dumb and a bit crippled, if you have them. No hotel, no boarding house, no summer colony. Now, there it is. First choice, small, quiet, furnished cottage. I don't care if it is only a shed, if it is quiet, and cool, and alone."

"Well, now, that ought to be easy," he said slowly. "How many are there of you?"

"One. Me. Just myself, no more."

"You don't want a house all by yourself?"

All of outraged New England convention spoke in his slow low voice.

"Oh, yes, I do. Not a very big house, but a house."

"But you can't stay nights in a house by yourself—"

Gay cut in briskly: "Now, the chances are that I know what I want better than you do. All you have to do is to find it." Then, as she noticed that his eyes fell and a slow flush rose in his fair face at her rebuke, she added pleasantly: "I have lived alone for eight years. In New York, too, that den of depravity. I fancy there is no more rampant danger here than there."

"Another one of them nutty New Yorkers," the boy thought, but his impassive face did not betray him. He drove slowly from house to house, descending on their various virtues, decrying their obvious faults, specifying the number of rooms, the condition of the plumbing and the amount of rent.

Gay was difficult to suit. While her own notion of what she wanted was indefinite enough, she was quick to decide what she did not want. One cottage was too close to neighbors, one was in a swampy marsh, one looked cockroachy.

"I never heard tell of any cockroaches there," he said thoughtfully. "Seems like folks would have mentioned it."

But Gay waved him on.

"There's the Lone Pine," he reflected at last, hard pressed for further resources. "But it's off by itself on the hill, and at the edge of the woods. You'd be afraid there. But it's high and it looks out to sea."

"The Lone Pine," she repeated, and her voice warmed. "I feel the vibration of a responsive chord. Lead me to it."

He stopped the car at last in a narrow lane. A grassy slope rose steeply beyond a small orchard, and crowning the hill, seeming a growth of the rocks themselves like a giant mushroom, a small cottage showed in the fringe of a little wood.

Gay breathed a rapturous "Ah!" She got out without a word, and the lad followed her through the orchard.

"I will have it," she said, looking up with joy in her eyes, "I will have it if I have to commit murder. Those birches are going to sentinel my sleep. Those rocks shall be my anchorage. Murder, arson, theft—what are these to me? The Lone Pine will give me sleep."

"Well, now," he said deprecatingly, with a sidelong look at her flushing face.

The cottage was built of weather-stained shingle and natural rock, and stood on a ledge where the grassy slope dwindled to solid stone. Before its door stood one twisted, craggy pine, and behind it, so that indeed it stood in its very portal, the little forest of birch and pine rustled and shivered in the sea breeze.

The doors of the cottage were closed and their knocking produced no answer. The lad was loath to accept this inadmission. He knocked and knocked, frowning dissatisfaction at the unfriendly silence.

"Oh, there's nobody here," Gay protested. "Our pounding would have awakened the—the druids by this time."

"She must be here," he insisted. "She's always here. Auntalmiry!" he called. "Auntalmiry!"

Gay laughed at his persistence. "If she's here, she's deaf," she said, and walked around the cottage, from window to window, peering in. And the more her spying showed her, the more warmly she wanted it.

The lower floor of the cottage consisted of one large room, the small kitchen being no more than a glassed-in porch adjoining. It was lined throughout with pine, darkly stained. Windows opened on the four sides of it, to the forest, to the orchard slope and the valley, to the quiet bay, and to the full Atlantic and the farther islands. The room was chastely furnished, with occasional bright splashes of color on the walls or in the upholstery. The fireplace was wide and high, built of island stone, with corner benches of the dark pine.

"A darling fireplace," Gay exclaimed.

"And the more her spying showed her, the more warmly she wanted it."

marched before him down the grassy slope and through the orchard.

But he reassured her about the cottage. He said the Captain would surely rent it, because it was for rent naturally, that settled it. If Gay wanted it, it was hers. And Gay wanted it.

The house to which he took her was but a short distance up the same lane.

"If you make the deal with the Captain you'll get it cheaper," he cautioned her. "But they may try to wish you off on Miss Alice, 'cause she's the administrator, and she holds out for more money. You ask for the Captain and stick to it. You'd better go to the kitchen door, miss. If you go to the front door they'll think you're company."

