Agricultural Classics: "Leave a Memorial of Beauty After You."

I am living at an old homestead that has belonged for several generations to the Blank family. It has now passed into the hands of strangers. The old family are dispersed and gone far away. But the place is a memorial of them, and especially of the lady who came here as a bride and lived here as wife and mother through a long and useful life.

Her impress is still upon everything; her spirit lives anew in the recurrent blooming of her rose garden. I, a stranger, feel a kinship with her as I breathe their dewey fragrance. Today there is a flaming of crimson lilies, amaryllis, against the green shrubbery. Though she is mingled with dust, the work of her hands lives on in the beauteous life of the lilies. At Easter time the "White flags" unfurled in all their purity, an emblem of the sweet spirit of her whose pure thought and innate love of the beautiful gave them a perpetual gift of loveliness to those who came after her. Early in the spring a myriad of daffodils, jonquils, and narcissi came up in great haste. Some bore trumpets and were the trumpeters of the good tidings of spring. The eternal yellow of all the sunsets were within the hearts of them. Their fragrance and freshness were divine.

The sweetness of one woman made possible all this loveliness. She is immortalized in the blooming of her flowers. And there is a lesson for me in all this exquisite loveliness. I, too, may live again in a flower, a vine, or tree. Who of us but can recall even now "mother's rosebush" or the hollyhock and larkspur of the old home garden, the trees that father planted, the cedar by the gate; the poplar and the walnut at the barnlot, to say nothing of the individual fruit trees that had each a name and personality of its own.

Now for the lesson. I have already planted some blood-red cannas. They are growing fine and will continue for years. I am a "rolling stone" and gather no moss perhaps, but I do try to leave each spot that I roll away from a little bit improved. At one is growing a clematis vine that blooms like a midsummer snowstorm of vapory white flowers. At another, a Virginia creeper covers a plain little cottage, changing it to a fairy castle by moonlight.

It is easy to set a few fine, straight, little trees in the bare, sun-stricken yard of the rented place. They are growing wild and free all over our dear Southland. Just a thought of those who are to come after us, and let that thought materialize by planting a cedar or maple or a vine or fig tree, or anything else of joy and beauty. It will make all the world lovelier and ourselves nobler. Do this. Do it now. No matter if you only have a week to stay there, leave a memorial so that others who live there in days to come shall know that it has sometime been the abode of one whose soul was alive with love of God, of nature and humanity.---This article was sent The Progressive Farmer years ago by a woman contributor. ## Lamb County.

This county has now been organized in accordance with the new Vital Statistics Law, by the appointment of registrars for each justice precinct and each incorporated town or city. In some cases, two or more precincts have been combined into one district, where it seemed best so to do.

Every birth is required by law to be reported to the local registrar of the district in which it occurs, by the attending physicians or midwife or if there were neither, then by the father or mother, within five days after the birth.

The law prohibits the burial or removal of a dead body before a death certificate properly and completely filled out, has been filed with the local registrar, and a burial or removal permit has been secured.

The immense legal value of these records makes it important that the citizens of Texas be given this protection by having a complete, legal record properly filed in accordance with this law.

In the first three months of 1928, there were reported from Lamb County 20 births and 21 deaths. This indicates only about 36 per cent of the total number which probably occurred. Let's go 100 per cent from now on.

Below is a list of local registrars of your county, and it is urged that you make every effort to comply with the law and to aid in securing complete registration in your county. For further information, address State Department of Health, Bureau of Vital Statistics, Austin, Texas.

Try First At Home

Whether it is something we want to buy, or some service we wished performed, why not try first at home. There is not a single one of us in this entire community but what will benefit to an appreciable extent if each member of the community practices this simple rule.

We want our home town to grow and prosper--we want it to be a place in which we will be proud to live. To realize our desires and our dreams of a better home community we must, one and all, do our share toward making it better--and the one big step toward that end is taken when we each one try first to fulfill our needs from home community sources.---Hockley County Herald.

