Samuel Finley Breese Morse was the painter. Morse was born in Charlestown, Mass., April 27, 1791. When a student at Yale he became interested in art and upon his graduation in 1810 he went to London to study under the famous Benjamin West. England hailed him as a potentially great artist, but when he returned to Boston and set up his studio his countrymen showed no interest in his pictures. The inventive genius, which was to make him famous later, was alive even then and in 1816 he and his brother invented an improvement in a pump for a fire engine. Although Eli Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin. and President Jeremiah Day of Yale were enthusiastic over the invention, the public was not.

Finally Morse decided to go to New York and continue his career as an artist, and there in the face of discouragement and poverty persisted until he gained the recognition which he deserved. Although at the age of forty he seemed committed to an artistic career, he was still interested in invention and in 1832, while returning from Europe, got the idea for the electro-magnetic telegraph from a certain Dr. Charles T. Jackson of Boston, who was a passenger on the same ship. Morse perfected his invention in 1837 and for the next few years vainly tried to get congress to appropriate funds to develop its use. Success came at last when he had all but abandoned hope and when the day came for the official demonstration, the message which was ticked off over the line which led from the United States senate chamber to Baltimore, 80 miles away, was: "What bath God wrought?" Morse lived to see his epoch-making invention used all over the world and when he died in 1872 he carried to his grave in Greenwood cemetery in New York city the greatest honors that the nations of the werld could bestow upon him.

The story of John Greenleaf Whittier, the beloved Quaker poet, the "American Robert Burns." is similar in some respects to that of Morse. He was born December 17, 1807 at Haverhill, Mass. His youth was one of toil as a farmer boy until a wandering Scotchman, a tramp, struck the poetic fire in his soul by reciting some of Burns' lines to him. Through a devoted sister and the editor of the local newspaper, later famous as William Lloyd Garrison, the prophet of abolition, the boy's verses were published and he was given a chance for better schooling.

a chance for better schooling.

His contributions to the New England Weekly Review carried his name afar and by 1830 be was editor of that journal. But the death of his father took him back to the rocky hillside farm near Haverhill and there he remained for three years. In the meantime the abolition movement was gaining ground and it was a cause which appealed to the young poet. He became secretary of the Anti-Slavery society and editor of the Haverhill Gazette, which he made an abolition organ. But abolition was anothema to the New England mill owners and Whittier was forced to leave the state, as were Garrison and others.

After a short time in New York Whittier went to Philadelphia as editor of the Freeman and there a meb sacked his office and threatened his life. In 1840, he returned to Amesbury Mass., to make his home and when the slavery issue was raised again after the Mexican war he went to Washington to became editor of the National Intelligencer, an antislavery paper. When the Civil war ended the question of slavery for all time, Whittier returned to his home in Massachusetts and the belligerent abolitionist once more became the Quaker poet, desirous to "bury in the waters of oblivion all the bitter things I said in the strife."

When the Centennial celebration came in 1876 he was chosen to write the ode which should sing the glories of the nation on its one hundredth birthday. But for all this honor and the many others that came to him, he remained the simple poet of the people, beloved by simple people all over the world, and by none more than those of his own state among whom he died on September 7, 1892.

The third son of the Bay state who was honored in the Hall of Fame this year was Rufus Choate. lawyer, orator and scholar, of whom it was once said, "His personal magnetism combined with his wealth of learning and his strong sense place him among the greatest forensic advocates that America has produced. He may fairly be ranked as the equal of Lord Erskine." Choate was born at Essex, Mass., October 1, 1799.

was born at Essex, Mass., October 1, 1799. While a student at Dartmouth college he was so strongly influenced by the great speech of Daniel Webster in the famous Dartmouth college case that he determined to study law. After his graduation from Dartmouth in 1819—he studied another year in that institution and then entered the law school at Harvard. After a brief time in the office of the attorney-general of the United States he opened his law office in Danvers, Mass., and in 1830 was elected to congress where he distinguished himself the next year by a speech on the tariff.

In 1841 Choate was elected to the United States senate in the place of Daniel Webster, who had been appointed secretary of state by President Harrison, and soon proved that he was a worthy successor of the great orator. Among his most brilliant speeches, which are ranked among the greatest ever delivered in the senate, were those on the Oregon boundary, the tariff, the fiscal bank bill, the Smithsonian institution and the annexation of Texas. For the next twenty years he was prominent in national affairs until his health failed and he died in Halifax, Nova Scotia, July 13, 1859, while on a journey to Europe to seek to regain his lost health.

