A UNIVERSAL BELIEF.

Dickens has often been severely taken to task because, in "A Tale of Two Cities," he has made such free use of the facial resemblance between Charles Darnay and Sydney Carton in working out the plot to the unforeseen conclusion.

In the beginning of the story he saves Darnay from probable execution by the expedient of making his identification by the hostile witnesses doubtful. Their doubt he makes very real by causing Carton to stand beside Darnay in the dock, so that all present, including the jury, could see for themselves the extraordinary likeness between the two young men and the consequent probability that a mistake had been made.

He uses the same resemblance in the end to allow Carton to take Darnay's place in the Parisian prison, and to save the life of the former by taking his place at the foot of the guillotine, and suffering the death penalty himself instead of the man who had succeeded in winning the heart and hand of Lucy Manette.

There are, indeed, certain difficulties to giving one's complete adhesion to the likelihood of so heroic an act of self-sacrifice, as well as to the means adopted to bring it about; but so fully do people believe in the possibility of mistaken identity that without positive identification by more than one person it is next to impossible to obtain convictions in criminal cases. This policy of juries probably frees the guilty in many instances, but public opinion excuses that by citing cases where it has spared the innocent.

TWILIGHT OF THE BULL.

Time was, in the merry heyday of Spain, when the bull stood for heroism and martyrdom. Great throngs gathered at festive arenas to see matadors, picadors and toreadors goad noble bulls into frenzy, then kill them. It was a great sport. The throngs laughed and waved mantillas and other Spanish objects of art. When the bull fell, part of the thrill to the crowd, no doubt, came in a feeling of feverish pity and sympathy for the dumb animal.

But now Spain is becoming civilized and has taken up soccer football as a halfway station to the more humane sports. One ponders a bit on the dumb animals who must compose the soccer teams of old Madrid and Seville. In fact, one comes to the conclusion that it would be pleasanter to be a jay-walking pedestrian than a Spanish soccer player. If the former, one could at least die quietly. It is possible that the players long wistfully for the good old days when the crowds indulged their bloodthirstiness on a bull which did not quite know what it was all about.

There is this to be said for Spanish soccer: It is difficult to believe that it will ever inspire an opera about an infuriated cigarette girl, her torador boy friend and a suicidal climax. In the modern sporting history of Spain there can be no such word as suicide, for none of the soccer players, it is believed, will live that long.

It is hoped that the bulls, with a heritage of generations of romantic deeds, will be retired to green pastures and the sunlit uplands of Granada and the Basque country, to make up in quiet contentment what has been denied a long line of their ancestors.

CORN MAY BE THE KING OF GRAIN.

Intense heat and the grasshopper plague in the upper corn belts may make corn the king of grain again this year. President Hoover has sounded a warning to the Red Cross organization that after the summer and the fall comes the winter months and that it will be well to be prepared.

CALLES AND THE BANKERS OF MEXICO.

Former President Calles is the president of the Bank of Mexico. He inaugurated a new monetary plan to boost the price of silver. Now the bankers of Mexico City are refusing to conduct all classes of ordinary transaction except the purchasing dollar. By common consent the money exchanges are closed temporarily, while the tendency of both gold and silver dollars continue upward. Calles is the strong man of Mexico. Now he is holding a job that will test his financial acumen as well as his courage and his ability. His plan is not the plan of the mighty nations of the earth. They are committed to the gold standard.

OKLAHOMA ICE MEN ARE GIVEN WARNING.

Governor Murray has notified the Oklahoma ice makers that if they refuse to chop rates at once the state will manufacture ice at huge plants at the state penitentiary and its reformatories. Governor Bill says the ice makers are charging exorbitant prices and that the constitution of Oklahoma provides a six per cent profit for corporations. Yes, Governor Bill is the best copy maker in America. Has he a presidential a-buzzing?

Theatre Designed By Mad Empress Is Now Talking Movie

BROWNSVILLE, Texas.—The historic old Teatro de la Reforma in Matamoros, designed by the mad Empress Charlotte three-quarters of a century ago, is to go the ways of many other picturesque border buildings.

The old theatre, considered one of the finest examples of opera houses of the early nineteenth century, will be remodeled, and go talkie.

It was built by Maximilian during his occupation of Matamoros, around 1865, and was designed by his young bride, Charlotte, who died a few years ago after a long and strange life during which she became known as the "Mad Empress."

The French forces imported to Matamoros one of the best opera companies of Paris and the Teatro de la Reforma became the social center of the entire section.

CARRIZO SPRINGS—Carrot crop product plant may be established in this city.