A Presentiment That Something Was Wrong

A man was on his way home in his new car, which was absorbing all of his attention, when it suddenly struck him that he had forgotten something. Twice on the way he stopped, counted his parcels and searched his pocketbook, but finally decided he had everything with him. When he reached home, his daughter ran out, stopped with a surprised look on her face and cried, "Why father; where's mother?"---Exchange.

Successful Business Know Their Advertising.

According to newspaper reports, one of the biggest manufacturers of automobiles has decided to take down its advertising along the highways and byways of the nation. No doubt you have read these signs many times in your travels, together with signs calling your attention to the best soap to use, what to do in case of cramps, the kind of spark plugs Mr. Whozis used on his Patigoofia trip, and a thousand and one others which make "Seeing America First" a nightmare.

These manufacturers have two reasons for taking down their road signs, it is said, and they seem to us to be very sound. First, they wish to cooperate with the civic clubs and other organizations of the country in beautifying the highways. Second, they are convinced that road sign advertising does not get the results in their line that it should. Consequently they are going to use the advertising that is read by ninety per cent of the people--the country newspapers.

These men have made a study of country newspaper advertising and they know what they are doing. Many other large companies have realized this long ago and put this into practice with profitable results that are astounding if you could read the figures on their yearly business.

A few weeks ago the editor of this paper met with a business man of the town and the representative of one of the largest manufacturing companies in the United States to discuss some advertising. In the course of the conversation, the business man mentioned the cost of the advertising contract. "Cost?" said the representative, it does not cost. "It pays." Today, this business man will tell you the same thing.---Ex.

Lamb County Farm Bureau Meeting

Lamb County members of the Cotton Association met in Sudan Saturday to hold their regular monthly meeting. The first number on the program was a piano solo by Miss Virginia Lumpkin of Sudan. Mrs. M. S. Hudson was first speaker and her talk was enjoyed very much. Miss Jewel Hammock gave a reading which caused much laughter, after which Mr. M. S. Hudson talked to the members about their association and how the business had been handled for the past several years and the last season in particular. He just gave a good heart to heart talk which was received with much interest by some forty-five people present. After selecting delegates to the district convention to be held at Leveland next month. The body adjourned to meet in Littlefield the second Saturday in July.

Sebring-Powell

Miss Ollie Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. H. Powell of Littlefield left Saturday morning June 2nd, for Ft. Worth where she was met by her fiance Walter Sebring, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Sebring of Sudan. They were married immediately upon her arrival in Ft. Worth.

Miss Powell was one of the most popular young ladies of this vicinity and was formerly a nurse in the Lubbock Sanitarium.

Mr. Sebring has formally been employed by the Panhandle Lumber Co. and is well known in the Panhandle country. He is now employed with a lumber company in Ft. Worth.

The young couple will reside in Ft. Worth. Their many friends wish them much joy and happiness in their married life.---Contributed.

W. A. Peachy left Thursday for Kansas where he will visit his little daughter and other relatives for a few days.

Houston Prepared For Convention

Houston is prepared to properly house and feed all visitors who attend the Democratic Convention, and everyone will be given an opportunity to see the convention in action during official sessions.

This is the message that executives of the local arrangements committee are anxious to be broadcast to the country; giving definite and emphatic assurance that no efforts will be spared before or during the convention to make the visit of all who come here pleasant as well as educational.

"The hotel and housing divisions have the situation well in hand with respect to housing the maximum number of visitors anticipated," declared Jessie H. Sones, chairman of the national arrangements committee.

"It is our desire that all visitors be given an opportunity to witness the convention in session. With that purpose in mind we have constructed a huge promenade extending the entire breadth of the rear of the Coliseum interior, elevated so that a clear view may be had of the entire arena including the speakers platform.

