

Community Service For Fourteen Years

By Mike Harrington
Almost fourteen years ago (Feb. 14, 1947) the Ranger Community Library opened with nothing but a librarian, a building, and big hopes.

Mrs. J. E. McLaughlin worked with that library for seven years and started it on its way to being the community assets it is today. Presently the library contains 8400 volumes—books for all occasions.

Before moving to Dallas several years ago, Mrs. McLaughlin trained Mrs. Frances Jameson to take her place as librarian. For several years "Mrs. J." served at the library. I remember her best as always helping us little kids from Hodges find our books and get back to school before the recess bell rang. Now once again Mrs. McLaughlin has returned to Ranger and the Community Library. She, too, stands ready to serve the citizens of Ranger when the library can help them.

After practically growing up with the Community Library, I am well aware of its benefits. I have used it as a ready supply of children's books and as a sure reference for high school and college research themes. Only recently one young man inquired at the library for a book on how to build airplanes from old parts—something like a "hot-rod". Although a thorough search of the library revealed no such book, the incident goes to show that a community library can never tell for what she may be called upon.

Our library is used by children, high school and college students, housewives, and businessmen. It serves both for pleasure and business.

Now with November 15-19 set aside as National Book Week, I would like to remind the Rangers of the many opportunities of reading material to be found in our Community Library.

Forty-one members and guests were present. After the supper the group sang several songs of the World War One days.

Visitor From India Praises Hospitality

(Editor's Note: The following article was written by Sankar C. Maitra, superintendent of agriculture in West Bengal, India. Maitra is in the U. S. on an International Cooperation Administration fellowship.)
By SANKAR C. MAITRA
I came to Eastland County two months back to work in the field with Soil Conservation Service technicians. This was part of my assignment for 12 months training in Soil Conservation in U.S.A. under the International Cooperation Administration Fellowship.

I have completed my work leaving Eastland County today. India is my home, I have crossed 40 and I am over 18 years in service. I have spent the last 15 years of my life in Soil Conservation work in India. I have come to U.S.A. to learn the practical aspect of conservation program so that I may contribute to my share in the development of my country and especially to solve the acute food shortage problem on my return.

In Eastland County I was asked to come with the technicians in their day to day work and study how they face the problems as well as how they solve them. I have visited over 40 farms during this period. I have seen more and more farmers are becoming active members of the Upper Leon Soil Conservation District and trying to take full advantage by doing so. I have moved with the soil scientists and with a number of farmers.

During my stay in Eastland I made hundreds of friends in different walks of life and the hospitality I received in Eastland County will ever remain as a sweet memory in my mind.

I pray for more prosperity to Eastland County and her people.

When I was the editor of the Cisco Daily News back in 1924, there was a middle-aged man who came into the office almost every morning to read the "changes"—the newspapers of the area which we received in exchange for the News).

He was well-dressed, his linen was immaculate, his manner had the courtliness of the Old South. His name was Max Elser. He and a partner had built the telegraph line from Dallas to Fort Worth in anticipation of the arrival of Port Worth's first railroad. The construction of the railroad was delayed because of financial difficulties and so Elser operating the telegraph line about a year; then the Texas and Pacific reached the town and took over the line.

When I knew him, he was an old man. I don't think he drilled but sometimes had a financial interest in a test. His specialty was getting up blocks of acreage. Some years before, he had held leases on several thousand acres in an adjoining county and he became known as "the Count of Callahan."

Later, numerous oil pools were developed in Callahan County and, had Elser held on to all his holdings, he doubtless would have been a multimillionaire. But I doubt that he could have been any happier for he was, despite his years, one of the most alive men I have ever known.

There are some who were intended to be prophets who show the way to others. Such a pioneer was Max Elser, the Count of Callahan.

In the old days, most clearest smokers "rolled their own." There was a skill in this; also it was a graceful sight to see just the right amount of tobacco poured from the sack into the bent paper; then came the rolling into a neat little cylinder, the moistening with the tip of the tongue to "glue" the cigarette, and the final twist to the tip. Then this tip expired in a flare as the match was applied and the smoker inhaled the first draw, then—with a sigh of contentment—slowly exhaled the blue wisps of smoke.

Far many people are smoking cigarettes now than in those days but when was the last time you saw one rolled?

Little League To Elect Officers Thurs.

The Ranger Little League organization will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Chamber of Commerce office to elect officers for the coming year.

The Little League charters are due in the National Headquarters in Pennsylvania by Jan. 1 and it is necessary for Ranger to get their Little League organization re-organized for the coming season, president of the league, Charles Mahaffey announced today.

Current officers of the league are Mahaffey, president; Ray Williams, vice president; Marvin McGee, prayer agent; Francis Cox, secretary and Fannie Matthews, treasurer.

The Ranger Little League included a team from Strawn the past season for the first time, and it is anticipated that the Strawn team will participate again this season.

A financial report shows the League to be in good financial condition for the beginning of a new season. The purchased 75 new uniforms last season. This, and the regular operating expenses have all been paid for and a good surplus is on hand to get the new season started.

