Wilkins Explains Teacher Situation To Patrons

The News, as usual, being greatly interested in all matters which pertain to our schools, was curious to know the whys and wherefores of a new teacher being employed, and in its hunt for the facts, requested and graciously received the following communication from Superintendent Wilkins regarding the subject. He is concise, but thorough, and The News appreciates his explanation of why the new teacher will be employed, as well as the superintendent's ready co-operation to inform the public.

When it becomes necessary for a school board to make additions to equipment, room, faculty, truck men, or any other feature of school advantages to take care of increased enrollment, they are ever-guided by a dual thought. The first that comes into their minds is: Can the school finances meet the additional expenditure; the second is, can the interests of future citizens of Texas be best safeguarded by the increased expenditure. Is a personal statement in order here from one who has spent almost a third of a century of co-operation with school boards in Texas? If so, here is the statement:

"Every school board in Texas is actuated today by one aim, the best interest of boys and girls in school today, at work as citizens tomorrow."

When this high school building was constructed, the board carefully observed the instructions of the State Department of Education that room for thirty pupils is essential in every room. They went slightly beyond that, putting into every high school room space for thirty-one pupils. At present there are several classes that contain more than this number of pupils; hence many pupils must sit two to a seat in small single desks. We have faced that situation all Fall. The visitor, seeing that condition, gave to us an ultimatum that we lose materially in our standing or employ teachers in number sufficient that each pupil might have a desk for his own use when he entered a class. That is why another teacher enters the high school force next Monday.

Incidentally the addition of this teacher, by giving opportunity for good work under congenial and pleasant surroundings, gives to us an opportunity for better and wider recognition than that which we today have but that was not the object of the visitor in making the requirement nor of the school board in meeting it. The intention of the action has been to help each child to a chance to receive from his work the best of which he is capable. One-sixth of the additional cost is not to be borne by the school funds of the district, but by tuition collections from those not entitled to free tuition in the public schools.

Respectfully submitted,
W. I. WILKINS,
Superintendent Sudan Public Schools

HERD-TRAIL IS A REAL SCHOOL PAPER FOR CITY

Every city, no matter how inconsequential, has events in their history which are epoch making, and which put a nick in the local world.

Pursuant to this assertion, The Sudan News this week doffs its hat in a most gracious manner, to the new journalistic production, The Trail-Herd, edited and published by the students of Sudan High School.

By perusing the masthead on Page Two of the current issue, we are confronted with an array of literary talent second to none in Texas, and that is taking in an expansive territory. They have editors galore; assistant editors and editoresses; humorists; essayists; sport scribes, and so on down and up the list, missing none, all imbued with the same spirit—cooperation and enthusiasm—two winners that have never failed.

Beginning with the head on the first page and terminating with the ads of the last page, every word is good. Every article bears that rare characteristic—originality—that ideal for which professional writers lose a life-time of sleep, strive eternally for, and finally enter the grave still unsatisfied. The student mind is a wonderful thing in the molding, and this paper, the mirror of the student life, affords an avenue for the vent of all talents which a student may possess. It affords the faculty a medium for the dissemination of important events and announcements, and at the same time develops and excites the interest of the entire student body to a betterment of their product so that they may merit publication.

We are prone to laud the faculty assistants who gave their time and ability to producing this student paper, but refrain, and in lieu thereof, praise the student body for the contents of their first effort at a school paper this year. And along with this praise we want to hand a bouquet of grateful thanks to all those who patronized its advertising columns so liberally and bore their part of the expense coincident with publication.

Every adult interested in the welfare of Sudan Schools should plunk their subscription price on the barrel head, with a smile, and we'll wager in your life time than when you see the eyes of the student brighten and his face turn red when he realizes that you take an interest in his school publication.

The Parent-Teachers' Association would do well if they would subscribe unanimsously. It will put a punch in the things you advocate and are trying to put across.

May The Herd-Trail grow and prosper like the proverbial sunshine until it covers Lamb county like the morning dew.

Strutting Gobbler Holds the Spotlight In Local Market

All you boys in various cities and counties around Sudan who have been filling your local papers with huge turkey stories which read like Baron Munchausen Tales, and which, you admit, to keep down argument, are all true, had better lay off a day and run your old flivver down to a real city and take in the sights, incidentally the turkey industry. You admit, according to your papers, that you have loaded and sent hence, turkeys that would make a side-show tallahooer weep with pleasure at their size, strutting ability, and condition, to not mention the price, still all this buncombe does not in the least detract from the supremacy of Sudan as the turkey loading center of Texas, and, to us, Old Tex is the world.

The question naturally arises, with this flow of rhetoric, as to what is considered a large turk and what a fair price. Some erudite turkey fanciers quote 20 lbs. as their best turk; others add a little and put 22 lbs; still another sage, with an imagination that would do well in a garter factory, says one turk weighed 25 lbs. But here's the hitch: The big boy only netted the owner 28 cents a pound. Ah, there's the rub—only 28 cents per libre. That's where we pick up our megaphone and tell the boating world that 30 cents and better is Sudan's standard price. And the proof that the much battered populace believe this is a rare price is evidenced by the way they poured turkeys into Sudan's market Monday. No attention was paid to the sun—just so it was Monday—for before the sun had been half pushed up into position trucks began to arrive, groaning and sputtering with their load of fat gobblers, whose carcasses will decorate some table somewhere, and whose succulence will be applauded by a gladdened multitude.

Buyers are universal in their praise of Sudan's turkey crop. They laud weight, condition, flesh and price. They point out that the farmers have labored assiduously all year to produce a first class, marketable product, and the result of their labors is evidenced by the fowl and the nice price received.

The News is not prone to proffer advice to agriculturists unless it has a substantial foundation for its suggestion; but at this time it wishes to announce to Plains farmers everywhere that Sudan is the logical center of the turkey industry, and that they should keep this in mind and make this market when desirous of disposing of their wares. The price is good, the buying keen and the market urgent, so what more could you wish?

Soph Class Writes Some Classy News

Sophomore Class Sending In Last News For Some Time

Next week Coach Brown with his eighth grade will be news gatherers for the school. The custom is, that each division be responsible for four weeks. Three months is over this week. The school is one-third gone, and we sophs will take a little more relaxation when we are not "putting out something for publication."

We had a visitor to the sophomore work this week, Hilton Aycock, former pupil, returned to Sudan and spent a day with his old classmates. We were glad to see him among us again.