Admission to the convention will be by ticket, but all tickets are free and will be distributed in Houston shortly prior to and during the convention. We sincerely wish we could give a seat ticket to all our visitors--but obviously this is impossible. However, everyone of our guests may rest assured that Houston is concerned about their welfare and will see to it that they are comfortably housed, and that their witness, if only for a short period, the official proceedings of the convention."

E. N. Scifren and Mr. Shepherd of the Bula Community were trading in Sudan Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Foster attended church at Olton Sunday and were dinner guests of Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Kercheville.

Miss Minnie Scott and Hurley Carpenter, both of Lubbock were married last week. Mr. Carpenter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carpenter.

Pride Goes Before Fall

The thrifty man who gets ahead
Is never by false pride led,
For the proverb he knows best of all
Is "pride always goes before a fall."
His neighbors and his friends all may
Diamonds wear and dress up gay,
Yet he keeps down his own expense

Even a Light Snack Would Satisfy Tramp

On the doorstep stood a very miserable-looking tramp, in his hand a tattered hat.

"Madam," he said, "can I do anything to help you? Is there any wood to be chopped?"

"No, I'm afraid not," said the housewife who had answered his knock.

"Carpets to beat, p'aps?"

"No, thanks."

"Any gardening or other rough jobs to be done, then?"

"No, thanks, I don't think there's anything you can do today."

The wayfarer heaved a sigh of relief and his miserable expression disappeared.

The Colfax Bookplate

On a certain inauspicious Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, catalogue and seller of rare books at Darrow's New and Second-Hand Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified, white-bearded old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $510 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out in the store. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter, whom she seems to recognize as the man who bought the rare book in Richmond, Va., a few days before: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, began that morning working at Darrow's. Nancy tells Constance of her elopement with Brandon Tower, a shorthand teacher, an elopement which was cut short when Tower attempted to make off with Nancy's suitcase. As Nancy and Peter have left home because their father has just married a hateful woman, they rent the third-floor apartment Sansoni has vacated above his restaurant. Constance explains Darrow's card-index system to Captain Ashland of England, a nephew of Mr. Darrow's.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

It was a most interesting bookplate, skillfully drawn, of charming design, full of tantalizing clues to what one's curiosity as to who had been the long-departed owner, what the story of a life that in some way had combined science with adventure, a century or more ago. Yet ten seconds after my eyes had rested on it, I was fluted with consternation. I felt my face turning cold; was it from the chill of regretful disappointment that began to emanate from Captain Ashland, as he, too, gazed at the bookplate in silence? Finally I stole one glance at him, praying that my judgment might have made an error, however awful, after all. But he shook his head, slowly yet decidedly; and then confirmed my fears with the authoritative verdict:

"It's a forgery!"

I knew it. Every sign pointed to it. And chagrin overwhelmed me. The captain, while disappointed, was philosophical.

"It's sad to have high hopes dashed," he remarked; "but this paper's modern. Its color's wrong, the design's not really characteristic of Colfax's style, and—I say! This really is a drawing, not an impression from a plate. By Jove, though, it's clever! I hardly wonder the buyer was deceived."

"Especially as he's just beginning to have enough experience for such work," said I, quickly; "and one way, at least, no harm has been done. Mr. Burton hasn't said anything official about his 'find.' I'm the only person here to whom he mentioned it. He knew I'd be interested, on account of my special work."

"Quite so," assented the captain with discreet understanding; "but won't the poor chap be no end surprised when you tell him the truth?"

I was plunged into gloom by the prospect. A moment of silence was shattered by the clatter of the descending elevator, wherein, as it hung a moment above the alcoves, we could see Mr. Roberts and a stranger. Darrow's was full of strangers and strange things today. I sighed involuntarily; and the captain said with very pleasant warmth:

"It's most kind of you to take so much trouble over me today. I expect I'll be bothering you every day while I'm here."

I gave him permission to bother me at any time; and as he walked up the aisle, Mr. Roberts and his companion came down it, and halted at my desk.

"Miss Fuller," announced Mr. Roberts, with much gravity, "this is Mr. Almy, from the detective bureau. He would like a few minutes' talk with you."