Gay nodded back at him, smiling and crossed a velvet lawn to the kitchen door which was opened to her touch by a little old man, very gray, very frail, very gentle. If he felt surprise at sight of the boyish girl in khaki gray and red leather on his step he gave no sign, but in a soft and gentle voice he greeted her.

"May I speak to the Captain?" she began brightly.

"Well, now, I guess you can, seein' I'm the Captain myself," he said sociably, and stepped out discreetly to the porch, making as if to close the door behind him.

But his attempted secrecy failed. The closing door was suddenly arrested.

A firm hand appeared in the aperture, and closed upon his arm. The Captain looked back with gentle impatience.

"Lady wishes to consult with me—personally—" he protested mildly.

"Now, Gram, you wouldn't keep the lady standing," remonstrated a firm voice from within. And the door opened, the Captain was drawn back to the kitchen.

"Come right in, miss, and do excuse our looks, won't you? But it is right in the midst of cleaning and—"

Gay lightly nodded away the need for apology, and sat down on the edge of a little straight chair beside the stove, while the Captain returned to his own big rocker by the window between two cats and a nudge dog, who curled his thick lips over his teeth in resentment at this intrusion in his kitchen. The three women retired at once to their work in different parts of the room, and the Captain filled his pipe.

At Gay's eager inquiry he admitted his ownership of the Lone Pine, agreed that it was for rent, and said of course she could have it. Gay beamed upon him joyously, beamed at the unconscious backs of the three women, who for all their immersion in their household tasks, had missed not so much as a syllable of talk, nor a thread of fringe on Gay's smart knickers.

Suddenly a sharp knock on the kitchen door, which immediately opened from without, and before either face or form appeared, a brisk voice called with a great assumption of good cheer:

"Good morning, all!"

The words were followed by a woman, an elderly, but tall and straight, with a face which had carefully schooled its every line to dogged optimism.

"Good morning, all," she repeated, on her full appearance, and added, rather sternly, "Good morning, John."

Then she turned to Gay with elaborate affability. "Good morning. I saw you looking at the Lone Pine, and when you came on here I knew you wanted it, so I came right over. How lucky you are—the dear little cottage! And cheap, my dear, dirt cheap. Do you want it for the entire season?"

"Well, yes, I think so," Gay turned

Solving One Problem of the Crowded City

"I shall be glad to see Hektor, your big Saint Bernard, again," said the visitor to the suburbs as the driver rolled along.

"Had to get rid of that dog," said the modern suburbanite crisply.

"Bite somebody?"

"No, but he took up too much space. Saint Bernard's almost as big as a calf. Belongs to past age, when people had barnyards and real estate wasn't so valuable. A one-family dog house is economic waste nowadays."

"One-family dog house? You don't mean to say—"

"Surely not. Had dog house remodeled when I got rid of Hektor. Found, as I expected, that if I got a compact terrier there'd be a nice apartment for a still smaller dog on the top floor. Got good top-floor tenant for my own house; rent out half of garage; why not make dog house pay its own way?"

"And does it?"

"You bet it does. Let top floor to a Pekinese. Belongs to man down street who hasn't room even for a bird cage."—Ladies Home Journal.

Language of Diplomacy

The French language was used extensively in Europe in the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries. The French literature was greatly developed and spread throughout the various countries, and persons of culture studied the language in order to be able to read the literature. Many foreign students were attracted to the University of Paris, and this also helped to spread the language. As a language for treaties and foreign intercourse among nations, French became general in the time of Louis XIV.

English Cathedral City

Rochester is a cathedral city of Kent, England, on the right bank of the Medway. It really forms one large town together with Chatham and Strood. Charles Dickens, who lived at Gad's Hill, three miles from Rochester, frequently introduces the city into his novels.

doubtfully toward the Captain, who had acknowledged ownership. "But it seems to be occupied—"

"Oh, no," he denied promptly, and for all his slowness, and his gentleness, he was deft in the insertion of his opinion. "Not yet. But I never worry about that cottage, not that one. It always rents. Popular, the Lone Pine. Well built, snug—like a boat, something like a boat, but of course a boat now—"

The oratorical voice cut in upon him. "A most desirable cottage. Only fifty dollars a month, my dear. Only fifty."

"It ain't with more'n forty-five," said the Captain gently. "Now Alice, she don't want to pay fifty a month. 'Tain't with fifty a month. We never got fifty for it yet. The young lady—"

"John. Fifty dollars. I am the administrator. My sister, Miss Andover, Miss Alice Andover."