"Bathers" Barred from Park Walks

EL PASO—Put on your bathing suit, my dear, but you must stay near the water.

That is the rigid ruling that El Paso bathing girls have found to be in effect at local swimming pools.

Neighbors complained that girl swimmers failed to stay near the pool but insisted on wandering around the parks or playing tennis in their bathing suits.

"It is permissible to play tennis or go about the park in pajamas," Hugo Meyer, park commissioner, said. "I have seen no men playing in 'shorts,' however," he added.

CAR SWAPPED FOR DUMP TRAIN

PUEBLO, Colo.—Built at a cost of more than $35,000, and sent thousands of miles over the railroads of the United States, Canada and Mexico, the "Sunrise," 29-year-old private car of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, has been traded for a dump train.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, who came into office with a considerable reputation as a connoisseur of rarebits, hushes and omelettes and moved a stove in alongside his office so he might cook lunches to his heart's content, did not get far with that. Brown thought he was going to have more leisure than he has had. For a year and a half, with perhaps one or two exceptions, he hasn't used his little stove. More folks call on the P. M. G. than on any other cabinet official. He is the one who invariably seems to have callers waiting in his outer office. Other departments have diversified activities, whereas the post-office is just one large service where things seem to converge on the man at the top. Visitors pile in on Brown from all points of the compass—people to talk about airmail contracts, promote appointments and postoffice sites and grudge axes of all kinds. And not quite strange to relate, a steady stream of men flows in just to talk politics.

AROUND corn-planting time someone working in the Treasury Annex building on Pennsylvania avenue dropped some corn on the small lawn below. The corn sprouted and a tender-hearted grass-clipper let it grow. Now there are five high stalks of corn growing behind heavy ramparts of stone and gridded iron and even a couple of what seem to be ripe ears. It looks funny and there's speculation in the Coast Guard and Narcotics Bureau offices in the building as to who will pick the corn.

SENATOR GEORGE W. NORRIS of Nebraska went out to his home town of McCook this summer to start construction of a new house. He has a nephew who is an architect and they had planned a long, low, white building which presumably would have been a very beautiful indeed. But a next door neighbor, it turned out, had gone and built right up to the edge of the Norris ground and the plan had to be abandoned in favor of something like the old Norris house which didn't covge so much territory. The senator hadn't lived in his old house for many years. Norris has a large, attractive summer place at Waupeca, Wis., however, and his political enemies last year distributed pictures comparing the two houses and hinting that the senator had profited by his 1928 support of Al Smith, although everybody knew better. . . . This sort of stunt is often pulled on western members of Congress in campaigns. The Washington residence of the older Senator LaFollette and of Senator Wheeler of Montana have been widely published in past struggles as if to convince the voters that they lacked progressivism. A Kansas congressman a few years ago bought a nice place in Virginia and was defeated for reelection after a photographic reproduction of it had been plastered on nearly every telephone pole in his district.

THE ten-cent taxi fare which several cab companies established as a move in Washington's taxi rate was meant that five people could get in a cab and ride for miles at two cents apiece. And maybe you think they didn't take advantage of that!

ONE hears from the Senate Indian Affairs Committee that the original apartment houses in America are the pueblos of New Mexico, some of them centuries old. The largest run five or six stories high and house several hundred Indians in one or two-room apartments. Stairways up the side instead of elevators, of course. Mr. Antonio Mirabal, one of the leaders at the Taos pueblo where the dwellers still wear blankets and braided hair, recently visited the east and reports by letter as follows:

"I learn that the east is entirely different from our home, as we don't have many people and not hot like in the east and not much noise. New Mexico is the country for me, where I can do the fash and hunting any time I want."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE
 Shawnee, Okla.

John Temple Graves II, editorial columnist of the Birmingham (Alabama) Age-Herald, says:

That if Pollyanna were interviewed on the world-wide business clouds she could line them very handsomely in silver. She could say that the depression has instructed nations in mutual dependence. It is teaching them the futility of tariffs and presenting them, apparently with the most persuasive arguments ever yet offered for disarmament.

She could say it has shown the economic world that employers are customers, that buyers are sellers and that even competitors, in some sense, are co-sharers of a common economic lot.

She could say it has proven to the public that machines are not inflexible or fool-proof, that big business men are not necessarily great economists or statesmen, and that prodigality, gambling and greed can ruin the best-laid plans of eternal prosperity.

She could say that the loss in material value has been matched in many instances by a gain in spiritual ones, and that for the thousands who are worrying over declines in their incomes there are other thousands who have reconciled themselves to these declines and discovered in the newly forced simplicity of their living a certain blessed release from the plague of too many possessions.