Benjamin Almy took a chair, and proceeded forthwith to business, with noticeable zest.

"I understand you were sitting here all morning, Miss Fuller, and thus saw all the customers come in and go out. Now, could you say about what time that old gentleman entered?"

"Yes; half-past nine exactly. I looked to see the time, for he was the first customer."

"Yes. Now, that young lady who gave the alarm—at what time did she come in?"

"About a quarter of ten."

"But the law student you mentioned to the policeman?"

"I saw him go into the law section opposite the medical, directly after he entered—about five minutes of ten I think."

"Those were all the customers this morning, were they?"

"All except Professor Harrington. He stopped here as he entered, and we chatted some time before he went to make his purchase."

"Very good. Now did you see anybody else enter the shop before half past ten?"

"No other customer. Mr. Burton, our traveler, came in a few minutes before Professor Harrington, and went directly upstairs in the elevator."

"And did you see the old gentleman again after you finally saw him being carried into the aisle?"

"Yes," said I, "three times, I saw him cross the aisle and enter the law-book alcove, which is right opposite the medical alcove, you see. Then I saw him come out again at once, and beckon to Miss James to turn the light on for him, when he re-entered. I saw him finally being carried into the aisle."

"Have you any idea about what time the light was turned on for him?"

I reflected for an instant.

"The exact time I could not say; but it was very shortly before Professor Harrington left, if that fact is of any use. Almost immediately after the light went on, I remember bowing to him as he passed out at the door."

"Miss Fuller, do you think anyone besides the persons you have mentioned could have been in the shop this morning?"

"I know no other customer passed me. Of course—"

"And you remember, Almy," interrupted Mr. Roberts, "that Riggs said he was alone in the shipping office all morning?"

"Why, how was that?" I demanded.

"When Mr. Roberts spoke I was just going to mention that applicant for the shipping clerk's job who came in here a little after ten-thirty."

"What applicant?" cried both men.

"Why, the one who came in this front entrance by mistake. Peter Burton was here at the time, and sent him back through the shop to Mr. Riggs."

"Certainly Riggs never heard of him, or we should have, too," said Mr. Roberts.

"I might look into that now, then," observed Mr. Almy, earnestly rising. "You're sure that no one else was in the shop this morning, Miss Fuller?"

I was positive. Mr. Almy thanked me with a bow, nodded to Mr. Roberts, and strode off in the direction of the shipping office.

Turning toward Mr. Roberts, I was astonished to perceive that on that cool afternoon, with the wind rising and the steam heat doing nothing of the sort, he was vigorously wiping a moist brow.

"Tell me what you think of this insane story of Burton's," he said.

"So he told you about his romantic adventures in Richmond? Don't say he actually did something sensible!"

"He came to me with the story just before he went out this afternoon, between Mr. Darrow's hearing the news, and his conference with Almy and myself, which was scheduled to take place while you were instructing Captain Ashland."

"Some afternoon!" I observed severely, in order to show sympathy.

"How," continued Mr. Roberts, even more severely, "this story of Burton's is going to help either the girl or himself, I don't see. It was solely for her sake, on a perfectly wild impulse, that he bought the book; and she follows him here forthwith. You've heard."

Growth of Beard Not Stimulated by Razor

Whether or not shaving makes the beard grow faster is a question that never has been definitely answered to the satisfaction of all scientists. It is the general belief among medical men and physiologists that shaving itself does not make the beard grow faster and that cutting does not increase the growth of hair.

There is a definite rate of growth in the hair of normal and healthy persons and this growth is not affected by mere cutting. It is possible, however, that shaving makes the beard grow faster for a different reason, says Pathfinder Magazine. Shaving tends to irritate the skin somewhat and causes an increased flow of blood to the shaved section. Consequently there is an increase in the nourishment of the hair follicles, and this may cause the beard to grow stiffer and heavier, and perhaps faster.