"The administrator," she amended grandly, trying vainly to frown her brother into silence. "The cottage has been thoroughly renovated, and modern improvements installed. It is well furnished, as you know. I saw you looking in the windows. It has electric lights, fireplace, bath—only fifty a month. My dear, think of the view. Think of—the fireplace. My dear, it will break your heart to leave the place. Perhaps you can stay through September. Glorious in September, glorious."

Regardless of the mooted five dollars, Gay's mind was made up. She wanted the Lone Pine. She knew that she could never rest until she felt the pillows in its window couch beneath her head. She explained that she had left her bags at the hotel in the city, and asked if the cottage could be ready for her arrival on the first boat the next morning. The administrator, torn between glowing at Gay, and glowering at her brother, assured her that all would be in readiness.

"Oh, my dear, it is a happy summer before you," she crooned. And then, with one of her swift changes from soft to severe, she turned to the Captain. "John, you go right down and tell Auntalmiry to move into the Apple Tree."

At Gay's start the Captain shook with soundless chuckles, and the administrator lapsed into a severe smile.

"It ain't a tree, child, it ain't a tree," he explained. "It's our house. Down in the orchard. We name all our houses for trees, or such. We've got an Acorn, and a Cherry Stone, and a Persian Peach—"

"John! Go tell Auntalmiry."

John reached beneath his big rocker and pulled out a dusty battered cap, turned it upside down to empty it of two kittens asleep therein.

"I can't go now, Alice," he objected. "Not just this minute. I got to go right up to Mrs. Willoughby's cottage and fix that leaky roof of hers."

His eyes strayed to the clock on the kitchen wall. It was two-thirty. "Gosh'amighty, I promised Mrs. Willoughby I'd be there at one sharp. Good-by, miss. You'll like that cottage, but if ain't with more'n forty-five."

"John Wallace. Tell Auntalmiry—" "Looks like rain, miss—think! I should 'a' fixed that roof yesterday, or day before. Seems like there's so many things to do that I just naturally don't get at any of 'em. Good-by miss. I'll come and see you."

As the door closed beneath the gentle, frail, dignified little figure, the strong voice called in his wake:

"John—Auntalmiry—" "She was an attractive woman, admirable, rather, Mrs. Andover, tastefully dressed, with a general air of well-being, well-keptness. She dismissed her brother with a wave of the hand, and smiled upon Gay with more sparkling joy that she was relieved of the necessity of supporting his softness with her Herculean firmness."

As an administrator, she was direct, efficient and businesslike. In return for Gay's check, she sat down at the kitchen table and took a velvet bag on her wrist took out a fountain pen and a book of receipt forms, one of which she filled in, carefully, and handed to Gay with a set of keys for the cottage.

"And if you can stay in September, you will love it," she said warmly. "You will adore it. When will the rest of your family be up?"

"There is no family. I am alone."

"You—you—you are going to live alone—in a house? Without a man, or—saybody?"

"It is better than living with a man who doesn't belong to me. Is it not? Are there no other women who live alone on the island?"

"Well—there are a few. But they are—old."

"Less able to protect themselves, then, than I. But are they all old? Every one? Think hard."

"Well, there are one or two," she confessed reluctantly. "Not so very old. But they are—queer."

"Oh, so am I," said Gay sturdily. "Very queer indeed."

Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1902 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated!

Look at Tongue

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, fretful, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, he has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a tea-spoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without gripping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruit laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

COMPANIONATE MARRIAGES

These are queer days indeed, when young men and women don't get married "for keeps" and those that do often have a mental reservation on the "until death do us part" clause.

In Kansas the other day a slip of a girl and a boy who is just learning to use a safety razor took a fling at what newspapers say was "companionate" marriage. The details are not clear, but it seems that this young woman and what she believes to be the man of her choice will give marriage a tryout, much after the fashion of a candidate for an athletic team, and if it is a fluke, they will call it a day and quit.

Perhaps that's all right, but there is ground for reasonable doubt. A little less marriage for fun and more marriage in dead earnest might be a drag on the divorce market and bring back more of the old fashioned weddings where matrimony is entered into with a full understanding of what it means.