School in Sudan continues to grow. It is already far the biggest business of the town, and is growing every day. We expect soon to take our place as one of the strongest schools of the Plains. Of course, a school like this is more expensive than one of the type that does a little of everything and nothing thoroughly. Today we are making homekeepers, farmers, literary students, athletes and business managers of our boys and girls, and it will grow more yet. Only a few years ago, if some one had predicted 600 pupils in this school in the lifetime of people now young, he would have been laughed at. However, the six hundredth pupil has enrolled. He is Clifford Blankenship. Others have enrolled since him, but no one else will ever be the six hundredth. We may have the seven hundredth before school closes next spring. Certainly we shall have before another year goes by. Already we sophomores are predicting 1,000 enrollment here before we have finished high school. Yet we have only nineteen teachers for that great number of pupils, nineteen counting the teacher to be added next week. It has not yet been given to us who that teacher is to be, but we are informed that we do not know her yet. The report of the visitor is given in these columns to show what Austin thinks of us, and to show our need of the extra teacher. It is true that this teacher may put us into the Southern College Association, but it is certainly true that a failure to have placed another teacher would have deprived us of seven units of affiliation that we and boys and girls now gone from here have worked hard to attain. All honor to the school board whose judgment would not let us have these marks of attainment lost through a penny-wise-and-pound-foolish policy. It is not saving money if we suffer by a failure to spend it. We have today 23 units affiliation. Now we can ask with a fair hope for success for three and one-half units more instead of losing what we have.

Report of Visitor, Miss Margaret Cotham

1. That one additional high school teacher must be employed immediately. The ninth grade English class now enrolls 44 pupils, tenth grade English 37, plane geometry 37, one algebra class 36. There are 31 seats possible in a class room. Thirty pupils is all that is permitted in a high school class.
2. All state owned text books should be covered carefully.
3. The high school library should be provided with a few standard magazines, and the books should be catalogued.
4. The elementary grades should be equipped with maps.
5. Library for the elementary grades must be provided.
6. All teachers should observe regulations about grading and revising all graded work, pupils being required to rewrite their work when it has been criticized by the teacher.
7. Special care should be taken by all teachers to raise the standard of English used. Far too many errors occur in all written work. Teachers are carefully criticizing these errors, but students must improve their English if the fourth unit affiliation in English is to be merited.
8. Commendation should be extended to the community for the many improvements over last year: a regular principal has been placed in the grammar school; a card system of permanent records has been added; additional equipment for the home economics department has been installed; $90.00 has been spent on grammar school libraries; agriculture equipment has been increased; receipts from tuition collections will be used to buy equipment; a stove has been bought for the use of the office to save heating the entire system for office work on Saturday; additional drinking fountains have been installed in the grammar school building.
9. We recommend that, if the re-

- Fred Snyder, of Lubbock, was attending to business matters in Sudan this week.

That Sudan is in the hearts of her citizens permanently, and that they have faith in her future, is evidenced this week by the announcement that the progressive firm of Higginbotham-Bartlett will spend approximately $50,000 on new structures within the next few months.

The investors will erect a building 30x140 between the school building and the Morrow Garage, and this will be used as an office.

South of the Sudan Drug Store is the firm's intention to erect one building 25x140, and two others 25x40, the total cost of the structures to be included in the above amount.

This is the spirit that builds cities. This is what it takes to put Sudan on the map as queen of the Plains, and what it takes to make a city where a city belongs.

The News congratulates the firm on their initiative, and wishes them an increment in business commensurate with their investment.

County Agent's Father Fatally Burned Nov. 6

(Amherst Argus)
Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Adam returned home Wednesday from Marlin where they have been the past ten days at the bedside of Mr. Adam's father, who died there November 6.

The deceased was 57 years old; a member of the K. P.'s and of the Methodist church. He had been sick for several days and the cause of his death was given as paralysis and apoplexy. He is survived by his wife, three sons and one daughter. Deceased was born in Germany in 1871. We extend sympathies to the bereaved.

EDITOR'S NOTE

The News this week wishes to caution its readers to be careful, yes, very, very careful, indeed, they should be cautious, very cautious, when they go to read the continued story in this issue of their favorite paper—The News.

The reason of this advice is that there are two installments, and if, by an inadvertence, you should read the wrong installment first, it would be like standing on your head to view the sky—you would be out of position. Examine the head and chapter number of the story before you read, and if you are right—plough in.

Sheriff's Force Lands Booze Car And Puts Driver In Jail

That Lamb County is blessed with an efficient sheriff's force that is always alert to action, and has its eye out for criminals, is evidenced by the captures that have been consummated recently of wrong doers.

But among the sheriff's force is one whose "nose for crime" seems to border on the uncanny, so efficient is he in detecting a criminal in the act of doing, rather than in the aftermath of the act, and that person is no other than Deputy Sheriff Gaston Patterson.

Patterson is young in years, but he evinces a knowledge of crime and criminals that is well worthy of an older and more experienced head.

Friday of last week his instinct for law enforcement, carried him out onto the Clovis and Olton highway about a mile, when suddenly a Ford roadster approached him, which looked highly suspicious to the officer. He halted the driver to stop, and when he did, the officer took a look into the car, found 25 gallons of whiskey, it is reported. Now the driver is languishing in jail wondering just how he will obtain his freedom. He is awaiting bond, or if he can't make bond, the action of the next grand jury will determine his status.

Such vigilance on the part of the sheriff's force is commendable, and the good people of the county, as well as all others, have a wholesome respect for the force.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe those three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. SYNOPSIS

That her grandfather left her the architectural monastery known as "Dinsmore's Folly" is, for esthetic reasons, by no means pleasing to Ethel Dinsmore, modern "dapper." She would refuse the bequest, but her father, millionaire head of Consolidated Trust, will not allow it. Edith visits the place. Perkins, the caretaker, is the victim of a matrimonial mishap, his wife having left him. Fred James, newspaper reporter, comes. Mr. Paul, Dinsmore's right-hand man, proposes to Edith and is rejected. He takes the rejection in a melodramatic manner. Edith sees a connection between Perkins' runaway wife and Mr. Paul. Riding with Fred James, Edith's horse bolts. The runaway is stopped by a stranger who does not give his name. Edith hereafter calls him M. P. (My Preserver). With her sister, Josephine, and Fred James, Edith attends a prize fight. Police raid the place. The girl is saved from the indignity of arrest by the same man who had stopped her runaway horse. She learns his name is Braxton, and allows him to think she is a poor relation of the Dinsmores.

Mr. Paul, it seemed, had heard somewhere, not about that fight (that would have been the limit) but about Josephine's and my expeditions with Fred. He had reported the facts to Father, and he had added that people were saying that Fred and I were getting too fond of each other and ought to be kept apart. Father had been astonished and had sent for Josephine to ask about it. Josephine had confessed to the expeditions, but she had been flabbergasted by the report about Fred and me. She told Father that she had never suspected it. So Father sent for Fred to ask him about it.

This made me hopping mad. It was like asking Fred his intentions!—as if Fred's intentions mattered!—Father ought to have known that my intentions were the only ones of consequence. I flared up when Josephine told me, and I guess I said some mean things about Mr. Paul—conscientious old idiot! Even as I said them I was ashamed.

After I had quieted down again Josephine wanted to know whether it was true about Fred.

I told her what Fred had said on that horseback ride and how I had tried to encourage him to resume later and how I had failed. Josephine didn't say much; Josephine never does say much; but I could see that she was relieved.

About this time I heard the front door shut; a minute or so later I discovered that Fred had shut it. He had come from Father's den and had gone straight out of the house without stopping to say good-night to Josephine and me.