It is widely believed that if a man never shaved he would not have as heavy a beard as he would have if he shaved a few years and then stopped.

of course, that she's still unconscious?"

"Yes; and the old man is dead."

"Nobody has an idea who either of them is; and that girl is the only person who was in the shop this morning whose actions we have attempted to investigate without any result. There's not a clew, so far, to the mystery of the attack."

"Has Mr. Almy no theories? He looks experienced," said I.

"He has advanced none yet."

"He seemed very keen about this case," I remarked thoughtfully. "Has he any idea, I wonder, as to how the attack on the old man was made? I mean, with what sort of weapon?"

"Whatever the weapon was, it has disappeared," said Mr. Roberts, meaningly.

"Well, that shipping-office applicant did get away somehow—"

"What Almy really wants to know first, however," said Mr. Roberts, "is: What was that girl doing here all that hour and a half?"

I pondered. Having abandoned consideration of the bookplate as an object of chase, the book occurred to me again, and in stronger light.

"Between you and me, Mr. Roberts, it might seem as if she had traced that book from the Richmond auction room to this shop, through press notices of the sale. You see, she said to Peter, 'Keep it for me.' She must have meant the book."

"Must she?" Mr. Roberts shook his head. "You saw, of course, as did the other witnesses, that the young lady clutched the book-table suddenly as Burton rushed toward her?"

"Yes."

"I mentioned that the weapon used in the attack must have been very small. Therefore the police are wondering: did the young lady lay anything on that table among the books, and rely on Burton to pick it up and conceal it for her?"

"Do they know he saw her in Richmond?" I demanded uneasily.

"Not yet, at least. And he denies, of course, that he saw her put any thing on the table, much less picked it up. But what did happen to that old man? Did she know him? If not, why should she have been so utterly overcome by his condition? Why did she demand Burton's help? These are the first questions to be answered."

"And you think there's no clew here?" I inquired, standing Claribew's "Notes" on the desk. "You know there was a rival bid for it; and the girl was so frightened at the auction; and Peter did see her examining the book, and he thought—"

"I'm glad you said nothing so vague and conjectural to Mr. Almy," interrupted Mr. Roberts, sharply. "A typical wrangle between two buyers, the examination of a book put up for public auction, the effect of a pretty girl on the emotions of a headlong young fool—do you think such things would be of interest in a police investigation of a murder. Let me assure you that facts, and concrete information are much more likely to be appreciated than assumptions."

"I should hope so!" I concurred sweetly. "And speaking of facts: was there really some one in the shop this morning that I don't know about?"

"There was Miss Burton's ex-sultor," replied Mr. Roberts, with such promptness that he momentarily sidetracked me.

"What?"

"He entered in the middle of the excitement, when you were attending the young lady—"

"Then he was after that book!" I cried in consternation.

"He was after the girl!"

"Not at all. I took Nancy Burton to lunch today, and she told me all about what she pleases for some obscure reason, to term her elopement with a Mr. Brandon Tower—Peter told you something of that, too, I see. Well, Mr. Tower learned from her prattle of the purchase of this book. It seems to have had a curious interest for him; three times in the course of the said elopement he tried to get possession of it!"

"I gave the details, and had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Roberts sit gaping with amazement through the narrative."

Mr. Roberts departed with the law book. I hastened toward the rear of the shop for some volumes I needed. Ulysses was polishing the elevator cage.

Finally he said:

"I done tell you the truf this mornin', Miss Fuller! I knowed sompn' powerful bad was gon' happen, and it done happen; and Mist' Case call me ole superstunous fool!"

"Mr. Case called you . . . ?" I couldn't finish the sentence, for amazement Mr. Case, perhaps the most truly polite person on earth, and sometimes, it was to be feared, the only polite one in Darrow's, to call Ulysses names! "Well, it's true something did happen," I finally managed to admit discreetly.

"Yas'm," said Ulysses, complacently. "Does they know who that poor old gemman was yet?"

"No," I sighed.