Farm Is Site For An Accessory Plant

STANWOOD, Ia.—Not content with the revenue from his farm, Forest A. Miles has built, at a cost of $20,000, a manufacturing plant there.

The Miles Manufacturing & Engineering company is a family enterprise, and Miles, his wife, father and son-in-law turn their hand to the lathes or the farm chores as they are needed, and the farm is a large one of 460 acres.

The company makes all sorts of automobile accessories, and now has representatives in three states. The whole idea started, Miles explained, when the farm didn't pay enough.

SURVIVES 35,000 VOLTS.

ANAMOSA, Ia.—Leo Oswald, 28, experienced a charge of 35,000 volts of electricity through his body, and is alive to tell of it. An employe of an electric company, he was removing a concrete support for a transformed, and struck a high tension wire with his neck. He was knocked to the ground, his neck and hip seared, but otherwise uninjured.

 NEW ORLEANS, La.—Completion of the intra-coastal canal from New Orleans to Galveston bay within three years appears certain, Roy Millar, vice president of the Intra-coastal Canal association of Louisiana and Texas, said while in New Orleans recently. Millar stated that every effort will be made to complete the rights of way work between Galveston and Corpus Christi soon, and it is probable the waterway can be completed to Corpus Christi within three years.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS By Blosser

Heart of Liane by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Liane Barrett, 18 and beautiful, tries in vain to forget Van Richard wealthy polo player, when his engagement is announced to Muriel Ladd, popular debutante. Liane's mother, Cass Barrett, is an actress and it is during Cass' engagement in stock at a fashionable Long Island summer colony that the Barretts meet Mrs. Cleopatra, wealthy widow. When Cass goes on tour in the fall Liane becomes Mrs. Cleopatra's social secretary. Cleopatra, the widow's only son, asks Liane to marry him. Clive can not inherit his father's fortune unless he marries before he is 25. Liane accepts, agreeing the marriage is to be a matter of form only.

CHAPTER XXXVII

Liane took a small apartment at the Bleekman since their plans for the future were still indefinite. Liane found herself in the position of many another youthful bride. She had time on her hands and virtually nothing to do. At first it was more luxury to have her tray brought in mornings, her bath drawn for her, and the whole, long day before her free of engagements.

Clive went to his office early and returned rather late. The man who had been in charge of the estate for years had lately suffered a nervous breakdown. Clive found things at sixes and sevens. He was a man of business at last, much to his mother's satisfaction. But there were no more leisurely drives, no friendly tea parties and shopping expeditions. Clive seemed to Liane older, graver, increasingly silent.

She would dawdle through her mornings. Perhaps she would order the car around and go shopping. Some days she lunched with her mother. Week-ends she and Clive usually spent at Willow Stream. Here a suite was turned over to their use. But mostly Liane was bored with the extreme idleness of her existence. She began to feel a certain futility about her days. If they had taken a house and she had been married in the fascinating business world, she might not have tasted the boredom of the rich woman.

One day Muriel's high, imperative voice reached her over the telephone. "Do come and dine with us one night. We're hutching in one of those rabbit warrens on the East Side. Chuck wants to see you both. How about Thursday?"

Liane said they would be delighted. She was excited at the prospect of seeing Muriel again. She forgot her resentment of a few months before. Muriel seemed more likable since she had married the penniless writing man. She told Clive about the invitation. He said abstractedly, "I thought you didn't like her."

Liane smiled. "I didn't now and then. She rather snubbed me. But she's fine really. We needn't mind." "I don't mind. If you'd enjoy seeing them of course we'll go."

She took great pains with her appearance the evening of the dinner party. When Clive came into the living room of their suite, she stood in the doorway, smiling at him. "All ready?" Liane was in white and silver, the silk cunningly cut and contrived to make her slim figure alluring. She wore her pearls. The diamond bracelet glittered at her wrist.

"We're dining at what time?" "Seven-thirty. Muriel said to be punctual. Her cook is temperamental." They descended in the elevator. They were still at the Bleekman, having decided not to take an apartment until after their trip to the far east.

Spain's League Ties Increased

MADRID—Spain, which once separated itself from the League of Nations only to go back again, will strengthen its ties to the Geneva organization if the provisions relating to it in the projected draft constitution are not modified by the Cortes.

The draft constitution has three specific references to the league. The first is in paragraph C of Article 40, which empowers the president of the republic to sign treaties, which will be binding only "after being ratified, and provided the treaty contains no secret clauses and that it has been registered in the League of Nations."