There was only one explanation that I could see; and that was that Father had insulted him—had ordered him out of the house, most probably. The injustice of the thing made me hopping mad, and I went straight to Father's room to have it out with him. But he wouldn't let me in. He called through the locked door that he was too busy to see me and that I must wait till tomorrow. So I waited; I know enough not to butt my head against a stone wall; and Father can be the stoutest sort of stone wall on occasion.

As a matter of fact I didn't see Father the next day, nor for several days after that. He left for Washington that same midnight and didn't get back till the end of the week. Meanwhile, Fred did not call again, and I got madder than ever. On Friday I called up the office and found that Father had just gotten back; and I went straight down town to see him. At the door of his inner office I met Mr. Paul, also just going in. (I certainly do have rotten luck sometimes). And the next instant, before I could say "howdy do; good-by!" Father appeared in the door of the office. And with him, of all persons in the world, was Fred.

It was really queer how it happened. Father glanced at Mr. Paul and me and then turned back to Fred and positively roared at him. "Not a word more! Your conduct has been outrageous. Don't dare to put your foot in this office again." Fred looked thunderstruck. Then he gulped and started to speak. Then he apparently decided not to. He just went away. He didn't even speak to me; he just bowed and went.

The next minute Father turned to me. "Hello, Edith!" he said. "Glad to see you. Come inside, and let's have it out." Then he glanced at Mr. Paul. "Paul," he said, "you'll excuse me for a few minutes, I know, while I talk to Edith. That young jackanapes of a reporter has irritated me more than anyone has dared to do for years."

Of course Mr. Paul said he'd excuse him; and Dad took me on into his office and shut the door. No doubt he had something very important to say, but if he did, I beat him to it. "Father," said I, "I came to tell you something. You'll be happy to hear it, because you suggested it. Otherwise I'm sure I should never have thought of it. I'm in love with Fred James."

I stopped. I was scared for a moment. This was carrying the war into Africa with a vengeance; and I was afraid that father might have apoplexy. But I needn't have worried. Father had had verbal bombs exploded under him before. "Good!" he said, without moving a muscle. "I was speaking to Josephine about it only a day or so ago."

This spoiled my game—and I guess I showed it. I hadn't acquired Dad's poker face then, though I was learning. Moreover, though I knew perfectly well that he was bluffing, his words set me against Fred. I was sorry for Fred, of course, if he had set his heart on me; but goodness, he wasn't the only one; there were others.

"Who told you, Father?" I asked in a desperate effort to conceal my dismay by speech.

"Oh, I scarcely know," replied my fond parent, meditatively. "I had been noticing it for some time! Can you beat that?—but when Paul spoke of it—"

So it was Mr. Paul. I had known it, of course, but Father's confirmation made it certain. "Bother Mr. Paul!" I said petulantly.

"You can't," replied Father. "He never gets bothered about anything. By the way, now that we've had our talk, let's have Paul in. I fancy he's in a hurry."

And before I could object Mr. Paul was in.

I stared at him as he came in. "Mr. Paul!" I exclaimed, sharply.

Mr. Paul came forward gravely. "Yes, Miss Edith?" he said. Either he didn't notice that I was mad or he didn't care or—Oh! What's the use? Sometimes I could get the best of Father, but try as I might I never got the best of Mr. Paul.

I was sure sometimes that he wasn't a real human being, but merely an incarnation of corporation law—smooth and polished and full of tricks. "Well, Miss Edith?" he said, and stood waiting respectfully, as calm as if he hadn't known how I hated him.

"It isn't well," I snapped. "What do you mean by meddling in my affairs? How dared you tell father that I was in love with Fred James?"

Mr. Paul's eyes twinkled. "I could enter a plea of confession and avoidance," he said. (It was just like him to use words that he knew I didn't know; I made a mental note to look them up). "But you don't like technicalities, so I won't offer you any. I'll just own up and say I didn't mean anything and ask you to forgive me."

Great Singer Famous for Her "Temperament"

The great Patti's mother—also a noted prima donna—was a victim of that besetting sin, jealousy. One evening, relates Emma Calve, singing with a colleague who had false eyebrows, the elder Patti, jealous and furious at the success of her comrade, began to stare at her fixedly.

"What is the matter?" the other whispered under her breath.

"Your right eyebrow has fallen off," came the answer.

The poor victim, horrified, tore off her left eyebrow, and remained for the rest of the act with only her right one in place.

On another occasion Patti's mother became annoyed at the applause given Lablache, perhaps the greatest bass-

Of course there was nothing else for me to do. To refuse would have been ridiculous. Somehow he had put me in the wrong—no, he hadn't either, I'll say that for him. I had put myself in the wrong! He had had nothing to do with it. I would abase myself and—

But I didn't get a chance. I'm not slow in speaking—quite the opposite! And I didn't take half so long in deciding what to do as I've taken in writing it down. But somehow before I could begin to abase myself Mr. Paul had said that he would be at the office in the morning, or something like that, and had started for the door.

Then I turned to father. But Father was ready, too. He didn't say a word about Mr. Paul, for which I blessed him—Father never did rub things in; he merely picked up the conversation where it had been broken off.

"Yes! I had noticed your growing affection for Fred for some time," he said, "and I had made up my mind to send you to Japan. I—"

"To Japan?" I screamed.

"Yes! I haven't any objections to Fred—none in the world. But you're really too young to marry, Edith, and a voyage to Japan will give you a chance to learn whether your love is true."

The worst thing about Father is that you never can tell whether he is joking or not. He says the most plausible false things and the most preposterous true ones in exactly the same tone of voice.

And what made me maddest, of course, was that I couldn't say a word—not after the way I had opened the argument.

"You will go, won't you?" finished Father.

I grinned mournfully. "I'll be delighted," I declared. "Perfectly delighted. I've always been crazy to go to Japan and—"

"Quite so," Father apparently considered the matter settled. "Run along then, and get ready. The steamer leaves Tuesday."

"Tuesday!" I screamed. "Next Tuesday? Three days from now?"

Father had begun to scan a paper. "Yes," he said, abstractedly. "The steamer What-do-you-call-her sails Saturday for Yokohama via Panama. I have engaged accommodations for you and Josephine and your Aunt Candice. . . . Now, about your allowance. Let's figure it out and—"

"No, thank you!" Here at least I could win. "Just double it—above all expenses, of course; and I'll try to get along on it." With head high I walked toward the door.

I have had experience with Father about that allowance before, you see. Father had the most extraordinary capacity for juggling figures. He could start with one added egg and prove in ten minutes that an enormous fortune was waiting for the man who collected all the other added eggs in the country and made lime out of the shells and celluloid out of the silk linings. He even proved to me once that I would have double the money to spend if I let him reduce my allowance one-half. How he proved it I never could remember, but I know I couldn't dispute his argument, though I tried hard enough. All I could do was to admit that he was right, thank him for putting me on, and add that I thought it would be more satisfactory all around if he used the same scheme to increase his own income—when, of course, he could well afford to double mine. Father was so pleased with this argument that he did double my allowance forthwith.

So this time I answered sharply and turned toward the door.