Ulysses drew himself up to his full six feet and stood motionless, his brass-polish can in his left hand, a bunch of waste in his right. His face was expressionless. He announced in a sepulchral whisper:

"I knows!"

I was certainly startled, but confident in Ulysses' abysmal private knowledge of anything that might concern Darrow's.

"Who was he, then?" I demanded.

"Mist' Charles Grosvenor," announced Ulysses.

"How do you know?"

"I knows."

"But how, Ulysses? Please tell me!"

Looking very important, he produced from his sweater pocket a ragged newspaper clipping. At the head of the article was an excellent likeness of the very old gentleman whose identity was in question, and beneath it the caption:

NEW YORKER BORN IN MANHATTAN Lives 79 Years in Same House Charles Grosvenor, Eminent Retired Merchant, Reaches 3 Score and 10 at His Birthplace in Normandy Terrace

"Mr. Grosvenor—very distinguish'g" as Ernesto had observed three hours before! So in my zeal to aid Providence, I had put Nancy in the way of snatching up that scarce article, a nice downtown flat, thus arranging that Peter should live in the same house which had been the home of the old gentleman who had—just for a fleeting moment, of course!—seemed mysteriously connected with the bookplate which that girl had certainly—

But away with assumptions!

"Why didn't you say before if you knew who the old gentleman was?" I inquired severely. "He's been dead several hours now."

"Yas'm, I knows that," observed Ulysses, sulkily. "I didn't hardly see him when he's found. Mist' Riggs hustle me to watch shipping office, then Mist' Case call me ole fool!"

The reply was not exactly direct, but I knew it was all I could get. However, I ventured:

"Did you cut this clipping out because you'd seen him here in the shop?"

"I cuts out pieces 'bout folks I knows," returned Ulysses, primly.

At this point Mr. Case stepped out of his office. I ran toward him with the clipping.

"Look at this!" I cried. "Do you recognize him?"

"Good Lord!" he gasped; "it's the old gentleman! Where's Almy?"

"Right here," answered Mr. Almy, appearing in the door of the shipping office.

I firmly took the clipping away from Mr. Case, and handed it to Mr. Almy as an earnest of what he could expect from my co-operation.

"The old gentleman," I announced "is identified."

CHAPTER V

The Yellow Note

I took the train into New York next morning not only ready, as usual with me, for whatever might befall, but much interested in anticipating it, for Darrow's had within the last twenty-four hours become more "different" than ever. I had not long to wait for a sensation. When I unfolded my newspaper, a staid but informing sheet containing, without resort to excess of ink or illustrations, all the news considered suitable for refined minds, I found the following article honored with front-page position:

The victim of a mysterious attack made in Darrow's bookshop in Fourth avenue yesterday morning was identified as Charles Grosvenor of 14 Normandy terrace, shortly after his death yesterday at 1 p. m. in Mercy hospital.

He died without recovering consciousness, as the result of a violent slashing of his right wrist by an unknown assailant, no trace of whom can yet be found.

Expensive Upkeep

There are houses in England the windows of which have never been counted. These include Windsor castle and Wentworth Woodhouse, the Yorkshire home of Earl Fitzwilliam. A former duke of Marlborough said that puffy for repairing the windows of Blenheim palace cost him £500 ($2,500) a year.

How Much Water Should Baby Get? A Famous Authority's Rule

By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight-pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast-fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle-fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Just a word of caution. Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the genuine. The forty-cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.

Plains Auto Club Affiliated.

The South Plains Auto Club,
affiliated with the American Auto Association is being organized by T. E. Milligan, who has had a number of years of successful organization work with the AAA in California,
Louisiana and other states.

All members of the South Plains club will also be members of the national auto club which has over 900 clubs and is the strongest, oldest and largest organization of motorists in the world.

The club has but one purpose,
"To Serve the Auto Owner",
Milligan declares.

Service stations and branch offices will be located in every county seat town in the 15 counties and in all other large points.