Mahaffey urged all interested in the Little League program to attend the Thursday meeting.

Review Rules Before Going On Deer Hunt

"Hunters heading for the field beginning opening day, Nov. 16, should take time out now to re-read some important musts," suggests J. B. Phillips, assistant director of law enforcement, Texas Game and Fish Commission. "This involves everything from giving equipment of the hunt a one-over, to the care of the kill."

Each year brings tragedy to the families of many hunters because of faulty gun or failure to obey the rules of safe hunting, according to Phillips. "A careful review of these rules and a double check of rifles and ammo may be more important than many hunters realize," he warned.

The assistant director also reminded hunters that crippled deer are potential killers. "Be positive that the deer you shoot are dead before getting too close to them. Only recently a story from out of the state told about a hunter who was killed by a wounded deer."

The woods this hunting season will be filled with hunters. Many of them will be out for the first time, and they will not be guarded at all times. The director suggested that these novices be extra careful, both when handling their rifles and when sighting in on deer. "Be certain it's a deer—a legal deer."

Taking care of the meat after the deer has been bagged also is important. "Know how to properly care for venison before you shoot. Lots of good meat is lost every year because of spoilage," said the director. "If you don't know how to care for the meat, ask someone before the hunt."

USDA Announces Peanut Quotas And Allotments

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Tamm Benson recently announced a national marketing quota of 970,000 tons on a national allotment of 610,000 acres for 1961 peanut crop. Both the marketing quota and the acreage allotments are at the levels approved by growers in a referendum in December, 1959.

Legislation provides that the marketing quota must be equal to the average quantity of peanuts harvested for nuts during the five years immediately preceding the year in which the quota is proclaimed. The quota, however, must be sufficient to provide a national acreage allotment of at least 1,310,000 acres.

The 1961-crop national peanut acreage allotment, less one-tenth of 1 percent reserved for new farms, is apportioned to states in accordance with provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended. The acreage allotment for each state will be apportioned among individual peanut-producing farms within that state.

According to figures released by the USDA, Texas peanut growers will share in a state allotment of 356,027 acres in 1961, an increase of only 15 acres over the 1960 state allotment.

Here's the Answer

Farm Machinery Efficiency Can Increase Profits

College Station—Machinery inefficiency can strike a devastating blow to farm profits. Cecil Parker, extension farm management specialist, says that every farm operator should know the cost of owning and operating machinery. If he does not, he is in a poor position to determine how to increase his machinery efficiency, Parker continues.

Fixed costs, such as depreciation, interest on investment, insurance, taxes and housing may represent the largest expense associated with owning machinery. If the farm is large enough, however, these costs may be small on a per acre basis.

Repair and maintenance may also involve a large cash outlay. High cost here can be caused by poor quality machinery, abuse by the operator, operating over rough terrain or a combination of these, Parker explains.

The specialist says other factors which affect machinery efficiency

Substitution of machinery for labor. Whether or not substitution is wise depends on the relative effect on labor costs. Return on investment. Capital invested in machinery and equipment may give a greater return if invested in some other phase of the farm business.

Availability. If machinery is not available when needed, lower yields and quality may result.

Farm size, type of work to be done and the possibility of hiring custom work.

In conclusion, Parker says that good farm machinery records are the only way to keep up with these costs and improve efficiency. He suggests consulting the local county agent on ways to increase farm profits by increasing machinery efficiency.

Simple Rules Can Help Save U. S. Money In Operating Post Office

"The rugged individualism of Americans is clearly evident in the sizes, shapes, and colors of the mails," says Postmaster Marene Johnson. In most instances the variations are reasonable and cause no difficulty, but quite often extremely small or odd-shaped envelopes and brightly colored ones or those of paper with an over-all design contribute to mishandling or loss in the mails. If most prompt and accurate postal service is to be given, these recommendations of the Post Office Department with regard to envelopes should be followed:

1. Use any light color that does not interfere with legible address and postmark. Brilliant colors should not be used.

2. Use paper strong enough to withstand normal handling in the mails. Highly glazed paper or that with an over-all design is not satisfactory for showing the address and necessary postal endorsements, legibly.

3. Use standard sizes. Envelopes smaller than 2-3/4 by 4 inches or larger than 9 by 12 inches are not recommended.

When window envelopes are used, they are subject to the following conditions:

1. The address window must be parallel with the length and in the lower portion of the envelope.

2. Nothing but the name, address, and any key number used by the mailer may appear through the address window.

3. The return address should appear in the upper left corner. Though recommended for all envelopes, this is especially important for the window type since the enclosure sometimes is inserted or slips in such manner that the address is not visible. In such cases, envelopes without return address must be treated as dead mail.

4. The address disclose through the window must be on white or light-colored paper.

By following the recommendations of the Postal Service with respect to envelopes, business firms and individuals can assure themselves of better mail service and make a real contribution to the efficient, economical operation of post offices in handling over 60 billion pieces of mail yearly.