But at the threshold Father called me back. I looked around and found him holding out his hands and grinning. "Edie, old pal!" he laughed, and I flew back into his arms. Father certainly was a good old scout.

"You'll go, and take good care of Josephine and of your Aunt Candice, won't you, Edith?" he asked.

Of course I said that I would. And I meant it, too. After all, it would be jolly to visit Japan.

Salesman Praises Gray Hair Restorer

Gray at 38—Uses S & S and Regains Glossy Black Hair

"I am a salesman thirty-eight years of age and I am writing to tell you how much I appreciate what S & S Hair Color Restorer has done for me. I was prematurely gray, my hair being streaked with parts of gray and white which made me look fifteen years older than I really am. A druggist in El Reno, Okla., told me about S & S and I bought a bottle. Now I am pleased to say that my hair is jet black and as glossy as a movie star's."

Women and men alike are finding that S & S Hair Color Restorer works like magic in restoring the natural color to gray or white hair. It does not affect curling or waving in any way.

S & S is not a hair darkener—not a dye. It is a clear, colorless liquid, guaranteed to restore the original color to gray or faded hair. It is pleasant to use and always makes the hair soft and lustrous. Get a bottle today at any good drug store or write S & S Central Laboratories, Inc., Cushing, Okla., enclosing $1.50 for full-size bottle. Why look old?—Adv.

Denver Boy

is a Winner

Every mother realizes how important it is to teach children good habits of conduct but many of them fail to realize the importance of teaching their children good bowel habits until the poisons from decaying waste held too long in the system have begun to affect the child's health.

Watch your child and at the first sign of constipation, give him a little California Fig Syrup. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it quickly drives away those distressing ailments, such as headaches, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness, feverishness, fretfulness, etc. It gives them a hearty appetite, regulates their stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. For over fifty years, leading physicians have prescribed it for half-sick, bilious, constipated children. More than 4 million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it.

Mrs. C. G. Wilcox, 3855 1/2 Wolf St., Denver, Colorado, says: "My son, Jackie, is a prize winner for health, now, but we had a lot of trouble with him before we found his trouble was constipation and began giving him California Fig Syrup. It fixed him up quick, gave him a good appetite, made him sleep fine and he's been gaining in weight right along since the first few days, taking it."

To avoid inferior imitations of California Fig Syrup, always look for the word "California" on the carton.

POULTRY FACTS

RAISING GUINEAS
NOT DIFFICULT

I've been raising guineas a number of years and have often wondered why they are not more plentiful on general farms, as they can be raised in connection with turkeys or chickens with very little extra labor, writes M. G. Roberts in Farm and Ranch.

Guinea is served on the tables of American hotels under various names, as it is the best substitute for game of any of our domestic poultry. The meat has a distinct game flavor quite different from chicken or turkey.

There are three varieties of guineas raised in America, the Pearl, the White, and the Lavender. I have raised both the White and Pearl varieties, but found little difference between them, although the Pearl might be just a little harder and easier to raise.

These birds are great layers. Although their eggs are not quite so large as hen eggs, they are of a richer flavor. They begin laying early in the spring, sometimes in March, and lay until cold weather if not allowed to set. The first pair of guinea I bought, the hens laid 80 eggs. That I got the first season, and set and raised a brood of young ones, and this exceeds the average chicken hen.

These birds cannot be confined in small yards and do much good, but if given their liberty on general farms will pick up most of their living.

They do not damage planted fields or crops as do turkeys or chickens, as they never scratch, but they will destroy more insects than any other fowl, and never stay away from home.

They are always on the lookout for any strange animal or bird, and their sharp eyes will detect the presence of a hawk long before chickens will notice it, and their shrill cries always give warning of any intruder. This fact should make them a welcome addition to general farms where other poultry is raised, if they had no other good qualities.

Any little disturbance in the night sets them to cackling, and therefore chicken thieves usually give a wide berth to the flock housed with guinea.

Guinea eggs hatch in from 25 to 28 days, and usually all hatch at about the same time. They are remarkably fertile and almost every egg set will produce a guinea chick. They do better when set under chicken hens, as they can usually be given better care. The guinea hen will sit and hatch well, but as soon as the first ones hatched are able to travel she will often leave the nest and the balance of her eggs.

Hens Will Appreciate Clean Winter Quarters

"Clean house now," is the advice of A. C. Smith, chief of the poultry division, University of Minnesota, to poultry keepers of the state who hope to make winter egg production profitable. Here is his recipe for cleaning the hen house:

"Brush down the ceiling and walls, and get all the dust and cobwebs out of the building. Take out all the movable fittings, including nests, nesting material, roosting platforms, water-stands, and feeders, and clean thoroughly. Sun and air them for a few days if possible, and then spray with a combined disinfectant and insecticide. Burn all nesting material and floor litter.

"If your floors are of sand or gravel—if properly constructed, you cannot have better—remove as much of the top as has become discolored and replace at once with new, clean, fresh gravel or sand. Spray the entire wall space as well as the fittings."

Typhoid Contagious

Fowl typhoid is highly contagious. It can be carried by surface washings of the soil, by English sparrows, dogs and humans. A good cleanup is the best war measure against this disease, using the plow or spade on yards, with slaked lime, and scrubbing and disinfecting the house. Sick birds should be killed promptly and burned, and the healthy birds moved to fresh ground. Give epsom salts, a pound to 100 birds.

Poultry Plans

Many people have found the budget very helpful in keeping their household accounts in shape but they have not yet adopted the same principle in their poultry business. One of the troubles with the way poultry is kept on most farms is too little planning of the work. Many people do not know how many chickens they are going to hatch or buy, what feeds they are going to use, how large a flock they want for the winter or how the birds are to be handled or marketed.

Oat Sprouter

An easily built oat sprouter may be constructed by making an upright frame 7 feet high and about 2 feet wide and 2 feet deep. Seven trays, one for each day in the week, are made to fit into the frame. The outfit may be left in any warm room. If desired, the frame may be covered, and a lamp placed in the bottom to furnish heat. When a tray is emptied, a new supply of oats is immediately placed on it, so that one tray is ready for each day of feeding.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

MODEL 40 ELECTRIC, $77

For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77 (without tubes). Also Model 42 with automatic voltage regulator, $95, and Model 44, an extra powerful "distance" set, $105 (without tubes).

For direct current, Model 41, $87 (without tubes).

What a comfort to know your radio is faithful ...

"MARY, turn on the radio and see what the weather man says. Then let's see if there isn't a good male quartette somewhere, or a brass band—"

What a satisfaction it is to know your radio will do its duty. Good, reliable Atwater Kent Radios! What a host of friends its dependability has made! "You can always count on an Atwater Kent"—wherever radio is known, that's what they say.

BATTERY SETS, $49.00

This quality of steadfastness is built in, and doubly assured by 222 factory tests or inspections. Hence the common remark, "If Atwater Kent makes it, it's right."

Solid mahogany cabinets. Panels satin-finished in gold. Model 48, $49; Model 49, extra-powerful, $58. Prices do not include tubes or batteries.