"I cannot afford to waste time in making money," once declared Louis Agassiz and in that sentence he summed up his lifelong devotion to the ideal that made him one of the greatest scientists the world has ever known. Although he was born in Switzerland, America claims him as her own since he came to this country in 1846 at the age of thirty-nine and spent the rest of his life here, At one time Napoleon III of France offered him the directorship of the great Paris botanical gardens and a seat in the French senate, both great honors and highly remunerative. But Agassiz's reply was that he found the fauna and flora of this country too interesting ever to desire to leave it.

Nature study was his all-absorbing passion. He gave eighteen hours of every day to it."There is never a moment except when I am asleep that I am not joyfully occupied," he once said, "Give me the hours you say bore you and I will receive them as most precious gifts." He cared nothing for money. "I am not a quarter of a dollar ahead in the world, and never hope to be," is another of his statements. And this was made at a time when business began to be a God in this country. By his personality and his devotion to science he awoke in Americans a greater appreciation for the work of the scientists and he did much to popularize nature study in this country. Agassiz died in 1873 and his grave in Cambridge, Mass., is marked by a massive bowlder from the Aar glacier in Switzerland, where some of his earliest geological studies

DEVELOPMENT OF YOUNG TURKEYS

Many people report good success in raising young poults until they are one or two months old and then report losses. In a recent majority of cases this is due to the birds becoming affected with blackhead. This disease does not always show a blackened color of the head and for this reason many confuse it with something else. Blackhead is really a disease of the liver and intestine and in some of the extreme cases the head shows a discoloration. The more common symptoms are weakness in activity, a diminished appetite and diarrhea.

Blackhead is closely associated with small cecum worms. The small parasitic protozoan which causes blackhead seems to enter the system of the fowls through the small irritations made by these worms. Therefore, the prevention of worms is as important as the prevention of the disease proper.

Fortunately the prevention of worms is accomplished by the steps necessary to prevent the disease. Keeping the poults on fresh ground away from old birds, especially chickens, is necessary. Chickens are often affected with the disease but it does not injure them in the same manner as turkeys. Moving the poults to fresh ground at frequent intervals not only insures greater freedom from the disease, but it also helps to furnish green material and good range.

It has been demonstrated that it is not necessary to allow young poults the run of the farm. In fact many people are reporting better success when keeping them on ground that is not frequented by chickens,

A good ration for growing chickens is also a good ration for young poults.

Tuberculosis Is Subject of New Government Film (Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"T. B. or Not T. B.," a question that is causing many Midwestern poultrymen to soliloquize on the future of their flocks, is the title of a recently released United States Department of Agriculture educational film. The picture is a two reeler dealing with tuberculosis of poultry.

The film, which is presented in story form, is designed to instruct poultrymen on ways and means of controlling this plague and keeping it from their farms. Scenes depict the various common conditions which are conducive to the introduction of the disease to the poultry yard, the breeding of germs and the spread of the infection. Avian tuberculosis is not only fatal to fowls but spreads to swine as well, frequently heavy financial losses to the owners out the dreaded avian T. B. baccili and preventing future losses from the disease are stressed in the new film.

Copies of United States Department of Agriculture films are available for loan without charge other than the cost of transportation, which must be assumed by the borrowers. Prospective users of the film should apply for bookings to the office of Motion Pictures, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington,

Apoplexy and Internal Rupture Cause Death

When hens that have been apparently healthy are found dead under the roost in the morning or on the nests, the loss is probably due to apoplexy or some internal rupture. This is often due to the strain of laying. Too heavy feeding of corn which makes the birds overfat is responsible for some of the sudden losses. Leghorns do not become overfat as easily as the heavy breeds but they lay a large egg which may cause a severe strain and occasional losses. A few birds may die from apoplexy and internal rupture in spite of the best of manage ment and such losses help to make up the normal death rate in most poultry flocks. A postmortem examina-

Weather permitting, baby chicks should be allowed to run out into the open air when they are a week old. Running outside will give them an opportunity to get away from the heat of the brooder stove and absorb the life-giving elements of the sun at the same time. Wooden frames two feet by ten feet, covered with one-inch poultry netting, can be used to make a small yard near the brooder house. The first few weeks the baby chicks should be confined to this small yard.

Buy Baby Chicks

Many poultry raisers would find it more profitable to buy their baby chicks rather than try to hatch them. Each year the hatcheries are producing better-quality chicks. This year it would be safe to state that average hatchery chicks will be better than many farm-hatched chicks. Such a condition may be attributed to the hatcheries having culled their breeding flocks closer than ever while the average farmer has not practiced cull-

Cute in a Baby-Awful at Three and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Pinning the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Ffetcher's Castoria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

Skating Pattern in Dream

That one of his most successful ice patterns came to him in a dream, was recently revealed by Sidney Charlton, who claims the world's trick skating championship. While in Switzerland he dreamed that he was skating before a large crowd who seemed to applaud all out of proportion to his act. When he looked on the ice he found that he had drawn with his skates a perfect pattern of a sunflower. The surprise awakened him and he jumped out of bed to jot down the turns, which he found next day to be practicable.