The second reference is in paragraph D of the same article, which mentions that war having been outlawed, according to international agreements solemnly ratified and registered with the League of Nations, Spain may only go to war after exhausting every possible means of conciliation in an attempt to solve the conflict in question.

Article 66 of the draft constitution provides that the "universal forms of international law," are considered an integral part of Spanish jurisprudence, and that the "international conventions, both of political and economic character, as well as those referring to the regulation of labor, ratified by Spain, or registered with the League of Nations, and which have the character of international law, are considered a part of the Spanish legislation."

Women Change Pronunciation

By United Press. — WASHINGTON.—Women are easily influenced to change their pronunciation of words, according to a state made here by Dr. Hans Kurath of Ohio State university, who also announces that the preliminary survey on the Linguistic Atlas for the United States will be started next month.

"Every member of a women's club wants to speak like the leader," Dr. Kurath said. In an effort to improve their speech, women are inclined to pattern their choice of words and inflection on what they hear. They are the ones who give strict attention to radio announcers. Social prejudice in word pronunciation is very strong.

One of the purposes of the Linguistic Atlas, Dr. Kurath said, is to establish a more charitable viewpoint towards local dialects. There are a million people pronouncing a certain word alike in a certain locality, Dr. Kurath says in citing an example, while the same word is pronounced in an entirely different manner in another section of the country.

It is quite common for the same object to have different names in different localities. Dr. Kurath said. This occurs most prominently in kitchen utensils and parts of a house, as for instance, a porch is called a stoop, veranda, piazza, portico, or gallery, all depending on what section of the country the words are being used.

Plan State Park at Site of Massacre

By United Press. — PECOS.—A movement is now under foot in Ward county to have a state park created at the site, 12 miles northwest of Monahans, where on a cloudy day several decades ago a wagon train was attacked by the Indians and more than 200 people massacred. The site is in lonely stretch of sandhills. A wagon trail now leads to within a few miles of the location. Building of a road is now being considered by citizens of Barstow and Pecos.

Many moments of the tragedy still remain at the massacre site. As suddenly as he had seized

PARIS STYLES
By MARY KNIGHT,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

PARIS.—The Mediterranean hasn't a monopoly on sunshine. Plenty of it sifts through the trees along the grand boulevards of Paris and casts leafy shadows on the summer frocks it brings into bloom as each ray grows a little warmer.

Somewhere in those rays there seems to be a great magnet for drawing out black and white ensembles—the ones at present are mostly white with black touches in the hat, gloves, purse and shoes. I have in mind an outfit from Chantal. The dress is a street dress suitable for any time of day, or for a bridge party in the morning or afternoon. It is of white crepe Birman with a series of tufts over the hips that slant and cluster in front at the waist where they look as though they were tied together in a bow of the crepe. The same idea is carried out on the blouse where they slant upward toward the V of the neckline and another little bow marks the place where they all arrive at the same time. The wrists follow suit with the bows on the outside.

The medium brimmed hat is of black bakou trimmed with a black and white satin ribbon bandeau—two-faced ribbon—and is by Camille Roger. The purse, shoes and gloves are all in black antelope. The purse has an exquisitely carved white jade fastening, and there is a white jade close-fitting necklace as the only item of jewelry needed or desired.

ENGLAND PLOTS TO REGAIN HER TEXTILE TITLE

By United Press.

LONDON.—England's hopes of regaining her pre-war supremacy in the world textile market heat quicker as the long-awaited scheme for reorganizing the Lancashire industry draws near completion.

Steady declines of British cotton goods exports to India and the Far East have served to hasten the preparation for the gigantic task which means more to England than any other industrial undertaking. Lancashire's prosperity depends on it.

The Joint Committee of Cotton Trade organizations has been busy since spring collecting the replies from 1,600 firms whose combined capital exceeds $500,000,000. These replies will form the basis of the Rationalization Plan.

22 Million Capitalization

Already the gigantic Lancashire Cotton Corporation has consolidated itself with a capitalization of approximately $22,000,000. It controls 87 companies, 10,000,000 spindles and several thousand looms. Another huge organization, the Combined Egyptian Mills, has been formed.

The spinners have been organizing voluntarily, but the manufacturers are reluctant and in some cases hostile. Pressure is being exerted by the government, and rationalization on a big scale is about to be undertaken.

Six textile machinery companies, with issued capital of approximately $35,918,220, have arranged to amalgamate as soon as their respective stockholders give their approval. Several Manchester cotton shippers are preparing to combine for the purpose of competing more effectively in the Far East against Foreign competition.

Pooling Resources

By pooling their resources they plan to cut-down overhead expenses and with better transportation rates expect to be able to lower the prices of their products for delivery in the Eastern trading centers.