The 1929 Atwater Kent all-electric set is powered wholly from the house lighting circuit. You snap a switch to turn the current on and off, just as you do with an electric light. Always ready to operate. Current costs only a fraction of a cent an hour.

eliminates chains !!

cleated tires that grip
like a cleated shoe

CHAINS this winter? NO! Yet, safety all the time—not just when chains are on! And quietness all the time—not just when chains are off!

Cleated tires are the tire industry's answer to winter's most annoying problem. What an innovation!

The picture tells the story. Cleated tires . . . grip wet roads . . . bite into snow . . . are sure-footed in slush and mud . . . respond effectively to the demands of four-wheel brakes.

AND THEN, after the trying conditions of winter have worn down the cleats, comes into play the standard long mileage Dunlop non-skid balloon tread . . . ready when spring comes to take over the changed road demands brought about by the difference between winter and spring road conditions.

The winter mileage provided by the cleats themselves is entirely additional to the standard tread mileage.

Dunlop considers this winterized tire one of the greatest of its many inventions for the safety and comfort of motorists.

REFERRING TO PANTS

A local school boy, while he was figuring out how Columbus came to make such a mistake as to invent this country, scribbled the following on his arithmetic pad:

Pants are made for men and not for women. Women are made for men and not for pants. When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man, that makes a pair of pnts. Pants are like molasses, they are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold weather. There has been very much discussion as to whether pants is singular or plural. Seems to us when men wear pants it is plural, and when they don't wear pants it is singular. If you want to make the pants last, make the coat first.

President-Elect Hoover Seems Public Favorite

(Exchange)

The people of the United States have unmistakably elected Herbert Hoover president of their country. Although it is true that religious prejudice, intolerance, and accusations of Tammany played a very great part, the comparative prosperity of the East, and the satisfaction of the West had a great influence with the vote. The middle western farmers also were highly satisfied with the present state of affairs, and voted accordingly.

We salute Herbert Hoover and ask only that he do as he promised the East, West, North and South he would do. We hope that he will pull away from certain influences that have bound President Coolidge's hands, and which threaten his own independent action, and become again that self-contained executive individual whose war-time activities were the admiration of all.

We still believe that Alfred E. Smith would have given us a more Democratic administration. To him we extend congratulations for the splendid fight he made, for the fearless defense of his principles, and for the vigorous manner in which he attacked vicious federal activities. He has great consolation in the fact that his popular vote is much greater in proportion than his electoral vote.

Not since the administration of Woodrow Wilson has a president had a greater opportunity to do progressive and constructive work. With congress republican and everything propitious there can be no excuse for postponing needed legislation.

As American citizens we promise allegiance to our government under its new leader, and pledge ourselves to support all legislative, judicial and executive activities that we can conscientiously approve.

Occasions Teach New Duties

That new occasions teach new duties is illustrated in the fact that President-elect Herbert Hoover can contemplate a trip to South America without the age-old shout of the president or the prospective president staying at home and attending to home affairs. Ten years ago when President Wilson went to Paris to consummate a treaty of peace a howl went up by the so-called isolationists that no American president should leave his native soil. But Wilson went, and his going resulted in our taking a place in the world's politics and business that we could not have had, if we had remained aloof.

Mr. Hoover is planning a trip to South America ostensibly to create good will and to inform himself on the conditions in Latin America. His going is held by thinking men and women and by great newspapers to be a excellent thing. It is. We hope that his trip may prove most profitable to him.

We wonder if he realizes that the man who brought him before the public also made it possible for him to take his tour without public censure or condemnation?

Texas rates first among the states in number of ice manufacturing plants and number of persons engaged in the industry. The annual production is valued at $25,000,000.

For eight years Texas has been the leading state in total value of crops produced. It is estimated the production could be more than doubled by increasing land in cultivation.

Nature Thought of Everything

Nature thought of everything when the human body was made. When the body is about to become ill, nature planned danger signals to warn us. Thus, if our children grind their teeth when they sleep, or lack appetite, or suffer from abdominal pains, or itch about the nose and fingers, we should know that they may have contracted worms. Then, if we are wise, we buy a bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge and safely and surely expel the worms. Thus we avoid the danger of very serious trouble. CITY MARSHAL TELLS WEIRD TALES ABOUT TRIP TO BOWIE

City Marshall Cooper, Sudan's law enforcer par excellence, returned recently from a trip to Bowie where he went to get his wife, thus completing the family's moving to Sudan, the queen of the Plains, to become stalwart citizens, and enjoy life as they should.

Marshall Cooper says that all the water in the world rained down on him, ahead of him and against him, and that though the trip was fraught with many pleasures, the mud did its derndest to push him in the ditch and make him stay there. He says that at times he did not know whether to take a ship, swim or wade, but that perseverance and a cool head brought he and his wife to a safe landing in Sudan.

The family have been fortunate in securing a residence, and will be at home as soon as they get things arranged.

Sudan welcomes them and wishes them all the good things of life.

DRUG STORE CHANGES HANDS

A deal was consummated the first of the week between F. M. Farris and Guy Russell, co-joint owners of the Sudan Drug Store, in which Mr. Farris purchased Mr. Russell's interest.

Mr. Russell left for Sayre, Oklahoma, his former home, where he expects to enter business.

The business circles of Sudan all join with The News in wishing Mr. Russell success.

Nine-Tenths Preventable

Nine-tenths of all the diseases of the American people can be traced directly to constipation, doctors say. Constipation throws into the system poisons which taint and weaken every organ of the body and make them easy victims for any germs which attack them. Prevent constipation and you will avoid nine-tenths of all diseases, with their consequent pain and financial losses. Herbine, the good old vegetable cathartic, will prevent constipation in a natural, easy and pleasant way. Get a bottle today from H. G. Ramby Drug Store

FRONT PAGE BOX DOPE ON DEER HUNTING FOR ALL PLAINS COUNTRY

Open season for shooting deer in the north and south zones of Texas will begin November 16 and will last until December 31, according to officials. Only buck deer of three points or more may be killed by one hunter during the season.

Bear season is the same as the period for hunting deer. Only one bear is permitted to be killed by each hunter in a season. Quail and Mexican pheasant may be killed in the north and south ones from December 1 until January 16. The bag limit is 12 in a day, but not more than 36 may be killed in a week.

Wild turkey gobblers may be hunted from November 16 until December 31. The limit is three a season. However, until November 16, 1930, in the following counties hunting is prohibited: Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr, Willacy, Kennedy, Brooks, Kleberg and Nueces.

Attention is called to the federal law which prohibits shooting of migratory birds a season between sunset and one-half an hour before sunrise.