Fame for Girl Musician

The Symphonic orchestra of Vienna has been conducted by twenty-two-year-old Gertrude Hrdlicaka in an important concert. Critics highly praised her work as a conductor. A few weeks before she conducted the orchestra the girl musician was almost unknown. She made her success overnight as a concert violinist.

SUCH IS LIFE —— A Sissy by Relation —— By Charles Sughroe

Hero Made Happy

Shanghai,-Happiness has come into the life of America's oldest possessor of the Congressional Medal of Honor-Robert Kline, one-time resident of New York, but for the last half century a resident of China.

Two years ago Kline was stricken blind. He lived in darkness in the little home be maintained on Kiangwan road.

But he had his memories and he was extravagantly proud of his trophies-the Congressional medal won when, as a member of the crew of the eld U. S. S. Raleigh, he risked his own life by entering a gas-filled hold and rescued several comrades from what

Last July 4 he was guided by friend to the Bund, where the Ameri can marines were parading. On his faded blue coat gleamed the medais.

Presently an admiral, commander in chief of the American Adristic fleet, arrived with his aids and was about to mount the stand when he espied Kline. Up went the admiral's right arm in quick salute.

Onlookers told Kline and tears trickled from his sightless eyes. He would have given anything, be said, to have seen the tribute.

A friend of mine, seventy years old or so, died a few years ago and left his wife a comfortable fortune in well invested bonds. She was as ignorant as a child, however. He had never

She was saved only by the fact that the executor of her usband's estate was honest and pa ient and firm. It is because so many vomen have husbands or fathers who seep them ignorant of financial mat ers that so many women go lote bankruptcy when they are forced to nanage their own affairs.

Another of the older authorities, 'upt. Louis Migaud, a dapper little pilot in a Norfolk suit and brown derby, but a mere septugenarian beside Captain McElroy's eighty-five years, is also mildly skeptical of Twain's future on the river, had he stayed.

"I think he toved the river, but I don't know whether he really loved piloting. It he had he would have gone back to it after the war. A real pilot doesn't want to do anything else. and he doesn't have much of anything else on his mind if he's a good one. Twain was a great bloker, but that took up some of his time."

A generation and more ago Captain McElroy was one of the best-known pilots on the Mississippi, and owner of three great craft in the last quar ter of the steambout age: the Southern Belle, the Quachita Belle, and the St. John No. 2. Also, he is one of the few pilots who ever took a boat out of New Orleans to Bismarck, N. D.

Another age has dawned on the river, less picturesque, with fewer amenities and more system. From the bridge of the Faith the old gentleman who "cubbed" with Twain will keep an understanding eye on its

Women and

Financial Matters

HAD a request not long ago from the secretary of some philanthropically inclined organization asking me to act on a committee for the education of women in financial matters. I felt as much complimented as did the indigent colored man who was asked to change a ten dollar bill, but I asked myself why women more than men should need special education in such matters, and further why I should be run in to broadcast such education.

I have heard it said that doctors, lawyers, teachers, and professional men generally are the first to snap at get-rich-quick schemes, and know the least about safe and conservative investments. Are women any worse than we are? It may be. Possibly they are more ambitious, more credulous, more anxious to get on rapidly,

I quote the following from a recent publication without being responsible for its dependability:

"The better business bureaus estimate that through the purchase of worthless securities the women of this country will lose over $700,000,000 during 1928. This enormous sum is but a small portion of the total that will be lost by women during the same period in real estate, unsound business ventures, etc. Insurance companies report that 90 per cent of estates over $5,000 left to women are dissipated within seven years of receipt." There must be a reason for this un-

fact that few women, married or single, are trained in financial matters, are given much chance to handle money or to invest it, and when in middle life or later this responsibility is forced upon them it finds them ignorant of how best to assume that responsibility. Instead of going to some one who could set them right, they are ashamed to acknowledge their in-

little doubt in the minds of elder ex-

Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress, or blouse, or coat, by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. With true, fadeless Diamond Dyes, anyone can do this successfully. The "know-how" is in the dyes. Each package represents the perfection of 50 years of dye-making. They don't streak or spot like inferior dyes. New, fashionable tints appear like magic, right over the out-of-style or faded colors. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little longer. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

Robert C. Stillwell, secretary of the United Veterans' service commission. No. 312 Jessie street, has received information that clears up the mystery and steps have been taken to place Emery in a government bospital for treatment.