The fifteen counties in the area covered by the South Plains club are as follows: Bailey,
Lamb, Hale, Floyd, Cochran,
Hockley, Lubbock, Crosby,
Yoakum, Terry, Lynn, Graza,
Gaines, Dawson and Borden.

Service stations that include garages, filling stations and hotels will be designated as AAA headquarters and will render special services to all members free. Branch offices will give

Distrust of Ourselves.
What commonly prevents us from exhibiting the bottom of our hearts to our friends is not so much any distrust we have of them as the distrust
we have of ourselves.

England's Prime Ministers.
The title of prime minister in England was first used by Sir Robert Walpole, who was in office from 1721 to 1742. By this time ministers were being chosen from one political party and they had begun to act together, so that they obtained the name of the ministry. Their leader was then called the premier or prime minister.
This title was not recognized by law until 1805.

the priests, and the various ceremonies. These books contain 1,200 pages and nearly 30,000,000 Chinese characters.

Tomb Used as Billiard Parlor.
It is unusual for a tomb to be used for any purpose other than that for which it was erected. An exception may be found in Allahabad, India, where a magnificent mausoleum, built to contain the remains of an Indian prince who was murdered by his father, has become in recent years a billiard parlor.

Suicide.
Invention is the most interesting ramification of the human intellect—and sometimes the most startling.
There is hardly anything that has not ventor, George Stevens, is found dead —killed by his latest apparatus, a machine for committing suicide pain-all right. But did you ever hear of stranger inventive quest?

Severe Critic

The late Albert S. Cook, professor emeritus of English at Yale, was a brilliant and severe critic of literature and of the other arts as well.

Some years ago Doctor Cook visited his native Montville and the innkeeper showed him with pride the new sign over his gate.

"Humph," said Doctor Cook. "You shouldn't have given him the beer till the sign was done."

In fact, it behaves like ordinary wood, except that it will not warp, crack, blister or peel.

Never Too Late

Carlanti Bleeker nodded from a window of the Knickerbocker club toward a pained old lady with a golden bob who swaggered down Fifth avenue in very high-heeled slippers of snakeskin, flesh-colored silk stockings and a skirt that ended an inch or two above her knees.

"It is never too late to pretend," he said.

Concerning Natal Day

It isn't too late to tell this story on one respected Boston citizen. A trifle unfamiliar with American history, he got his dates mixed up and will never again forget February 12. As he was driving home from church alone he was disturbed by the thought that it was somebody's birthday. He tried to recall, but he strained his memory in vain. Passing a confectioner's shop, he stopped and purchased a $3 box of bonbons with a pink ribbon around it. Driving home, he made a low curtsy to his surprised wife and handed the box to her, and at the same time planted a kiss on her cheek.

"Well, well," said the astonished lady, "what is all this for?"

"Your birthday, darling," said he, "and many happy returns of the day."

"My birthday?" she exclaimed. "Why, you know that my birthday is August 14. This is Lincoln's birthday."

Since then he has been booting himself about the house every time he thinks of it.—Boston Globe.

THE NIGHT FAIRIES

Along through the woods came countless little fairies dressed in wonderful dresses of dark blue and purple.

They wore silver crowns and they carried wands of silver with silver stars which dropped on the mossy ground.

"Hello, pine trees," called Fairy Twilight-Bell. "I see the day fairies have gone to slumberland."

"You have put them to sleep by your lovely singing."

Now the fairies of the twilight come out just after Mr. Sun has gone to bed and at the hour of day which people call twilight.

Fairy Twilight-Bell was named because the twilight fairies voted for her as their special fairy, and she loved the twilight too.

Then her voice always sounded like a beautiful silver bell.

The moon was so glad he had decided to get up early.

"I just love a party," he said, grinning. "There is nothing I like so much. I hope you will choose hide-and-go-seek as one of your games before you begin the dancing."

The Night Fairies.

"We will, Mr. Moon," the twilight fairies shouted, and from away off in the woods an echo sounded.