SYNOPSIS

That her grandfather left her the architectural monstrosity known as "Dinsmore's Folly" is, for aesthetic reasons, by no means pleasing to Ethel Dinsmore, modern "rapper." She would refuse the bequest, but her father will not allow it. Edith visits the place. Perkins, the caretaker, is the victim of a matrimonial mishap, his wife having left him. Fred James, newspaper reporter, comes. Mr. Paul, Dinsmore's right-handed man, proposes to Edith and is rejected. He takes the rejection in a melodramatic manner. Edith sees a connection between Perkins' runaway wife and Mr. Paul. Riding with Fred James, Edith's horse bolts. The runaway is stopped by a stranger who does not give his name. Edith hereafter calls him M. P. (My Preserver). With her sister, Josephine, and Fred James, Edith attends a prize fight. Police raid the place. The girl is saved from the indignity of arrest by the same man who had stopped her runaway horse. She learns his name is Braxton, and allows him to think she is a poor relation of the Dinsmores. Telling her father she is in love with Fred James, the old gentleman arranges for Josephine and Edith to take a trip to Japan, with their Aunt Candice.

CHAPTER IV

Three days later, Aunt Candice and Josephine and I found ourselves on the ship Something-or-other, ready to start on our long voyage.

We had been on board quite a while and had seen our staterooms and put our things carefully away where we wouldn't be able to find them, and had sniffed at the flowers and sampled the candy that our beaux had sent us, and had put Aunt Candice to bed—

Oh, yes. Of course we had put Aunt Candice to bed. Aunt Candice always went to bed as soon as she got on board a ship.

Aunt Candice never got seasick, but she was affected with bilious spells that came on her abruptly, without the least apparent cause, and that bound her to her bed for days at a time. One of these had overcome her just after she had caught her first whiff of the bilge-water, and she had thought it best to lie down. I had voyaged with Aunt Candice before, and I was perfectly sure that this "spell" would last about three days unless the weather should get suddenly bad. Aunt Candice does not cut much figure in this story; she couldn't, for reasons that will very shortly appear. I mention her, merely to show that Josephine and I did not always run about unchaperoned.

When we had put her to bed we went on deck to wait for Father.

He had not been able to come down with us, but he had promised to turn up before the steamer left; and of course we had to be ready to wait for him.

"We watched and watched and the minutes flew, but Dad did not appear. It was getting perilously near sailing time, too. Still, I was not worried—much. Dad always kept his engagements and he had sworn (across his heart and hope to die) to keep this one. So I waited and trusted.

By and by a messenger boy, conveyed by a steward, came pushing through the crowd to our side and handed me a note. It was from Father.

"Don't be worried if I'm late," he wrote. "Paul and I have been detained here at the office, but I'm just about to start. I'll see you off if I have to hire a tug to do it."

This was consoling, and it pacified me for a time. But after a while I began to get irritated. Even if Father should come now he wouldn't have time to do more than say "howdy do; good-by" before the steamer started.

Then, all of a sudden, I saw Fred. He was on the lower deck and he was carrying a bouquet as big as a house. He was rampaging through the crowd exactly as if he were a football player chasing a touch-down—or whatever it is they chase. (I never could understand football.) A humane desire to save the lives of the people who stood in his path moved me to lean over the rail and hawl to him. He heard me, looked up, waved that profligate bouquet, and charged for the companionway.

A moment later he was beside us. Josephine was nearest to him and he thrust his roses into her hands. "I'm absent without leave," he panted, "and I've got to rush back right away. There's trouble around the city hall. A batch of indictments have come from the grand jury room, and it's rumored that some big sensations are going to be sprung. I've got no business to be off my beat. But I had to see you before you left. If you see your father tell him to read the papers before he goes back to his office. . . . Good-by." He grabbed Josephine's hand.

He didn't grab mine. I jerked it away. "Good gracious, Fred James," I exclaimed. "Don't be in such an awful rush. What's in the papers? And why should I tell Father?"

I stopped. There was no one left to talk to. Fred was halfway to the companionway, plunging over perfectly inoffensive people. I determined to punish Mr. Fred for that—when I got back from Japan.

Meanwhile I turned to the rail and looked for Father; it wasn't him to be late. But he did not appear. I watched the crowd for a little while; and then, tiring of this, I turned and contemplated the ship.

town measure, of course), as broad as a church, and about four stories high, including the basement. I knew it had elevators and a swimming pool, and a dining saloon (it occurred to me right there that Aunt Candice probably never would see that dining saloon, but it didn't occur to me that I never would, either), and retail stores, and—and—lots of things. No doubt a good many of the people who had come on board to see other people off were below somewhere gawking at these things; but the people on deck were not concerned with them. They were talking, all of them—not listening. Nobody was listening, except two or three forlorn females like Josephine and myself.

"Good-by! Shoot us a wireless once in a while. . . . Wish I was going. . . . For the love of Mike, Bill, where did you put that snake-bite medicine? . . . Take good care of her, George; she's never been away from me before. . . . That's a good girl. Kiss Uncle Bill for me. . . . Wuxtry! Wuxtry! All about the Dinsmore indictment. Wuxtry! Wuxtry!"

The Dinsmore indictment! Slowly the words penetrated my consciousness, and made me wrinkle my brows irritably. Why, I wondered, couldn't people who . . . our name behave themselves and not do things that would bring the law down upon them? Dinsmore was a rather distinguished name; surely the few who had it might remember to keep it out of the mud. I didn't know just what an indictment was, but I had a vague idea that it was something disagreeable.

"Wuxtry! Wuxtry! All about Curtis Dinsmore indicted."

"Curtis Dinsmore!" This passed a joke. Curtis was my father's name and—I spun around. "Here, boy!" I called. "Give me a paper."

He gave it, and I read it. It was about Father, all right. A warrant for his arrest had been issued but had not been served, "because Mr. Dinsmore cannot be reached. He was seen to enter his offices this morning, and is known not to have left them. Mr. McCutcheon, his head clerk, denies that he is there but refuses to permit the premises to be examined. A search warrant will be obtained immediately." And so forth.

Father! Indicted! Warrant for his arrest! Good heaven! I couldn't believe it. Father! Why, he didn't say a word to me about it. And surely they wouldn't have dared to indict Father without telling him about it. And sure he would have said something about it when he 'phoned that he was starting for the ship! And he had started, of course. But why hadn't he arrived? I was sure that he hadn't. I had been watching for him too closely. I was sure I couldn't have missed seeing him. He hadn't gotten to the ship. Good gracious! Of course he hadn't. He had been ar-

Odd Power Credited to Precious Stones

Superstitions still persist about the magical properties of many stones. On account of that associated with the opal, the proposal is frequently made by jewelers' associations to remove it from the list of "birth stones."

Strange places have been looked in to for stones possessing unusual requirements. The gizzard of a rooster is said to have revealed a stone which rendered wives more agreeable to their husbands; the shell of a crab yielded a stone for sore eyes. Beads of paste or glass were in common use in ancient Gaul under the name of serpents' eggs. They were thought to be generated from the breath of the serpents, being shot into the air from their hissing jaws. Soldiers wore serpents' eggs to make them invincible.

It was long believed that a sap-birch would heal diseases of the eye; and such a stone was once given to the treasury of St. Paul's by a well-meaning London grocer, to be used rested on the way! He was in jail—in jail—

The whistle blew, once, twice, three times. We were about to start. In another moment we would be gone and Father would be left in jail. What was I to do? What was I to do?