Of course plenty of honest to goodness marriages are taking place right along. They don't get press agented and the bride and bridegroom don't get their pictures in the paper. We see them in every community among the solid, substantial people, many happy cases of matrimony where the boy and girl "live happily ever afterwards."

A lurking suspicion exists that the "companionate marriage" in Kansas was a bit of seeking after publicity by others than the principals. It at least gave the father of the bride, who is some sort of a cultist with which America is overburdened, an opportunity to air his views on the subject of our "old fashioned" marriage business too seriously.---Dawson County Journal.

Reports indicate that most of the winter will pass before the ill-fated submarine S-4 is brought to the surface and the bodies of the men who went down with her are taken from their prison of death. Six men were known to be alive after the crash that sent the submarine to the bottom. If they could have been rescued in a reasonable time they would all be alive today. But it will take three months or more, according to navy officials, to raise the boat. No land lubber should attempt to give advice on how to raise a sunken submarine but he can reserve the right of comparison and when we compare the efficiency of our navy in other respects with their efficiency in salvaging sunken submarines the navy suffers by comparison. A navy that is second to none in the whole world should be ashamed of the fact that it can't bring a sunken submarine to the surface in less than three months time, the elements notwithstanding. Some authority suggested that bands could be placed around the sub with rings attached in which could be fastened chains or cables for raising the boat. No official so far has said that this would be impracticable and on the face of it it looks entirely feasible. For the first thing to be done in raising the S-4 would be tunneling under the hull in order to get chains or cables under the boat. This must be done by divers and is a dangerous and lengthy task. The navy has room for improvement in raising sunken boats in which men are imprisoned.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic, or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor. Always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Lesson for January 15

JESUS AND SINNERS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Forgives a Sinner.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Heals and Forgives.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows His Sympathy and Power.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Power to Make Whole.

I. Jesus Preaching the Word (vv. 1, 2).

1. The surging crowd (v. 2).
So great was the crowd gathered about the house where Jesus was stopping, that there was no room to receive them. As soon as it was noised about that Jesus was in the house, the multitudes gathered.

2. What Jesus preached unto them (v. 2).

He preached unto them the Word of God. He always preached the Word before He wrought miracles, for to make known the will of God was His supreme mission. Miracles were not an end in themselves, but to authenticate His work. The people came, some to be healed, and some out of curiosity. He gave them that which they needed, regardless of the motive which actuated their coming.

11. Jesus Forgiving Sins (vv. 3-5)

The man brought to Him was suffering from the dread disease of palsy, but his most deadly affliction was that of sin. This miracle was wrought by Jesus in confirmation of His message.

1. Faith coming to Jesus (v. 3).

The actuating impulse of the palsied man and the four friends who carried him was faith.

2. Faith overcoming difficulties (v. 4).

Though prevented by the crowd from coming to Jesus, they ascended the outer stairway and let the afflicted man down through the roof.

3. Faith rewarded (v. 5).

No word was uttered either by the paralytic or his bearers. Their action was enough. The paralytic got more than he expected. He desired healing of the body and he got bodily healing plus forgiveness of sins.

111. Jesus Answering the Scribes (vv. 6-10).

1. Their objections (vv. 6, 7). They asked:

(1) Why does He thus speak? (2) Who can forgive sin?

They were entirely right in their reasonings that only God can forgive sins. Their blunder was in not perceiving Him to be God.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 8-10).

He knew their inner thoughts and reasonings and manifested unto them His essential deity in that He had power to know their thoughts. He inquired, "Which is easier to say, thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, arise and take up thy bed and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, He saith to the sick of the palsy, I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house." He was willing that His power in the invisible realm should be tested by His power in the visible.

IV. Jesus Healing the Paralytic (vv. 11, 12).

1. His healing was by the direct method—speaking the Word (v. 11). Christ's words are enough. With the command was given the strength to obey. That which Christ commands He gives the strength to perform.

2. The obedience of the man (v. 12).

He immediately arose, took up his bed and went forth before them all. The poor helpless man walked away with his bed upon his shoulder.

3. The people were amazed, and glorified God (v. 12). They said, "We never saw it on this fashion."

V. Jesus Eating With Publicans and Sinners (vv. 13-17).

1. The call of Levi (v. 14). Levi was a tax-gatherer under the Roman government. As Jesus passed by, He commanded Levi to leave his business and follow Him.