Emery wandered into the commission's office looking for a job. He said he wanted work of any kind as he was homeless, penniless and had been sleeping in Golden Gate park. He knew he had been in the Marine corps; that he enlisted in 1915 and was discharged in 1919; he recalled something about service on the battleship Texas, and with the One Hundred and Thirtieth company, Eleventh U. S. M. C. Beyond that he knew nothing about himself.

Emery was given temporary relief and Stillwell wrote to James E. Watson, United States senator from Indiana. The reply unraveled the tangled skein.

Emery, it was divulged, had escaped from a Madison (Ind.) hospital in 1923, to which he had been sent from Bloomington in 1921. Since his escape nothing had been heard from him. His wife, struggling to support their nine-year-old son and herself, had given him up for dead, divorced him and apparently had wandered over the country looking for him. The brother is Maj. A. R. Emory, formerly sta tioned at the Presidio, now at Fort Hunt, Alexandria. Va. He has been apprised by military authorities of Emery's condition.

SYNOPSIS

On a certain momentous Monmorning Miss Constance Ful-cataloguer and seller of rare books at Darrow's New and Second-Hand Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified, white-bearded old gentleman, who saunters into the sicove pla-carded "Medical Works."

CHAPTER I—Continued

I then devoted my fingers to the index, and my thoughts to wondering if Peter wouldn't come and explain himself. I whirled to the window for more cards, and when I whirled back. there was Peter himself sitting in the big oak chair at my left. He had stolen down the gallery stairs behind me. I managed not to gratify him by jumping, but I had to stare. He who was habitually as beat as a fresh gardenia was attired in a suit that wrinkled all over his athletic form; his shoes were dusty; three cinders clung to one side of a much swollen nose. He gazed at me so trustfully that I longed to weep.

"Good morning, Constance. This is a beck of a mess, yes?" he suggested simply.

"Something happened, Peter?" I faltered, not overintelligently.

"Oh, no, nothing. Mr. Darrow's all ready to fire me, that's all." "Mercy! Why?"

"Oh, don't let me disturb you! You'll find that card-catalogue more interesting than I am."

"Peter, I am obliged to put this catalogue in apple-ple order for this afternoon, when Mr. Darrow has commanded me to expound its principles and workings to his nephew, Capt. Eric Ashland, informing me, as he did, per telephone, that I have his entire confidence. Captain Ashland, as you know, is chief cataloguer for Ashland's of London, and he has come the whole way across just to pay us a visit. 1 am informed that he keeps stock lists in manuscript in a tenpenny notebook such as was brought over by William the Conqueror. And while I really don't see why he shouldn't if he likes to and can make it work-we couldn't -Mr. Darrow hopes he can get the same system of classification used in the two houses, for the sake of simplifying business; so it is my business to convince Nephew of the complete superiority of the American Now I've told you my trou bles. Tell me yours."

"Gee whiz! I hope you enjoy your self!" remarked Peter, comfortingly "Constance, you're a real sport, ['ll bet a whole cent against ten billion rubles that you'll forgive me for being naughty, when I tell you my sad story. I've left my happy home, and I only wish it could have been for you."

"For whom was it, may I ask?"

"My stepmother." "What!"

"Didn't know I had one, myself, until Saturday." "Well, I certainly hope your father will be very-" "Well, he won't. She wore a pink hat and called me 'Petey.' "So you had to quit?"

"Not precisely that. The real reacon," confided Peter, distractedly. was Nancy. She eloped. That is, she did for a while. She got tired of it and came back."

I was distinctly bewildered; for while a fortuitous stepmother in a pink hat is indeed a frightful visitation, I should have been sure that Peter would see his sister Nancy through anything. He said once that, fight against it as you might, you had to get fond of a kid you'd brought up since she was ten. Peter had just parted his lips to explain, when again the front door opened.

This time it admitted, not a customer, but an extra hand sent up by an employment agency for the crisis in the shipping office. He was a rough, unalluring young man; indeed, I glanced at Peter questioningly as we watched him start down the aisle. However, he was Mr. Riggs' business. not ours. My telephone then rang. and just as I finished answering the inquiry, Peter and I exchanged another glance. Mr. Riggs had evidently been ready to put up with anybody, for Peter and I heard a click which signified to us that the applicant had punched the time-clock as ap employee already.

"What I've been trying to tell you," Peter resumed, "is that I got out of jail early this morning."

"What were you in for?" I inquired courteously but dazedly.

