The workers conference programs are open to all the membership of the Baptist Churches and their friends. A Workers Conference program deals with the inspirational, promotional, and in-formational phase of Baptist denominational life. The Association is the only organizational phase of the denominational life that gives the local churches the opportunity to carry out a unified and systematic plan of work to meet the needs of each local situation.

There is no centralized unit of control, or any other type of supervisory capacity of directorship, in Southern Baptist Churches. Each church is a local organization within itself, free to function according to the teachings of the New Testament. Local pastors and individual church members comprise the various committees that plan the work of the Southern Baptist