2. Jesus dining in Levi's house (v. 15). It seems that Levi, when he found the Savior, invited many of his business associates to eat with him. This gave an opportunity to Jesus to come into touch with these sinners.

3. The perplexed scribes and pharisees (v. 16). They asked, "How is it that He eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?"

4. Jesus' reply (v. 17). "They that are whole have no need of the physician. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

Five per cent of the automobile accidents of the country are caused by persons who walk into the sides of moving machines. Like automobiles running into the sides of trains.

NEW WHIPPET CAR A MOTOR MARVEL

One of the sensations in the automobile world is the perfected "Whippet" produced by the Willys-Overland, Inc., and it is direct evidence that John N. Willys, president of the corporation, proposes to make good on his declaration that "there can be no monopoly in the light car field." The perfected car, and the price at which it is offered, placing it directly in competition with the lowest priced cars, has centered the eyes of the automobile industry and the motor car world in general on the enterprising Toledo manufacturer. It makes him the first manufacturer of automobiles to enter the price field heretofore exclusive to but one light car manufacturer.

The "Whippet," which has been in production for more than 18 months, holds the national fuel economy record of 43.28 miles to the gallon in a test between Los Angeles and New York City, covering a distance of 3,550 miles, under official observation of the A. A. A. In a speed test on Rockingham Speedway, Salem, N. H., a "Whippet" recently attained a speed of 71.6 miles an hour over a 50-mile route.

The same engine that has accomplished these records is the power plant employed in the perfected "Whippet," now offered at the lowest price in the history of Willys-Overland. The "Whippet" was the first light car to be equipped with four wheel brakes, setting a new trend in the light car field. The braking area of the "Whippet" brakes is greater than any other light car.

Details of the perfected "Whippet" disclose a wider range of colors, employment of full crown fenders, a new cadet sun visor that imparts a smart military effect, and the addition of automatic windshield cleaner, rear view mirror, and a combination rear driving light and stop light. These additions make the "Whippet" the most fully equipped light car built in the four cylinder field.

Various Trades Offer Occupation to Blind

Blind men are employed in many engineering factories. In one German electrical concern, says the annual report of the National Institute for the Blind, more than one hundred sightless people are employed, while double that number are being trained. Blindness, it is said, is no hindrance to a man looking after two or even three automatic machines. The average earning capacity of a blind operative in these works is considered to be about 80 per cent of that of a normal-sighted man.

Ninety blind persons employed in French engineering trades earn about 85 per cent of full wages. A motor factory in America employs 44 blind men, who are given the work for which they seem most competent.

Nature's Economy

Inventions during the next two or three centuries will, in the opinion of many experts, probably be in the direction of imitations of the wonderful economy and the simple, direct methods of nature. Take the electric eel as an example. Its electric organ is in no sense a storage battery, but a contrivance by which electric energy is liberated at the moment when it is required. At rest, the organ shows so small an electromotive force that a good galvanometer is required to detect it, but a sudden nervous impulse from the eel's spinal cord raises a potential of many volts, with very little heat, and so small an expenditure of matter as to defy the most expert chemist to weigh it. Fireflies, glow-worms and many deep sea fishes produce light without heat, at a cost which would make the price of a wax candle an extravagant outlay.

Feet and Talking

Grandfathers on Vacation

Migratory Bird Treaty

A resident of Ohio, who had previously raised wild fowl under a federal permit, but failed to submit the required report of operations and continued to make sales and shipments without renewal of the permit, was arraigned in Federal court at Toledo, Ohio, found guilty, and fined $300 and costs.

To engage in the business of rearing and selling migratory waterfowl, says the bureau of biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture, it is first necessary to obtain a permit from the secretary of agriculture and then to comply with all requirements of state law.

These requirements are made under the migratory bird treaty act regulations to protect and perpetuate migratory species of birds passing each year between the United States and Canada.

Lets the World Go By

For the seventy-fourth consecutive season, Mrs. Richard T. Auchmuty of New York has arrived at her summer home, the Dormers, on the Lenox-Pittsfield road. She has never owned an automobile, has no listed telephone, no electric lights, no steam heat in her villa, nor a radio. She prefers to drive over the wooded roads in an open victoria. Glowing fagots in her fireplaces and kerosene lamps furnish heat and light. She is in her ninetieth year.—Boston Globe.