"Disturbing the peace, and assault with intent to kill, I guess. If so, the second item is correct, but the first is misapprehension, for it happened in Philadelphia. Anyway, when they heard the whole story they let me go. You know a little while ago Mr. Darrow sent me off on a long trip to chase books? Well, the last place, which i reached last Thursday, was Richmond Va. where I was to look over the late Judge Pulleyn Leavitt's famous law library, just due to be auctioned. There were a number of books in it which we wanted, among them one that the tering us to find for them. It's called Notes on Medical Statutes in the Virginia Code, by Justice Whortley Clarihew, dated eighteen-ten. And since," observed Peter, watching me closely, that announcement does not seem to unnerve you particularly, I'll add that this American law book contains a Colfax bookplate."

CHAPTER II

The Odyssey of Peter

I now jumped so promptly and openly as to gratify Peter deeply, harassed as he was. I recalled Hugh Colfax as one of the most distinguished engravers of his day, a strange, arresting character, old when the Nineteenth century was young, the stoutest of British patriots. From the outbreak of the American Revolution to his death, he refused to execute any of the orders for bookplates which, in those days of the infancy of design and engraving in this country, cultivated Americans, especially southerners, were in the habit of sending to England. I had once seen and carefully studied several Colfax plates at the home of a collector who was one of our best customers and had invited me to a private view. But an American Colfax would upset all history and tradition. "I do want to see it!" I cried. "You're sure it's a real Colfax? Do you know Hugh Colfax refused every American order be received, and be could have always named his own price? What's the owner's name? Is it dated?"

"Give me a chance!" begged Peter 'It's more than I got upstairs this morning. Actually, I don't dare leave the building until Mr. Darrow- Oh. b-1! there goes that infernal time clock again! Excuse me, Constance;

nerves are shattered."

"Go on short the bookplate." "Well, Thursday morning I had just picked up the catalogue in the exhibition room of the Richmond auction galleries, when my eyes lit on 'Notes on Medical Statutes,' et cetera. I asked the clerk to bring it out. He said another gentleman who had called for it was still examining it, and would I wait. I did, and glanced up the counter casually at the other gentleman, thinking I could get a line on him if he should be a rival bidder. All I could see of him was his back, but it was enough. I considered him to be an exceedingly strange gentleman to be interested in an old law book. He was young and dressed like a bad actor with a good job-bright-blue suit, gray spats, slick black bair. While waiting his pleasure, I wandered off to look at some other exhibits near the door, and while I was examining them, a girl walked in from the street, past me. She was the lovellest girl, Constance, I've ever seen."

"What a relief! I saw I was go longer to be the greatest influence in Peter's life! Sometimes it had been pretty wearing, fond as I was of my little boy friend. Some one else could do it far better, I knew.

"How wonderful, Peter! And the bookplate?"

"I had to watch her; I couldn't help it," he resumed simply. "She burried forward toward the counter, then suddenly she bounded back as if she had been hit! There was nobody at the counter except that man, and he had his back toward ber, and was, more over, completely absorbed in examining the cover of the book, which be was holding open. She dashed behind a big case of china, and disappeared

'Well, I looked at some Chinese snuff-bottles and booked rugs, and then decided it was time for the other fellow to leave. So I asked for the book again, and the clerk told me that a young lady was examining it now. and would I wait! And sure enough. up the counter was the same young lady, having doubtless, from her colgn of vantage behind the case of china. beaten me to getting that book. The Legal federation has been forever pes- | gentleman of the spats had vanished. I was assuredly-what's the word?" "Intrigued."

> "Correct, especially as I at once per ceived that the young lady was completely absorbed in examining the cover of the book, which she was holding open just as the man had: that is, so as to look at the inside left-hand cover. I could see it had a bookplate on it.

"Well, that girl suddenly laid down the book on the counter, and fled out of the door. That time I got hold of it. I wondered why in thunder those two young people could apparently be so interested in an ordinary bookplate. The first thing I noticed about it was that one corner was loose-the righthand corner, under the snake, you know."

"The snake? What in the worldah. I have it! You mean 'he serpen'. twisted like a capital 'C.' that Colfax signed his best plates with; a circle means eternity; a serpent's wisdom had taught him how to draw immortal designs-modest old chap. Isn't it nice that the Legal federation has already ordered the book, so we shan't have every bookplate collector in the city here to fight for the plate-"

"It wouldn't be the first time it has been fought for!" broke in Peter, bitterly. "You see, I judged those two young folks must be collectors of bookplates who each thought he-or she-had stumbled on a real find in that old law book, and were keeping it dark so as to snap it up at a bargain. Everybody knows that once in a while cataloguers miss a trick, like anybody else. Now, I had general standing orders to buy that book whenever I came across it. I spent the rest of the morning in libraries and museums. tracking down information about bookplates with snakes.

"I finally discovered Colfax, and figured out what you imply: that he was so much against Free Staters and the Near-West policy that no one had ever thought of his drawing a Yankee bookplate. But of course what nobody thinks of is usually right. I felt sure I'd come across something uniqueand I have. I felt sure if I landed book and bookplate, I'd get as solid is reinforced concrete with Mr. Darrow -and I have not."