The reorganization will be based upon the principle that output should be more closely related to the shrinkage in demand. Many less efficient mills will have to be scrapped, others merged and linked directly with the manufacturing and finishing factories. Thousands of cotton workers will be thrown out of work or forced into other trades, but the Lancashire Industrial Development Council has been formed to provide employment for them.

THERE are some compensations for the hot days of mid-summer in the delicious fruits ripened by the burning sun. Peaches, pears and melons must be "kissed by the sun" if they are to develop their full sweetness and richness of flavor.

Although pears of some variety are in the market almost the year round, the delicious Bartlett pear is at its best during August and September. Many other high quality varieties follow the Bartlett, prolonging the season into the late fall.

In spite of their seeming sweetness, pears are somewhat acid and consequently are an excellent tonic fruit. Their flavor is refreshing, tending to tone up a tired summer appetite. Used fresh in salads, fruit cups and desserts or as a sweetened fruit, they make a welcome change.

Pears are one of the few fruits which are best picked green and allowed to ripen in storage. In this way the fruit develops better flavor and finer texture than over-ripened fruit. In choosing pears, those on the verge of greenness rather than ripeness are desirable.

An Appetizing Dessert

Baked pears may be prepared like plain baked apples and are especially good for breakfast with bacon and eggs. If wanted for dessert they can be pared and cored, sprinkled with sugar and baked, covered, in a moderate oven for an hour. Served with whipped cream and ginger cookies they make an inviting last course for an August dinner. Try mixing a little powdered ginger with the sugar before sifting it over the fruit. Two tablespoons sugar for each pear makes the fruit pleasantly sweet for the average taste.

Pears in chocolate sauce is a rather elaborate dessert suitable for chilly days in early fall.

Stuffed pears are always popular, and when fresh, perfectly ripe fruit is used, the salad is particularly good. Cream cheese mix-

To prevent discoloration. Drain the ginger from its syrup and mince. Work nuts and ginger into cream cheese, adding cream if necessary to make soft enough to mold. Mold in small balls and place a ball in the cavity of each pear. Bake in a moderate oven. French dressing to which orange juice has been added.

Pears also make delectable fritters. Pear fritters served with ginger sauce make a fitting dessert for a September vegetable dinner. The fruit is pared and cut in very thin slices into a fritter batter. This is dropped by spoonfuls into deep hot fat and fried until a golden brown.

Ginger Sauce

Four tablespoons ginger syrup, 1-2 cup orange juice, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons minced preserved ginger, 2 teaspoons cornstarch, 1 teaspoon butter, 4 tablespoons cold water.

Stir cornstarch to a smooth paste with cold water and mix with ginger syrup, orange juice and lemon juice. Cook five minutes, stirring constantly. Add butter and minced preserved ginger and beat until blended. Serve hot.

Mexican Held in Texas On a 15-Year-Old Charge of Murder

By United Press.

OZONA, Texas.—Fifteen years after the body of Jarvis Harp, rancher, was found lying in the midst of his scattered goat herd, Salama Raola was arrested as the suspected murderer and lodged in the county jail here to await county grand jury action.

Harp was murdered in 1916, according to old sheriff's records. The ranchman was running a herd of goats on the Harrell pasture lands. One morning cowboys from the Harrell ranch found Harp's battered body lying on the prairie, his goats scattered about him.

It was believed Harp had quarreled with a Mexican herdsman, who had tended the flock.

The Mexican vanished. Night and day guards watched the border for the fugitive. Angered ranchmen of the sheeplands pledged a reward of $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of Harp's murderer.

As newcomers settled on the prairies of Crockett county, the murder mystery and the hunt for Salama Raola were forgotten.

A few days ago one Jose Guerra was arrested on a ranch, on charges of being drunk and disorderly. The next day officers announced they held a suspect in the murder of Jarvis Harp. Guerra denied his name was Raola and protested his innocence.

He was arrested near Rel Rio, 150 miles from the spot where Harp's mutilated body was found. He had been working on a ranch near there for several years.

Military records at Villa Acuna show that Raola deserted the Mexican army in 1925. He returned to the United States, made Del Rio his home, and married a second wife, officers declared.

Conflicting stories told by the suspect first aroused officers' suspicion. When halted into corporation court at Del Rio, to be fined $12.50 for disturbing the peace, he begged his release, declaring he was wanted in Bracketville, Ozona and other places. But only in Ozona did Del Rio authorities find officers who wished to question him.

Through an interpreter, he denied ability to speak English. But when an officer struck him on the