Hen Lays Twin Eggs

A hen in Ulster lays two eggs at a time, sometimes three. The owner explains this by saying that the hen, a last year's pullet, had sunstroke when a month old. Since it has grown up the hen has on four days a week laid two eggs at a time, and has twice laid three.

Canadian Lakes Beautiful

Among the seven reservations set aside by the government of Canada in the Rocky mountains there is none more beautiful than Waterton Lakes National park, which lies on the eastern slope of the Rockies where these mountains approach the international boundary. The park forms a rough square with a long L-shaped section added to the east, the whole having an area of about 220 square miles.

Newest American Sport

Critic-baiting has become an even rarer and more typical American sport than framing prize fights or fixing horse races and championship baseball games. The man who practices professional criticism in this year of our Lord lives constantly in a metaphorical gaschouse district, his head and seat in imminent prospect of bash and boot.—George Jean Nathan in Vanity Fair.

Profit by Past Errors

The past is gone, and gone forever. You may learn by your mistakes, but do not be guilty of the sin of constantly worrying over them. Turn your face toward the future. Give your mistakes and blunders a decent burial in the past, and let the memory of them furnish you with implements of industry by which you may operate the gold mine of future possibilities.—Exchange.

Fowls in Biblical Times

Partridges are noted in the Old Testament. The fatted fowl (1 Kings, 4:23) is interpreted as either goose or duck. Cocks and hens were brought from Persia two or three centuries before Christ. A tomb at Marissa of about 200 B. C. has a good representation of a crowing cock. Sparrows and other "twittering birds" were also used for food.

Big 4-wheel Brakes—more braking surface per pound of car weight than any other light car. You can stop from 40 miles an hour within 51 feet.

Rear Gasoline Tank—for utmost safety—with vacuum fuel feed. This costs more to build, but is much safer.

Increased Speed—Whippet superiority is also expressed in greater—and safer—speed; 55 to 60 miles per hour, and many owners say 65.

Greater Gasoline Economy—Whippet holds the A. A. A. Coast-to-Coast economy record of 43.28 miles per gallon.

Other Important Features—164 inches of springs, full force feed lubrication, faster acceleration, silent timing chain, longer leg room, adjustable steering wheel, lower center of gravity, single plate clutch, longer connecting rods, banjo-type rear axle housing with removable shaft, are among the many quality car features of the Whippet.

No Evolution As To Facts

Truth does not change! Styles, customs, ways and means of doing business may vary with the passing of time, but, after all, soundness, safety, conservatism and common sense are vital to success, just as always.

You will appreciate our operating in that belief.

Baileyboro News

Since our last items the weather has moderated considerably and those who have cotton to gather have taken advantage of the few nice days we've had. Several are done and it won't be long until cotton will all be out.

Some of our energetic farmers have begun to put up their land. We have't much season for listing the land and it might be a good idea to put up as much land as possible while they can.

Mr Stringer, our principal, spent the week end with his wife and children over at Demmitt, Texas.

Miss Kropff, one of our lady teachers, spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents north of Muleshoe.

Mr. Roy Bayless had business over at Muleshoe last Saturday.

Mr. J. W. Bayless and Mr. J. D. Bayless were among those who were trading in Muleshoe Saturday.

Mr. Charley Durham and wife came in from Amarillo, where they had been visiting relatives during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Huckabee have moved to Baileyboro where they will have charge of the garage and filling station. Mr. Huckabee is a very energetic young man and we wish him good luck in his new vocation.

Mr. Ross Hargrove and family have moved back to his farm home in our vicinity. We welcome them back.

Grandpa Blockshear has been on the sick list for several days, but was feeling better today.

Mr. H. Sterling is building his new house. Quite a few friends have helped on the house and it will soon be ready for occupancy.

Messrs Tommie Howard, Charlie Crone and Misses Ruth and Edna Crone and Miss G arth spent Sunday with old friends at Morton.

A LITTLE LATE, BUT JUST AS WELL, WE HOPE

The Eleventh Hour is as good as the first if your heart is in the right place. We wish to assure one and all that our delay in tendering you these greetings was in no way from the lack of feeling or appreciation, but simply from the fact that we just couldn't get to it. As was our wish then it is our wish now, that the year 1928 will bring to you all the blessings that go to make life happy and prosperous.