"But you got it, you say. What did you give for it?" "Five hundred and ten dollars."

"Peter . . . Burton!" I was simply aghast. With the best luck in the world, and admitting that a rare bookplate would considerably increase the value of "Notes on Medical Statutes," we could never get such an outrageous price for it. Legan federation had not put in a request for it, we might have had to hold it for some time before finding a purchaser who would be especially interested. And Peter, well trained and hitherto cool-headed, not to say unimpressionable, knowing these facts as well as the somewhat thrifty reputation of the Legal federation library committee, had paid five hundred and ten dollars for a book which he might have expected to pick up for perhaps sixty!

How long this blow left me speechless and staring, I do not exactly know. I saw the white-bearded old gentleman saunter out of the medical alcove, cross the aisle into that opposite, the law-book alcove, then come out again directly and beckon Emily James, who was then coming up the aisle with an armfui of books, to come and turn on the light for him, as the law-book alcove was dark. I saw him re-enter it, I watched her proceed placidly to her work in the front of the shop, I saw Professor Harrington sidling toward the front door and then out of it, with a pile of books and a quaint farewell bow to me. Then I suddenly heard Peter again, proceeding with his Odyssey:

so, as there was no use putting It off, directly I got back this morning I told Mr. Darrow what I'd had to pay, and he gave me-well, a

"Peter," I inquired suddenly, "why did you buy that book?"

Peter, scarlet, glares at me. He ddgeted; then he finally burst out: 'Mind, I'm telling this to you, not Mr. Darrow! I bought it because that giri didn't want that fellow to get it!" "What !"

"At the auction she sat across the aisle four rows ahead of me. I've never seen any one look so frightened. The first bid on the book was made by the agent of the auction firm who acts for absent buyers who send in written bids. I raised it, and was thunderstruck to see that girl turn around, and look right at me, with absolute relief on her face! The agent raised my bid; nobody else made any, so, as I had seen that girl bound away from that fellow that morning, I naturally concluded, putting two and two together, that it must be his bid which I was opposing. The bids-his and mine-kept jumping up ten dollars a minute, like a taximeter. Once for two seconds 1 hesitated, thinking of duty and Darrow, I suppose, and the auctioneer roared out his second 'Going' and the girl looked around at me as if she were dying. I knew something terrible was the matter; I mapped out a new bid, and kept on bidding until everybody in the room was getting breathless and jumpy. The other bidder's limit must have been five hundred, which was the same as giving an order for the book at any price. Well, five bundred and ten landed it in my net. That's all about that,

Constance. "I'm not a good Har," remarked Peter, deprecatingly, "so I will not conceal the fact that something gave me cold chills down my spine whenever I thought of that pesky book. And when I was at dinner that evening my room was entered, and the lock of my suitcase broken."

"Gracious! And the book was-" "In the hotel safe. And as nothing was missing, I think it was the book the visitor was interested in. After my room was entered, I got it out of the safe and looked carefully all through it. It's an exceptionally clean copy; there was no old will or thousand-dollar bill, or, indeed, any other property, orthodox or otherwise, between the leaves. It certainly is not intrinsically worth so much effort."

"No," I agreed: "even the bookplate, by itself, should I be unusually lucky in finding a rather foolish purchaser, wouldn't orobably fetch more than seventy-five dollars. Where's the book now?"

"Mr. Darrow has it."

"Did you tell him anything about it besides-" "The price? Oh, no allusion can

THE WICKED HUSBANDMEN

LESSON TEXT-Mark 12:1-12; 13:1-GOLDEN TEXT-Jehovah knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish. PRIMARY TOPIC—Some Wicked People Punished.

JUNIOR TOPIC-The Wicked Husbandmen.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC-Playing Fair With God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-The Misuse of National Privilege.

I. Demanding the Fruit of His Vineyard (Mark 12:1-12).

1. The man (v. 1). The certain man who planted the vineyard is God Himself.

2. The vineyard (v. 1). This means Israel (See Isa. 5:1-7, Jer. 2:21, Ps. 80:8). The Lord went to particular pains to make this nation separate. He bestowed peculiar favors upon it. 3. The husbandmen (v. 1).

These were the rulers and teachers of Israel, even members of the Sanhedrin. They were the spiritual guides of the people. 4. Servants sent for the fruit of the vineyard (vv. 2-5). These were the various prophets whom God sent to the nation. The maltreatment and rejection of the prophets are fully set forth in the Scriptures. 5. The well-beloved son sent (vv.

The son here is the Lord Jesus Christ, God's only and beloved Son. He came into their midst. 6. Their punishment (vv. 9-12).