"We will, Mr. Moon, we will."

But it was really not an echo at all. The sound came from the voices of the night fairies who were just hurrying along to the ball.

They wore gowns of very dark purple with wonderful star-shaped sashes and crowns and wands.

They came along singing:

We're here, we're here,
Let's be of good cheer,
And dance and play
All the night away.
Mr. Moon will beam, and the Pine trees will sing,
Let the joy-bells of Fairyland,
Happiness ring.

The pine trees joined in the singing and Mr. Moon beamed. For they did as he had hoped and played hide-and-go-seek with him behind the pine trees.

He was so delighted and appreciated what the fairies did to amuse him so very much that he sent them a joyous surprise!

He told the moonbeams to play with the fairies, and then he asked the shadows from Shadowland to attend the ball, which they did.

The shadows danced with the fairies, and the moonbeams, and all through the night the pine trees sang and made wondrous, soft music.

And Mr. Moon chuckled to himself and said:

"Certainly fairyland is not quiet to-night. The pine trees were right."

"It's a ball, a real ball, and what is more, it's a real fairyland ball—the best kind in the world."

And as Mr. Moon smiled and grinned and talked all the time of how happy he was, the shadows, moonbeams and fairies kept on dancing.

It seemed as if they would never grow tired, but at last the night seemed to become less dark and the early gray dawn began to appear.

"Hurry, hurry," said the fairies, "we must leave for we are the night fairies and the dawn fairies will soon be here."

"This is their time and we have had ours."

So the night fairies left and the dawn fairies came, but as Mr. Moon went to bed for the daytime he said: "I was the best ball of the year."

A Jolly Ball Game

In this game the players stand in a ring, and one of them takes a small ball and throws it straight to the ground, and then strikes it back with the open hand. Then continues to do this whilst the ball remains within reach, but should not move from his or her position in the circle.

When the ball goes nearer to another player, which it very soon will do, the new player must beat it down in turn until it again passes on. The player who fails to make the ball rebound must give up her place in the circle, and the game continues until the circle grows smaller and smaller, and only one player is left.

Just That!

A little girl, on arriving late at school for the third time, was scolded by her teacher and told to write a composition on "Punctuality."

After a strenuous quarter of an hour she produced the following: "Punctuality is knowing where to make stops."—Schoolmaster.

Protection Given to Flyers Carrying Mail

In preparing for night flying in the air-mail service, four classes of equipment are used. The flood lights are used at regular fields to give the pilot as nearly as possible the same illumination of the field at night as is available in daylight. This is accomplished by a powerful unit. In addition to the large field light, all buildings on the field are flood lighted by smaller units. The beacon lights are placed on 53-foot towers and serve to guide the pilot and show him the location of regular and emergency landing fields. A revolving projection type of beacon is used. The drum revolves with a frequency which gives a flash every ten seconds. The routing beacons are of two classes, electric and gas. The electric rotates six times a minute, and the gas beacons flash 60 times a minute. Both assist in keeping the pilot on his course. The boundaries of all regular and emergency fields are outlined with white electric lights placed 150 to 300 feet apart.

Excess of Patriotism

" Chauvinism" derives its name from Nicolas Chauvin, a soldier in the army of Napoleon who was ridiculed by his comrades for his demonstrative and unreasonable patriotism. The term has come to be applied to anyone's excessive enthusiasm for national ascendancy.

This wake-up FOOD

GIVES QUICK ENERGY

Serve Post Toasties for breakfast and give the whole family quick new energy for the busy day ahead. Fine for children after the longest fast of the day.

Post Toasties is rich in energy — and so easy to digest that its store of energy is quickly released to the body.

No trouble to prepare. Serve Post Toasties right from the package with milk or cream. Enjoy it with fruits and berries.

And what flavor! Made from the hearts of white corn that has been mellowed and sweetened by the summer sun. Be sure you get the genuine Post Toasties in the red and yellow package.