"All ashore that's going ashore! All ashore!" A megaphone trumpeted the words over the decks, and a catfooted steward echoed them in my ear.

Of course Josephine says I ought to have asked her. But that's a joke! Nobody ever asks Josephine anything. She would probably have given the right answer—in time, in the full of time. But time, full or not full, was what I didn't have.

"All ashore!" Of course! That was the answer. I turned and grabbed Josephine and rushed her along the deck, down the stairs, to the gang-plank. Here, for the first time, she hung back—hung back effectively, I mean.

"Where—Where—What?" she gasped. "We—can't go ashore now! We'll be left—"

"Of course we will. We've got to be left. We wouldn't be right if we weren't left. Father has been indicted and arrested. He's in jail!" I whispered, shrilly. "We've got to stand by him. Come along!"

"Good heavens!" Josephine sagged. Then she braced up again. "But—"

"Come along. You can have all the time you want to think about it when we're ashore. Come!" I put my hand and my whole one hundred and five pounds against Josephine's shoulders and ran her through the midst of the last squad of departing visitors onto the head of the gang plank. I could tell by the feel of her shoulders that she was not convinced; but then I didn't expect her to be. She went ahead, and under the circumstances that was enough to satisfy any reasonable person.

It was only when we got on the wharf and found our progress checked by the crowd that she objected again. "Who brought you the message from Father?" she asked.

"Message? Oh, good gracious, Josephine! I didn't get any message. Father had no way to send us a message. I read it in this paper." I thrust the miserable sheet before her eyes. "Oh! How lucky it was I heard the boy and bought a copy. Five minutes more and we'd have been carried off, and poor Father would have been left all alone!"

I had been steadily propelling Josephine while I spoke, and had gotten her outside of the crowd and well down the pier before I finished. When I did finish, she stopped dead.

"How do you know that Father didn't plan to get us away because he . . . that this—this dreadful thing was going to happen?" she demanded. I caught my breath. Sure enough! How did I know? My lower jaw sagged. Then I braced up.

"Very likely he did!" I declared. "But what difference does that make? We're not going to desert him, even if he wants us to."

"I am!" Josephine's voice was decided. "If Father had wanted us to stay he'd have said so. He didn't say so; therefore he wants us to go. And I'm going." Josephine caught my arm and began to drag me back.

I didn't insist. It wasn't necessary. "All right," I said. "If you want to desert the father who so—if you want to desert Father, I'm sorry I brought you ashore. But it's too late to get on board now. The steamer is off."

It was, too. Josephine looked at it for a moment. Then she surrendered. I'll say this for Josephine; she has a most unfeminine habit of surrendering without any back talk, when she can't help herself. She doesn't fuss and she doesn't sulk. Really, she misses half the fun of being a woman.

Silently we walked along the pier. I called a taxi and we got in and gave the man the address, and we started. We were half way home before either of us remembered poor Aunt Candice, prepared for the worst (which was sure to happen). Only she didn't dream how very worse it was to be. I was about to speak of it to Josephine, but on consideration—I can consider when there is no particular need to act without consideration—I decided that I had better not worry her any more.

SANTA'S PLAN

You know that if you haven't a fireplace in your house you can leave your letters for Santa Claus by the fire escapes if you live in an apartment house.

In fact Santa Claus can find out just where all his letters are and daddies are always told where Santa Claus is going to have all his branch post offices.

A little boy named Jack wanted an airplane—a toy make-believe airplane for a Christmas present.

Well, Jack wrote a letter to Santa Claus and this is what he wrote, after addressing it to Mr. Santa Claus, Care the Fireplace: "Dear Santa Claus: "My name is Jack—that is I am called Jack though my real name is John."

"But don't ever speak of me as John, for though I think it is a very nice name and though I don't object to it in the least, still I am never called anything but Jack."

"I like Jack for a name, too, don't you, Santa Claus? "It's so easy to say. "I tell you all this, Santa Claus, so you won't ask for John's stocking when you're around on Christmas eve."

"Please, Santa Claus, don't forget to ask for Jack's stocking! "And for Jack's house—not John's house. There are other Jacks in the world, but I'm the only Jack in my house, so you will know.

"Please, Santa Claus, give me a little toy airplane. For when I am grown-up I want to go up in the air in a real one!"

"I'd love to fly and so I'd like a little airplane which would fly around the room as I've seen them do in the store."

"The store at the second corner after you pass my house has one. "It looks like a nice one, too. "Wishing you a merry Christmas. "Your loving friend, "JACK."

Well, Santa Claus received that letter, and he went to the store and he asked the man to save that very airplane for him which Jack had admired.

And when Christmas morning comes Jack will receive his airplane. Don't you think he'll be very, very happy about it?

And can't you just see the fun he'll be flying it about, and how he'll be thinking and planning for the days when he is grown-up and can go up in a real one.

Another thing Santa Claus is going to give Jack is a book on men who have been fine aviators, so Jack will be able to learn a great deal about aviation in plenty of time for his flying days!

It is certain Jack will have a Merry Christmas!

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from over-work, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

The Easiest Way to Keep in Style

By MAE MARTIN

No woman would wear dresses, or blouses, or stockings of a color that's decidedly out of style or faded. If all of us knew how easy it is to make things fresh, crisp and stylish by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. Tinting with them is as easy as buying. New, stylish colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond Dyes never spot, streak or run. They are real dyes, like those used when the cloth was made. Insist on them and save disappointment.
My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's Free. Write for it now, to Mae Martin, Dept. D-143, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.
It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."
Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is limited, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

POULTRY

CLEAN EGGS ARE MOST PROFITABLE

Clean, spotless eggs bring an average of three cents per dozen more than dirty eggs and at times an even greater premium is paid. When feed is high and eggs plentiful this premium is oftentimes the margin between the cost of production and the selling price. Proper housing of the flock and careful handling of the eggs are necessary in order to secure clean eggs.
"Shape, size and color of eggs as well as texture of shell are determined by breeding and feeding; but, to have clean eggs, one must have a clean house and the eggs must be carefully handled after they are laid."
C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman at the North Carolina State college, "The eggs should be gathered once a day at least and more often if possible. One soiled egg will soil all of those in the nest."
Poultry houses should be of modern construction with the dropping boards placed away from the nests. These boards should be cleaned every day as well as the running board in front of the nests. Good, clean litter should be provided and this should be changed as often as is necessary. Hens living in dirty houses and laying eggs in dirty nests will soil every egg in the nest. According to Mr. Parrish, this automatically cuts one-quarter of a cent from the price received for each egg.

Mr. Parrish also states that persons handling the eggs should be careful of their hands. Sweaty hands gather a certain amount of dust which adheres to the eggs, causing them to have a mottled, dirty appearance. If the hens have a clean house and the eggs are handled carefully, every poultry raiser in the state should get the added premium for his eggs, he states.