Jesus now asked them for their own verdict upon such villainous ingratitude. He took the place of a judge and pronounced judgment upon them on the basis of their own verdict. They not only rejected the kingdom, but the Son who was King; there fore the kingdom was taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

II. The Son of Man Coming In Glory (13:1-37).

This is part of the well known Olivet discourse. It gives a prophetic view of the course of time from its utterance just before the crucifixion to the second advent of Christ, Two great facts are before us in this prophetic utterance, the destruction of Jerusalem and the second coming of Christ. The one was "Why. Peter! in your place, I should near, having taken place within forty have explained to him about my great years of the crucifixion of Christ; the other is still future. The order of

2 The days of the tribulation (vv

In this time the Antichrist will appear according to the prophecy of Daniel. So severe will be the persethe days no flesh could be saved, but for the elect's sake the days shall be shortened.

3. The great advent (vv. 24-31). This shall be preceded by great physical disturbances in the world. The moon shall be darkened, the stars of heaven shall fall. "Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory and He will gather His elect from the uttermost parts of the earth and heaven."

4. Instructions in view of the coming of the Lord (vv. 32-34).

The day and the hour of His coming are unknown to man. In view of this uncertainty we should watch and III. Warnings. Running through the thirteenth chapter is the exhortation to take heed. In teaching the lesson it would be well to gather them up in their order.

1. Take heed against deceivers (v. 5).

2. Take heed to yourselves (v. 9). 3. Take beed against the time of the Lord's coming (v. 33). The one command to all is "watch."

The Cross and Discipleship The cross is the pattern of service and suffering for the disciples of Christ. The great demand of Jesus was and is for people who can suffer. It is of no use trying to get the cross out of discipleship. They go together, and will, until the world has been redeemed .- Charles Brown.

Ambitious Fence Post

The most ambitious fence post in the world is probably on a Pennsylvania farm. It has grown into a tree! The Farm Journal, which publishes photograph of the freak, recounts that the fence was built in 1878 of new catalpa timbers. The other posts remained as dead as fence posts should, but this one put down shoots and attained a height of 6 feet within a year. Today it is 40 feet high, with a spread of 45 feet.

FAVOR MILK WITH OUT-OF-DOOR LUNCHES

Even at Picnic Parties Milk Is Important.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Let the children lunch out of doors frequently in the good weather of the next few months, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture. If you do not have a convenient eating porch, you can set a table for them right out in the yard. There they can have the regular foods that would be given for a meal at this hour indoors, including the milk they all need. Liquid foods like milk and soup are easier for children to manage at a table than in picnic fashion, although there is much to be said for the simple picnic lunch of sandwiches and fruit on summer days. Whatever sort of unch is served, milk should be included for the children. Every growing child needs at least a pint of milk a day and may take as much as a quart.

POPULAR TYPE OF ROMPER FOR BABY

Use of Two Materials Gives Garment Dressy Air.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here is a romper liked by many mothers for little runabouts between a year and a half and three years old. The flared cut at the sides and the use of two materials give the garment a somewhat more "dressy" air than the severely plain play suits

The one in the illustration was made by the bureau of home economics to bring out certain points in the construction of rompers of this general type. Several pattern companies show designs similar to this one, which can be adapted to one's needs.

The length from the hip to the leg bands should be given attention. If the rompers are not short enough at the sides they will hang down over the child's knees and prove a great annoyance to him. At the same time sufficient length must be allowed through the crotch. In the illustra-

ommunity Building

Moral Tone Affects Value of Property

The morals of a community have a definite and material effect on real estate values, according to Thomas Craddock Hughes, assistant district afterney of Kings county, New York. He

"Let the general moral tone of a neighborhood drop and invariably there is a subsequent depreciation of property values. The landlord subconsciously reverts to this principle when he inquires not only as to the prospective tenant's ability to pay rent but also as to his character and reputa-

"We have seen," Mr. Hughes said, "several striking examples of this in New York city. An old residential neighborhood of conservative people, where values are established and normal, becomes the site of a night club, whose reputation is not exactly savory and which caters to a lawless patronage. The mere installation of equipment of the jazz palace, such as a band and possibly a bar, points the finger of disrepute at the section. If there be any raids by federal authorities, the fact becomes widely known and the market for adjoining property is practically destroyed. If there are a number of such establishments within a small area, their proprietors will profit at the expense of every other near-by property owner."

Negative Economy in the Sparing of Paint

People who make an earnest effort to economize often go to foolish lengths. Quite aside from the fact that they deprive themselves unnecessarily of things which there is no call for their doing without, they often defeat their fundamental purpose. For real economy is frequently practiced by the intelligent spending of money rather than by withholding it.