Henhouse and Roosts Are Crowded Too Much

The henhouse and roosts which accommodated several hundred small chicks last spring are not sufficient for the birds which have increased many times in size within the past three to four months. Crowding causes night sweating and the pullets therefore get chilled when they leave the house in the early morning in search of feed. This means congested lungs and air passages which eventually develop into colds and roup. It would be better to send one-half the flock to market and adequately care for the remainder than to attempt to keep more than one has accommodations for.

Dry Poultry House Is of Great Importance

A dry poultry house is important. Conditions outside may be unfavorable but with dry quarters there is little danger. To secure these conditions the floor should be elevated and so constructed that dampness cannot arise beneath. It is customary to put in coarse gravel or broken stone, then on this a layer of cement, then heavy roofing paper, then a two-inch layer of cement troweled smooth. If this is allowed to become thoroughly dry before putting in the chickens there will be no danger from that source. Some prefer a board floor, which gives good results, but it means a harbor for vermin.

Poultry Notes

- Pullets develop large, wide and deep bodies more readily when fed minerals.
- Trying to get eggs out of a scrub hen is like trying to get music out of a cornstalk fiddle.
- There is a market every day for poultry, but the best market is the co-operative market.
- A cull pullet is simply a pullet that does not exhibit the characteristics of a well-bred and well-developed bird of her variety and age.
- Neither blood nor management will take the place of an abundance of the right sort of feed.
- Where birds of different ages are running together, more care must be taken not to mistake lack of development for lack of size and vigor.
- The henhouse floor should be dry. A concrete or board floor is more sanitary than a dirt floor. Above all things, old dirt and litter should be replaced with fresh material.
- Are your cockerels using up valuable ground and feed and otherwise crowding your pullets? Get rid of them.
- Remember that the hens which lay the golden eggs are the ones that produce them when they bring the highest prices.
- The adult turkey is affected very little by the gapeworm, but acts as a carrier of the parasite by infecting the premises with worm eggs which are picked up by the chickens.

Trees Grow in Swamp Without Visible Soil

Huge trees growing without any visible means of support are a striking feature of the great Zapata swamp of southern Cuba. This swamp, nearly 1,500 square miles in extent, includes an area of limestone that is filled with holes and covered with a variety of tropical trees. Silk-cotton trees four feet in diameter, big mahoganies, and many other kinds are found growing on this limestone area, where not so much as a single spoon of soil could be gathered from an acre. The trees make their start in small pockets and holes in the limestone, where collections of leaves and slight accumulations of disintegrated rock furnish them with cover for growth. The roots stray about over the surface of the rock in search of food, finally plunging through holes to find sustenance in soil hidden deeply in the cavernous recesses of the coral stone.

Good Motto

Charles M. Schwab, who after many years as a leader in steel, is beginning to take things easier, said to a group of gentlemen farmers who were admiring some of his prize stock at a Pennsylvania county fair:
"Raising prize stock is something I've wanted to do for a long time but I've been too busy. Divided attention seldom leads to success and all through my business career my motto has been:
"All work and no play makes Jack and a lot of it."

(This Doctor's advice to mothers is invaluable)

He says

"Two tablespoonfuls of Karo in a glass of milk improves its flavor and doubles its food value."

"SERVE plenty of Karo to the kiddies", advises one of America's greatest Child specialists, "serve Karo especially to underweight children, in milk, on cereals, on sliced bread. Watch their weight increase!"

Karo gives muscular energy immediately—there's no tax on the digestive organs.
Karo contains 120 calories to the ounce—almost twice the energy value of eggs and lean meat, weight for weight.
Children naturally like Karo—its delicious sweetness and flavor satisfies their youthful craving for sweets.
To know that children like the food that's so good for them, a food that leading doctors highly endorse and recommend, is, indeed, good news to every mother.

ECONOMY

Compare the price of Karo per pound with other foods. Karo is unusually economical.

Toast To Football Coach of 1928

Coach, you are a wonder
 We want to tell you, too,
 That what we have accomplished
 We owe it all to you.

We owe you all the honor.
 In every game we won;
 We owe you all the touchdowns
 And every pretty run.

Now all the games are over,
 But we will not forget
 The happy days of practice
 When you made us work and sweat.

At times we didn't like it,
 And maybe'd fume and gripe,
 But it was what made us bulldogs,
 And taught us how to fight.
 —Grover H. Crain.

Would You Know One If You Saw It?

If you ever came face to face with a germ, would you recognize it? Of course it is not likely that you ever will see a germ, unless you own a tremendously powerful microscope, for you would have to magnify one over a thousand times to make it as big as a pin head. But you should recognize the fact that these tiny germs can get into your blood streams through the smallest cut, and give you typhoid fever, tuberculosis, lockjaw, blood poisoning, and many more dangerous and perhaps fatal diseases. There is one sure safeguard against these dangers — washing every cut, no matter how small, thoroughly with Liquid Borozone, the safe antiseptic. You can get Liquid Borozone at H. G.  We had our last football game last Monday. We could not beat them, but we did the next best thing, we played them to a scoreless tie. It was heart breaking to those boys who wore the gold and black of Sudan for the last time not to be able to win their last game, but they gave the best they had for their foster mother, Sudan High School. Those who are through with Sudan football are Martin Shuttleworth, Earl Allen, Pfeiffer Ramby (Captain), Bill Lendersin, Waldo Fisher. They are seniors and cannot play next year even if they should fail to graduate. We wish you luck, boys, for you certainly gave the old school all that you had in you.

 Basketball supplies are coming in for the boys and girls. We hope to have good teams in these sports, for today, sports are becoming a regular part of school training. In these sports we learn to give-and-take for the great school life, so our new jerseys, trunks, bloomers, balls, etc., make a tremendous appeal to the credit of our faculty that they permit no study time lost for a game. If it is necessary for us to gain time to meet a visiting team, we must lose playtime. Only recesses ever suffer for athletics. Wednesday of next week we meet Morton High School teams on our own courts in the first basketball games of the year to be played here.

 There have been several cases of tonsillitis reported in the grammar school, some teachers among them, but nothing serious has developed. The mother of Mrs. Wilkins, one of our primary teachers, has been very ill, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins were over at Ralls visiting her last week-end.

Coach Brown, Mr. Wilkins, and the football team were in Lubbock last Saturday, guests of Texas Technological College at a duck banquet, and guests of the college at the football game in the afternoon, also. Simmons won this game from Tech, and none of the boys seemed very elated over it. Clint Dyer took most of the party down in his school bus. He was fed like a school boy, and got to see the game as a guest. When he was asked if he were a football player he said that he was, that he usually played drawback on his home team, but had played every place except left out. He still thinks he played two quarters in the Tech-Simmons game.

We are through with our publicity for a time. We thank you, readers, for everything you have said in praise of our "news," and now next week meet the poor little fishes in their newspaper efforts.—The Sophs.

LAY AWAY FOR RAINY DAY

A lot of foolish folks today
 To put on style, keep up display,
 Are spending every cent they make,
 No heed of future needs they take.
 When sickness comes with money gone,
 Or old age comes a-creeping on,
 Alas! they'll find their substance spent,
 With naught to pay their keep or rent.
 The First National Bank has found it pays
 To save for sickness and rainy days.