Of high rank among the many items of negative economy stands the easy practice of deferring improvements or expenses of upkeep. The time to scrap antiquated methods and obsolete machinery is when the pinch of necessity demands increased production at lower costs, The time to maintain the highest standard of upkeep is when money is scarce and replacement costs high.

Yet the average property owner will, at such times, defer every possible upkeep expense. One item which Since people have begun to realize often goes to the foot of the list is the value of liver in the diet as a painting-partly because many consider paint a beautifier and a luxury, partly because a slight delay has no able. Too often we forget that the thin film of oil and pigment protects a structure against weather and wear.

House Fashion Change

Have you ever thought of fashion in connection with home building? The fashions do change in buildings just as in clothing, although not as rapidly perhaps. Fashions change in furniture, plumbing and lighting fixtures of the home; fashions change in automobiles; and in fact in almost everything that we buy.

With rare exception, every man who builds a home should consider the resale value of the property. There are many factors which may make it necessary for him to sell. With resale in mind, or with protection of investment in mind, it would be unwise to build a home that wa: not in fashion

Serve hot with liquid or hard sauce.

Children Need Cereals

Cereals play a very important part in the food of children, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Whether served as bread, as breakfast food, with meat, or as dessert, they can be depended on for a large part of the fuel that every active child needs. Milk and other protein foods, vegetables and truits, and butter may supply practically all the building and regulating materials needed, but unless they are used in unduly large proportions they do not furnish enough fuel, and cereals are excellent for supplementing them and

A slim, trim-looking craft, the Mayflower is 341 feet long, 36 feet beam, draws about 18 feet of water, makes about 15 miles an hour, now burns oil, carries four six-pound guns and has a crew of 8 officers and 187 men, including 24 marines and a chaplain. It has sleeping quarters for the President, his wife, 14 guests and the

Equipped with reception, smoking and dining rooms, library, piano, graphophone, orchestra and radio, the most luxuriously equipped naval vessel we have, free from military spirit, embodying the private and peaceful atmosphere of a mansion, the Mayflower offers a welcome means of escape from the strains which rest upon our Chief Executive which has been enjoyed more frequently by President and Mrs. Coolidge than either of his predecessors.

The Czar of Lights

THE brightest beacon which guards our coast is that in service at Navasink, N. J., which marks the entrance to New York harbor.

This czar of lights flashes from a massive stone tower, built in 1862, and located at the highest point along the Atlantic coast for hundreds of miles-north or south-the light being 246 feet above the water.

Having the power of 710,000 candles, this light is plainly visibly over 1,000 square miles of water. Under normal conditions, it can be seen for 26 miles, and, under unusually good atmospheric conditions, has been sighted by incoming ships 50 miles at

The great lens, surprisingly beautiful and displaying every color of the rainbow, is five feet in diameter and made up of nearly 400 separate prisms, held together by copper frames and set to focus the rays of light into a single beam. It rests on a turntable which in turn rests on a bed of quicksilver weighing five tons. The lens and table weigh ten tons and are turned by a clock-like mechanism.

The light is furnished by three incandescent oil-vapor burners within the lens. Its intensity resembles a flash of sheet lightning. The flash lasts for three-fourths of a second, followed by two seconds of darkness and is so distinctive that, 'tis said, no experienced observer could mistake it for any other light. Its closeup glar is so blinding that the keepers are obliged to wear dark-smoked glasses to avoid serious eye injury. (C. 1928. Western Newspaper Union.)

Bourgeois a Town Dweller

The middle class, as a dominant social body, is a comparatively new thing, writes Gilbert Seldes in the Saturday Evening Post. From the days of Coriolanus to those of Louis XIV. If you wanted to have any large group of people, you directed yourself to the sweaty rabble, the great unwashed The bourgeois of those times was, as the name indicates, a town dweller, a citizen, and what is more, he was usually a free citizen.

Static Sparks

On a dry day the moving parts of machinery throw out sparks of static. electricity which sometimes cause an explosion, like the gas in an automobile engine, if the air is heavily laden with dust or any kind of finely pulverized matter. Flour mills, drycleaning establishments, ccal mines and the vicinity of threshing machines are some of the places where fires may result from these explosions.

Habit

The word "habit" has been so badly used that children are afraid of it. They are warned against all sorts of habits. Why not encourage children to form habits that will come in handy instead of warning them so much about habits that will bring grief? We take the negative instead of the positive approach.—Grove Pat-terson, in Mobile Register.

Composition of Wood

Wood is composed of millions of tiny cells, some filled with water, some with air, and some with oil. When wood is burning, the heat makes the contents of the cells expand until the cells burst, causing miniature explosions, familiar to us as "crackles."
